PANIC IN CIGAR FACTORY

Results In Eight Girls Being Crushed to Death

MANY OTHERS BADLY HURT

Deaf and Dumb Boy Got Caught In Elevator and the Sight of Foreman Rushing For Ambulance Led to Wild Scramble to Reach Street

Philadelphia, May 1.—An unfortunate accident to a deaf and dumb boy, Isador Baccus, was yesterday directly responsible for the death of eight girls, aged from 12 to 18, the fatal injury of three others and the serious injury of more than two score of girls employed in the cigar factory of Harburger, Homan & Co., a branch of the American Tobacco company, located at Tenth street and Washington avenue.

The building in which the disaster occurred is a five-story brick structure and reaches an entire block. Twelve hundred persons were at work at the time of the accident, 90 percent of whom were girls, whose ages range from 12 years upward.

The trouble began on the fourth floor of the structure. Baccus started for the fifth floor for a ball of twine. The elevator was at the top of the shaft and Baccus pulled the rope to bring it down. He opened the door leading to the shaft and leaned forward to see where the carriage was. As he did so the elevator, which was descending slowly, struck him across the back of the neck, pinioning his head between the elevator and the floor. A stock boy released Baccus and cried for help. The foreman rushed from the building to call an ambulance and immediately there was a panic among the employes. Some of the younger girls fainted while others, not being able to control their feelings, cried fire.

Instantly there was a mad rush for the stairway leading into Tenth street. The girls rushed down the narrow staircase until they reached a bend in the exit, between the second and third floors. In their eagerness to escape the frightened leaders fell. Others immediately following tripped over the struggling mass of humanity and instantly ther were hundreds of children and young women struggling in the passageway.

The shrieks and screams of the terror-stricken girls were terrible. During the excitement an alarm of fire was turned in, but before the engines could reach the scene several of the occupants of the building had rushed to the windows and jumped to the street, a distance of over 50 feet. When the firemen and policemen arrived every effort was made to quiet the terrorized girls.

The firemen rushed up the stairway and begged the girls to be calm, telling them that there was absolutely no danger, but the sight of the firemen seemed only to add fuel to the flame. While the policemen and firemen were endeavoring to quiet the girls on the stairway ladders were being run up on the outside of the building and the employes who had climbed out on to the fire escapes and window ledges were quickly taken to the street.

After a few minutes the men were enabled to check the awful crush on the stairway and then began the work of rescuing those who had been trampled and crushed between the second and third floors. A call for ambulances had been turned in and the dead and injured were hurried to hospitals.

While this was going on the scene about the structure was heartrending. The building is located in a section largely inhabitated by Hebrews, many of whom were caught in the terrible crush. Parents and relatives of the unfortunate girls were screaming and rushing about the streets and it was almost impossible for the police to restrain the mothers and relatives of supposed victims from entering the building.

The work of rescuing the girls from the windows was necessarily tedious. They were so excited that they did not seem to understand the pleadings of the firemen. A nearly every window of the huge structure were girls screaming and crying for help.

Many were so excited that it was with the greatest difficulty that they were prevented from jumping from the building, notwithstanding that there was not a sign of fire and their rescue seemed only the work of a few moments.

The panic was over in less than half an hour, but in this brief space thousands of persons had been attracted to the scene by the wild screams of the relatives of the victims and the shrieks of the girls at the windows.

Because of the great excitement it was almost impossible to get an intelligent idea of the disaster and it was three hours after the accident occurred before a single victim was identified.

STILL IN DURANCE VILE

No Diplomatic Action Yet Taken In the Case of the Chicago's Officers

Washington, May 1.—It is said at the navy department that nothing further has been received concerning the case of the Chicago's officers imprisoned at Venice. Secretary Long has placed Secretary Hay in possession of all the information the navy department has received relative to the affair, and it is now for the state department to pursue the negotiations which, it is strongly hoped, will effect the release of the imprisoned Americans.

Submitted Themselves to Law

Rome, May 1.—A representative of The Associated Press has been informed at the foreign office that Mr. Meyer, the United States ambassador here, has not demanded the release of the imprisoned officers of the cruiser Chicago and that the latter, by their appeal from the sentence of the court, have submitted themselves to the Italian law. It is believed at the foreign office that any diplomatic action in this matter would be out of place while the question remained under the consideration of the Italian court.

Prisoners All In One Room

Venice, May 1.—The officers of the Chicago are confined in the common prison of St. Mark. They are all together in one room.

Troubles Not Yet Settled

New York, May 1.—After spending two entire days in an endeavor to arrive at a settlement of their differences, the operators and representatives of the United Mine Workers of America, who were brought together by the good offices of the National Civic Federation, have again referred their troubles to the committee on conciliation of that body. This statement was given out, but not a scrap of official or authentic information was obtainable to show what progress, if any, had been made towards a settlement.

Successful Wireless Experiments

Norfolk, May 1.—Professor Fessenden, the inventor and developer of the new system of wireless telegraphy, will in future receive and transmit all his government business over the wireless telegraph from Roanoke island to Cape Hatteras and thence by direct government wire to Norfolk and Washington. This decision is considered abundant proof of the successful termination of the experiments with the system.

American League Will Fight

Cleveland, May 1.—At the conclusion of a conference of the American league magnates here yesterday President Johnson stated that it had been decided to fight the injunction cases against Lajoie, Frazer and Bernhart to the end. The perpetual injunctions granted by the common pleas court in Philadelphia against these players will at once be carried to the Pennsylvania supreme court.

Congressman Charged With Assault

Washington, May 1.—Congressman Butler of Missouri is made the defendant in a suit for $10,000 damages instituted yesterday in the district supreme court by August Scholz, a waiter at a local hotel, Scholz alleges that while serving the Missourian at the hotel Saturday Mr. Butler used vile and abusive language toward him and struck him a heavy blow with a water bottle.

Carpenters and Plumbers Out

Buffalo, May 1.—Two thousand carpenters and 500 plumbers employed in this city struck today for more wages. The carpenters demand 37½ cents an hour. They now get 30 cents. The plumbers want an advance from $3 to $3.50 a day.

Cow and Calf Sold For $4010

Omaha, May 1.—The highest prices ever paid for thoroughbred cattle at the stock yards here was bid for a herd of Angus Aberdeens yesterday. The 6-year-old cow Blackbird was sold for $3010, and a calf at her side brought $1000.

Pneumonia Has Disappeared

New York, May 1.—Dr. Keyes says that Archbishop Corrigan is recovering nicely from a slight relapse of yesterday. All traces of the pneumonia have now disappeared and recovery is looked for with assurance.

Want Union Men Reinstated

Chicago, May 1.—Seven hundred employes of Morgan & Wright, manufacturers of bicycle tires, went on strike yesterday to compel the reinstatement of fellow workmen who, it is claimed, were discharged for joining a labor union. One hundred of the strikers are girls.

Princess Guilty of Forgery

Cape Town, May 1.—Princess Radziwill, who has been on trial here on the charge of forgery in connection with notes purporting to have been endorsed by the late Cecil Rhodes, was sentenced yesterday to two years' confinement in the house of correction.

NEW NAVAL SECRETARY TODAY.

Congressman Moody of Massachusetts Pays Tribute to Congress, Resigns and is given a Banquet.

Washington, May 1.—Secretary Long closed his official career as the head of the naval establishment yesterday. Affairs progressed as usual and the event was unmarked save by the calling of many friends to take official leave of the retiring secretary. Noticeable among yesterday's callers were Secretary Hay and Mr. Moody, Secretary Long's successor. Secretary Moody assumed the duties of secretary of the navy this morning.

Very few changes will follow the change in the head of the department. The only one which will take effect at once will be the installation of Fred L. Fishback as confidential clerk in place of Mr. Greer, who has been appointed an assistant paymaster in the navy. Mr. Fishback is clerk of the house committee on banking and currency and is a personal friend of the secretary. Cyrus E. Wells, private secretary to Secretary Long, will serve Secretary Moody in the same capacity for the present.

Representative Moody spent the last day of his service as representative of the Sixth Massachusetts district in the performance of his regular legislative duties. He attended the meeting of the appropriations committee, of which he is a member, in the morning, and was on the floor of the house during the greater portion of the day. During his seven years' service in the house he has won the sincere esteem and respect of members on both sides of the political aisle and there were many expressions of regret at his departure. During the day he was almost constantly surrounded by friends who came personally to voice the general regret at his departure and to express their good wishes for his success in the cabinet. Mr. Moody was not unmoved by the demonstration.

"I cannot pretend to be without regrets in leaving the house," said he, as he was departing from the house in the afternoon. "It ends the service which has been agreeable and inspiring, and severs the relation with a considerate and generous constituency. But I take away many pleasant memories. After seven years' service here I have a firm and abiding confidence and faith in congress. I believe that it is truly representative of the best there is in American life, and in large degree is composed of men who are earnestly striving for the public welfare. Through the widely differing opinions there seems to me to run a current of devotion to the country. It is not confined to any party or any section and is the salvation of the republic."

Mr. Moody forwarded his resignation as representative from the Sixth district to the governor of Massachusetts yesterday. It is dated May 1. He also sent a communication to the speaker of the house notifying him of his action.

Mr. Long was given a complimentary dinner at the New Willard Hotel last night by the chiefs of the various bureaus of the department with whom he has been associated during his official career. Covers were laid for 15.

Reproof From Attorney General

Washington, May 1.—Having received a letter from the president of the Republican club at New York stating that he had arranged for a conference between Attorney General Knox and representatives of the packing companies the attorney general yesterday replied as follows: "Your action requesting representatives of packing companies to meet me is unwarranted and was without my knowledge or any intimation to me that you proposed doing so until receipt of your letter of 28th. I regret that you have assumed to arrange conferences which misrepresent the government's position."

Rathbone's Case Rests With Wood

Washington, May 1.—Senator Hanna had a long conference with Secretary Root at the war department yesterday, presumably in regard to the case of Major Rathbone. It is understood that when he was in Havana Secretary Root looked into that case with a view to determining the powers of the president in bringing about a retrial of Rathbone in the event that such a course shall be determined upon. Whatever action, if any is taken in this case, will be taken through Military Governor Wood.

Now that $12,000 has been appropriated by Congress for a site for the Quincy government building, the difficulty will come in securing a desirable lot or lots for that sum. A corner lot or an estate bounded by three streets is preferable, as the government requires that there shall be an open space of 45 feet all around the building. Unless a corner lot is selected a frontage of 150 or more feet will be necessary.

The whole corner bounded by Washington, Coddington and Spear streets and the Public Library grounds has been most prominently suggested, and plans were forwarded to Washington, but $12,000 will not purchase it. The Hospital Trustees are the largest owners, and it is intimated that they want $15,000 for their property. The lot of the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company on the corner is small but valuable, and has been occupied by the company many years. The French estate is now owned by the Trustees of the Thomas Crane public library and could probably be secured for a nominal sum under certain restrictions. Probably twice $12,000 will be necessary to secure this whole corner.

The recent publication of land values on Hancock street and vicinity showed these assessed values for land alone on lots which might be suggested:

Nightingale estate, corner Washington and Temple streets, 24,152 square feet, $18,000.

Faxon estate, corner Washington and Coddington streets, 21,625 feet $7,500.

Briesler estate, corner Hancock and Granite street, 7,775 feet, $15,200.

Dr. French estate, Chestnut street, 16,449 feet, $13,200.

Henry H. Faxon estate, office of Dr. Underwood, Hancock street, 43,086 feet, $10,800.

Hancock hall corner, 39,200 feet, $11,000.

When the buildings on these estates are added the assessed value is considerably increased, and the owners may value them higher than the Assessors.

We are glad to see that the long and efficient services of Miss Mary E. Dearborn, principal of the Coddington school are to receive some appropriate recognition. She is to be given a complimentary reception and banquet at the Hotel Vendome, Boston, on the afternoon of Saturday, May 17, the reception to be from five to six o'clock and the banquet at six.

It requires a rare combination of qualities to meet successfully all the many difficulties which come to a principal of a large school, to secure the confidence of the community, and to retain for twenty-five years not only the respect but high esteem of pupils and parents. That Miss Dearborn possesses in large measure such ualities has been fully demonstrated. During these years she has devoted unsparingly her best thoughts and energies to the welfare of her pupils. She has not been satisfied with the mere assignment and hearing lessons, but has taught her boys and girls a thousand things not laid down in the textbooks, but which, nevertheless, have a most important bearing upon life—personal habits, good manners patriotism and moral integrity. Few teachers secure such a controlling influence and such a hearty cooperation in their schools as Miss Dearborn has always had. Her pupils and graduates are her enthusiastic champions. Those who have seen her at work with a class, all agree that she has a remarkable mastery of the art of teaching and a method of correlating her instruction and of reaching the understanding of her pupils, which is as unique as it is effective.

Harmony, loyalty and pride in the good work and good name of their school characterize the Coddington teachers, and these qualities are inspired in no small degree by the veteran principal.

We hope the people of Quincy and Miss Dearborn's friends elsewhere, will on May 17, pay her the honor she deserves and show the appreciation due her unusually long, faithful and efficient public service. Once in twenty-five years is not too often to unite in the expressions of our appreciation of such service. May the occasion be one that shall be a credit to ourselves, and a pleasant memory to Miss Dearborn for many years to come.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Leave to withdraw has been reported on the petition for the establishment of an industrial court to settle labor difficulties in this state, the measure having been ardently opposed by many of the labor leaders. Thus are present prospects blasted of any who had hoped to sit on that bench.—Lynn Item.

☞It is said that Dr. Lorimer is to return to Tremont Temple in the fall, and in order to accomplish that end the institution is to be freed from debt and the congregation left unhampered to carry on their work. Tremont Temple requires a man of peculiar ability to fulfil its mission and Dr. Lorimer seems to be just the man for the place, but if he is to be entirely unhampered it may be necessary to remove some other burdens besides that of debts.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞We presume that Edwin D. Mead would declaim against "yellow" journalism. And yet Edward D. is a trifle lurid in some of his comments on current events. He declares Cuba is being used "most ungenerously." This is a trifle sensational and not strictly true. Because the United States has saved Cuba's house from destruction does not necessarily entail the duty of setting her up in housekeeping. While we hope most earnestly that our Congress will find some way to aid Cuba, it by no means follows that culpability is involved by not doing so. If one man buys another a house lot he is not necessarily a hog because he does not put up a dwelling house on the lot and give that too.—Waltham Free Press.

☞Are kings and queens and princes subject to the measles and the law of gravitation just like ordinary mortals? Prince George of Bavaria, a royal personage of twenty-two, says that they are not—or, at least, that the law of evolution does not apply to men of noble lineage. Others may have descended from a protoplasmic speck, but not his family. Professor Ranke, the celebrated scientist, was recently delivering a lecture in Munich before a learned society, in which he told, incidentially, of the descent of man, possibly from or through the monkey, when the prince arose, and rebuked him sharply for insinuating that any member of the royal family could be descended from apes. Prince George pointed out that as monarchs exist and rule by divine right, it was logically impossible that the Darwinian theory should apply to them. Other mortals may consider themselves a product of evolution, but kings and princes are provided for in other ways. King Canute had a similar idea. If the prince could suspend the law of gravitation in the same easy way, he could be dropped out of a window without injury to his feelings.—Harper's Weekly.

Surprise Party.

A few friends gave Peter P. Gomez a surprise Tuesday evening. The hours were passed socially. Mr. Gomez was remembered with a token of their esteem. Frappe was served throughout the evening and there was also a collation. Among those present were:

A pleasing entertainment was given at Odd Fellows hall Wednesday evening which was largely attended. The program included piano solos by Miss Florence Woodworth, readings by Miss Flossie Walsh, banjo solos by Master Carlton B. Beal, cake walk by Miss Helen Shaw and Robert Moore, vocal solos by Mrs. Clara Holgate and Louis Griffin, sand jig and clog by Master Carlton B. Beale; piano duet by Edgar Field and Elizabeth Orr. After the entertainment there was whist and dancing.

OF QUINCY GRANITE.

Monument to Those Who Fought in Battle of Brandywine.

John L. Miller of Thomas & Miller is in Pennsylvania today attending the dedication of a large soldiers' monument of which the firm was the contractor. The memorial was erected in Mt. Zion cemetery at Ephrate, in honor of the Revolutionary heroes, some 200 in number, and is constructed of Quincy granite.

The design is a plain and graceful obelisk and so polished as to be able to resist the wear and tear of the weather of centuries. It consists of three bases, die and shaft. The first base is ten feet square. The shaft is three feet square and 30 feet high of one solid block. These two stones when quarried weighed 25 and 30 tons each. The total height of the monument is 39 feet, and one of largest all polished monuments in the United States. On the face of the front is a bronze metal plate on which is engraved the figure of a soldier of the Revolutionary times, bearing a musket, with one foot resting on a spiked cannon. Below is the inscription.

The Reading Eagle says: Considerable difficulty was experienced by the firm in transporting the monument from the railroad at Ephrata to the site of its erection. A truck had to be secured from Philadelphia and to this 22 mules were attached. The roads and bridges were badly damaged. One bridge was completely wrecked, owing to the immense weight. So slow was the progress of transportation in this way that the mules were discarded and two traction engines were brought into use and the monument was finally placed in position.

The battle of Brandywine, in which the heroes participated, was fought on September 11, 1777, between the Americans, commanded by General Washington and consisting of 13,000 men, and the British under command of General Howe, comprising 18,000 men.

Quincy comes in for historic mention, for the Eagle says: "The monument is constructed of Quincy granite. The stone was quarried on property that once belonged to John Adams and to John Quincy Adams the second and sixth presidents of the United States, and within a quarter of a mile of the home of John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. It was in connection with these quarries that the first railroad in the United States was built. This was done to convey granite used in building Bunker Hill monument from the quarry to tidewater. The motive power one way was by gravity and the return was made by means of oxen drawing the empty cars. Thus the monument is an historic one from an historic site."

Heavy Thunder Shower.

It was a very heavy thunder shower that passed over Quincy at midnight last night. The rain came down in torrents, the lightning was sharp and the roll of the thunder unusually heavy. Windows rattled, houses shook, making sleep impossible. Several blows were struck on the fire alarm, and the electric light system was paralized for a time. Taking it altogether it was a wild night. As far as heard from no places were struck in Quincy.

Whist Tournament Closed.

The last games in the whist tournament which has been in progress during the winter were held Wednesday evening. George B. Wendell and Henry F. Tilden received the prizes for the evening's play. The winners of the yearly prizes have not been determined as yet. After the evening's play the entertainment committee served a lunch, consisting of salads, ice cream, cake and coffee.

I said 'Amen' in the wrong places, and 'Let 'em all come,' instead of repeating the collects.

HAMMOND-THOMAS

Brilliant Church Wedding at Atlantic Congregational.

Both Young People Well Known in City.

Will Make Their Home at Fort Dade, Florida.

The Atlantic Memorial Congregational church was bright with light and flowers on Wednesday evening for the wedding of two popular young Atlantic people. The bride was Miss Florence Edith Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Thomas of Billings street, and the groom, Mr. Charles Lincoln Hammond, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson G. Hammond also of Billings street.

While the guests were assembling, Mr. H. H. Bemis played selections on the organ and the wedding march, which announced the coming of the bridal party. The bride was attended by her father, with Miss Edith F. Taylor of Hudson, as maid of honor, and for bridesmaids Miss Emma G. Curtin of Atlantic, Miss Ida Hodge and Miss Anna Robinson of Malden, and Miss Avice Williams of Wollaston. The ushers were Mr. Frank M. Coe of Atlantic, Mr. Edward Carlton Hammond of Boston, Mr. Leroy, W. Luce of Melrose, and Mr. David H. Nickerson of Malden. Mr. Russell J. Hammond brother of the groom was best man. The bridal party was met at the altar by the Rev. John Holland Whitaker pastor of the church, who solemnized the marriage in a brief but impressive manner, the bride being given in marriage by her father.

After the wedding a reception was held in the church until half-past nine.

The bride was gowned in white muslin over white silk, cut en traine with trimmings of duchesse lace. Her veil was caught with sprays of orange blossoms, and fell gracefully to the floor in long misty folds. The bouquet was of bride roses tied with white satin ribbon. The entire effect was one of colorless beauty which was further enhanced by the gowns worn by the maid of honor, and bridesmaids. Miss Taylor's gown was of white muslin over blue silk, and she carried pink roses. Miss Curtin and Miss Hodge were in white muslin over white silk and Miss Robinson and Miss Williams wore blue crepe de chine over blue silk. Each carried bouquets of daybreak pinks and wore a garniture of white in their hair.

To all this dainty loveliness was added the beauty of the church decorations which were artistically arranged by Mr. W. Jay Sanborn of Atlantic. Great sprays of white cherry blossoms swung over a dark background of ferns and potted plants. Each pew bore its fragrant floral spray of fresh spring blossoms.

The display of gifts was a sparkling and brilliant symbol of the young people's popularity. The profuse collection of hand painted china; the most minute need filled in the array of silver. The half hundred pieces of cut glass, the dainty gold clock and countless pieces of art will be constant reminders in their new home of those whom they have left behind. Over 350 guests were present at the wedding from Atlantic, Wollaston, Quincy, and Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Hammond have gone to Fort Dade, Florida, here Mr. Hammond holds a responsible government position in the land of perpetual summer.

Mr. Hammond was graduated from the Institute of Techonology, Boston, in 1892 and Mrs. Hammond from the Boston University in 1897, and two, so well suited, have every prospect of a most happy future.

Closing Reception.

The dancing class of Elmer W. Baker held its closing reception Wednesday evening at Malnati hall. Over seventy-five couples were present and a most enjoyable evening was passed. The reception was from 8 until 2 o'clock. Everything went well until midnight when the thunder shower came up and the electric lights went out and remained out during the continuance of the shower. Aside from the dancing, there was an entertainment consisting of vocal solos by Miss Wentworth, mandolin solos by George Dyer, whistling solos by Matt Fay and buck and wing dancing by William Grant. Ice cream and cake were served during the evening.

Crowd at May Festival.

The warm sun which came out at noon was enough to send a large number of children scampering toward Music hall, where the annual school children's May Day festival for the benefit of the free kindergarten and sloyd classes of the Quincy Home Science Association is being held today.

The doors were advertised to open at 2 o'clock, but long before that hour hundreds of children were gathered at the entrance, anxious to get in and to feast their eyes upon the array of May baskets and good things. The program for the afternoon's entertainment consisted of music, fancy dancing and tableaux, followed by general dancing to the music of a hurdy gurdy.

FILIPINO NAMES.

Many Have Their Origin Explained by Fanciful Legends.

Many Filipino names have had their origin explained by fanciful legends and traditions. Every name has a meaning.

Jaro is called by uneducated Visayans Salog, which means cup. The legend which purports to give the derivation of this name dates back to the time when the monkeys and parrots ruled the islands. Once there was a great drought, and there was no place where water was to be found in all the mountains. So scouts were sent out to look for water, and they traveled many miles until they came to a spot where the river flowed all the year and where food was always plenty. They took a cup of water to prove their find and went back to their companions, who journeyed to the water and called the place Salog, or cup. When the babes adopted by the monkeys after the slaughter at Hollo grew up and possessed the land, they retained the name.

Lynced in Visayan means "sit down." The town of Lynced, thirty miles from Hollo, is said to have received its name because the first settlers were climbing the mountain when they became tired and said, "Let us sit down." They sat down where the town now stands and found the place so agreeable that they remained and built the town.

Hard Luck For an Actress.

Perhaps one of the most trying contretemps that occurred on the American stage, writes Julia Marlowe, overtook a sister artist of mine when she was giving the first performance of a serious and elaborate play in an important American city. In the great emotional scene the sister of the character played by my friend falls at her feet in a passion of tears and entreaties. The heroine stoops to raise the stricken creature and in tones that unite pleading and command cries, "Get up, Anne; get up!"

On the evening in question one of that breed of imp children, a gallery boy, amid the deathlike silence which followed the great outburst, clucked twice, after the manner of one starting a horse. It would have been a phenomenally self restrained audience that could have resisted such a lapse from the sublime to the ridiculous. The scene went to pieces, the curtain was rung down, and the actress sought her dressing room in a gale of hysteries.—Saturday Evening Post.

Why Boiled Water Freezes Easily.

Water which is hot of course cannot freeze until it has parted with its heat; but water that has been boiled will, other things being equal, freeze sooner than water which has not been boiled. A slight disturbance of water disposes it to freeze more rapidly, and this is the cause which accelerates the freezing of boiled water. The water that has been boiled has lost the air naturally contained in it, which on exposure to the atmosphere it begins again to attract and absorb. During this process of absorption a motion is necessarily produced among its particles, slight certainly and imperceptible, yet probably sufficient to accelerate its congelation. In unboiled water this disturbance does not exist; indeed, water when kept perfectly still can be reduced several degrees below the freezing point without its becoming ice.

A Chance to Dry.

Lord Dufferin always said that the happiest years of his long official life were those spent in Calcutta. He reveled in the sun. A friend one day expostulated with him for his reckless exposure of himself to the weather. "Well, you see," said the viceroy, "they have always sent me to cold places. They sent me as viceroy to Canada, where one must live two-thirds of the year in buffalo furs. They sent me to St. Petersburg, where one has to hibernate like a bear. So when they ordered me to India I rubbed my hands and said to myself, 'Now I can hang myself up to dry.'"

Butchers and Blue.

The blue smock of the butcher, says an English paper, has often aroused curiosity. The color was originally adopted by the guild of butchers in the middle ages at a time when each trade had its distinguishing color; but, while other guilds dropped their colors, butchers stuck to blue because blood stains are less noticeable upon that color than upon any other. At a very early period blue was the universal wear of serving men. It was then the cheapest of dyes. Sir Walter Scott in his well known poem "Marmion" talks of "an old, blue coated serving man."

Domestic Trials.

Mr. Nugget—Oh, what's the matter with you? You're forever finding fault.

Mrs. Nagget (sweetly)—Well, that equalizes things. You're forever losing one.

Mr. Nagget—Losing one?

Mrs. Nagget—Yes, your temper. Surely that's a fault.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Is This So?

"Why do men flock after widows?"

"Because," explained the sweet young thing, not without a touch of bitterness, "the average man lacks confidence in his own judgment, and in the case of a widow he feels that he is merely backing the judgment of another man."—Chicago Post.

Don't be offensive in your politeness. When you ask a man to take your seat, don't add that you are younger and more able to stand.—Atchison Globe.

It's what people don't know about a popular man that makes him popular.—Chicago News.

Vote to Strike.

The quarrymen's union of Cape Ann held a long meeting at Pigeon Cove Wednesday evening.

A proposition was received from the Rockport and Pigeon Cove granite companies in regard to the demands of the men. It is unsatisfactory, and it was unanimously voted not to return to work. The engineers and blacksmiths also voted to strike with the stone cutters. This will involve about 700 men.

Fidgety

people are lacking in nervous strength. The weak, care-worn, melancholy, headachy, and low-spirited men and women are easily excited, impatient, fidgety, and unable to sleep at night. Worn-out nerves must be built up, and the vitality of the whole system replenished before relief can come.

"The least bit of noise or sudden jar would nearly drive me crazy, and I was just too fidgety for anything. I was so nervous that I could not rest or sleep. The first dose of Dr. Miles' Nervine brought me sleep, and after that I got well fast."
Mrs. A. R. MORRELL, Arcola, Ills.

Dr. Miles' Nervine

builds up the nerves, strengthens the brain, and fortifies and refreshes the whole system.

ENOUGH YARN ON HAND

American Woolen Company Will Soon Have Over 20,000 Employes Idle

Providence, May 1.—An unlooked for development in the affairs of the American Woolen company in connection with the strike of weavers in 13 of its mills came yesterday, when an order was issued to gradually close the yarn-making departments in the Olneyville mills. Over 1200 hands will soon be thrown out of employment.

As the result of the closing of a number of mills in other cities due to the strike, the necessity for keeping the full-capacity production of yarns in force in the Olneyville mills has ceased.

Since the re-opening of the mills at the time of the raising of the lockout which marked the beginning of the general strike of weavers against the double-loom weaving of fancy worsteds, the yarn-producing departments have been run at full capacity. Under the new orders, only sufficient yarn will be made to run the 500 looms which the local managers say are in operation in the several Olneyville mills.

Nearly 20,000 persons are idle as a direct result of the strike and there is no prospect of an early settlement.

Tufts Freshies Outwitted

Medford, Mass., May 1.—Notwithstanding the attempted kidnapping of President Woods of Tufts' sophomore class and the many plans on the part of the freshmen to break up the sophomore's banquet, the latter dined last evening at the Woodland Park Hotel in Auburndale, as originally planned. Early in the afternoon the "sophs" began to leave as quietly as possible. No one outside of the class knew where they were going, and it was late last night before the freshmen learned that 1904 had dined at the Woodland Park. All the members of the class were present.

IN PLASTIC CONDITION

Filipinos Not Prepared to Manage Government

WOULD RESULT IN CHAOS

MacArthur Declares That There Has Been No Unusual Destruction of Life in the Islands—Why Natives Got the Worst of the Battles

Washington, May 1.—Major General MacArthur yesterday gave further testimony before the senate committee on Philippines. He explained his statement made on Tuesday that absolute chaos would result should independence be given the Filipinos and the United States forces be withdrawn by saying that the people of the Philippines, being less prepared for self-government and administraton than any of the Latin-American republics at the time of their emancipation from Spain, their own unaided efforts to accomplish self-regeneration would in all probability prove abortive.

The people of the Philippines, he said, have rudimentary ideas and aspirations, and are therefore in an essentially plastic condition which, under the tuitionary control of the United States would, in his opinion, admit of rapid moulding of the body politic into a consistent, self-supporting commonwealth. Even the best thinkers, he said, among the Filipinos have no conception whatever of the practical mechanical efforts whereby the results they are all anxious to obtain can be successfully accomplished. American withdrawal from the islands would, in his opinion, result in the permanent failure of republican institutions in the east and a fratricidal war which would continue until suppressed by some exterior force.

The broad generalization, he said, is reached that the United States must retain the archipelago as a tuitionary annex; that we must plant our institutions there, that we must contend for commercial supremacy and perhaps combat for political supremacy to overcome the inherent difficulties of the situation which will require the most profound efforts of constructive statesmanship.

Senator Patterson asked if he would apply the same views with respect to Japan and General MacArthur said that if Japan should come into our hands in a clean manner with a clean conscience, pure morals and with the same definite purpose we have in the Philippines we should by all means keep it. He gave it as his conscientious belief that the presence of the United States in the Philippines is an unmitigated benefaction to the people.

"Do you mean the Philippine people that are left alive after they have been subjugated?" inquired Senator Patterson.

General MacArthur declared that he did not mean that there has been any unusual destruction of life in the islands. "The destruction," said he, "is simply incident to war, and, of course, embraces a very small percentage of the total population, which is dense."

"Thirty-three and a third percent in one province," remarked Senator Patterson.

Replying to this statement, General MacArthur informed Senator Patterson that if he preferred to believe that he (MacArthur) could not help it.

"We have as much right to believe that from an American officer who is the civil governor and who is there in the province as we have to believe you," replied Senator Patterson, which brought the retort from General MacArthur: "You can believe what you wish and I will believe what I wish."

General MacArthur referred to his many efforts to bring about a cessation of hostilities and stop the bloodshed. These efforts, he said, were directed to Aguinaldo through some of his friends, because in his opinion Aguinaldo was "the incarnation of the revolution."

General MacArthur said the disparity between the killed and wounded of the Filipino and American forces was due to the fact that the Filipinos know nothing of the double sight of their rifles. Senator Patterson wanted to know if as a matter of fact the contacts between our troops and the Filipinos were not simply assaults and pursuit.

General MacArthur denied that this was so, saying that since the affair has reached the guerilla state the United States troops have had the greatest difficulty in finding the Filipinos, so that whenever the Filipinos attacked it was in the nature of a surprise, the Filipino posting himself in thick mountain gorges and firing first. Under these circumstances our officers and men would go in after them and then the natural supremacy of the American showed itself and every man that could be reached was killed.

Responding to a question by Senator Carmack, General MacArthur said that when he assumed responsibility for the methods adopted in capturing Aguinaldo he did so without conferring with the authorities at Washington. The plan was General Funston's, he said and he (MacArthur) assumed the responsibility of approving it. At no time, said General MacArthur, replying to an inquiry from Senator Patterson, did he violate the rules of civilized warfare. His position on this subject, he said, was emphatic.

The committee, by a strict party vote, refused to subpoena Major Cornelius Gardner, Aguinaldo, Sixto Lopez and Mabini.

No Difference Between Tubercle Bacilli In Man and Cattle

Berlin, May 1.—Advance sheets of Professor Behring's forthcoming book on tuberculosis in cattle were available here yesterday. From these sheets it is seen that in his book the professor details the results of six year' investigations at Marburg, where he was assisted by Drs. Ruppel and Roemer.

Professor Behring affirms that tuberculosis in man and cattle is propagated by identical bacilli, and that the seeming differences between the human and the cattle bacilli result from the capacity of the bacilli to accommodate themselves to the organism in which they live. The writer explains the process by which he reaches the conclusion that, chemically and physiologically, the tubercle bacilli in man and cattle are of the same species.

Professor Behring says he has successfully infected cattle with virus from humans, producing thereby fatal animal tuberculosis. He also says he has discovered a method to render cattle immune against tuberculosis, which is done by vaccinating the cattle when they are young. This he declares to be his greatest discovery, and says the method is in use on farms at Marburg.

Was Popular With All

Nebraska City, Neb., May 1.—It was a sorrowful processing that followed the remains of J. Sterling Morton to the final resting place yesterday. The streets were lined with people who stood in respectful silence while the procession passed through the streets. The people took advantage of an opportunity to view the remains as they lay in state at the public library. Mr. Morton always had been popular with the children and many of them paid their tribute.

Sympathy Being Wasted

Plattsburg, N. Y., May 1.—Many sympathetic letters are received at Clinton prison each day addressed to the three VanWormer boys, who are confined in the death house there under sentence of death for the murder of their uncle, Peter Hallenbeck. Nine-tenths of them are penned by women. A few contained proposals of marriage and others are requests to exchange photographs. Not one of them is delivered to the young men.

Delegates Conferring With Burghers

Pretoria, May 1.—In pursuance of an understanding reached by the Boer delegates at the conference recently held here, the delegates are busy visiting the burghers in the field. After these conferences, a general meeting has been arranged for at Vereeniging, Transvaal, May, 25, when a final decision is expected. It is believed that the peace outlook is favorable if the delegates place the situation fairly before the burghers.

Santiago Will Honor Palma

Santiago, May 1.—President-elect Palma will arrive here today. The mayor of this city has proclaimed that the remaining days of this week are to be regarded as holidays here, and no work will then be permitted. Every business house and residence in Santiago displays bunting and palm leaves, and thousands of Cuban and American flags are flying. Twenty triumphal arches have been erected in the city.

Half and Half.

The dyspeptic may well be represented pictorially as being half masculine and half feminine, and combining the least desirable characteristics of either sex. He has all the stubbornness of the man with the peevish irritability of a sick woman. He's not pleasant company at home or abroad.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures dyspepsia and other diseases of the stomach and associated organs of digestion and nutrition. It renews physical health which carries with it cheerfulness of temper, and makes life a pleasure instead of a penance.

The "Discovery" purifies the blood by eliminating the corrupt and poisonous accumulations from which disease is bred. It increases the activity of the blood-making glands, so increasing the supply of pure rich blood, which gives life to every organ of the body. It gives new life and new strength.

"Your 'Golden Medical Discovery' has performed a wonderful cure," writes Mr. M. H. House, of Charleston, Franklin Co., Ark. "I had the worst case of dyspepsia, the doctors say, that they ever saw. After trying seven doctors and everything I could hear of, with no benefit, I tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and now I am cured."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops.—JESSE PINKEY HALL, Springville, Ala. This Remedy is for sale by all druggists.

INDUSTRIAL TROUBLES

Not Greatly Increased by May Day Strikes

OVER 15,000 WORKMEN IDLE

Granite Cutters on Cape Ann Swell Ranks of Strikers Because Demands Were Not Complied With—Woolen Strike Still on In Many Plants

Boston, May 2.—May day strikes were quite numerous throughout New England, although no particularly serious industrial disturbance was reported. The spring of 1902 will long be remembered for its record-breaking number of strikes and lockouts in the New England states, but in many branches of industry the difficulties were settled before the approach of May day. The city of Boston was remarkably free from strikes yesterday; in fact there was little or no trouble anywhere, and but for the long-standing brewers' difficulty and the strike last week of the tin-can workers, the atmosphere would practically be clear. The carpenters, bakers and tip-cart drivers of the city have grievances, but it is thought most of these will be adjusted without a strike.

On Cape Ann some 800 granite cutters left work because their demands regarding wages and hours were not complied with, and in Barre, Vt., and one or two other places a small number of granite workers struck. Strikes among the building trades occurred in several Connecticut towns, and at a number of points in other states. About 1000 teamsters are idle in Providence because their employers could not see their way clear to grant an advance in wages.

With those workmen who have been out for some time and those who struck yesterday it is probable that the total number of persons on strike in New England will reach 15,000. The greatest disturbance, and in some respects the most remarkable known for years in New England, is that of the weavers in mills of the American Woolen company. From an apparently insignificant difficulty in Olneyville, R. I., three months ago, the trouble has continued to grow and is still extending until today some 20,000 operatives are affected. Not more than 4000 weavers left their looms, but the idle machinery and the finishing up of material has made many additional thousands leave the mills. In some cases plants have been shut down, while others are closing gradually. A settlement of this strike seems as remote as ever. The weavers in 12 plants of the combine are out, and part of the forces in two additional mills came out Wednesday and yesterday.

Street Railway Trouble Brewing

Albany, May 2.—Fears are expressed here that another big street railway tie-up in Albany and Rennsselaer counties is imminent. The trouble hinges on the discharge of a former president of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes by the United Traction company for permitting his car to collide with another. The union has served a formal demand upon the company for his reinstatement and declare that if this is not granted, every man on its lines, which operates in the cities of Albany, Troy, Cohoes, Watervleit and Rensselaer, will strike. The strike on this line a year ago culminated in the calling out of the National Guard and the killing by soldiers of two well known citizens.

Notice to Lowell Operatives

Lowell, Mass., May 2.—A notice has been posted in the weave rooms of every mill in Lowell announcing the adoption of certain rules, the most important of which are: "While not objecting to union men, or proposing to discriminate against them, we shall exercise our right to hire others and also to introduce learners.

"Fixers are to work the full number of hours for which they are paid."

Generous Profit Sharing

Bath, Me., May 2.—The management of the Hyde Windlass company yesterday distributed $5000 among the 200 men who have been in the employ of the company during the entire past year as their share of the earnings under the new profit-sharing plan. The amount distributed represents 5 percent on the capital stock, and gives each man on an average 2½ weeks' extra pay.

Twelve Thousand Quit Work

Pittsburg, May 2.—Nine organized building trades in the Pittsburg district started the conflict yesterday for higher wages. Many of the employers agreed to the demands during the day and at the close there was every indication that the struggle will be of short duration. Of the 12,000 men who were ordered out yesterday, probably not more than 6000 will be idle today.

KING'S GRACIOUS ACT

Pardon For Chicago's Officers Upon Payment of Civil Damages

Rome, May 2.—The king has pardoned the officers of the United States cruiser Chicago who have been imprisoned at Venice. They will be immediately handed over to the United States consul, from whose charge they will be transferred to the Chicago, which is ready to sail. United States Ambassador Meyer conferred yesterday with Signor Prinetti, the foreign minister, and it was arranged that the American naval officers should be released, conditioned upon the payment of civil damages amounting to $2000.

Washington, May 2.—Release of the Chicago's officers, in prison at Venice, was asked by the United States as an act of grace. Judge Advocate General Lemly came to the conclusion that as the officers and men had violated the municipal laws of Venice, they must pay the penalty. Having reached this conclusion, there was no other course to adopt than to appeal directly to the Italian government. It is said at the navy department that the fact that the offenders have been punished under Italian law does not prevent their punishment by the naval authorities. Rear Admiral Crowinshield will probably arrive at Naples in time to order a court of inquiry to make a thorough investigaton. The report of this court will determine whether any of the officers and men shall be court martialed.

Parting and Greeting

Washington, May 2.—At the head of the line to say good-bye to Secretary Long and greet Mr. Moody yesterday was Admiral Dewey and his secretary, Lieutenant Crawford. Then followed a number of rear admirals who are in the city, the chiefs of bureaus, the commandant of marine, the assistant chiefs of bureau, chief clerks, and so on, until the entire navy department force had greeted the new secretary and said farewell to the retiring one.

Lords Reject Divorce Bill

London, May 2.—The divorce bill, introduced by Earl Russell, was thrown out in the house of lords yesterday. The bill provided for divorce on five grounds in addition to the causes already valid in England. Lord Chancellor Halsbury characterized the bill as practically abolishing the institution of marriage and said it was an outrage that it should have been introduced. He then moved its rejection, which was carried.

Coler Confers With Hill

Albany, May 2.—Bird S. Coler held a conference, lasting about ½ hour, with yesterday. He stated that his visit was for the purpose of discussing plans for organizing the Democratic party. Asked if the names of any available candidates for governor had been discussed, he said they had not, as the leaders were more interested in getting the party into fighting trim than they are in candidates.

Higher Wages For Railroaders

Oswego, N. Y., May 2.—The wages of 250 employes of the New York Central shops in this city have been advanced 10 to 40 cents a day. The monthly salaries of the operators, station agents, and yard clerks of the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg division have also been increased. The advances will increase the monthly salary list over $200,000.

Hundreds Killed by Tornado

Simla, India, May 2.—A tornado struck Posgola, from whence it moved to Sanachar. Everywhere in the path of the cyclone huts, trees, the roofs of houses and people were carried up into the air like paper. Thirty-one persons were killed at Sanachar, 110 were killed near Dacca, 175 were killed at Nagalband, while 100 were killed at Barnighat.

Behring's Serum Saves Lives

Berlin, May 2.—The use of Professor Behring's diphtheria serum has resulted in the lowest death rate from diphtheria in Berlin in the year 1901 ever recorded. The deaths from diphtheria in 1901 were 469. Prior to the introduction of Professor Behring's serum the deaths from this disease ranged from 1300 to 2600 a year.

Chelsea Under License Law

Chelsea, Mass., May 2.—For the first time since April 30, 1891, the sale of liquor in this city prevails legally and the residents yesterday witnessed the unusual spectacle of the open saloon. Business was lively all day, but there was little disturbance.

Second Disastrous Visitation

Davenport, Ia., May 2.—Fire last evening destroyed the main portion of the plant of the Bettendorf Steel Axle company. The loss is estimated at $250,000. The company suffered a $200,000 loss by fire last November.

Poisoned Children and Herself

Denver, May 2.—Mrs. John L. Kingsbury, wife of the foreman of a local laundry, poisoned her two children, aged 8 and 12 years respectively, and herself yesterday. All are dead. Despondency is given as the cause.

Peasants In Central and Southern Russia In Rebellion

NOBLE'S ESTATE IS SACKED

Emancipated Serfs Led to Believe That Czar Ordered Lands of Nobles to Be Divided Between Them—Strife Stirred Up by Political Agitators

St. Petersburg, May 2.—The labor population of the whole district between Moscow and Vladimar, central Russia, is in revolt. There have been numerous encounters between the workingmen and the troops, and many persons have been killed or wounded. A Uhlan regiment, commanded by Colonel Zedlewer, fraternized with workmen.

Alexander of Oldenbourg's celebrated Chateau of Romene, in the government of Voronej, southern Russia, has been burned by peasants, in revolt, who virtually ruined the estate. The czar's sister, Olga, married the duke's son, Duke Peter, last year.

The seriousness of the situation in south Russia is apparent, from the fact that Dragomiroff, governor general of Kieff, Pocarcoff, vice director of the department of police, and other officials have joined VonPlehwe, the minister of the interior, at Kharkoff.

The Voronej sugar refineries especially have suffered from the outbreak during which the Duke of Oldenbourg's estate was dismantled. It now develops that the agitators who are chiefly responsible for the spread of the revolutionary movement among the hungry peasants used a curious political canard to bring the former serfs and the landowners into collision.

A rumor was industriously circulated that the czar had ordered the lands of the nobles to be divided among the emancipated serfs. The peasants thereupon formed committees, under the commune officials, which waited on the landowners and ordered them to vacate the land withheld from the peasants, chose their own agents and proceeded to distribute the land and moveables, leaving the noblemen from 15 to 20 acres each. The proceedings, which were orderly, were conducted with the utmost gravity until the authorities interfered. Thereafter there was riot, arson and devastation.

In military circles it is believed that the army manoeuvers which have been planned to take place in Orel and Koursk cannot occur, owing to the disturbed state of those governments.

Dead Stowaways In Coal Bunkers

New York, May 2.—Steamer Sir Richard Grenville, from Cuban ports, arrived yesterday and reported that on April 18 the body of a colored man was discovered in the coal bunkers and it was buried at sea. On the 24th another dead body of a colored man was found in the bunkers and it was also buried at sea. Both men had been dead for several days and evidently were stowaways who, after stowing themselves away, were suffocated in the coal bunkers.

Siler's Decision Disapproved

St. Louis, May 2.—The 20-round bout last night for the bantam weight championship of the world, between Harry Forbes of Chicago, the present holder of the title, and Johnny Regan Referee Siler. The decision was the popular, the majority of the large body of spectators being of the opinion that the New Yorker was entitled to the verdict by more than a fair margin.

Another Conference Declined

Lowell, Mass., May 2.—The treasurers of the local cotton mills have declined the request of the citizens' committee for another conference, stating that business is not as good now as at the time of the last meeting and that an advance in wages is impossible.

Albany Foundrymen Strike

Albany, May 2.—A strike of foundry laborers has tied up two foundries in this city and the men threaten to call out all of the men in the various foundries in the city. The men ask an increase of wages from $1.50 to $2 a day.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops.—JESSIE PINKEY HALL, Springville, Ala. This Remedy is for sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

It has been said that it is difficult to enthuse the people of Quincy in a common cause, but this evidently does not apply to the women and children who planned and made the May festival such a success.

Quincy has always had earnest supporters of the cause of Ireland, and the enthusiastic meeting this week recalls the late George Cahill, who was perhaps the foremost. He was an able writer and ready at all times to debate the question.

Perhaps it would be well to ask owners of estates near City Square to submit prices for which they would sell for a government building. If possible the principal streets—Hancock, Washington, Temple, Chestnut or Granite.

In the Y. M. C. A. paper of Lorain, Ohio, April 19, the financial results of no saloons in Quincy for 20 years is given considerable prominence, also the votes under local option, and there are editorial comments favorable to Quincy in contrast with Lorain. Prohibitory Quincy seems to be getting well known.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Cattle raisers derive not one cent's worth of benefit from the duty on hides. A few packers manipulate the market for their exclusive profit, while free hides would benefit every manufacturer, shoe worker and purchaser of footwear in the United States.—Lynn Item.

☞ Progress is the passage from limited desires to those that are unlimited, from those which can be easily satisfied and satiated to those that expand with satisfaction. One can readily find the limit of his desire for food, drink, or clothing. But the more truth, love, justice, and liberty he has, the more he wants and the more he can use.—Christian Register.

☞ We suppose that the idea of the Lowell Mail is that if the railroads were owned by the government, the employes would go into politics for their own personal benefit. Very likely some of them would. But if the objection is good for anything with regard to the ownership of railroads, it is just as good with regard to the ownership of steam fire engines. We cannot expect undiluted good results from any experiment in human government, any more than we can expect them from anything else. The present private ownership of railroads is not quite satisfactory. There is no reason that we know of to suppose that government ownership would be quite satisfactory. In either case, advantages and disadvantages must be balanced off against each other. Surely, the nation will not shy at the governmental ownership of railroad because railroad employes can vote. Yielding to fear like that would have prevented popular government altogether.—New Bedford Standard.

MAY DAY FESTIVAL

Music Hall Crowded with Happy Children.

Entertainment by the School Pupils.

Well Known Ladies Prominent on the Committees.

The younger school children, more especially the girls, had a grand time Thursday afternoon at the May day festival at Music hall. The festival was held under the auspices of the Quincy Home Science Association, and the proceeds are to be devoted to carrying on the work of the free summer kindergarten and Sloyd classes of the association.

The public schools were closed during the afternoon that the children might attend, and long before the time advertised for the opening of the doors hundreds of happy-faced children gathered on the sidewalk and waited anxiously to get in. Once the doors were opened it was not many minutes before every available seat was taken, and there were many unable to find seats.

On the sides of the hall were tables for the sale of home-made candy, ice cream and May baskets. All of these tables were attractive but the May basket department was the one upon which the children feasted their eyes. Here were shown hundreds of pretty May baskets which met with a ready sale.

A pleasing program was provided consisting of vocal and instrumental music, fancy dancing and tableaux which were furnished largely by pupils of the public schools.

Emery L. Crane was stage manager and he was obliged to use a megaphone to make his voice heard.

The program was given in sections with waits of fifteen minutes between each. This gave an opportunity for the children and older people to patronize the tables. The last half hour was devoted to general dancing, music being furnished by a hurdy-gurdy.

Songs,—"The Swing Song" and "How the Baby was named," by Adams school first primary grade pupils, conducted by Miss Hernan and Miss Donovan.

Butterfly Dance,—Janet Weston of the Washington school; Selina Belaveau accompanist.

Choruses — "Merrily trip and go," and "Faintly the night winds sigh," 8th grade Quincy school pupils.

Banjo and Mandolin music—a—"Invitation"; b—"Jubilee," by Coddington school pupils.

Skirt dance,—Lincoln school pupils —Miss Selina Beleveau, accompanist.

Interlude of 15 minutes.

Mother Goose pantomine,—"Miss Tabetha."

"Sailor's Hornpipe" by Zita Pitts of the Cranch school.

Chorus,—High school pupils.

Dance, "The Oxford" by pupils of Miss Corlew, Mrs. H. F. Spear accompanist.

Interlude of 15 minutes.

Tamborine dance,—Clara DeCoste of the Cranch school.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Senator Sprague and Representative McKnight Debate Measures.

The Drinkwater bill to pension soldiers and sailors of the Civil war who lost an arm or leg was badly beaten in the Senate on Thursday, 18 to 5. Senator Sprague not only voted against the bill, but spoke against it. The Democrats stood together in favor.

The bill relative to second trials in cases where verdicts were either inadequate or excessive was rejected 12 to 20 after considerable debate among the lawyers of the Senate. Again all the Democrats favored the bill.

The Senate went on record in favor of more pay for letter carriers, passing resolutions memorializing Congress.

The House devoted most of Thursday to the Sunday candy bill, which on a rising vote was favored 112 to 17. This will permit the sale of ice cream, soda water and confectionery on the Lord's day. The speakers in opposition used the labor argument, rather than the religious, claiming that it would require more work by clerks.

A majority of the House favored the constitutional amendment bill on petition of 50,000 voters, but a necessary two-thirds vote was not secured. The vote was 111 to 64.

In the debate on the bill to incorporate New England railway assurance company, McKnight of Quincy was one of the speakers in favor, and the bill passed 61 to 15.

The house voted to repeal the charter of the Boston, Cape Cod and New York canal company.

Three important labor bills were reported. One to forbid the employment of minors under 18 and of women in any textile factory after 6 P. M. or before 6 A. M. A penalty of from $20 to $50 is provided for the violation of the act. Another to regulate the hours of labor of railroad companies, by providing that 10 hours' work performed within 11 consecutive hours shall constitute a day's labor in the operation of all railroads in the commonwealth. Also a bill to require employers, in time of strike or lockout, to notify the state board of arbitration and conciliation of the fact.

Off for the South.

Many young Wollaston friends have already missed the association of such a genial fellow as Mr. A. A. McDonald. Tuesday he left for his home in Pinehurst, North Carolina. At Battery wharf, on the Kershaw steamer, he was given a farewell greeting by several of his many friends. He intends to enter business with a friend who is interested in a gold mine and next year to resume his studies in the south. He came north about three years ago for the benefit of a northern education, attended the Quincy High school and has made his home with Dr. Charles T. Adams, Wollaston. Unlike most young fellows, he has not been educated at his father's expense, but has received his intellectual learning through his own efforts. This winter, overcome by work, his eyes failed him and little hope was at one time given for the return of his sight. Fortunately, he is gradually gaining, but will be unable to use books for a year.

He is a very noble fellow, a pleasant and sincere companion and has the power of making friends and but few enemies. He was a member of the Edward Hewitson Associates and his work as a member was greatly appreciated. So he goes with many well wishes.

A Case of Luck.

Tuesday evening Officer Larkin encountered two young children on Washington street, near Mill street, who were bemoaning the loss of a $2 bill, which they had recently collected for their father. The kind hearted officer secured a lantern and the children went over their route with him. Others joined in the search. Sumner street was reached just in season to see the bill blow around the corner into Washington. Few would have noticed it at all, but the quick eye of the officer detected it, and restored it to the children.

IRELAND'S CAUSE.

Joseph Devlin and Others at Hancock Hall.

An Ovation Given Ex-Mayor Hall.

Branch of the United Irish League Organized.

A very large and enthusiastic audience gathered at Hancock hall, Thursday evening, at the meeting held in the interest of the United Irish League of America.

Patrick W. Driscoll called the meeting to order, and Rev. Francis A. Frigulietti, pastor of St. John's church, presided.

The first speaker was Joseph Devlin, who outlined the policy of the United Irish League. He held the closest attention and received just applause when he referred to the noted patriots of 1798. He also paid a glowing tribute to the branch of the Irish League formed in Quincy in the early 80's and felt confident that the example of these pioneers in the fight for Ireland's rights would be followed by the sons of those members who gave their time and money in the cause of Ireland.

Rev. Alfred A. Ellsworth spoke a good word for the Irish and wished the envoys God speed in their worthy cause.

Ex-Mayor John O. Hall received an ovation and spoke eloquently of the Irish love for justice and fatherland, their cause was the cause of humanity. The world at large, irrespective of race, color or creed, would rejoice at Ireland's ultimate rights being attained.

Other brief addresses were made by John O'Callaghan and Patrick J. Timmius.

Before the meeting dissolved it was merged into a permanent organization with Timothy J. Carey as chairman, Edward J. Murphy as secretary, and Michael T. Sullivan treasurer.

Many of those present signified their intention of becoming members of the league and a goodly sum was contributed as a nucleus for an organization which is to emulate the vigorous branch of the Irish Land League which has been in existence in Quincy for more than twenty years.

During the evening John Findlay, the boy soprano, sang two Irish songs "By Killarney's Lakes and Rills" and "Harp That Once Thro' Tara's Hall."

How to See New England at Home.

New England has never been presented in better form in the way of illustrations than that given in the "Portfolios of Views" covering the various picturesque sections of the summer playground under the following groups: Mountains of New England, Seashores of New England, Lakes of New England, Rivers of New England and Picturesque New England, the latter illustrating many historic spots. Each portfolio contains 30 or more half-tone pictures, and will be mailed upon receipt of six cents for each book, together with a catalogue of descriptive books by the Passenger Department Boston and Maine Railroad, Boston.

Washington, May 1.—The ways and means committee has taken no action on the bills to place meat on the free list or the reason to investigate the meat trust which has been referred to it and Chairman Payne expresses the opinion that nothing will be done. Pending the investigation which the department of justice is conducting, he does not think it proper for the committee to take action on the resolution.

New Mayor of Halifax

Halifax, May 1.—At the civil election held yesterday Adam B. Crosby was elected mayor of Halifax, over Charles S. Lane, by 16 majority, out of a total vote of 3370. By almost unanimous vote it was decided to grant a cash bonus of $100,000 for the establishment of a steel shipbuilding yard on the shores of Halifax harbor.

A STUBBORN COLD OR BRONCHITIS yields more readily to Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil than to anything that you can take; and if persistently used a few days, will break up the cold.

When you awake in the night choked up and coughing hard, take a dose of the Emulsion, and you will get immediate relief, where no cough medicine will give you relief. It has a soothing and healing effect upon the throat and bronchial tubes.

Most people understand Scott's Emulsion is a great body builder—but it is equally good to allay inflammation and cure colds and violent coughing.

May Day Festival.

On Thursday evening a salad supper and May-pole dance and entertainment took place in the Universalist vestry. An excellent supper was served to which all did justice. Seats were arranged about the sides of the vestry leaving the centre space about the May pole for the dance. The following is the program:

1. Piano and Cornet Duet. Mr. and Miss McConarty
2. Reading,—"Seeing Things." Miss Ruth Dole
3. Drama,—"Lena's Dream." Five little misses
4. Piano Solo. Miss Ethel Merritt
5. Tenor Solo,—"Once in a Purple Twilight." D. J. Seward McCurdy
   Mrs. A. M. McFarland, accompanist.
6. Figure Dancing. Six little misses
7. Piano Solo. Miss McConarty
8. Drama from Mother Goose. Four children
9. Cornet and Piano Duet. Mr. and Miss McConarty
10. May Pole Dance.

It was an excellent entertainment and well merited the applause which it received. The May pole dance was exceedingly pretty and well executed, showing careful training. Mrs. Hayden had charge of the entertainment and worked hard for its success. Mr. C. H. Green announced the programs and assisted greatly toward the success of the evening.

MEMORIAL DAY'S LESSON.

What It Has Taught the People of the United States.

Nearly four decades have passed since the last soldier fell in battle in the war for the Union, and to a very large part of our people now the commemoration of the heroic dead necessarily has not the personal association that at first gave such solemnity to the annual decoration of their graves. But, while the ceremony has thus lost something of its spontaneity, says the Philadelphia Times, it may really have gained more than it has lost in value. This day of flowers, which was at first devoted to the personal commemoration of the dead, grows more and more into a celebration of the impersonal virtue of patriotism, which was illustrated in their devotion unto death.

And this is all the more valuable because it utterly excludes all that self seeking, commercial element that for a time seemed to have taken possession of Memorial day and dishonored the soldier dead by associating with their memory a demand for recompense to their survivors. No matter what the measure of our obligations to the volunteers of 1861-65, they did not go into the war for pay or even for glory. The world never saw a grander exhibition of unselfish sacrifice than they made in pure devotion to their country, and this is what we have to commemorate, what we have to emulate, what we have to teach our children to hold in lasting honor.

Memorial day thus takes its place among our American holidays as the festival especially of the military virtues, as Independence day commemorates the civic virtues and duties of patriotism. Not many times in the history of our nation has the great sacrifice of war come upon us, but whenever it may come we must take care that it find us ready with the courage and devotion and the enthusiasm that met all previous trials and secured to us our opportunities of peace.

—President Roosevelt says he took pleasure in attaching his signature to the bill repealing the internal revenue taxes imposed on account of the war with Spain, amounting to about $70,000,000 a year.

A $20,000 SITE.

Estates on Chestnut Street Suggested for Government Building.

Another desirable location for a government building was suggested to the Ledger this morning—the Willis and Brackett estates on Chestnut street; the former also having a frontage on Maple place, and the latter a frontage on Foster street.

Reference to the Assessors' books shows that these two estates are valued at more than $12,000, the amount appropriated, in fact over $20,000, viz:

Mitchell Willis—
Land, 13,167 feet,	$6,500
House,	1,800
Cafe building,	600
George A. Brackett—
Land, 24,680 feet,	$8,150
House,	3,500
Stable,	300
Total,	$20,850

Whether the owners would sell for more or less the writer has no knowledge, but it is apparent that it will be difficult to secure a desirable location for $12,000.

Probably the part which fronts on Foster street would not be necessary, but even with that off the cost of the estates would not be materially reduced.

Perhaps the Willis estate, with a portion of the Dr. French estate would be sufficient, but then the cost might exceed $12,000.

This location would solve the Maple place extention as it would give a passage through for pedestrians who seem to demand it the most.

Should the city vote to extend Maple place through straight to Chestnut the narrow strip of the Dr. French estate and the Willis estate would be large enough being a corner lot and should be purchased for $12,000.

Big Catches in Maine.

Judging from the reports which are daily reaching us, the fishing sport this season gives promise of surpassing that of previous years, both in size and quantity. At Belgrade Lakes, Maine, some big catches have been made and also at Moosehead; while the lakes of New Hampshire are this year outdoing themselves both in size and quantity.

The ice left Sunapee April 10th, and for the last two weeks land-locked salmon, weighing anywhere from four to ten pounds have been landed. Numbers are daily leaving Sunapee with large catches of perch, pickerel, etc., and at Newfound Lake the catches have topped everything. A fourteen pound salmon was pulled from the lake on April 18th, and in every case the fisherman who has visited this section has been amply repaid.

Lake Winnipesaukee in New Hampshire is also sending out her quota, and in the numerous brooks and streams trout fishing has just commenced to take on life.

For full information in regard to fishing in New England, send two-cent stamp to the General Passenger Department, Boston & Maine Railroad, Boston, for their illustrated book "Fishing and Hunting."

Excursion tickets to all principal down east fishing centres went on sale May 1.

Promising Outlook For Peace

Pretoria, May 2.—Boer meetings continue to be held, chiefly in the Transvaal, to receive the leaders' explanations of the British terms. It is understood that the heated discussions which have occurred have usually shown the majority to be in favor of peace. It is reported that General DeWet has frankly declared the British terms to be reasonable and that it is advisable to accept them, while General Delarey is said to be ready to abide by the decision of the majority. The outlook for peace, therefore, is promising.

Neck Broken by Wheels

Manchester, N. H., May 2.—John R. Ronse of Bedford, while passing through West Manchester last night, stopped at a store to trade when his horse started along. In attempting to stop the animal Rouse fell under the wheels and was killed, his neck being broken.

But Few Saloon Changes

Boston, May 1.—The license year for Boston, in common with the cities and towns of the state voting "yes," begun today. The changes here are not many, several small hotels failing to get the necessary parchment and a few saloons closing through inability of the proprietors to pay the fees demanded. Some social clubs which have come in for attention the past year have been refused licenses.

Bodies Found In Bay

Fall River, Mass., May 1.—The bodies of Masseline Marciel, aged 30, and Joseph Mello, his nephew, aged 16, were found floating in Mount Hope Bay yesterday. The men were last seen alive on March 9, when they hired a boat to take a trip to Cole's river, and since that time there has been an unsuccessful search made for them.

Boycott on Boston Beer

Webster, Mass., May 1.—The hotel and saloon keepers of this town have agreed not to sell any more of the product of the Boston breweries until the strike has been settled in that city. The Boot and Shoe Workers' union has voted to impose a fine of $2 on all members who purchase non-union goods.

MILTON.

There will be special services at the East Milton Baptist church on Sunday, May 4. Dr. Witter of Boston preaches in the morning; Dr. Mabie of Boston, in the evening. At 7.30 P. M. a life size portrait of the late Irving W. Hathaway will be unveiled.

John Duton has moved from Granite place to the corner of State street and Grafton avenue.

There is some talk of forming a new social club, and the erection of a building for club purposes.

Monday evening the young ladies of the gymnasium class entertained their instructor at the residence of Mrs. J. E. Quimby on Belcher circle. Light refreshments were served.

The hour of the Sunday evening service at the Mission of Our Saviour church has been changed to 7.30.

The Ladies' guild of the Mission church held its annual meeting this week.

The fire department was called out by a still alarm from Box 767 Tuesday to extinguish fire in a lot of telephone poles.

The prizes for the best work at the gymnasium last week were awarded to William Forbes and Edward Jones. In the juvenile class Ralph and Roy Eaton carried off the honors.

French Festive Party.

The number of pupils in our High school who study French has increased from less than ten to more than two hundred. The teacher in French, Miss Elizabeth Souther, gave the senior pupils a French festive party May day afternoon at the home on Foster street, about thirty young people being present, boys and girls as we like to call them. English was dropped at the entrance, to be resumed only at their departure. The program consisted of literary games in which there was a list of forty books and authors to be found out by the young people. There were epigrams, proverbs, quotations, written upon slips of paper to be solved. Shouting proverbs in French was a good test of the educated ear in this study. All conversation except in this language was forbidden unless some laughing girl became desperate and a big English word was thrown in. These exercises showed what our schools can do along this line.

There was a beautiful tea served, with all the dainty accessories and there were May baskets, some bits of china, etc., given out as prizes to the best scholars.

MONEY WANTS TO QUIT

Would Have Assault Charges Withdrawn From Court

Washington, May 2.—An unexpected move to nolle prosse the three cases of alleged assault growing out of the altercation on a street car last week in which Senator Money of Mississippi, Conductor Shaner and James E. Hooper of the district fire department, figured, resulted yesterday in postponing the cases in the police court until Tuesday. After a protracted conference between counsel for Senator Money in District Attorney Mullowney's office it was decided by them to allow the cases to drop and when they appeared in the police court later Mr. Mullowney announced to Judge Kimball that, after investigating the cases on both sides, he had concluded that the ends of justice would be subserved by dismissing the charges against all three defendants. He would, therefore, nolle prosse them. The attorneys for Shaner and Hooper protested against this action.

Senator McLaurin, Senator Money's colleague from Mississippi, who, with Attorney Bell, represented Mr. Money, explained that Mr. Money had been confined to his room since Saturday and was threatened with pneumonia. Mr. McLaurin thought it was "unnecessary to state the cause of the trouble." He produced a physician's certificate, setting forth that Senator Money was suffering from congestion of the lungs and confined to his bed and it would be five or six days before he could leave his house. All he wanted, said Mr. McLaurin, was to relieve Senator Money from further prosecution in this case for any alleged offenses charged against him.

The court stated that the only point was as to power of the district attorney to nolle prosse, which he was inclined to sustain, but he finally agreed to postpone announcing his conclusion until Tuesday morning.

First In Textile Manufacturing

Washington, May 2.—The census reports covering the state of Massachusetts show that the manufacture of textiles is the most important industry in the state. The 512 establishments reported in 1900 gave employment to 149,346 wage-earners, or 30 percent of the wage-earners employed in the state, and the products were valued at $214,600,980, or 20.7 percent of the total value of the products of the state. In the manufacture of textiles Massachusetts has long ranked first among the United States. In 1900 its textile products exceeded in value those of Pennsylvania, the state ranking second, by $55,818,893, or 35.2 percent.

Royalty Comes High

Chicago, May 2.—Rebates to the amount of 10 percent were yesterday received by the persons who contributed to the fund for the entertainment of Prince Henry of Prussia when he visited Chicago in March. The total amount subscribed was $25,000 and the expenses of the princely visit amounted to $22,000. Prince Henry arrived in Chicago at 6 o'clock on the evening of March 3, and departed for Milwaukee at 2 o'clock the following afternoon. Entertaining royalty in Chicago cost $1000 an hour, by averaging up the expenses.

AGUINALDO'S SERVICES

REBELLION AGAINST SPAIN

Did Not Have Independence For Its Object, In the Opinion of General MacArthur—Major Gardener May Hasten From Manila to Testify

Washington May 2.—Major General MacArthur yesterday continued his testimony before the senate committee on the Philippines. Answering a question by Senator Culberson, the general stated that the Filipino people were justified in concluding that the actions of the United States army were sympathetic. The Filipinos, he said, were in a resentful and vindictive opposition to Spain, and any active force on their part against Spain naturally helped the United States, and vice versa; but he said there was a distinct purpose through the intercourse of Americans and Filipinos to repudiate the idea of direct co-operaton which in any way committed the United States to a policy. Aguinaldo was landed at Manila aboard an American warship because he was a useful individual who could be employed in a manner that would contribute to American success.

General MacArthur described the assistance rendered by the Filipinos to the United States army when it first landed at Manila, and said that on account of their diverting the fire of the Spaniards the resistance to the United States forces was somewhat lessened.

General MacArthur spoke of the capture of papers from high Filipino officials in which the information was contained that if President McKinley should be re-elected the insurgents would surrender to the authority of the United States. His proclamation issued shortly after, giving a correct interpretation of the laws of war, he said, had the effect of mitigating the atrocities by the Filipinos, which had become so common, and of convincing thousands that their loyalty to the United States would be protected. General MacArthur expressed the opinion that the rebellion against Spain did not have independence for its object.

Before leaving Manila General MacArthur said he had a conversation with Aguinaldo, who told him that he had been misinformed as to the character of the American people and the purpose of the American government. Aguinaldo [illegible] possible at this stage of their evolution for his own people to establish a stable, independent government. The statement was voluntary, he said, and caused him to revise his views about Aguinaldo and after he got to knew him he attached considerable weight to what he said.

The committee in secret session at this point considered the question whether steps should be taken to secure the attendance of Major Gardener in advance of the arrival of that officer's regiment. The committee decided not to issue a peremptory summons, but to ask the secretary of war to have Major Gardener come on in advance of his regiment if not inconsistent with the good of the service. It is believed by members of the committee that Major Gardener will leave Manila on the next transport.

Remey Gives His Opinion

New York, May 2.—Rear Admiral Remey, who arrived here yesterday on the Brooklyn after a tour of sea duty in the far east, was interviewed on the conditions in the Philippines. He said: "Of these stories of alleged cruelties and the subjugation of the natives to the so-called 'water cure' I have no personal knowledge. Concerning general conditions in the islands, General Chaffee told me before I left that things were progressing satisfactorily and that pacification was only a matter of time. Talk of the withdrawal of the United States from the Philippines is based on an inaccurate and incomplete knowledge of conditions out there. This country could not withdraw. Chaos would be the result. My observations have convinced me that the natives are not capable of self-government yet. They need a guiding hand, and now that we have undertaken the task we cannot, for the sake of humanity, withdraw until the work is completed."

The crew, officers and marines of the Brooklyn assembled on her deck late yesterday and presented to Rear Admiral Remey a loving cup. The vessel is of silver and lined with gold. It stands 18 inches in height. The presentation speech was made by John Mahoney, a small apprentice boy, who thanked the admiral for his kindness to the crew under him. The admiral was very much affected and could say but little in reply.

Criticism From Carmack

Washington, May 2.—Aguinaldo was the special subject of discussion in the senate yesterday. As soon as the Philippine government bill was taken up Mr. Carmack resumed his criticism of the Philippine committee because of its refusal to call Aguinaldo and other Filipinos as witnesses. He maintained that as reflections by witnesses had been cast on the character of Aguinaldo he ought to be permitted "in all decency" to defend himself. Mr. Carmack's contention was sharply combatted by Mr. Foraker, Mr. McComas and Mr. Burton.

PRODUCERS DISAPPOINTED

At Result of Auction of Connecticut Shade-Grown Sumatra Leaf

Hartford, May 2.—The first sale of shade-grown Sumatra tobacco leaf was held in this city yesterday, all the shade-grown tobacco raised in the Connecticut river valley in the season of 1901 having been brought in, by agreement of the growers, to be sold by auction. There were dealers and manufacturers present from New York, Chicago and Boston, and there was great interest in the sale, as it was expected it would fix the market value of this tobacco, which before had not been in the market.

The prices varied from $2.80 downward, the leaf of the low-priced bales being dark and short. The bidding at the start was not lively nor did it gain as the sale progressed. The fine leaf, of good color, well sorted to large sizes, brought the best prices, although it did not average over $2. Indeed, much of the crop sold was at a less price.

Some growers withdrew their lots when the prices became apparently fixed and will hold for a better rate, which they feel sure will come. The general feeling is that the sale was not a success in the way in which it was carried on, and that the growers could have made better figures at private sale. The opinion of the experts who attended the sale was to the effect that the prices were fairly good, but no one was enthusiastic.

Baby Killed by a Cat

Boston, May 2.—Mrs. J. L. McKenney of West Roxbury rocked her 5-months-old daughter to sleep yesterday and placed the child on a sofa for a nap. Later the mother saw a big cat, the family pet, lying close to the baby's head and in a second more had discovered that the baby was dead. The cat had either crowded against the child's face and smothered her to death, or had "sucked the oxygen from the child's mouth," as a doctor expressed it.

Doctor Visited by Robbers

Boston, May 2.—Dr. Clara C. Austin reported to the police yesterday that burglars had taken $2000 worth of jewelry from her home during Wednesday night. Dr. Austin said that about 3 o'clock she noticed the odor of chloroform in her chamber, and opened the windows. She soon went to sleep again, but two hours later the fumes of chloroform again woke her. She then noticed that her jewel box was missing.

Baby Blocked Between Walls

Boston, May 2.—While his mother was hanging out clothes on the roof of her house on Prince street yesterday, Antonio Mastaenangelo, 2 years old, fell between the building and the one next adjoining, into a space which at the roof is but a foot wide and gradually grows narrower toward the bottom. The services of firemen were invoked and they were obliged to break through the brick walls in order to extricate the child.

Killed by Fall Upon Rocks

South Framingham, Mass., May 2.—Dr. Z. B. Adams, aged 72, died yesterday as the result of injuries received by a fall from the Metropolitan water board dam at Southboro, striking on the rocks 40 feet below. His death occurred an hour after the accident. Dr. Adams was a Civil war veteran, and took part in several of the most important battles. He was commissioned major by Governor Andrew.

Blue Law Violators Fined

Boston, May 2.—Judge Parmenter yesterday fined Isaac Katz and E. T. Hatch $10 each for violating the so-called blue laws. Both are druggists and they paid their fines. They were the first to be arraigned since the recent order that no soda or confectionary shall be sold on Sunday. Hatch sold candy and Katz sold soda in violation of the police order.

"Sapho" Chopped by Censor

London, May 2.—In the first production in England of the stage version of Daudet's "Sapho," at the Adelphi theatre last night, Olga Nethersole gave a striking picture of the heroine, but the play, emasculated as it is to meet the requirements of the English censor, proved to be unedifying.

All the world is softly tinted

As the sunset colors glowing,

MR. FAXON ON HAND.

But Board of Health Not Ready to Give a Hearing.

The hearing before the Board of Health on the petition of Henry H. Faxon for a scavenger's license, scheduled for last night did not come off. The time fixed for the hearing was 8.30. Mr. Faxon was on the scene before 8 o'clock and was loaded to the muzzle, but after waiting until nearly 10 o'clock for the full board, the hearing was declared off. There seems to have been some misunderstanding about the whole affair for Chairman Gay said he did not know anything about a hearing until he read it in the Ledger. He and Dr. Dion were on hand, but Mr. Badger the third member of the board did not put in an appearance.

While waiting for Mr. Badger the three gentlemen talked the matter over informally. Mr. Faxon informed them why he desired a license, and spoke of the complaints made against the city scavenger. The members of the board in a way admitted that complaints had been received about the city scavenger, but they declined to take any action on granting Mr. Faxon a license as all of the members of the board were not present.

A little before 10 o'clock all hopes of Mr. Badger coming, was given up, and Mr. Faxon went home.

Mr. Faxon said that he made the request for a hearing of Dr. Dion and that he also requested that reporters might be present. Dr. Dion agreed to give him a hearing but drew the line on having reporters present.

UNTIMELY DEATH.

Miss Duffield Shoots Herself at Her Boston Apartments.

Miss Louise M. Duffield the younger daughter of Mrs. Lucretia M. Duffield of Cherry avenue, Quincy was found dead about 10.30 last night at her apartments, 62 St. Germain street, Boston under circumstances which point to suicide.

For over a year she has occupied these apartments, living alone in luxurious style. Meanwhile she was employed as a manicurist in connection with barber shop at Hotel Cecil.

Miss Duffield returned from a visit to New York with her mother on Sunday. During her absence she had entrusted a key to her apartments with a friend, and it was he who discovered her dead, and promptly notified the police.

Assistant Medical Examiner Steadman when called pronounced it a clear case of suicide. There was a bullet hole in the right temple and a 22-calibre revolver grasped in her hand. He further stated that she must have been dead at least two days.

So far as known she was last seen alive on Tuesday evening. The body was brought to Quincy today.

Against Overtime.

Overtime work is frowned upon at Barre the following advertisement signed by the secretary, appearing in the Telegram.

"The Committee of the Granite Cutter's Union have been investigating and find that a number of small firms are working overtime steadily and beyond all reasonable limits. They are hereby notified that any persisting in this practice will be treated as oppositionists."

Guilty of Assault.

Philander Allen, a marble and granite dealer of Dedham, was convicted in the Superior court yesterday of assault with a dangerous weapon on George A. Musche. He was charged also with intent to kill but the jury made no reference to that in the verdict.

A... STUDY of JOY and PAIN

By Everett Holbrook

Copyright, 1901, by Charles B. Etherington

THE night city editor had told me that if I would go to Viani's I might see somebody married and somebody killed, and he had been called away for consultation with the chief before he could explain this statement. So I strolled up to the restaurant dear to the hearts of Bohemians without having any definite idea about what was likely to occur there.

Viani's hospitable door is in the front of a house so small that one would not expect to find space within for ten people to sit down to dinner, but the shanty proves to be only the vestibule to a series of rooms scattered through the jumble of buildings in the middle of the block. These had been taken into the establishment in the years of Viani's advancing prosperity. The different levels of the floors were the steps by which he had risen and by which he had long known he must go down, though only within a few months had any suspicion of his financial embarrassment been whispered through the quarter.

Charley White was leaning against the bar.

In the little bar by the door I observed an inconspicuous person dressed in dark clothes whom I had often met at police headquarters. He goes by the name of Charley White, though he is a son of Italy. I knew him for an amiable fellow and an able detective, and I at once perceived a connection between his presence and the tragic suggestion of the night city editor.

In response to a question from me White admitted that his presence was official rather than social.

"I'm looking for young Viani," said he.

"Nephew of our friend," said I, indicating the proprietor of the establishment, who appeared at that moment at the door of the large dining room in the rear.

"Nicola claims some sort of relationship with old Viani," replied White, "but I doubt if there really is any. He has lived here off and on for some years. He's always been in love with Marta, Viani's daughter, but he never had a chance there. She was willing to be a cousin to him, but no more. He's a hot blooded, half crazy chap, and I've heard that he was going to make trouble."

"He passes for the handsomest man in the quarter."

"Why, what's the matter with him?" I inquired. "It isn't Marta that's married today."

"No," said White. "The bride is Nina Carusi; but this fellow Romano—the bridegroom—used to be engaged to Marta. Romano is no good except to look at, and a man in my business can't even say that much for him, but he passes for the handsomest man in the quarter, and many's the girl that has gone foolish about him. Marta Viani was one of them, and when Romano broke the engagement last summer she nearly died.

"You see, Romano, like a good many others, thought that Viani was rich, and it has always been his theory that he was too handsome to work. He wanted to live at Viani's for nothing the rest of his days, but when it suddenly developed that Viani was ruined and might not be able to live here himself Romano shifted his affections to Nina Carusi, who has a bit of money in her own name.

The poor child was shockingly changed.

"Nicola Viani, the young fellow, has been out of town for awhile and has just got back. He has taken it into his head that Marta is dying of a broken heart and that Romano is responsible. Therefore Nicola has declared a vendetta, and Romano is scared—as he has a right to be, I don't mind telling you."

"But why did they come here for their wedding spread?" I asked.

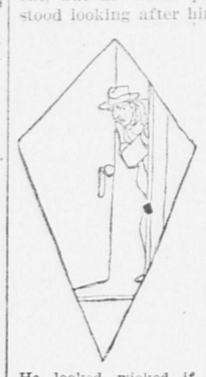

"The arrangements were made before Nicola turned up. This is the swell restaurant, you know, and, besides, Nina Carusi wouldn't lose the chance of making Marta feel sore. There's likely to be trouble, my friend, for Nicola means business. And the worst of it is that I can't find out what's become of him. He wasn't at the church. He must be lying around here somewhere."

"So the wedding has already taken place?" said I. And White replied that it had and that the bridal party was due to arrive at any moment.

I asked him why he had not kept Romano in view, and he answered that he was sure that Nicola was hanging around the restaurant and that the trouble, if there should be any, would be there.

"I think I hear the carriages," he said. "I'll take a look outside."

During this conversation we had stepped into a little room on the right of the bar. No one else had been present, but as White passed out and I stood looking after him a door opened behind me. I turned and saw Marta Viani.

He looked wicked if ever a man did.

Marta was a pretty girl whom I remembered for her big, dark eyes and plump red cheeks. I had not been at Viani's in some months, though formerly an habitue, and so had not seen Marta. The poor child was shockingly changed. I think she must have lost twenty pounds in weight, and the color had quite gone out of her cheeks.

As I looked at her I felt a strong desire to take Nicola's business out of his hands, though my method of administering justice would have been more crude than his and without the touch of finality. It is singular how deeply we sympathize with a girl in such circumstances when she really ought to be congratulated.

Marta leaned against the wall of the room at the point which would be least conspicuous from without. Evidently she wished to see the bridal procession pass into the banquet hall and not herself be seen. There was the voiceless pain of a dumb animal in her eyes, the suffering that always moves me quickest to anger. So long as an afflicted creature can talk and does talk I can keep cool; but poor Marta was beyond speech.

Suddenly I saw at the back of the room, where the door through which Marta had come stood ajar, the face of her cousin, Nicola. He looked wicked if ever a man did. Marta seemed unaware of his presence. She was looking beyond me, waiting for a sight of the rascal, Romano.

In came the bridal couple.

I pretended not to notice Nicola and glanced out into the bar, hoping to see White, but he must have been on the sidewalk, whence came the noise of the arrival of the bridal party. A dozen young men and women came boisterously into the bar and ranged themselves along the sides of the room, with their faces turned toward the door. Around the entrance to the large dining room quite a crowd had gathered. The double doors were open, and by craning my neck I could see the long table spread for the feast.

My position was far from comfortable. I had a very definite idea that Nicola Viani intended to attack Romano at the moment when that happy man should pass the door by which I was standing. In that event I should have to stop him, and, though he was not physically formidable, I knew what he would have in his hand.

I had not the moral courage to ask help of any one, so I stood there like a dummy, trying to look behind and before at the same time. In came the bridal couple, Romano in a frock coat, with a colored shirt under it; a red tie glaring fiercely under his chin, and a big rose of another red ornamenting his buttonhole. He had a tall hat in his left hand, and the bride hung upon his right arm. I observed that his hair and mustache were curled in the best style of the tonsorial art. Withal, he was a handsome creature, and I could hardly wonder that the girls adored him.

On my return I met Viani.

As to the bride, I regretted to observe that she was in all details of dress as different from her race as possible. Her face was rather pretty, and she had a natural grace, but she had spoiled all by making of herself a bad copy of an American.

So they passed by amid cheers, and Nicola remained quiet by the door. Apparently his desire for vengeance had exhausted itself in conversation. I began to despise him, for he had before his eyes the sight of Marta, who would have fallen but for the wall behind her and whose hands were clasped upon her breast as if there were a knife in her heart.

I went out to the street to tell White about Nicola, but failed to find him after considerable search. On my return I met Viani, who told me that I should find a seat reserved for me in the banquet hall.

When I entered, I observed immediately and with surprise that Romano was not there. The chair by the bride's side was empty, and there seemed to be some embarrassment because of this circumstance. I was informed that Romano had been called out upon some matter of importance, but that he would return in a few minutes.

My thoughts leaped to Nicola, but before I could decide upon a course of action my anxiety was relieved by the appearance of Romano. He hastily took his place, and there was a sudden burst of talk around the board. I observed that the bridegroom was pale and nervous, but he certainly had suffered no injury. Presently, to my astonishment and seemingly to that of all present, Marta entered the room. She advanced without embarrassment and took a place not far from the foot of the table and nearly opposite me.

What a change had come over the girl! Her face was no longer pale; her eyes shone with the light of happiness. Surely she looked far more like a bride than the girl at the head of the table. If this were acting, Marta and Sarah Bernhardt stood upon a level.

I think there were many kindly people in that room who sincerely rejoiced to see the girl carry herself so well, but I saw that Romano turned an anxious eye in her direction. She smiled reassuringly, yet in such a way that the company could not know it was for Romano, and she clasped her hands upon her breast with a singular gesture, a sort of thrill that was as intense as pain, yet so immensely different.

She clasped her hands upon her breast.

Many times in the next half hour this secret interchange of glances between Marta and Romano attracted my attention. Always she smiled and pressed her hands upon her bosom, and at last I became convinced that she was concealing something under her dress. Had the rascal given her some token in which she foolishly found consolation? It seemed absurd, yet surely he and she were in sympathy and had a common secret. She who had been dying of grief an hour before was now happy.

I slipped out of the banquet room to see whether I could find some explanation of this mystery elsewhere. In the small room at the right which has been already described I found White, sitting alone by a little table.

"I got him," said he. "It was a close call. That boy Nicola is smart. He managed to get Romano out of the dining room by a fake message, and he nearly murdered him in the small room back of this one at the end of the passage. Romano walked in there unsuspecting, and Nicola crept in after him, stiletto in hand. But Marta suddenly rushed in and grabbed Nicola's arm. When I arrived, she had got him out into the passage. She must be strong. He was half crazy and swore at first that he had stabbed Romano, but really nobody was hurt. I took this away from him and then locked him into a room up stairs."

Marta suddenly grabbed Nicola's arm.

The detective handed me a stiletto with a blade like a hatpin. I glanced at the point and, to my surprise, observed that it was split. A sliver that could not have been much larger than a needle seemed to have been broken out of one side.

"A cheap weapon," said White, examining the break. "I guess he hit the wall with it."

"White," said I, "you get a doctor just as fast as you can. Don't stop to ask questions."

He looked at me for a small part of a second and then vanished out of the room. In less than five minutes he was back again with old Dr. Fabulo, known throughout that region. Meanwhile I had caught Viani and had made him send for his daughter. She came running into the little room almost at the same moment that White and Dr. Fabulo arrived. Her eyes were as bright as a bird's, and she nodded her head with a birdlike motion when I told her that I knew what it was she cherished so tenderly in her bosom.

"Yes," she said; "yes, I was stabbed—for him. She wouldn't have done it. He said so. And he said we'd keep it a secret, just between us, always. Who told you?"

"Don't tell!" she gasped.

Before I could reply her hands were suddenly reddened. Up to that moment the wound had bled scarcely any except internally. We caught her as she fell fainting.

"Don't tell!" she gasped. "It will spoil all. I promised him"—

We let her body slide gently to the floor. The doctor knelt beside her a moment.

"This isn't serious," he said, "but it must have hurt. There's a sliver of steel in the wound."

"I love it," said Marta faintly as she clasped her hands upon the wound.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For Week Beginning May 4. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Prayer a necessity.—Matt. xxvi, 36-46.

In the garden of Gethsemane we see the Lord Jesus Christ in a number of different relations, but the one that here appeals to us is His attitude to God in prayer. He agonized for the sins of the world; He kept His favorite disciples nearest to Him; He warned His disciples against the dangers before them; He showed sublime resignation to the will of God, and with all these He illustrated the importance and necessity of prayer. No prayer is recorded in sacred history so pathetic and so comprehensive as the prayer of Christ in Gethsemane. It put God in His place; it manifested submission to the will of God; it recognized the fact that God is and should be supreme in all things and that we are absolutely dependent upon His will.

The example of Christ illustrates the necessity of prayer. Christ lived in constant communion and fellowship with God. Prayer was the constant attitude of His mind and the practice of His life. He felt the necessity of private prayer amid the cares and perplexities of everyday life. Devotion with Christ was not left to the supreme moments when the necessity of God's help and presence pressed heaviest upon Him. He prayed without ceasing. In His everyday life He spent much time in secret in prayer. And, if He needed to do so, how much more do we need time for secret prayer! Christ also felt the need of prayer in the great moments of His life. Before choosing the twelve He prayed all night. Before calling Lazarus from the dead He looked to God in prayer. Before the trying ordeal of the cross He sought a favorite place of prayer and poured out His soul in devotion and in agony unto God. And, if in the crises of His life He, the Son of God, needed to pray, how much more do we in our weakness and ignorance!

Our constant need of God proves also the necessity of prayer. If our need of God were only occasional, then prayer would be only an occasional necessity. But we need God every day, every hour, every moment.

I need Thee every hour,
Most gracious Lord.
No tender voice like Thine
Can peace afford.
I need Thee, oh, I need Thee;
Every hour I need Thee!
Oh, bless me now, my Saviour!
I come to Thee!

The temptations of life are constant. Our powers of resistance are not great. The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak. Therefore we need to watch and pray lest we yield to temptation. Necessity is laid upon us to be in constant communion with God and to have His power with us at all times. The disciples slept when they should have prayed, and the consequences were disastrous. Therefore "watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation."

BIBLE READINGS.

Lev. iv, 1-3; Num. xv, 30; Deut. vi, 6-9; II Sam. vi, 6, 7; II Kings xx, 1-6; Ps. li, 15, 90, 8; Matt. vi, 5-15; Luke xviii, 1-14; Col. iv, 2-6; II Pet. ii, 9, 10.

As He Is.

"We shall see Him as He is." That is the promise. We have not truly discerned Him yet. Not His disciples, who lived with Him in daily fellowship, who walked and communed with Him by the way, not even they saw Him in very truth. No mortal can so behold Him through the veil of flesh. And if even now we thrill with a wondrous and transcendent joy in those hours when our souls most closely approach the throne of God, what will be our rapture when in that bright heaven which may be nearer to us than we think we see Christ "as He is!" Be sure that no conception of Him can do more than dimly shadow forth His glorious reality. A thousand times more beautiful, more pitiful, more loving, more divine, is He than we have dreamed. Thanks be to God for the promise left us that we shall see Him as He is, and then—ah, yes—we shall be satisfied.—Beatrice Clayton.

God's Tests.

God's ways of testing us are His own. They are tried upon us when we least expect them. They strike us in our least protected part. They are to the unregenrate heart cruelty, but to them which believe they are the chastening which forms our baptism into the fold of God. That would not be chastening which did not hurt us. And whether the discipline be hard or light it is only a fool in intellect and an ingrate in heart who will not submit calmly and nobly to the decree.—Kate Upson Clark in Interior.

Needless Misery.

Much of our misery is needless. Even where it cannot be helped we make it worse by our worries. The affliction is imbittered and intensified by gloomy thoughts and feelings which we inject into it and by our refusal to accept the tender of compensating grace. Favoring providences are lost sight of in the imaginary ills. Life abounds in cheer, and if we want to we can get more sunshine than cloud out of it. Christian philosophy begets the hopeful and triumphant soul which sings amid the storm.—Presbyterian.

Kindness.

You may pulverize ice, but it is ice still, but let a sunbeam fall on it and it is soon dissolved. Abuse, however severe and humiliating, never softens men, but kindness will melt the most obdurate.—Philadelphia Methodist.

On Easier Terms.

Persons may taste religion and seem to like it if they could have it upon easier terms than denying themselves and taking up their cross and following Christ.—Central Presbyterian.

OFFICERS LIBERATED

Chicago Men Say That They Were Not Intoxicated

ACTION IN SELF DEFENSE

Criticism From Rome of Course Pursued by American Consul at Venice —Washington Awaiting Full Investigation of the Affair

Washington, May 3.—A cablegram from Venice announces that the pardon granted by King Victor Emmanuel to the officers and marine of the United States cruiser Chicago who were imprisoned there, arrived yesterday and the prisoners have been released. In an interview the imprisoned officers repudiated the reports from Rome that they were under the influence of wine at the time of the trouble, and said that, on the contrary, they were absolutely sober.

Lieutenant John S. Doddridge remarked: "After the accidental upsetting of a table in a cafe, by myself and a companion, at 11 o'clock at night, we were followed and attacked by a mob, and two municipal policemen appeared on the scene. I motioned to the crowd to keep off. The police then seized us; but the mob continued to be so threatening that our brother officers and a marine who happened to be on the piazza, ran to our rescue. We acted only in self-defense and against a large and hostile crowd. We did not strike the police. Doubtless misunderstanding of the two languages had something to do with the trouble. We have been allowed to remain together in prison; but the room in which we have been confined swarmed with insects."

Nothing further can be done at Washington in the case of the officers involved in the trouble until the full investigation and report of Captain Dayton supply the facts. Neither the state nor the navy department is officially informed as yet of what actually occurred at Venice. In the usual course any court martial on a station is ordered by the commanding officer thereof—in this case Captain Craig of the Albany—but the secretary of the navy may himself order it if the facts warrant such action.

A telegram from Rome says: It is generally considered that the United States consul at Venice is, in a measure, responsible for the proportions to which the trouble over the riotous naval officers has attained. The chief accusations against him are that he blustered and threatened the police when the officers were arrested, darkening their situation for four days; that he neglected to report to his superiors at Rome or Washington, and that he counselled the rejection of the offer of a compromise with those injured.

Premier Sanardelli explicitly says that the government absolutely contradicts the statement that the condemnation of the officers of the Chicago was influenced by any resentment toward the United States. Some American papers, the premier added, seem to see in the incident, into which the relations between the two countries do not enter, a kind of hostility toward the United States because of the war with Spain, a notion that is altogether absurd and fantastic. He said Italy kept within the law and was obliged to enforce it.

Clergy Interfered With Elections

Paris, May 3.—Premier Waldeck-Rousseau has caused a circular to be forwarded to all the prefects of departments drawing attention to the interference of the clergy in the recent elections, and inviting the prefects to furnish the names of those who thus "grossly abused their ecclesiastical functions in a way which caniot be tolerated," so they may be properly dealt with. It is doubtful whether Waldeck-Rosseau will resign before the new chamber of deputies pronounces judgment on his policy.

Littlefield Caught Napping

Washington, May 3.—The house yesterday passed the anti-conspiracy bill reported from the judiciary committee without a word of debate. It came up rather unexpectedly and Mr. Littlefield, (Me.), who had filed a minority report on the bill and had intended to offer some amendments, came in just as it was put upon its passage, and the vote was taken before he understood what was going on.

Troops Sympathize With People

St. Petersburg, May 3.—The most serious feature of the present situation is the growing disinclination of the troops to act against the people. Punishment has already been dealt out to 800 men of the Sumy regiment for refusing to fire on the rioters at Moscow. They have been transferred to service in various remote provinces.

Terrible Fall to Death

New York, May 3.—A steel safe which was being lowered from the 15th floor of the Queen building last evening fell to the sidewalk. Two workmen who were on the safe guiding it in the descent were instantly killed. Leonard Fisher, the foreman in charge of the moving, was arrested on the charge of homicide.

British Take Manie Botha

Pretoria, May 3.—Colonel Barker reports that April 30 he captured Commandant Manie Botha, his adjutant and 11 others near Frankfort, Orange River Colony. Manie Botha is a nephew of the commandant general and is General DeWet's ablest lieutenant.

WITH KNIFE AND BRICK

Two Men Are Seriously Hurt at Boston

DUE TO BREWERY STRIKE

Teamster's Argument With Men Who Followed His Wagon Grew Into a Lively Fifteen-Minute Riot—One Victim May Die

Boston, May 3.—The ill feeling which has prevailed since the beginning of the brewery workers' strike culminated in a row at the Suffolk brewery last night between strikers and non-union men in which James Perry, a striker, 18 years old, was terribly cut in the side and back by an unknown person, and William T. Ashey, a non-union workman, sustained a cut on the forehead from a brick said to have been thrown by Daniel Burke, a striker. Burke is under arrest.

Ashey had his injuries dressed at his home, but Perry is at the Carney hospital in a very critical condition. He has one cut under his left arm eight inches long, and another 12 inches long in the back, the latter wound penetrating his lung.

As near as can be learned, Burke and Perry had been following one of the brewery wagons, the driver of which is unknown, and upon his return to the brewery the driver alighted and demanded to know why he had been followed, telling them that unless they desisted there would be trouble.

It was just as the men were coming from work, and the loud words soon drew a crowd. For 15 minutes missiles flew in all directions, and when the police finally scattered the crowd, Perry and Ashey were found to be the victims of the mob's fury. The police are searching for Perry's assailant, and think they know his name.

Holyoke Mills to Shut Down

Holyoke, Mass., May 3.—The Lyman mills posted notices yesterday that the mills would close today for an indefinite period. No reason is given for the shutdown, but it is supposed to be connected with the demand of the Mule Spinners' union for 10 percent advance in wages. The Lyman mills employ 1400 hands, and have a monthly payroll of about $40,000. This means a money loss of fully two-thirds that amount to the retail trade of the city.

The Granite Strike

Rockport, Mass., May 3.—The granite strike situation remains unchanged and the quarry workers are keeping away from the quarries in order that they may not be accused of provoking disorder. At a meeting of the Quarry Workers union yesterday its committee reported that the manufacturers would make no compromise. It was voted to ask financial aid of the American Federation of Labor.

Miners and Operators to Confer

Springfield, Ills., May 3.—About 4000 miners in the Springfield and the Chicago and Alton sub-districts returned to work yesterday and will continue to work pending the result of the conferences to be held between the miners, operators and state officers of the Miners' union.

Carpet Makers on Strike

Philadelphia, May 3.—Stinson's tapestry carpet mills closed yesterday as a result of a strike of 350 weavers and printers, and a portion of the force employed at Dobson's upholstery mills also left their looms.

Rebels Marching to San Domingo

Port Au Prince, Hayti, May 3.—All of the republic of Santo Domingo, except the port of Puerto Plata, on the north coast, and the capitol, San Domingo, on the south coast, is in the hands of the Dominican revolutionists, commanded by Vice President Vasquez. With considerable forces, he was expected, according to the last reports from him, to arrive before San Domingo today.

Took Over Century to Settle

Norfolk, May 3.—The family of James W. Colbert of Portsmouth, Va., yesterday were notified through Attorney Colbert of this city that their share of the estate of William Bradford, who came to this country on the Mayflower, amounts to between $750,000 and $1,000,000. The settlement has been pending for more than 100 years.

Wreck on New York Central

Syracuse, May 3.—A New York Central fast mail crashed into a freight train at Clyde last evening. The engineer and fireman of the mail were killed. Thirteen mail clerks and members of the crew were injured, all seriously.

HISTORY OF REFORMS

Reviewed in a Lecture by Bishop Potter Before Yale Students

New Haven, May 3.—The last lecture by Bishop H. C. Potter at Yale in the course on the William E. Dodge foundation was delivered last evening. Bishop Potter reviewed the history of the reforms that have been made in the last few generations in the status of the workingman, and said that in every case they had been wrung from the employers. Nothing in the way of definite improvement has been done voluntarily by the employer.

Referring to national expansion, Bishop Potter said that until commercial expansion became a great and agressive force the country was large enough and various enough to make the policy of the Monroe doctrine unquestioned in its application to the best interests of the country. But even if expansion has been a blunder on the part of statesmen in control of the national policy, said Bishop Potter, the wise course now is not to berate the individual or the policy, but to seek to find the honorable way to meet the responsibility imposed by that policy once entered upon. "We must not only affirm the brotherhood of man, but we must live it," said Bishop Potter in conclusion.

Women Should Be Gardeners

Boston, May 3.—Mrs. Alice Palmer, member of the state board of education, spoke before the Massachusetts Society for the University Education of Women yesterday on "Other Occupations than Teaching for College Women." Mrs. Palmer referred to the surplus of college-bred school teachers and in enumerating other fields outside of teaching into which college women ought to be entering, she spoke of the profession of trained nursing, of house architecture and landscape gardening. As to the last mentioned she said that as Eve was pretty prominent in the first garden, it really ought to belong to women to carry on this work.

Said He Was Assaulted

Danbury, Conn., May 3.—John W. Kearney of Holyoke, Mass., died at the hospital here last night. Before he died Kearney said that while in New York two or three days ago he was assaulted and badly injured. He started for home and when the train stopped at Brookfield Junction he attempted to leave his car to get air. He became dizzy and fell from the steps to the ground. He was picked up unconscious and taken to the hospital here. Kearney is a member of the Nashua, N. H., baseball team and was on his way to join his team. The coroner may investigate.

Smallpox Patient Was Killed

Providence, May 3.—Because Edward Simpson, a delirious smallpox patient, escaped from the pest house in Pawtucket recently, a claim for $20,000 damages against the city of Pawtucket was filed yesterday. While the patient was wandering about he was struck by an electric car, and died a few days later. It is contended that the escape and death of the victim was due to the insecure condition of the pest house and to the lack of precaution in procuring a nurse and police guard.

Cattle Shipments Checked

Boston, May 3.—Shipments of live stock on the hoof in the Watertown stock yards have fallen off over 20 percent during the past month, owing to the advance of prices in meat. Cattle shipped abroad are sold in European markets at a lower price than they bring in Boston. The number of cattle slaughtered for home consumption has fallen off about 15 to 20 percent.

No Boxing at Hartford

Hartford, May 3.—William Crowley, manager of the Nutmeg Athletic club, was yesterday refused a license by Mayor Sullivan for a boxing contest which he intended to pull off in this city next October. The mayor announced that there would be no license issued for boxing in Hartford during his administration.

River Yields Up Dead

Lowell, Mass., May 3.—The body of the man found in the Merrimack river at Glen Forest yesterday was identified as that of James J. Leitrim of this city, who disappeared several weeks ago. At the time of Leitrim's disappearance the canals and rivers were searched without success.

Modification of Blue Laws

Boston, May 3.—Another blow at the blue laws was administered in the house yesterday, when the bill to permit the sale on Sundays of ice cream, soda water and confectionery in places now licensed to sell food, cigars, tobacco and newspapers was passed to be engrossed without debate.

Vassar to Have New Library

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., May 3.—At the celebration of the founders' day held at Vassar college yesterday, President Taylor announced the gift of a new library. The name of the donor was withheld and no limit was set to the sum provided, as the building is intended to meet the future needs of the college.

No Loss of Time.

I have sold Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for years, and would rather be out of coffee and sugar than it. I sold five bottles of it yesterday to threshers that could go no further, and they are at work again this morning.—H. R. PHELPS, Plymouth, Oklahoma. As will be seen by the above the threshers were able to keep on with their work without losing a single day's time. You should keep a bottle of this Remedy in your home. For sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

This week commences the fiftieth year of the labors of George W. Prescott on the Quincy Patriot. During this long period he has not been kept ten days from the office by sickness.

There are but 170 larger cities than Quincy in the United States; it is therefore the proper thing that Quincy should be one of the 174 cities to secure this year an appropriation toward a government building.

Senator Depew's argument that senators elected by popular vote should logically be apportioned according to the voting population is a warning to those states which have disfranchised some of their voters that they must be careful how they tinker with the Constitution.

Dean Swift, in "Gulliver's Travels," made the most remarkable fore-shadowing of coming events that has ever been recorded. He spoke of the discovery of the two moons of Mars, and gave the time of their revolutions almost exactly, 300 years before they were discovered by the big telescope at the Washington Naval Observatory.

Why is it that so many people in Quincy quietly give the city a "rub" whenever the opportunity offers? The difference is quite noticeable between our citizens and those of Brockton, for instance. You meet a Brockton man and it is "hurrah for Brockton;" that's what has gone a long way toward making it the live city it is today. You meet a Quincy man and he seems to take delight in showing up the bad points of his city.

Now there is no reason for it; we have one of the prettiest pieces of country in the state: we have advantages given us by nature that some towns and cities have spent enormous sums not to equal but to approach. We have several distinct lines of business, all of them booming, and what is more we have water frontage which is unexcelled and which will make Quincy a big place in the near future. Besides this we have a good class of thinking, law abiding citizens and in spite of ourselves are in a live place.

The new industry at Fore River which has and is taking on such mammoth proportions should alone make everyone shout for Quincy. We should be proud of it; the real thinking class are, but there are some people who won't really admit that we have a great new industry till there is no use in farther combating it. However, these are the people who always come the "day after the fair," the "might have beens."

When a man says "Hurrah" for his town, let's hurrah for ours twice, and not let him think we are all fussy dyspeptics.

This new industry of ours alone is advertising Quincy not only in New Orleans and San Francisco, but in Liverpool, in London, in Hamburg and all other cities where they have to do with ships. We are going to get a large increased tax levy from the land about the water front from this out, both in the increase of land values, and on the buildings which must be built there at once.

Land values are rising in the Fore River district and the rise has only just begun, people have not as yet grasped the magnitude of the demand for houses there. At this rate it will be the centre of industry and activity in the next few years. There is only a certain amount of water front and all that is available lies south of Boston, not north.

Well informed people are "laying pipes" to get hold of Fore River land that is, those that look ahead and think. Of course some people have to have a brick house fall on them before they realize that something has happened.

Shout for your city. All up for Quincy. It makes a big difference.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Welcome home Secretary Long. He has made a magnificent secretary of the navy and the whole State is proud of him and his record.—Hyde Park Gazette.

☞ There are many hopeful signs in the temperance outlook in America. It is a matter of common observation that social drinking is less the rule than it once was and our strenuous economical development tends toward temperance and even toward total abstinence. One element of encouragement is the growing spirit of tolerance and practical common sense among temperance advocates of our day.—The May Century.

☞ We are in the midst of May rides, and May baskets and May flowers. We are enjoying the thought that the summer is on the way. We are preparing for the summer campaign, which means new clothes, new places to go to, new faces to see. The weather as yet does not bring the prespiration to the brow, but there are warmer days coming. Thus far ping pong is the game of the hour, but the bathing beach and the trolley will soon drive it into retirement. — Brockton Enterprise.

High School Concert.

The Quincy High school has seldom appeared before the public otherwise than in its regular school work and at graduations unless the game of base ball and foot ball may be excepted. Last year a play was given most successfully which led the friends of the school to anticipate something good when it was announced that the school was to give a concert.

Last evening over two hundred were present at High school hall to listen to the varied program prepared. All the participants were pupils of the school, with Mr. E. Landis Snyder as director of music. There were piano solos, piano duets, violin solos, vocal solos and a full chorus of three hundred voices. It was the verdict of all at the close that it was an exceptionally fine concert throughout, a credit to Mr. Snyder and to the pupils. Master John Bradford Findlay was as usual the favorite and received very hearty applause and responded. In the song "The Heavens are Telling," he was assisted by Harris Merrill Barbour, William Williams and the chorus, and in Mendelssohn's, "I waited for the Lord," by William Ellis Weston and the chorus. He was in good voice and his notes were clear and high.

Miss Mary Hunt and Miss Hannah Olliffe Litchfield at the piano, played duets and also accompanied the chorus. Miss Nellie Moir, rendered a piano solo and Miss Henrietta M. B. Gram and Miss Rena Bernice Grant, played a duet, all showing careful study and a pleasing touch.

The two violin solos were very well done by Miss Alice Forbes Joss and Ralph Lawrence Odiorne.

The program:

Piano duet,—Charge of the Whlans. Bohm
Mary Hunt and Hannah Litchfield.
Recitative and chorus.—The Heavens are Telling. Haydn
John Bradford Findlay.
Harris Merrill Barbour and William Williams.
Violin solo,—L'Adieu. Borowyski
Alice Forbes Joss.
Piano solos,—a. In beauteous May. Lichner
b. Polonaise Brillante. Fleissner
Nellie Moir.
Chorus,—I waited for the Lord. Mendlessohn
John Bradford Findlay and William Ellis Weston
Piano duet,—Danse Cubaine. Gootschalk
Henrietta M. B. Gram and Rena Bernice Grant.
Chorus,—When Allen-a-Dale went a Hunting.
High School Chorus. De Pearsall
Vocal solo,—With Verdure clad. Haydn
John Bradford Findlay.
Violin solo,—Polonaise. Allen
Ralph Lawrence Odiorne.
Chorus—Good Night, Beloved. Pinsuti
High School Chorus.

Director of music,—Mr. E. Landis Snyder.
Accompanists, — Mary Hunt and Hannah Olliffe Litchfield.

To Mr. Synder belongs in a large measure the credit of the evening's entertainment. He is certainly a successful teacher and director as the careful training of the voice of Master Findlay shows. In choruses he is remarkably good and the Quincy schools are fortunate in their musical director. The concert showed that there is varied and good talent in the High school and it is a good thing for the pupils and the public to come together occasionally. The proceed of the concert are to be used in decorating the building.

Redden Your Cheeks

Give Your Skin a Good, Healthy Color by Taking

Pept-iron

This entirely new and thoroughly scientific preparation is a specific for paleness, curing all forms of anemia, from which so many women and girls and not a few men and boys suffer, and which is so commonly a result of nervous weakness affecting the digestive and nutritive processes.

In Pill or Liquid Form

Agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach, readily assimilated, and non-astringent, Peptiron has many advantages over other iron preparations, and highly commends itself to invalids, convalescents and others whose digestive organs and systems generally are in a delicate and sensitive condition. It does not cause constipation, nor injure the teeth, nor leave any inky or metallic flavor in the mouth. Peptiron combines iron aud manganese — the great red-blood-corpuscle makers — with digestives, tonics and nutrients, including pepsin, celery, and the phosphates which enter so largely into the composition of all the bodily tissues. It strengthens and quiets the nerves and the brain, for which it is both medicine and food, tones the stomach and other digestive organs, prevents tissue waste, which is part of the pathology of anemia, and establishes the conditions of rosy, robust health.

A Lowell Lady, who had been an anemic sufferer for years before taking Peptiron, writes: "I have just finished the second bottle of Peptiron and it has done me much good. It has relieved that shortness of breath, which troubled me so much in walking and going upstairs. It has had no bad effect on the teeth, neither has it caused constipation."

Peptiron Is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolate-coated pills at 50 cents or $1 per box. By

THE LEGISLATURE.

Mr. Badger Would Provide for Overtime Under 8-Hour Bill.

Representative Badger was prominent Friday during debate on the eight hour bill for public employes. He offered an amendment providing for overtime and when that failed he opposed the bill The measure was however, favored by Messrs. Callender, Davis, Brandles and Ross, and opposed by Messrs. Foster and Bullard, and was passed to be engrossed.

Representative Drinkwater of Braintree secured a postponement until Tuesday of the adverse report on his petition to submit to voters the question of holding a Constitutional convention.

The Sunday candy bill was passed to be engrossed.

Among the committee reports were:

Labor—A bill petition of Fred E. Fuller to authorize cities and towns to establish emergency funds to provide employment for the unemployed in times of local depression.

Metropolitan Affairs—A bill authorizing the Metropolitan Park Commission to construct a bath house on Nahant Beach, Senator Seaver and Messrs. Schofield of Malden. Rounds of Cambridge, Williams of Medford, Wildes of Somerville, Litchfield of Hull and Kiley of Boston dissent; a bill, on petition of George H. Farwell that the City of Boston be authorized to compensate him for damages caused by the abolition of the grade crossing of the Old Colony Railroad and Dorchester avenue in Boston; Mr. Schofield of Malden dissents.

There was little of local interest in the Senate yesterday. Both branches adjourned early to attend the American league game, and witnessed, the defeat of the Bostons by the Baltimores.

Street Sweeping.

Pedestrians think that a little more care should be used in sweeping the street crossings, especially in dry weather. They complain that in dry weather when the dust is quite thick, that the sweeping of the crossings is more of a nuisance than a benefit. The sweeper keeps vigorously at his work and it is no uncommon thing for pedestrians to be greeted with a great cloud of dust upon approaching the sweeper and not only have their clothing covered with it but their mouth, eyes and ears as well. With a little care on the part of the sweeper it would seem that much of the nuisance could be abated.

How to See New England at Home.

Each portfolio contains 30 or more half-tone pictures, and will be mailed upon receipt of six cents for each book, together with a catalogue of descriptive books by the Passenger Department Boston and Maine Railroad, Boston.

Simonds—Pratt.

A very pretty home wedding occurred Wednesday evening when Walter E. Simonds, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Willie Simonds of Tremont street and Olive M. Pratt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Pratt of Franklin street were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents at Braintree.

The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by the Rev. C. F. Hill Crathern in the presence of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties.

The bride, who was charmingly gowned in blue silk with white trimmings carried a bouquet of carnations and was attended by Miss Bessie French of Abington, who was prettily attired in white. Mr. Walter Gilbert of Abington did the honors as best man.

After the ceremony at the bride's parents, the newly married couple proceeded to the home of the groom's parents, where they received their friends under a large bell made of festoons of blue and white streamers. Cuff's orchestra of five pieces rendered enlivening music and jollity reigned until after midnight.

During the evening the Drum Corps —that had already showered honors upon a couple made one earlier in the evening—appeared upon the scene and rendered several of their well-known airs.

Many handsome and useful gifts were received, among them a check from Miss Ann Penniman and another from Mr. Eben Sheppard of Quincy. A handsome chair from Bertha Pratt, a gilt clock from Mrs. Joel Sheppard, solid silver, painted china, cut-glass, candlestick, punch bowl and other gifts too numerous to mention.

Mr. and Mrs. Simonds will reside for the present with Mr. Simmond's parents on Tremont street.

What some people want to know.

To the Editor of the Ledger:

We want to know through the columns of your Ledger whether Frank Spear, a probation officer connected with our courts, has a right to insult complainants in court, and also try to nullify the lawful authority by abusing complainants in the presence of boys charged with crime.

We have for several years been molested while engaged in public worship in the First Presbyterian church by a crowd of malicious boys who lounge around Fay's corner; and who have also damaged much the church property. We have repeatedly remonstrated with them, and complained in a mild way to the officers on the beat, but the annoyance and injury to property continued.

A week ago two of the boys were caught shooting pebbles through the windows at the worshippers during a service in the vestry. Their parents were spoken to about it, but gave no satisfaction. Then a complaint was lodged against the boys, and after the judge had partly desposed of the matter, by continuing the case to give them time to repair the damage, Mr. Spear advised the parents and the boys as to how they might more easily get out of it.

We were abused and called "hypocrites" and "cruel creatures" for having brought the offenders into court.

We would like to know whether a probation officer has any authority to do this, and if so, where does he get it? This is a sure way of encouraging juvenile crime, and securing for himself a short tenure of office. We are a law-abiding congregation who pay taxes and vote, and have placed property on Water street amounting to several thousand dollars, and we wish it to be understood by all concerned, that we are determined to have protection from the vandalism of street boys and insolent probation officers, if we should require to involve the aid of the Commonwealth to secure it.

TROTTING STABLES AT MEMPHIS

Circuit Stars of Hamlin, Billings and Smathers

MEMPHIS has long been noted as the great training grounds for thoroughbreds of the western turf, but not until recently has the Tennessee metropolis developed into prominence as a training ground for light harness horses. The building of the magnificent new Billings park at a cost of over $300,000 established Memphis on the map as a light harness center. This track was built by a syndicate headed by C. K. G. Billings of Chicago. Mr. Billings is an enthusiastic fancier of the light harness horse and maintains one of the most extensive strings of trotters and pacers campaigned in this country. Billings park has first class stabling accommodations for several hundred head of horses Every stall is occupied, and the horses are all well advanced in their tuning.

The track is one of the fastest light harness courses in the United States. All kinds of records were broken over it during the first meeting held last fall. According to Ed Geers, Memphis is an ideal spot to winter trotters and pacers, far as the climatic conditions are concerned. He is also enthusiastic over the manner in which the track at Billings park is kept, but at the same time he cannot help putting in a good word for Selma, Ala., where he wintered the celebrated Hamlin string for many years.

"I like to jog my horses away from the track during the cold months," said Mr. Geers recently. "Memphis has unsurpassed accommodations for horsemen, but the roads in the vicinity of Billings park are not to be compared with those found in the vicinity of Selma. Barring this, I would prefer to winter here. All our horses have wintered in grand shape."

Edward Geers, "the silent man," is without a doubt the most successful driver and trainer on the trotting turf the world has ever produced. He has developed more champions and made more money for his employer, Cicero J. Hamlin, than any other handler of harness horses in the history of trotting and pacing in this country.

C. J. Hamlin, Geers' employer, is the master of the famous Village stock farm at East Aurora, N. Y. Mr. Hamlin is a multimillionaire. He accumulated his enormous fortune manufacturing glucose. Mr. Hamlin went into the horse business for pleasure, but in addition to deriving a lot of pleasure out of it he has also found it extremely profitable, especially of recent years.

Geers is training about thirty head of horses at Billings park for Mr. Hamlin. He also has several horses belonging to other well known patrons of the light harness turf, the best known of which is The Monk, 2:08¼. This horse was bred by Mr. Hamlin, who sold him to his present owner, Fred Gerken of New York. The Monk was the acknowledged king of the New York speedway last year. He is a trotter. Geers campaigned this horse in his four-year-old form with wonderful success. After that The Monk trained off and never saw a track again until Geers took him this winter. The silent man says that he has every reason to believe that The Monk will train this season. If he does, it will take a good trotter to trim him.

Geers also expects great things from a six-year-old full brother to Lord Derby, 2:06¼, one of the grandest trotters ever bred at the Village farm. This brother to Lord Derby is a green trotter with perfect action and fair speed. He is a splendid individual. Hamlin has given this horse every chance to develop, and both he and his trainer will be greatly disappointed if the animal fails to materialize into a first class trotter.

Another green trooter in the Hamlin string from which great things are expected the coming season is the five-year-old chestnut stallion called The Beau Ideal, by Daredevil, out of The Abbot's dam. This half brother to the world's champion trotting gelding is a splendidly gaited trotter, with a rare turn of speed. Like the brother to Lord Derby, this horse has also been given plenty of time to mature, and if appearances and his way of going count for anything he is almost certain to be heard from favorably the coming season. Geers, who developed The Abbot, says that the champion's half brother has shown enough to convince him that the horse is almost certain to develop into a sensational trotter. The Beau Ideal is a dark chestnut in color and is not unlike his famous half brother in conformation, although The Abbot is a beautiful blood bay in color.

The handsomest horse at Billings park is the mare Edna Cook, 2:12, that Geers is handling for a wealthy easterner. Equine experts have pronounced this mare a perfect picture horse. She was sired by Alcantara, and she took her mark as a three-year-old. She has been used as a road mare in recent years. Geers says that she has been doing extremely well this winter and gives every indication of displaying winning form on the track the coming season.

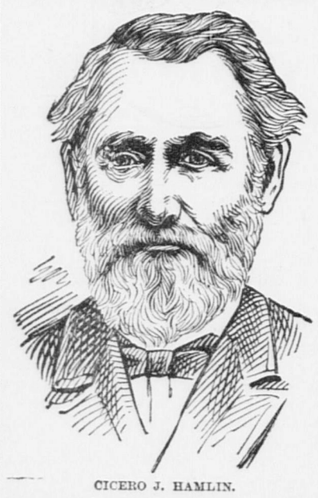

The fastest pacer in Geers' stable is Shadow Chimes, 2:06¼. This horse, as his name would indicate, is a son of Chimes, one of the most successful sires that ever stood at Village farm. His dam is a daughter of Mambrino King. Shadow Chimes has wintered splendidly. He is certain to reduce his mark during the coming season. Many close observers of the light harness game predict that he is going to prove the pacing sensation of 1902.

Another pacer in this stable that promises to give a creditable account of himself the coming season is Fred S. Wedgewood, 2:08¾. This six-year-old son of Fred S. Wilkes, dam by Wedgewood, is one of the most improved looking horses at the track. He has taken on a lot of flesh during the past winter and looks like a horse that ought to step along some when Geers turns him loose to pace for the money.

Next to the Geers-Hamlin collection the most celebrated stable in Memphis is that of C. K. G. Billings, the millionaire Chicago gas magnate and founder of the track. Mr. Billings' horses are in charge of Scott McCoy, a well known trainer and driver. The star of the Billings barn is Little Boy, 2:01½, the champion wagon horse of the world. Little Boy has come out of winter quarters in magnificent shape. McCoy is going right along with this horse, as it is Mr. Billings' intention to ship the pick of his string to New York, and every effort will be made to have Little Boy ready for all comers on the New York speedway this spring.

Hontas Crook, 2:07½, the great pacer, never showed better in his life than he does right now. He came out of winter quarters looking finer than silk, and appears like a horse that can pace over the moon. Frazier, 2:07½, another one of Mr. Billings' crack pacers, is stepping along regularly.

George Spears is at Memphis with E. E. Smathers' great stable, headed by Lord Derby, 2:06½. Mr. Smathers bought Lord Derby from Mr. Hamlin last year for a fancy price. According to Mr. Spears, the famous trotter never wintered better. Lord Derby weighs more now than he ever did, and all the smart horsemen at Billings park predict that he is sure to prove one of the sensational trotters of 1902. Mr. Spears also has two grand looking mares in Ida Highwood, 2:12¼, and Alice Parnes, 2:11¼. The famous pacer Sphinx S., 2:08½, is one of the star performers in Spears' stable. This horse never looked better in his life than he does right now. Spears says that he is certain to reduce his mark this year.

The Versatile Weekes.

As an all round athlete Harold Weekes of Columbia has proved himself remarkable. There are few branches of sport in which he is not expert. He has a national reputation as a football player, is a good oarsman and can run 100 yards in 10 2-5 seconds. Weekes has now taken up baseball. He showed so well in practice that he has been given a place on the regular varsity team.

Old, but "Oh, My!"

Herman Long is the same great shortstop. When a hit goes anywhere in his neighborhood, the batter might as well go to the bench and save himself the exertion of running. Herman's arm is as good and strong as of old.

SPORTS, AMATEUR AND PROFESSIONAL

Gray of Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Pole Vault Champion. The Cyclists.

The smashing of records has already begun. Notwithstanding that the outdoor athletic season has but recently been initiated Frank Kramer, the cyclonic East Orange (N. J.) cycler, has added another record to his long string, and E. H. Gray of the University of Pennsylvania has succeeded in breaking the intercollegiate pole vault record.

Gray cleared the bar at a height of 11 feet 8 inches. He has been for several years a prominent competitor in collegiate athletics, and his latest achievement is the result of diligent effort. Pole vaulting is a sport that requires unceasing practice, and carelessness in the performance of the feat oftentimes results in serious injury.

E. H. GRAY CLEARING THE BAR.

Pole vaulting is attracting more and more attention every year. It is distinctly an amateur pastime and is seldom indulged in by foreign athletes. Great care should be taken in the matter of holding the pole and in measuring off the exact distance for the running approach to the bar. In dropping to the ground it is particularly necessary that a natural, relaxed attitude is maintained, for otherwise an arm or a leg may receive a disabling blow. Ten or eleven feet is a considerable distance to fall, and unless a man lands squarely on his feet he will soon be rendered hors de combat.

Racing men have awakened to the fact that the coming season is likely to be a very prosperous one for those prominent in cycling. There are indications everywhere that the silent steed has been taken back into favor by the general public, and this means that the public will enjoy good racing if it is served up in an up to date manner.

The warm, sunny days that have occurred thus far this spring have seen the boulevards and cycle paths thronged with riders. Everywhere the dealers report the return of former patrons of the wheel. Men who have not ridden for several years are having their old steeds fixed up, and the rising generation is taking a very healthy interest in wheels.

Realizing the proximity of a boom, professional cycle teams are being organized on a scale that reminds one of the halcyon days of 1894 and 1895. New tracks are being constructed on modern lines and not so expensively as to involve the builders in financial difficulties, and the Coliseum circuit is being rapidly enlarged. When completed, the Coliseum circuit in the east will include twenty-five tracks and will give constant employment to at least 300 money chasers, of which number about seventy-five will be pace followers, about seventy-five sprinters and the rest pacemakers, trainers and managers.

What will make the racing picturesque this season will be the presence of a number of speedy foreigners in their odd, many colored uniforms, conspicuous for lack of good taste. Two of these men who have already signed a contract to ride here are Basil de Guichard, a lad of sixteen, and Emil Bouhours. They will ride under the management of P. O. Sheehan.

PUGILISM

Terry McGovern will tackle Young Corbett in an open air fight next October at Hartford, Conn. Manager Crowley, who secured the fight between these great little men by offering a fourteen thousand dollar purse, has decided to use the baseball ground in Hartford as the arena. There is no law against pugilism in Hartford, hence a big time is expected when the battle is fought.

Sam Harris, manager of Terry McGovern, feels confident he has another world beater in Hughey McGovern, a brother of the little Brooklyn whirlwind. In favor of his opinion Harris is willing to back Hughey against any boy in the world at 110 pounds for $1,000.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Labor Troubles Have Somewhat Impeded Business During the Week

New York, May 3.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Two large strikes scheduled to commence on May 1 were averted, at least temporarily, and a number of smaller ones were settled, but many new controversies have begun. This labor factor is the only seriously unfavorable one in the industrial situation, exerting considerable influence over the volume of transactions and also tending to unsettle confidence. In seasonable merchandise, especially dry goods and clothing, warmer weather has stimulated dealings, while outdoor work is prosecuted vigorously. Collections are more prompt as a rule, fewer extensions being asked. Shipments are less delayed by traffic congestion, and railway earnings thus far reported for April exceed last year's by 7.2 percent, and those of 1900 by 17.7 percent.

Consumers of finished steel products are compelled to place orders subject to the convenience of manufacturers, and it is the exception when any nearby deliveries are promised.

A better volume of orders taken by New England shoe shops is one of the most encouraging signs of the week, since that branch of business had become much more quiet than the other leading manufacturing industries.

Jobbers in dry goods have felt the effects of good weather, and a brisk trade has been done at steady prices, although no general advance has followed the rise in raw cotton or the restricted operations at woolen mills. Weak silver has continued to militate against exports to China. Overtime work at the independent mills is partially neutralizing the effect of the weavers' strike.

Cereal prices have been less inflated by speculation than they were last week, yet a high level was maintained and only slight reactions occurred. The general tenor of crop news was much more encouraging.

Death of Congressman Cummings

Baltimore, May 3.—Congressman Amos J. Cummings of New York died here last night. The cause of death was pneumonia, incident to an operation. Mr. Cummings came to Baltimore on April 11 to undergo treatment for kidney trouble. Four days later an operation was performed and he seemed to be on a fair way to recovery. A week later, however, pleurisy developed and later it was announced that Mr. Cummings was suffering from pneumonia.

Stolen Jewelry Recovered

New York, May 3.—Fifty thousand dollars' worth of jewelry, consisting of 13 pieces set with over 100 diamonds, more than 400 pearls, besides amethysts and emeralds, stolen on April 17 from the house of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Steeres of this city, were recovered last night. They were hidden in the house until last evening when they were taken out in an ash cart. Patrick Branagan, a butler, who has worked for Mr. Steeres for 11 years, was arrested, and, the police say, confessed that he stole the jewelry.

An Editor's Downfall

Chicago, May 3.—Adrian Britt, who, it is said, was the editor of the Jacksonville, Fla., Union in 1876, is dead here and will be buried in potter's field unless his friends are heard from. Britt had served two terms in the penitentiary for robbing mail boxes. He was at one time a magazine editor in New York and later a publisher in this city.

Costly Betrayal of Secrets

Vienna, May 3.—A telegram from Warsaw announces that the Russian government has decided to rebuild the fortifications on the German and Austrian frontiers at a cost of about $210,000,000. This action is necessary as the result of Colonel Grimm's betrayal of the plans of the existing Russian fortresses.

Nebraska City, Neb., May 3.—The will of the late J. Sterling Morton was opened yesterday. In addition to real and personal property, Mr. Morton left life insurance policies that bring the value of the entire estate up to $250,000.

NEWS IN BRIEF

A small boiler in Andrews' mill at Littleton, N. H., exploded, the hot water and steam terribly scalding John Baker. He will probably recover. The damage done was not extensive.

Professor Barrett Wendell of Harvard university was elected Clark lecturer of English literature at Cambridge, Eng., university for the ensuing year.

An innovation in public library construction and management, for Massachusetts at least, has been introduced in the library just completed in Belmont. This is a smoking-room, where it is designed to keep newspapers and light periodicals.

Prince Frederick William George Ernest of Prussia died at Berlin. He was born at Dusseldorf in 1826.

Prejudice Against Captain Crozier Is Disappearing

ALLEGED FINANCIAL GAIN

In Certain Artillery Improvements In Which the Government Is Interested Is Disproved—Real Opposition Is From Those He Jumps

Washington, May 3.—The secretary of war sent to the senate yesterday, in response to a request of several days ago, copies of all the correspondence between the ordnance department and the board of ordnance and fortification in the war department concerning the disappearing gun-carriage. This was desired for its supposed bearing on certain points raised against the confirmation of Captain Crozier's nomination for chief of ordnance.

The outlook now is decidedly more favorable for Crozier's success. A number of senators who know all about such affairs and have been misled by stories in the newspapers, and floating through the cloakrooms, formerly supposed that Crozier was trying to induce the government to adopt certain artillery improvements of his invention and bring them into general use, paying a royalty to the patentees, which he would share. Since they have been made to understand that Crozier is not now taking any money or expecting to take any from the government, but that his interest in these inventions was entirely professional and untainted with the idea of personal profit, they have changed their minds about voting for his confirmation.

Several others, who have felt that the promotion of Crozier over the heads of so many officers older and of higher rank was unfair, have been strongly impressed by the president's challenge, in telling them candidly that if they could present the name of any senior officer who could show more elements of fitness than Crozier he would at once withdraw Crozier's name and send in that of the better man. This they do not seem able to do, and so the matter has hung fire, with Crozier's cause gaining a little ground every day.

General Miles' hostility has been another reason for delay, though that does not count for so much with the rank and file of the senate as it would have once. There is a stronger adverse "pull" in the resistance of the older staff officers generally, who, fond of Crozier and frank admirers of his ability, recognize the fact that this proposed jump of a captain to a generalship and the command of a great staff corps is the entering wedge of the new dispensaton in which a man with nothing but his advanced years to commend him will have to take a place secondary to a man who unites intellectual cleverness, a progressive and resourceful mind and good executive qualities with the endurance and enthusiasm of comparative youth. The prediction is now freely made among the element who are now prejudiced against Crozier that the confirmation of his nomination may be somewhat delayed, but that it will not be rejected.

Choynski Whips Weinig

Louisville, May 3.—Al Weinig of Buffalo was knocked out last night by Joe Choynski of Chicago in the sixth round of one of the fiercest bouts ever fought in this city. Both men were forced to take severe drubbings and Weinig's defeat came after a display of gameness rarely equalled in the prize ring. Twice in the sixth round he was knocked to his knees by Choynski's hard rights and lefts to the jaw, but each time he came up ready for more punishment. He was too dazed, however, to defend himself and Choynski finally beat him down, landing him against the ropes unable to move.

Swindling on a Large Scale

New York, May 3.—Armed with a letter of credit similar to the one issued by the National Hotelkeepers' Protective association, and with his identity concealed under seven aliases, a swindler has cleaned up about $12,000 from hotel keepers in middle western and eastern cities with bogus checks drawn on the Earl Fruit company of California. The police of every town in the country having a population of more than 10,000 persons have been asked to join in the hunt for the man.

A Million For Libraries

Pittsburg, May 3.—Andrew Carnegie has told W. N. Frew, chairman of the Carnegie library committee, that he purposes giving $1,000,000 toward the erection of libraries in 20 small cities, which he will not name. Mr. Carnegie has just completed the work of investigating the library needs of the cities, and he will make his plans public when he arrives in New York.

An Absolute Absorption

London, May 3.—The Daily Express asserts that the purchase by J. P. Morgan of the White Star line of steamers is an absolute purchase of everything the company possesses, including good will, real estate and all the vessels in the New Zealand and Australian services of the White Star company, in addition to those engaged in the Atlantic service.

Corrigan Greatly Improved

New York, May 3.—Archbishop Corrigan rested well during yesterday and sat up for some time on a bed rest. The patient shows an increased appetite and the food has been increased. He sees no visitors.

The Little Lass O' Labor.

Little Lass o' Labor, bless your beaming, happy face!
What a help you are to mamma, to be sure!
Always found with busy fingers—everything is put in place—
With a grownup sort of manner and demure:
Never idle for a moment and the patter of your feet
Gives to home the sweetest melody we know.
There are floors that must be tended and the parlor should be neat;
Not a sign of dust wherever you may go.
Ah, little Lass o' Labor, when you're tucked away in bed
We steal to stroke the ringlets on a little baby head!
And we kneel beside you, dearest, and we ask a kiss or two,
For you've been a busy girlie—bless the little heart of you!

Little Lass o' Labor, when the mother's day is done
She may well have cause to praise you, for we know
That a baby's hands have helped her and the duties, one by one,
Were each finished as you scurried to and fro.
There were dishes to be polished, there were tablecloths to spread,
There were errands, there were tables to be set,
And a certain little girlie made a certain tumbled bed
Look inviting. How she worked away! And yet
Not a single word of protest. Do you wonder that, at eve,
When a mother knelt there, sighing, she was very loath to leave?
Do you wonder that she murmured at the cradle side a prayer
For our little Lass o' Labor on the pillow resting there?

Rules For Dolls.

"A wooden headed doll should be careful not to hit her head against her mother's lest she should hurt her.

"A wax doll should avoid the fire if she wishes to preserve a good complexion.

"Often an old doll with a cracked head and a sweet smile is more beloved than a new doll with a sour face.

"It's a bad plan for dolls to be stretched out on the floor, as people may tread upon them, and a doll that is trodden on is sure to go into a decline."

Madge was reading these rules to her dolly, with a very sober face. Then she laughed.

"Dolly," she said, "it's funny, but I really believe these rules are more for me than they are for you."—Sunday School Advocate.

Too Much Trouble.

A little golden haired miss out in the west end is a devoted admirer of her Aunt Sallie, whom she calls "Aunt Tal," and whose baby, Kathryne, is often her playmate. The other evening her father said to little golden hair:

"Wouldn't you like to have a baby sister of your own?"

"Yes, papa," she answered.

"Suppose we take Aunt Tal's baby and keep it?"

"No, no, no," said the little miss emphatically.

"And why not?"

She was silent for a long time, but at last she answered:

"Oh, Katy is too much chubby" (trouble).—St. Louis Republic.

Can You Blow It Out?

When it is your turn to provide your quota of fun at an evening party, ask for a piece of candle, and after you have obtained it light it and request the person nearest to you to place it on the top of his head and then blow it out.

Very probably he will claim that it cannot be done, but if you assure him that you can do it he will certainly place the candle on his head and blow upward at it with all his might, much to the amusement of his companions.

He will be unable, however, to extinguish the candle, and so will all the others who try to do the trick. Yet it can be put out, and quite easily, provided it is placed in a proper position on the head. It must be placed as far forward on the head as possible, and the head must be tilted back while it is being placed there. Even a slight breath will then suffice to blow it out.

The Elfin King.

Who rides so late through the midnight blast?
'Tis a father spurs on with his child full fast.
He gathers the boy well into his arm;
He clasps him close and he keeps him warm.

Father—
My son, why thus to my arm dost cling?
Child—
Father, dost thou not see the elfin king—
The elfin king with his crown and train?
Father—
My son, 'tis a streak of the misty rain!

Elfin King—
Come hither, thou darling, come go with me;
Fine games I know that I'll play with thee;
Flowers many and bright do my kingdoms hold;
My mother has many a robe of gold!

Child—
Oh, father, dear father, and dost thou not hear
What the elfin king whispers so low in mine ear?
Father—
Calm, calm thee, my boy; it is only the breeze
As it rustles the withered leaves under the trees.

Elfin King—
And wilt thou go, bonny boy, wilt thou go with me?
My daughters shall wait on thee daintily.
My daughters around thee in dance shall sweep
And rock thee and kiss thee and sing thee to sleep.

Child—
Oh, father, dear father, and dost thou not mark
The elf king's daughters move by in the dark?
Father—
I see it, my child, but it is not they;
'Tis the old willow nodding its head so gray.

Elfin King—
I love thee! Thy beauty it charms me so,
And I'll take thee by force if thou wilt not go!

Child—
Oh, father, dear father, he's grasping me!
My heart is as cold as cold can be!

The father rides swiftly, with terror he gasps;
The sobbing child in his arm he clasps;
He reaches the castle with spurring and dread,
But, alack, in his arms the child lay dead!

—Johann Wolfgang Goethe.

"The Ninety and Nine."

A traveler tells the story of a scene which vividly illustrates Christ's parable of the "ninety and nine." He says:

"One day we were making our way with ice ax and alpenstock down the glacier when we observed a flock of sheep following their shepherd over the intricate windings between crevasses and so passing from the pastures on one side of the glacier to the pastures on the other. The flock had numbered 200 all told. But on the way one sheep got lost. One of the shepherds, in his German patois, appealed to us if we had seen it. Fortunately one of the party had a fieldglass. With its aid we discovered it up amid a tangle of brushwood on the rocky mountain side.

"It was beautiful to see how the shepherd, without a word, left his 199 sheep out in the glacier waste, knowing they would stand there perfectly still and safe, and went clambering back after the lost sheep until he found it. And he actually put it on his shoulders and 'returned rejoicing.' Here was our Lord's parable enacted before our eyes, though the shepherd was all unconscious of it. And it brought our Lord's teaching home to us with a vividness which none can realize but those who saw the incident."—Ram's Horn.

TO RUN FOR CONGRESS

Ambassador Meyer Coming Home to Contest For the Honor

Washington, May 3.—At his own request Ambassador Meyer has been granted leave of absence of 60 days from his post at Rome. Mr. Meyer is coming home, according to the understanding here, to contest for the Republican nomination for the vacancy in the Massachusetts congressional delegation, caused by Mr. Moody's appointment as secretary of the navy. It is understood that Mr. Gardner, son-in-law of Senator Lodge, also is a candidate for the nomination. If Mr. Meyer succeeds in his canvass he will not return to Rome and the president will be free to carry out certain plans he has projected as to diplomatic changes in Europe, one of the first of which contemplates the promotion of Mr. White, at present first secretary at London, to the embassy at Rome.

North Carolina Politics Aired

Washington, May 3.—A lively debate was precipitated in the senate yesterday by Mr. Pritchard, who suggested that some of the methods employed by the opponents of the Philippine bill in this country ought to be reformed and told of what is called the "sand cure" in North Carolina, the victim having his face crushed into the sand to stifle his cries, while he was being beaten to intimidate him politically. Mr. Simmons declared that he never heard of such a practice and the debate concerning North Carolina politics was fully launched. Mr. Pritchard charged that the "Red Shirts" rode over the state to terrorize Republican voters. Mr. Simmons denied that statement. The debate waxed warm, Mr. Pritchard declaring that he had been approached by an emissary of the Democratic party with a proposition to drop the impeachment proceedings against Republican judges in North Carolina if he would nolle prosequi cases pending in the courts against certain Democrats for election frauds. Mr. Simmons unqualifiedly denied that such a proposition had been made by authority of the Democratic party.

What MacArthur Told Filipinos

Washington, May 3.—General MacArthur was interrogated yesterday by Senator Culberson of Texas in rather ironical vein, at the hearing before the Philippine committee. The general had referred to the advantage of implanting republican institutions in the island. Mr. Culberson took up each of the principles of republican institutions, free speech, free press, self-government, trial by jury, etc., and asked how far these had been implanted in the Philippines. As to free speech, General MacArthur said he had told the Filipinos that if they would give him their guns they could have a mass meeting on every corner.

Nast For Consul General

Washington, May 3.—The president has sent to the senate the nomination of Thomas Nast of New Jersey to be United States consul general at Guayaquil, Ecuador. Mr. Nast succeeds Perry H. De Leon of Georgia. Mr. De Leon's trouble arose from his defense of the rights of American citizens at Guayaquil, in which he went too far in resisting the dictates of a minor judicial tribunal, which decided against some of Mr. De Leon's fellow countrymen. Thomas Nast is a son of the famous cartoonist, and is himself an adept in caricature.

Alleged Briber on Safe Ground

Washington, May 3.—The state department has been notified that the Mexican government has finally refused the application of the United States government for the surrender of Charles Kratz, ex-councilman of St. Louis, charged with bribery. The man has been held under arrest at Guanajara, the Mexican government having consented to his provisional detention, pending consideration of the request. Under the decision just announced Kratz will be discharged and go unpunished.

Profit In Sumatra Tobacco

Washington, May 3.—Secretary Wilson received a telegram yesterday announcing that the crop of Sumatra-wrapper tobacco grown in the Connecticut valley under the supervision of experts of the department of agriculture has been sold at prices averaging $1.25 a pound, with an indicated profit to the growers of $1 a pound or $1000 an acre. "This country," says Secretary Wilson, "buys $6,000,000 worth of Sumatra tobacco a year, but we will soon raise all that is needed in the United States."

Defaulter In Census Office

Washington, May 3.—The census office is in a state of suppressed excitement over the news of a serious shortage in the accounts of H. A. Barrows of Maryland, disbursing clerk of the bureau. The amount is supposed to be not far from $7500, but as the defaulter is bonded for $50,000 or more, the government will not lose anything in the long run.

Doesn't Want to Retire

Washington, May 3.—Perry De Leon, ex-United States consul general at Guayaquil, called at the state department yesterday and is disposed to make an issue of his retirement if he cannot secure a reappointment to some other post than Guayaquil, for he himself admits that his usefulness there is ended.

Frequent Throbbing Headache.

There's many a cause for headache. Men are not often troubled by headaches. When they are it is generally due to biliousness or indigestion. But women have headaches which seem peculiar to their sex, frequent nervous throbbing headaches. Does it not seem as if such headaches peculiar to women must be at once related to womanly disease? Women who suffer with diseases peculiar to the sex do not realize the drain of vital strength and nerve force they undergo as a consequence of disease. It is this which causes the familiar headaches of sick women.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures such headaches by curing the cause—irregularity, weakening drains, inflammation, ulceration or female weakness. "Favorite Prescription" invigorates and tones up the entire system, encourages the appetite, quiets the nerves and gives refreshing sleep.

"I was troubled with congestion of the uterus and female weakness for five years," writes Mrs. Robt. Kerwin, of Albert, Hastings Co., Ont. "Was so weak and nervous I could hardly do any work. Had severe pain in back, also dizziness and pain in head. My heart would beat so hard and fast at times I would have to sit still till I got all right again. But after taking four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and one of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' I felt entirely well. I also used one box of 'Lotion Tablets' and one of 'Suppositories' as directed. All the symptoms of my trouble have disappeared and I am completely cured. I thank you for your kind advice and your medicine."

Mrs. James Cantfill.

By the death on Wednesday of Mrs. James Cantfill, a young husband, father, mother and four sisters were sorely afflicted. Only a little over a year ago with every prospect of a bright and happy life, Miss Mary Powers and Mr. James Cantfill were married, and settled in a pretty home on Penns hill, where they have been very happy and where their many friends have always found a cordial welcome.

Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Cantfill and the parents and sisters. Mrs. Cantfill was laid out in her wedding gown and looked too young and peaceful too have been called home so soon. The casket was almost hidden by flowers sent by many friends.

The funeral was held this morning from St. John's church, and was largely attended, the members of the Ladies Auxiliary of Division 10 being present in a body. Solemn high mass was sung with Rev. J. P. Cuff as celebrant, Rev. J. E. Johnstone as deacon and Rev. J. J. Casey as sub-deacon. The choir sang Schmitts Mass, and Daniel B. Reardon sang "Calvary" and Miss Annie Friguglietti "God of Mercy bow down thine ear." The burial was at St. Patrick's cemetery, Abington.

April Court Business.

Probation Officer Francis A. Spear reports the whole number of criminal cases before the district court for the month April to have been 105, or ten less than in the previous month. Of the April cases, 44 were for drunkenness; violation of the Lord's Day etc, 13; liquor search warrants, 12; violation of liquor law, 8; assault, 7; larceny, 5; disturbing the peace 3; malicious mischief, tramp, search for stolen goods, 2 each; felonious assault, cruelty to animals, neglected child, stubborn child riding bicycle on sidewalk and illegal transportation, one each.

Of these cases twenty-six were pending on the first of May. Other unfinished cases on the first of May were: March, 14; February, 3; January, 5; December, 3; November, 1; October, 2.

May Magazines.

The May number of Lippincott's Magazine contains a complete novel "A Mock Caliph and his wife," by Edith Robinson. This entire story covers a period of only two weeks in the whirl of New York's smartest society, where John Blair and his wife take up the reins of a social leader whose health has broken under so strenuous a life. The Blairs are a young couple from the country, of gentle breeding but not used to modern ultra-fashionable ways. They get into and out of difficulties and teach a thing or two by the way. The revealing of some social sins, the pathos of a quiet little secretary, and the side issue of stock gambling are woven into a master-piece of fiction that is remembered with pleasure.

From its charming cover by Albert Herter to its last page the May issue of the Ladies' Home Journal excels in all ways. The most important new feature is the beginning of Ernest Thompson Seaton's department for boys, which is written and illustrated by the famous naturalist-author-artist. Lindsay Denison, who knows President Roosevelt in a very personal way, writes of "The Outdoor President," and Helen Kellar continues the marvelous story of her life. The fiction features are Miss Porter's "Those Days in Old Vinginia," and the first part of a delightful story by Grace S. Richmond called "The Indifference of Juliet." There's no end of good and helpful advice and interesting facts in the various departments, and the illustrations are conspicuously attractive.

The Bird club met with Mrs. E. L. Emerson of Mt. Vernon avenue last Monday. A very interesting paper on the warblers was read by Mrs. Emerson, an article was read about the woodpeckers by Miss Addie McKean, and a poem was read by Miss Kennedy. The remainder of the time was spent in talking about the birds seen by different members of the club and a general discussion of the birds which we should be looking at this season that we might more easily distinguish them.

or in other words, men with good sound hearts, are not very numerous. The increasing number of sudden deaths from heart disease daily chronicled by the press, is proof of the alarming prevalence of this dangerous complaint, and as no one can foretell just when a fatal collapse will occur, the danger of neglecting treatment is certainly a very risky matter. CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The play announced at the Castle Square theatre the coming week is sure to prove a strong attraction to the patrons of this popular playhouse, as DeMille and Belasco's "Lord Chumley" is to be given by the stock company. This clever comedy, written expressly for E. H. Sothern, was first produced at the Lyceum Theatre, in New York, in 1888. The character of Lord Cholmondely—known to his intimates as Lord Chumley—presents a combination of traits which makes a most interesting central figure in the action of the play. The serious part of the story deals with the nobleman's successful attempt to save his friend, and his friend's sister, from the clutches of a blackmailer and ruffian, and many strong scenes and situations attend the development of the plot. The cast of "Lord Chumley" is as follows: Lord Cholmondeley, Hallett Thompson; Adam Butterworth, John T. Craven; Lieut General Hugh Butterworth, Charles Mackay; Gasper Le Sage, Robert Elliot; Tommy Tucker, Edward Wade; Blink Blunk, Lonis Thiel; Winterbottom, Lindsay Morison; Eleanor, Lavinia Shannon; Lady Adeline Barker, Evelyn Carter; Jessie Dean, Izetta Jewel; Meg, Mary Saunders. Following "Lord Chumley," for week beginning Monday, May 12th, comes a production of "Ingomar."

KEITH'S THEATRE.

As the season advances the program a Keith's theater seem to grow stronger, which is probably accounted for by the fact that many of the road companies that utilize variety performers are closing up, and thus there is much more available talent than during the winter months. Among the entertainers scheduled to appear the week of May 5, are: Hugh Stanton and Miss Nodena, in the capital satire, "For Reform;" Marion Littlefield, the talented young operatic contralto, who will sing a group of high class songs and ballads; Jehan Bedina, one of the world's most noted jugglers, and his comedy assistant, Arthur; Mignonette Kokin, chanteuse et danseuse eccentrique, from the Folies Bergere, Paris; Frank H White and Lew Simmons, in one of the most amusing blackface sketches ever offered on the stage, "Get in the Band Wagon;" Gallagher and Barrett, Irish comedians, and Clayton Kennedy and Mattie Rooney, (the latter a sister of Pat Rooney, with Rogers brothers,) in pyrotechnic piano playing and original step dancing.

PARK THEATRE.

It seems like old times to see "Aunt Abby," (Neil Burgess,) "Cold Molasses," "Tim," "Taggs," and all the rest in "The County Fair," drawing crowded houses every night at the Park theatre. The new features are the moving pictures, which connect the exit from "Aunt Abby's" husking bee and the dance in the barn, with the actual race scene, at the close of the play. One sees all the familiar scenes of a county fair as they might occur anywhere in New England. There are the crowds arriving at the fair grounds, parade of prize cattle, grand pageant of historic floats, fun on fakir's row, horses for the sulky races speed by the grand stand, and now and then a brass band heaves in sight. Finally, "Aunt Abby," "Otis Tucker," "Taggs" and the rest arrive drawn by "Cold Molasses." We see her helped awkwardly down by Otis, the stage lights go out, the curtain goes up, and they are in reality at the fair. Then comes the famous race scene, which is followed by still another new and wonderful mechanical device. As patrons in the audience and the members of the company on the stage are cheering the victory of "Cold Molasses," an acsual grand stand is revealed, apparently filled with thousands of sight-seers, who cheer and wave their handkerchiefs enthusiastically.

BOSTON MUSEUM.

With Monday, May 5, "Are You a Mason?" will open the fourth and last week of the greatest comedy success that the Boston Museum has known in a long time, and all New England has only a few more opportunities to enjoy this great laughing success. It is a piece that can be seen again and again without losing the least bit of its charm, and the situations which appeal to all, Mason or non-Mason, gain in attractiveness at every performance. The capacity of the theatre has been tested all the time thus far since the piece first came here and there is every indication that the same prosperity will continue clear up to the final night. People from out of town will do well to order their tickets by mail. Leo Ditrichstein, who adapted the play from the German, is a host in himself, and it makes no difference whether he appears as the obliging friend or he comes in female attire to deceive the old man. His bit of female impersonation is one of the best things that New England has ever seen, and one screams with delight at all the funny things which he says and does. John C. Rice and Thomas A. Wise are the funniest Masons that were ever imagined. Each lies to the other, but the audience knows all about the duplicity and is convulsed with laughter as the two get deeper and deeper in their entanglement. George Richards is another favorite and his success all over New England in "A Temperance Town" has been more than duplicated in this production.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops.—JESSIE PINKEY HALL, Springville, Ala. This Remedy is for sale by all druggists.

LEADING MOROS KILLED

In a Gallant Assault on Principal Fort

AN OVERTHROW OF POWER

Not Accomplished Without Casualties to Our Troops—Chaffee Reports Result of Davis' Vigorous Campaign Against Mindanao Murderers

Washington, May 5.—The war department yesterday received a cablegram from General Chaffee indicating that the campaign against Sultan Bayan, one of the principle Moro chiefs, had been completely successful. The result was accomplished by a gallant assault on the principal Moro fort and its capture after a number a number of the leading Moros had been killed. The cablegram was as follows:

The following is the full substance of Brigadier General George W. Davis' message from Bayan:

Eighty-four survivors at Bayan surrendered unconditionally this morning at 7. Sultan Bayan, Raja Muda Bayan, Sultan Endaptan and all leading dattos dead and many of their followers. Assault on the principal fort which surrendered last night one of the most gallant performances of American guns.

Colonel Baldwin and his regiment deserve all praise for hand-to-hand struggle in four lines of ditches under walls of fort. These trenches are lined with Moro dead from rifle fire. Have never seen or heard of any performance excelling this gallantry and grit.

It is my painful duty to report that the overthrow of Moro power not accomplished without severe loss. One officer and seven enlisted men killed, four officers and 37 enlisted men wounded. Will telegraph the list later.

After 84 survivors marched out this morning as prisoners and was understood they were all, eight others who had concealed themselves in rubbish inside the fort made a break for liberty, tried to get out, but none succeeded. Some Moro wounded tried to stab officers trying to help them. It is impossible to state the number of Moros killed; many lying in tall grass. The surrender saves us from seige and starving out. Impossible to have carried works without scaling ladders which were ready. Intend to retain prisoners until two or three small adjacent forts occupied then with your consent to retain as hostages eight or ten of the principals and release the others.

The force in line of advance consisted of four mountain guns, 470 rifles. This fully sufficient. Could not have used more men advantageously. Had we sent strong column it would only have swelled the casualty list.

One neighboring datto has already presented himself as friend and I expect a general coming-in shortly when the weight of the blow is known. The dead sent to Malabang for burial. In light of present knowledge could have beseiged the principal forts and in time forced surrender, but that would probably have resulted in a sortie for freedom and escape for many. By attacking them, they have been completely crushed—the only kind of a lesson these wild Moros seem to be able to profit by.

Shall invite Sultan Tarlac to pay me a friendly visit, if he does not do so of his own initiative. Has fort further east in plain sight and of same strength as was Bayan; on beautiful table land; 1000 acres fine up-land rice, and urging people to return to its cultivation.

The result to follow this action very important, namely: it secures respect for United States authority in the centre of Moro savagery.

Manila, May 5.—Lieutenant Bonvars was killed in the engagement at the fort. Captain Moore of the same regiment was mortally wounded, Surgeon Porter and Lieutenant Wagner and Lieutenant Jossman were severely wounded.

Thanks From the President

Washington, May 5.—The president last night sent the following congratulatory dispatch to General Chaffee: Accept for the army under your command, and express to General Davis and Colonel Baldwin especially, my congratulations and thanks for the splendid courage and fidelity which have again carried our flag to victory. Your fellow countrymen at home will ever honor the memory of the fallen, and be faithful to the brave survivors who have themselves been faithful unto death for their country's sake.

Dominican Capital Falls

Jacmel, Hayti, May 5.—It is reported here that Santo Domingo, the capital of the Dominican republic, surrendered yesterday to the insurgent forces. President Jiminez of the Dominican republic is said to have taken refuge in the French consulate there. Telegraphic communication is interrupted and news is obtained with difficulty.

TROUBLE AHEAD

Women Confront Questions of Color and Reincorporation

Los Angeles, May 5.—The attitude of the board of directors of the Womans' Club Federation toward the color question has leaked out. They have decided not to take the color question from the table and if it comes before the convention it will be on an independent motion. This attitude has induced Georgia to be more aggressive. When the committee on re-incorporation shall report there promises to be trouble. A New Jersey delegate has the startling information, discovered by Judge J. B. Dill, the corporation attorney of New York, that the present charter, obtained by the general federation under the laws of New Jersey, 13 years ago, was secured under the act providing for charity and philanthropy instead of clubs and societies; so that the general federation by mistake is acting under a charter which authorizes them only to look after indigent widows, establish mission Sunday schools and bury the dead.

Chicago Loses Leading Citizen

Chicago, May 5.—Potter Palmer, for nearly half a century one of Chicago's most prominent business men, died last night. The exact cause of Mr. Palmer's death has not yet been determined. He had been suffering for several weeks with a nervous disorder, but as he was able to be about the house his condition was not thought to be serious. Mr. Palmer was born in 1826 at Potts Hollow, N. Y.

Kind Words For America

Paris, May 5.—President Loubet received in audience the Rochambeau mission, previous to its departure for the United States, and made a speech, during the course of which he said: "You are going to a country where energy is a religion, and I wish you the good welcome which that enthusiastic, mighty people beyond the ocean has ever reserved for those who have gone there to represent France."

Funeral Services at Capitol

Washington, May 5.—In pursuance of the resolution adopted by the house public memorial services were held over the remains of the late Representative Amos J. Cummings of New York, in the hall of representatives yesterday. Almost the entire membership of the house and senate were present and the galleries were entirely inadequate to hold the thousands who went to the Capitol seeking admission.

Ching Violating Treaty

Pekin, May 5.—Minister Conger has protested to Prince Ching, president of the foreign office, with regard to the expulsion of Chinese Christians from the new European school established by Yuan Shi Kai, governor of Chili province, for refusing to worship according to the Confucian tablets. The treaty promises that no discrimination shall be made against Christians.

The Quarrymen's Strike

Gloucester, Mass., May 5.—There has been no change in the quarrymen's strike on Cape Ann during the past 48 hours. The manufacturers who own stores, in some instances, have given instructions that credit to strikers shall cease. It has been customary for the workmen to patronize these country stores and make settlements at stated times.

Experimenting With New Airship

Paris, May 5.—In spite of threatening weather Augusto Severo, the Brazilian areonaut, made a successful first trial with his airship, La Paix, yesterday. The balloon obeyed the impulse of its propellers, steering easily and maintaining perfect equilibrium. After maneuvering for a short time, Severo returned the airship to its shed.

Electric Wires Were Crossed

Syracuse, May 5.—George Schultz, manager of the Erminie baseball team in the Syracuse city baseball league, was instantly killed yesterday at Athletic field by taking hold of a grandstand screen which had been charged with electricity by the crossing of some electric wires.

Sciatic Rheumatism Cured After Fourteen Years of Suffering.

"I have been afflicted with sciatic rheumatism for fourteen years," says Josh Edgar, of Germantown, Cal. "I was able to be around but constantly suffered. I tried everything I could hear of and at last was told to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which I did and was immediately relieved and in a short time cured, and I am happy to say it has not since returned." Why not use this liniment and get well? It is for sale by all druggists.

BOLD HOLD-UP NEAR HOME.

Electric Car of the Old Colony System in Germantown near Dedham.

Dedham, Mass., May 5.—A heavy piece of plank placed across the tracks and revolvers in the hands of two masked men brought an electric car to a sudden standstill while on its inward trip from Dedham to Boston about 10:40 Saturday night, near the Dedham line in Germantown. When the car came to a stop Fred Knapp, one of the seven passengers in the car at the time, stepped out to see what was the trouble, and was ordered back by the highwaymen.

Then Andrew Nolan, a special railroad officer, who chanced to be on board, also started to investigate, and was made a target for one of the highwaymen's bullets. The shot grazed his cheek, drawing blood, but inflicting only a slight wound. Nolan returned the fire and it is believed hit one of the men, as an exclamation was heard as if one had been wounded. The men then jumped over a fence into the woods which are thick with undergrowth at that point, and made their escape. It is said that there were three highwaymen concerned in the affair, but owing to the fact that all wore black masks the descriptions upon which the police are working are very superficial.

The car was the one leaving Dedham at 10:30 p. m. and was in charge of Conductor Morgan and Motorman Wittemore. It is supposed the highwaymen believed they could secure the passengers' valuables with little opposition, but the presence of the officer and his unexpected attack upon them were more than they had bargained for and caused a sudden change in their plans, which might otherwise have proved successful.

Lively Row at Portland

Portland, Me., May 5.—While engaged in making a seizure Saturday night a cold chisel was dropped from a window, narrowly missing Deputy Sheriffs Plummer and Leach. Plummer and Deputy Stackpole then went into the house to hunt for the person who threw the cold chisel and while they were gone the crowd made an attempt to mob Deputy Leach. He drew a club and struck three men, succeeding in clearing the street. Then the crowd threw stones and rotten eggs at the officers, but the mob was finally dispersed. No arrests were made.

Patrolman's Presence of Mind

Boston, May 5.—During a fire in the lower part of a tenement house in South Boston early yesterday. Patrolman John Flynn dashed into the smoke and roused and assisted to the street a number of tenants. There was considerable personal risk until the firemen arrived, but all the inmates of the house were gotten out. The fire damage was not heavy.

Serious Conditions In Russia

Warsaw, May 5.—There is scarcely a single Russian town where sentences to banishment and imprisonment are not constantly being imposed. There has been a great demonstration at Ekaterinoslav, where the Cossacks killed 20 persons, wounded 40 more and arrested 150.

Sent Back Over Border

Ogdensburg, N. Y., May 5.—Thirty-two Servian gypsies who landed here from Canada were deported across the border as undesairable immigrants. They were among several hundred sent by the British government to open up new settlements in Canada.

Princess Jumped Overboard

Rome, May 5.—Princess Beatrice de Borrone, daughter of Don Carlos, the Spanish pretender, attempted to commit suicide by throwing herself into the Tiber, but was rescued. Private troubles are supposed to have prompted the act.

Good Afternoon.

Melrose recently asked for bids for concrete sidewalks, gutters, crossings, etc., and received eight bids. A little competition in Quincy might result in better work and lower-priced work.

We cannot agree with Senator Hoar in all his contentions but in many ways he is a grand figure in the United States Senate. He has suffered abuse and ridicule for what he believes to be right, and it required rare courage to register himself as the solitary opponent of the Chinese exclusion bill.

The Agriculture Department recommends that the first flies which appear during the summer be summarily dealt with, as fly generations follow each other at ten day intervals, with 120-fold increase. Therefore one original progenitor killed at the beginning of fly time is equal to several million later on.

There is very little prospect of the navy yards of the country taking the government work away from the Fore River company or other private shipyards. Rear Admiral Bowles, chief constructor, declares the building of warships at navy yards to be impracticable and inadvisable, and has so informed the House naval committee. He says that much preparation, involving great expenditure, would have to be made at the navy yards before battleships could be built there. It would cost $175,000, he asserts, to put the New York yard in condition to do this class of work, and at the Norfolk and Mare Island yards $225,000 would be required in each case. At Portsmouth, N. H., $175,000 would be needed.

The May day breakfasts which are such great financial successes in Lynn, Lawrence and other cities, might well be adopted for some of the local charities. We read relative to the success in Lawrence: The annual May breakfast was this year an even greater success than usual, the net proceeds of the affair reaching nearly $2000. The proceeds of the breakfast go to the maintenance of the Wood Home for Aged People, and the generous manner in which the breakfast was patronized demonstrated that people were deeply interested in this worthy institution. Unfortunately the home is not endowed, and depends upon the generosity of its friends for its support. The success of the May breakfast is in no small degree due to the energy of the ladies who had charge of the affair.

Quarry Strike in Maine.

A Rockport, Maine, dispatch of Friday says: At a largely attended meeting of the striking quarry workers, today, a committee reported that the manufacturers would make no compromise. It was voted to ask financial aid of the American Federation of Labor. There is a possibility of the strike extending to the Teamsters' Union, as some of the members of this organization are employed on teams at present hauling stone from the quarries.

No Loss of Time.

I have sold Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy for years, and would rather be out of coffee and sugar than it. I sold five bottles of it yesterday to threshers that could go no further, and they are at work again this morning.—H. R. PHELPS, Plymouth, Oklahoma. As will be seen by the above the threshers were able to keep on with their work without losing a single day's time. You should keep a bottle of this Remedy in your home. For sale by all druggists.

BLUE HILL RANGE.

The Tramp of the Appalachian Club Full of Interest.

Saturday morning, on the train due from Boston at 9.45 there arrived at West Quincy several members of the Appalachian club who made a tramp over the Blue Hill range from beginning to end, embarking at 6.18 P. M. at Readville for Boston. The following from a Sunday paper shows the possibilities of a mountain climb almost wholly within the city of Quincy:

The party, which was under the leadership of Secretary John Ritchie, Jr., who came on from Mt. Washington for the occasion, and comprised Messrs. Ritchie, Bullock, Rogers, Bauer, Griswold and Master Rogers, Mrs. Davis and the Misses Mayo, Nickerson, Humphrey, Hall and Carter, left the Southern Union station at 9.16 o'clock A. M. for West Quincy. Here the members divested themselves of all unnecessaries, and started on the day's tramp, which was laid out by schedule. The first hill sought was Rattlesnake, summit of which was reached at 10.30 o'clock, after a climb that only served as a warning of what was to come.

After a brief survey of the surrounding country, Mr. Ritchie led his band down the Rattle Side, the descent of which requires the greatest of care, and over to Rattle Craig, thence down again to the valley below.

Waubetuck was the next peak visited and was followed by a journey across Fox hill. Thus far the climbing had been moderately stiff. The trees are, for the most part, in bud enough to hide the bareness of their limbs, but the foliage has not reached that condition that adds hardship to walking through it by limiting the view ahead to a very short distance.

From Fox hill the way led over Sassamon notch and No. 427 to Chicatawbuck, and was comparatively easy, a fact that called forth from Mr. Ritchie the remark, "Wait till we get to Hancock." The descent from Chicatawbuck was long and gradual, and at 12:45 the party halted on Braintree Pass Path for lunch, at a spot designated on the club's itinerary as "The Pump."

As the time scheduled for departure on the second part of the journey arrived, rain began to fall, and Mr. Ritchie inquired into the members' minds on the question of proceeding or returning to the city. But by this time the climbing blood of the party was up, and with the thought of Hancock ahead, not even the rain could dampen its ardor.

The way from the Pass to Bear hill led around the base of Hawk, a smaller ridge, and the only one whose summit was not visited. The trip up Bear and across to Boyce's was rendered severe by the underbrush, which had an unpleasant habit of snapping in one's face. After Bear came Tucker hill, named aptly enough, as the effort required to reach its summit is no inconsiderable one.

Then came a halt for a few minutes on Hillside street, near the Park Commission's farm. Inquiry by telephone revealed the fact than an afternoon party, which was to meet Mr. Ritchie's party at this point, had been given up on account of the weather.

Then came the long promised trip up Hancock, and it furnished the hardest travelling of the day. The way is steep and difficult, but was negotiated by the entire party without mishap, the climbing of the women members being especially clever.

With Hancock conquered, the last hill of the day and the highest, big Blue hill, was approached by Wildcat Pass and although the way was long and steep, it presented none of the difficulties of Hancock and the summit was easily won.

Here the party spent half an hour viewing the superb scenery, which this point presents. The remaining 1 1-2 miles to the railway station at Readville was then quickly covered and the party boarded the 6:18 o'clock train into the city.

In His 87th Year.

Mr. Edward Turner, one of Quincy's oldest men, and for many years prominent in financial affairs, died Saturday evening at the residence of Mr. William P. Barker at Greenleaf street, where he has of late made his home. He was born in Boston, April 20, 1816, and coming to Quincy over half a century ago, lived for many years at what is now No. 91 Revere road.

For several years Mr. Turner was engaged in the leather business in Boston, under the firm name of Edson & Turner. He was at one time president of the Mt. Wollaston National bank of Quincy and of the Manufacturers' National bank of Boston. When the Boston Land Company was organized, 30 years ago, Mr. Turner was appointed its treasurer, a position which he had since filled.

When the Mt. Wollaston bank was made a National bank in 1864, Mr. Turner was made its first president. He was also the last of the living ex-presidents of this bank.

Mr. Turner was well known in musical circles, and was an accomplished flute player.

The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon from 86 Greenleaf street.

Brotherhood Meeting.

A congregation in excess of 500 attended the special service of the Brotherhood at Bethany Congregational church Sunday evening, the Apollo quartette being the great attraction. The quartette rendered three authems and there was a tenor solo, all of which fulfilled expectations. The opening services were conducted by Rev. E. N. Hardy, the pastor. Deacon E. W. Branch, the president of the Brotherhood, spoke briefly and introduced Rev. Frank W. Merrick, Ph. D., of Boston, whose address on "The way of life" was a thoughtful and convincing argument.

The musical program was:

Organ Voluntary,—O Sanctissima." Lux
Anthem,—"Abide with Me."
Apollo Quartette.
Anthem,—"Memories of Galilee."
Apollo Quartette.
Offertory,—"Andante Grazioso." Moszkows
Tenor Solo,—"If with all your hearts."
Congregational Hymn No. 676.
Anthem,—"Remember now thy Creator."
Apollo Quartette.
Benediction.

Not Dead but in Jail.

There was considerable excitement on Garfield street Sunday afternoon owing to the report that one of the boarders at Thomas Duffy's had committed suicide by cutting his throat. The police were notified, as were also Dr. Welch and Dr. Sheahan. Officer Barry was sent up to investigate and found a man named James Cummings in bed, his head and clothing saturated with blood. Dr. Welch, who was the first physician to arrive, found that Cummings had a wound on the throat but that he was a long way from being a dead man. The physician dressed the wound and Officer Barry locked the man up for drunkenness.

This morning Cummings told the police that his wounds were not self-inflicted. That he got into a dispute with a man who struck or kicked him under the chin. This morning in court Cummings was sent to jail for one month.

Sprague and the Councillorship.

Many friends of Senator Sprague have mentioned him as a successor of Hon. A. A. Maxwell, the Councillor from the second district. A Boston paper has interviewed Senator Sprague who says that, while he would not be averse to the promotion if it should come to him naturally and without the necessity of spending money to secure it, he has no intention and no desire to oppose Councillor Maxwell, and would not be a candidate in any event if it involved a contest on his part.

Adams Academy Defeats Powder Point School 28 to 6.

Adams Academy won from the Powder Point school, at the Park, on Saturday, by an overwhelming score. After the first innings, when the visitors were shut out and the home nine scored eleven runs, the game was never in doubt. During the first part of the game Damon's pitching was bad and he gave a number of bases on balls and forced in runs. Timely hits kept the bases full and a large score was piled up. Reardon caught for the Academy this being his first game this season.

Thayer Defeated.

Roxbury Latin defeated Thayer Academy at South Braintree, Saturday, 11 to 9.

Thayer Academy were not up to their game and although they hit well at times, they fielded poorly. Thayer made a rally in the ninth and it looked as if they might possibly win but the last man flied out with two on bases.

Remick and Knight hit well for Thayer while Reilly played the strongest game for Roxbury.

Young Gallagher of Roxbury was very clever and used good judgment, sending many men to the bench. He had fine control and his wide out-drop which came frequently, fooled all of Thayer's men.

Winslow's pitching was not up to the mark while Hammond was a little off in the last inning.

No Satisfaction.

Editors of the Ledger:

I saw in your columns of Saturday, May 3, an article headed "What some people want to know." I have had an occasion to bring a boy before this court for making a disturbance in Music hall, by ringing a cow bell, for an applause. He ("Judge" Spear) thought it cunning and the boy was let off without even a lecture to behave himself in the future. Such being the case, what satisfaction can our officers in Quincy have in trying to keep the peace.

How to See New England at Home.

Palma Grateful to Americans

Fighting the Moth.

In methods for the riddance of moths "doctors disagree," but all are agreed that for their prevention thorough airings and beatings of their favorite fabrics are a first essential. A moth will thrive in almost any preventive if its eggs are allowed to hatch in the atmosphere, but no moth will voluntarily lay its eggs in an atmosphere that is odious to it. For this reason it is of little avail to pack clothing or other articles away saturated in camphor or other preventives unless it is first subjected to airings and beatings that will free the fabric from any insects or eggs that may be hiding in its nap or folds. After every possible vestige of insect life is removed the articles should be put in airtight wrappings or receptacles with camphor or other insecticides. Many housekeepers claim that paper is the best of wrappers for the purpose, but it must be free from the smallest pinhole and be closed absolutely tight. Benzine, according to all authorities, is the deadliest enemy of the buffalo moth and should be used freely at its first approach.—New York Tribune.

Biliousness is a condition characterized by a disturbance of the digestive organs. The stomach is debilitated, the liver torpid, the bowels constipated. There is a loathing of food, pains in the bowels, dizziness, coated tongue and vomiting, first of the undigested or partly digested food and then of bile. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets aliay the disturbances of the stomach and create a healthy appetite. They also tone up the liver to a healthy action and regulate the bowels. Try them and you are certain to be much pleased with the result. For sale by all druggists.

One of the reasons why it was decided not to tunnel under Hancock street and the estate of Col. Porter for the Metropolitan sewer is that the cost for tunnelling is $30 per running foot more than the cost of making the cut.

IMPASSIONED DEFENSE

Of General Smith's Action In Island of Samar

HEARERS MOVED TO TEARS

As Colonel Woodruff Tells of Glorious Work Which Has Been Overshadowed In Deference to "Hysterical Public Opinion"

Manila, May 5.—The trial by court martial of General Jacob H. Smith has ended. The findings of the court will be forwarded to Washington. The general impression here is that he will be acquitted, as it is not believed anything has been proved against him contrary to general order No. 100.

The closing address of Colonel Woodruff, for the defense, was a remarkable oratorical effort, which drew tears from his hearers. He dramatically sketched General Smith's career, and declared he had conducted a remarkable and successful campaign in a manner which reflected credit to his valor, humanity and kindness.

Colonel Woodruff, speaking in impassioned tones, said in olden times victorious generals tied captives to their chariots. In this case the general finds himself tied.

Sentiment was an excelent thing, but there was no place for it in war.

"We claim," continued the colonel, "that the Samar campaign, just brought to a successful termination, while pushed actively, vigorously and energetically, was ever conducted within the limits of war.

"During the last few months it has seemed popular to criticise the army in the Philippines. People seemed to have forgotten its magnificent services for America's honor and glory, through sun and rain, mud and dust, across rivers and over mountains, through tangled underbrush, in sickness and in health, which have reflected nothing but glory upon our flag and country.

"We have been worthy members of the army, whose bayonets never flashed except in the defense of the law and whose tramp has carried comfort to those in danger.

"Yet, today, we are apparently disgraced. Why? I cannot imagine that people at home expect to gain glory and political advancement by abusing the army.

"It was tried after the Mexican war. It was tried after the Civil war, with the result that Grant, 'The Butcherer,' was elected president and died loved and honored by every American.

"While campaigns in the Philippines have not been conducted to meet the views of sentimentalists and troublesome busybodies in the United States, they have been conducted on lines which have reflected credit upon the valor, pluck, humanity and kindness of American soldiers, many of whom have freely laid down their lives on their country's altar."

Colonel Woodruff during his address reviewed the evidence at length, showing the necessity for making Samar a wilderness, and comparing the campaign in that island with the strenuous march to the sea, whose route was marked by a cloud of smoke by day and a pillar of fire by night.

The colonel said it had been proven by the evidence that native boys 8 years of age were capable of wielding bolos, cited numerous instances of military law, Roman, English and American, in behalf of the defense, dramatically portrayed General Smith's military career from the time when he enlisted in 1861 to when he was appointed brigadier general in 1901, and described his wounds, heroism anad devotion to duty.

Colonel Woodruff also quoted General Taft's speech at Dagupan, eulogizing General Smith, and added:

"Now, after wearing for 41 years the uniform of the United States, with honor to himself and to the benefit of the government, at the close of a remarkably successful campaign, in which he accomplished what Spain was unable to do in 200 years, while returning, as his friends thought, covered with glory, he was halted and taken off a transport, to face charges growing out of the language used in giving instructions for the conduct of a successful campaign.

"The defense feels that the government only has done this in deference to overwhelming public sentiment, based on rumors fostered for unknown and ignoble purposes, until hysteria was produced. Then this gray, wounded victorious general was exposed to the indignity of a trial in deference to hysterical public opinion."

Colonel Woodruff referred to the Balangiga massacre in Samar as furnishing splendid testimony to the soldiers' heroism, and concluded with saying: "General Smith faces the conscience of the court and people with the full knowledge that he did his duty as an honorable soldier."

LAST WEEK ON EARTH

Cassels Expresses Readiness to Go to the Electric Chair

Boston, May 5.—During this week John D. Cassels of Springfield will die in the electric chair at the state prison here. He killed Mrs. Lane at Longmeadow a year ago last February. The death warrant was read to him yesterday by Warden Bridges and he listened calmly. He said he was ready to die, as he had no good-byes to give, having said them all at Springfield. During the afternoon he wrote five letters to friends of his. Cassels has had no visitors since he came to Charlestown. When he arrived he said to the keeper: "I shall not trouble you with visitors." Not even his counsel has called at the prison.

The prison doctor examined Cassels during the afternoon. He found him quite nervous, his pulse and temperature running a bit high, though to the outward observer he seemed calm enough. He had eaten practically no dinner, but said his stomach trouble was responsible. Since his coming to Charlestown Rev. Mr. Barnes, one of the prison clergymen, has talked with him, and he expressed some emotion on the matter of religion.

Cocking Main Broken Up

Berwick, Me., May 5.—Deputy Sheriff Spencer and three police officers broke up a cocking main that was in progress on an abandoned farme here yesterday. The crowd of 300 was unaware of the identity of the officers until the latter jumped from their team, when the crowd ran in all directions. The officers rounded up a dozen or so, but as the lockup here is a small affair the men were not arrested, being allowed to depart after agreeing to appear in court. The officers secured 38 live birds and two dead ones. Several kegs of beer, and a plentful supply of other liquors and eatables were also confiscated by the officers.

Laborers Working Under Arms

Brunswick, Me., May 5.—Sixty Italians employed on the construction of the Brunswick and Portland electric roadbed struck for weekly payments and an increase of wages. The Italians flourished knives and became so animated that the bosses, as well as the French and American workmen, beat a hasty retreat. They returned later with knives and revolvers and made such a favorable demonstration that they were not molested.

Triple Drowning Accident

Great Barrington, Mass., May 5.—By the capsizing of their boat on the Housatonic river while on a fishing trip, Alfonse Nordin, aged 26; Emil Bredin, 44, and Charles Plancon, 33, were drowned late Saturday night, and William Pomertatz narrowly escaped a similar fate. The men had rowed about a mile up the river, when the boat was capsized and all were thrown into the water. The bodies of Nordin and Bredin were recovered.

Grabbed Tray of Diamonds

Boston, May 5.—Leonard Pierce of Detroit, 19 years old, went into the jewelry store of N. G. Wood & Son, on Tremont street Saturday evening, and asked to be shown some diamonds. A tray containing gems valued at $1000 perc placed in front of him, with which he rushed from the store. Several clerks pursued and overtook him and he was handed over to the police. The diamonds were recovered.

Fishermen Perished In Gale

SCROFULA.

To cure Scrofula take Scott's Emulsion.

Scrofula may be described as —"scattered consumption."

It is consumption of the small glands under the skin, and these break out into the sores. Scott's Emulsion heals these sores.

But there's more to the story. The loss of flesh and great weakness that comes with Scrofula is a regular part of the disease—the same as in consumption of the lungs. For this as for the sores, Scott's Emulsion is just the remedy.

Flesh and strength are gained by the use of Scott's Emulsion quicker than in any other way.

Scrofulous children improve in every way on Scott's Emulsion.

ALL EUROPE IS STIRRED

By Unwelcome News From the Dutch Capital

QUEEN'S CONDITION SERIOUS

But Little Hope of Her Recovery From Premature Confinement—Question of Succession to the Throne Will Cause a Political Convulsion

The Hague, May 5.—It was announced from Castle Loo at midnight that Queen Wilhelmina had been prematurely confined at 6 o'clock Sunday evening. The queen suffered intense agony.

At 11 o'clock Sunday evening the condition of her majesty was described as critical, and small hope for her recovery was entertained.

London, May 5.—The tardy official admission of the real nature o the illness of the queen of Holland, which The Associated Press was able to announce April 17 from Amsterdam, may be regarded as an indication of a very grave crisis in her majesty's condition, and, coming so suddenly upon the bulletins announcing her imminent recovery, it will cause a shock throughout Europe.

Apart from the difficulties surrounding the question of the succession to the throne of Holland, the death of Queen Wilhelmina, if this should unhappily occur, would tend to convulse the continent politically. In Germany especially it is a matter of the deepest import. The German press claims that Prince Albrecht of Hohenzollern, the acting regent of Brunswick, is among the nearest in the Dutch succession, and in all the European capitals nervous apprehension exists that the absence of a direct heir to the Dutch throne might precipitate a struggle for the possessions of Holland, which in Berlin is regarded as Germany's natural right.

This Week In Congress

Washington, May 5.—Republican senators this week will relieve the Democrats of the necessity of supplying all the speakers in the senate on the Philippine government bill. The events of last week caused them to decide to take part in the debate and they will lead off when the bill shall be laid before the senate this afternoon.

The principal fature of the program in the house this week will be the bill to place three new stars on the American flag. The omnibus bill for the admission of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona to statehood will be called up tomorrow.

Bryan Tired of Playing Moses

Birmingham, Ala., May 5.—William J. Bryan and Governor Jennings of Florida were the guests of the Birmingham Bimetallic club at a banquet Saturday night. Mr. Bryan intimated that he would not again be a candidate for the presidential nomination. He likened himself to Aaron, who, he said, assisted Moses in leading the children out of the wilderness by his public utterances. He said he was perfectly willing to let some other person take the part of Moses.

Immigrants Flocking In

New York, May 5.—The rush of immigrants to this port which has signalized the first four months of the year reached a climax the week ending last night, during which time 25,120 immigrants have been brought to this city from various European ports. The total number of immigrants arriving here for the four months ending April 30 was 178,804.

Schooner Probably Lost

Halifax, May 5.—Schooner Bear River, which sailed from Port George from Fort Williams, N. S., on April 26 and has not since been reported, is given up for lost with all hands. She probably foundered in Cape D'Or Rips. She carried a crew of four men.

Murderer Cassels Calmly Goes to His Death

A MOST DRAMATIC SCENE

Marks the Carrying Out of the Law's Decree In State Prison—Story of the Murder of Mrs Lane and Sensational Scenes In Court

Boston, May 6.—John D. Cassels, at 12.40 o'clock this morning, paid the penalty for the murder of Mrs. Mary J. Lane. At 12.40 o'clock he was electrocuted at the death-house of the state prison in Charlestown.

There was a most dramatic scene when Cassels was brought out by four keepers, who followed the condemned man and Rev. Mr. Barnes, the prison chaplain, who held Cassels by his right arm. Cassels showed no particular signs of fear, but when he arrived in front of the chair he knelt down and began to pray. Cassels was ghastly pale, as are most men who realize that they are going to their death.

Cassels knelt on his bare left knee directly in front of the chair, clasping his hands above his head, and began to pray, raising his eyes. Then a voice which was thrilling in the midnight calm and with eyes uplifted and hands uplifted far above his head, he began:

"Gracious God, my Father, I have come to the foot of the cross, and I beseech Thee that Thou wilt be merciful. Receive my soul, and, oh God, forgive those who swore this poor miserable life away. O God, cheer my poor old father in Scotland and comfort my poor old father and keep him that he may forgive me. O, God, cheer and be merciful to Mary, the woman I love, and the woman that Thou made me love. Forgive those men who made me die and forgive those who see me die, because they are not to blame for it. God, keep my children and again forgive me, who am about to die. God bless my children and keep them from harm."

It is believed that Cassels' infatuation for Mrs. Lane, although she was the wife of another, led to the murder. The man himself was married, but claimed that an intimacy had existed between himself and Mrs. Lane for more than a year. At length, however, an elopement was planned. The couple were to meet in Springfield, Feb. 26, but Mrs. Lane failed to keep the appointment. At the last minute she decided to remain with her family.

Cassels, angered by Mrs. Lane's change of heart, purchased a revolver and two bottles of carbolic acid and went to her home. He urged her again to elope with him, and when she refused, fired three shots at her, two of the bullets taking effect. She died two weeks later. Cassels was found lying in the road. He had taken the acid, but medical attendance saved his life.

The trial of Cassels at Springfield was full of sensational incidents. A voluminous correspondence which indicated the relations between Mrs. Lane and Cassels was introduced. When one witness testified that Cassels had said after the shooting, he was sorry he had not killed Mrs. Lane, the prisoner shouted "You lie." A verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree was found on Jan. 2 of this year.

All previous scenes in the case, however, were eclipsed by that which occurred at Springfield on Jan. 30, when the condemned man was brought into court for sentence. When Cassels was given the customary opportunity to speak he drew from his pocket a roll of manuscript and began a personal appeal to the court, claiming that he had not had an impartial trial, that witnesses for the commonwealth had perjured themselves and that the district attorney and his own counsel had conspired to suppress letters which passed between Mrs. Lane and the prisoner, which, if introduced, would have put a different light on the whole matter. As he proceeded, the prisoner became greatly excited. He made an impassioned plea for clemency. "Don't murder me in a cell like a rat. Don't disgrace a Christian land where God says: "Thou shalt not kill," he urged.

"Shoot me in the open, but don't murder me," said he dramatically. He implored that a chance be given to him to defend himself, and said that if the sentence which the court was about to pronounce was carried out it would be the coldest, most unscrupulous murder ever committed in Massachusetts.

When Cassels had finished Judge Hopkins reviewed the case, announced the concurrence of the court in the finding of the jury and pronounced sentence.

Instantly Cassels sprang to his feet and shaking his first at the bench which the judge had just vacated he shrieked "May God curse every man that sent me to the chair." The imprecation loosened Cassel's flow of speech again and in a flood of invective, he denounced all who had in any way been connected with the trial. The court officers seized the man, who, struggling violently and still muttering imprecations on all present, was dragged away.

Cassels was a sewing machine agent and was well educated. He was a Scotchman and his wife is living in England. After his arrest Cassels wrote to his wife asking her to come to him in his troubles.

Pittsburg, May 6.—Mrs. Kate Soffel, the wife of Warden Soffel of the Allegheny county jail, who figured in the sensational escape and recapture of the Biddle brothers last January, was called into court yesterday and entered a plea of guilty to the charge of aiding and abetting in the escape of the prisoners. THE PHILIPPINE POLICY.

Senator Lodge Resents Imputations on the President, the Secretary of War, and the Army of Occupation---Tribute for Governor Taft.

Washington, May 6.—Soon after 2 o'clock yesterday Mr. Lodge began his speech on the Philippine government bill. Senator Carmack, he said, had asked whether anyone would have the effrontery to defend the pending bill. He desired to say that he was there to do that very thing. Taking up the mining features of the bill, he declared that it had been prepared by a sub-committee, on which Mr. McComas of Maryland, an eminent lawyer, and Mr. Rawlins of Utah, a mining expert, had brought to the preparation of the text so fine an equipment in talents and knowledge as to make this probably the best mining law in existence.

In the financial sections, prepared by Senator Allison, the guiding consideration was to disturb little the existing situation, profiting by the example of the British government at Hong Kong. Mr. Allison would explain later, at such length as might be necessary, the whole of this feature of the bill.

In the purely governmental part of the bill the present commission was continued, with the single change of requiring senatorial confirmation for appointments of future additions to the commission. The same confirmation plan was applied also to the judges of the supreme court.

A census was necessary as a means of discovering how many people had passed under our sovereignty, their differences of race, religion, etc., and separating the wild tribes, supposed to number about 1,000,000 souls, from the Christianized Filipinos. The land law was necessary because of the 72,000,000 acres of land which we obtained from Spain, only about 5,000,000 are supposed to have come under private ownership. This left some 67,000,000 acres of public lands for the government to administer. It was advisable, also, that good titles be given to those native squatters who have settled and established homes and plantations where they had no legal rights. The commission had been clothed with power to purchase the friars' lands. This was because there did not seem to be any other way of solving the problem of these religious corporate holdings.

As to franchises, an effort had been made to encourage capital to enter the islands and develop them on legitimate and conservative lines. The Democrats had objected to this because it would enable Americans to make money. This, as shown by the record of the last Democratic administration, was a Democratic fad; and its success at that time was unquestionable, for during the four years mentioned no American made any money. The Republicans had no purpose to let their lands be exploited, but their desire was to give the natives a chance to earn good wages and have them regularly paid, an experience they had never had under Spain. They had already ruled out Chinese cheap labor so as to protect the natives from injurious competition.

Mr. Lodge then paid a glowing tribute to the talents, intelligence, industry and unselfishness of Governor Taft, and the high character of his associates on the commission, who are the sort of men whom every senator would be glad to secure as trustee for his wife or his child. "I have not yet reached the point," exclaimed the senator, "when I cannot believe that there are Americans worthy of every confidence we can repose in the most important and delicate matters conceivable."

Mr. Lodge warmly resented the imputations cast on the president, the secretary of war and the army for the alleged cruelties and atrocities said to have been practiced in the Philippines. He said every effort had been employed by the officials in authority to prevent such cruelties as had been referred to and measures had been taken to punish those guilty of them. Such things, however, were incidents of every war and could not be prevented absolutely. He had no defense to make of many of the cases of torture which had been cited, but the men of the American army had been provoked almost beyond human endurance.

He recited scores of instances of cruelties and tortures practiced by the the Filipino insurgents on American prisoners. Men had had their ears cut off; had been disemboweled; had been driven into streams and, while drowning, shot to death; had been tied to trees and stoned to death by women and children; and buried alive. Others had been shot and boloed treacherously while succouring the wounded.

In the face of these horrible atrocities some of the American troops had been guilty of administering the "water cure," but the instances of this kind were isolated and no part of the general policy in the Philippines. He warmly defended General Chaffee for his conduct of military affairs in the islands and paid a brilliant tribute to his heroism and patriotism. As he concluded his defence of the American army and the American administration drew cordial applause from the galleries.

In a brief reply Mr. Rawlins declared that the charges which had been made were not against General Chaffee or against the American army but against the senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Lodge) and others who were responsible for the present Philippine policy.

Mayor Makes Good Argument

Toledo, May 6.—Mayor Jones, who is also president of the board of police commissioners, yesterday refused to surrender the police department to the new board of police commissioners created by an act of the legislature and appointed by Governor Nash. He refuses to recognize the right of the legislature to oust a board elected by the voters of the city. Sensational developments are expected.

Thirty-Five Moros Killed

Manila, May 6.—Eighty-four Moro prisoners, under guard, made an attempt to escape yesterday. At a preconcerted signal they got between the soldiers forming the guard and a company at dinner.

The latter, realizing what had happened, fired on and pursued the Moros, killing 35 of them and capturing nine. The other fugitives escaped.

Good Afternoon.

Have you noticed as many wild flowers as the pupils of the Coddington school, whose list now numbers 25?

Now Gov. Crane finds that Massachusetts has no law to provide for the election of Congressmen to fill vacancies.

The recent rains have freshened things up considerable and never did the lawns look more green and velvety early in May. The trees have also begun to blossom and taken as a whole nature is very attractive.

Few cities even towns are able to do all that is needed in improvements without generous help in time or money that each one can give in proportion to his mean. There is much needed in Ward 1 and in other parts of Quincy and Rev. Mr. Hardy in his interesting sermon on April 27, is following in the steps of Rev. Mr. Wilson, Rev. Mr. Norton and others in the old Village Improvement Society days. Many influential citizens are interested in this subject.

The ocean steamship trust is announced as settled, though the new plan does not destroy the identity of the existing lines, each being controlled by a blanket corporation owning a majority of shares in each company. The world's shipping will be reduced to a system and the object will be to provide a daily service between New York and England, whereas now the sailings of the different lines are at cross purposes. The whole plan is stupendous in its scope and possibilities.

Brooks Adams of this city rather shook up things in Boston last night in his lecture at the Public Library building on "The purpose for which a city may reasonably encourage art." Perhaps the Hub will not have as good an opinion of herself now.

Summed up briefly by the Journal, Mr. Adams made these points:

In some business sections the city is very ugly.

Boston is losing ground intellectually and commercially.

Many buildings are but mere patchwork.

We have educational institutions which duplicate each other.

The point is not to teach many things but to teach what you do better than anybody else.

We do not keep our young men. They go from us because other people have paid them.

Our tendency is to fall behind the age.

PUBLIC HEARING.

Four hearings were held during the evening on street improvements.

Relative to the acceptance of Hamilton street in Ward Five and the widening of East Howard street to 60 feet no one appeared pro or con and both were recommitted

Relative to the laying out of Faxon Park road from Quincy avenue to Kendrick avenue, Peter McConarty appeared in favor. He claimed it a public necessity, and argued that it would open up a sightly country for nice residences and a pleasant drive.

Park Commissioner Rice said Faxon park was a beautiful place which few in Quincy realized. The city should carry out the agreement with Henry H. Faxon, the donor of the park and now was the time.

The order was recommitted.

FOUNTAIN SQUARE.

W. G. A. Pattee opened the hearing in favor of the relocation of Washington street between Temple and Hancock streets. He appeared at the request of Washington street people but not as counsel. The object was to secure a wider entrance from Hancock street into Washington street, which required the removal of the mound near the fountain. It was for the City Council to consider, is the mound any benefit; is it a disadvantage. He heard no one call it a benefit, unless it was some ladies who refer to it as a "beauty spot." Some greens are, but this one is not. It was merely a place to roost for tired bicyclists, and as a lounging place was an injury to the city. Washington street was the main artery to the South Shore, and the Coddington street boulevard entered near this point. There was a conjestion at this point caused by the mound and the fountain. Now one-third of the fountain could not be used because of the mound. The mound was of no advantage, but dangerous to travel.

Mr. Pattee said he had for many years heard considerable about the title of the land about the Stone church. There was no question but what the city could take what it desired for street purpose. The Unitarian society could recover if it was the owner, but he thought that the church would find it very difficult to establish its title.

To Councilman Whiton, Mr. Pattee said he did not appear in the interest of the street railway.

Henry H. Faxon also appeared in favor, said he had summed up his views in print about a year ago, and had a fresh supply of the documents for distribution. The mound, he claimed, was an eye sore, and the loose stones which border it were frequently in the street and a further nuisance.

I have had the title examined, but nobody says it belongs to the Unitarian church. If it does I want the church to be paid, as all churches are poor. Edwin W. Marsh had made an examination of the title, and found nothing to substaniate the claim of the church. A prominent conveyancer of Boston coincided. Had the top rail of the low fence around the plot been placed flat it would have made a comfortable seat, but on edge it was rather cutting. Hoped fountain would stay where it is.

To Councilman Fallon, Mr. Faxon said everyone claimed but no one owned the land in question. It was the Village Improvement Society, he believed, who placed the mound there.

L. S. Anderson, the treasurer of the First church, appeared in opposition. Not necessarily to oppose, but to state the position of the church. Many if not a majority of the members of the church believe the church has some rights in land outside the chains. It is then a question of cost for the City Council. If the church has a title it will claim pay for land taken. The church has tried to make its grounds attractive. Undoubtedly the church would be willing to compromise; to make certain concessions under certain conditions.

Speaking as a citizen he said if an improvement is made the fountain should be moved.

To Councilman Nickerson Mr. Anderson said it was not wholly a pecuniary question with some of the church people. To some it was a matter of sentiment. The plot was of no particular advantage to the church.

To Councilman Nichol he said the church would maintain that it had a title. He felt that church had a claim. It was of benefit to the church to keep the people who loiter about as far from the church as possible. Undoubtedly the widening would be of benefit to traffic.

To Councilman Bass he said the church had no paid opinion that it had a title of the Washington street land, but title had been examined.

Councilman Fallon asked some questions as to plans of what the church owned, etc., but confined himself mostly to argument, advising the church to fence in all the land it owned. He did not think it charitable for the Village Improvement Society to build such a fence.

To Councilman Whiton, Mr. Anderson said the church did claim ownership of the roadway between the church and the green. It was in 1824 he said that the church and town of Quincy separated and he spoke of the agreement then as to lands.

City Solicitor Blackmur asked if a portion of the land now occupied by the Adams building was not also claimed by the church, and was answered in the affirmative; also street to the north of fountain.

Councilman Nichol asked Mr. Anderson what value he placed on the Washington street land the church claimed to own. Answer—$1.50 to $1.75 per square foot. Do you think church could sell to any one except city? Answer—Not a lawyer, and not prepared to say.

Mayor Bryant asked how the posts and chains came to be placed where they were. Mr. Anderson thought it largely for symmetry, but also fo allow people who drove to church to hitch their horse without being in the street.

The Mayor then asked how long the roadway north of the church had been opened and Mr. Anderson said—As long as I can remember; since 1858 sure. He added that the city acquired certain rights over land by constant use for 20 years, but over church land use for 40 years was necessary.

Councilman Whiton inquired relative to church land on the Temple street side, and was told that the church regarded the street railway as a trespasser, and had so notified company.

At 9.15 the hearing closed and the Council adjourned

THE LEGISLATURE.

Bill to Authorize Elevated to Lease Old Colony Lines.

The so-called Governor's bill relative to street railways would have been killed yesterday but for a point of order raised. It provides that "no location, extension or alteration of a location granted after the first day of March, in the year 1902, of the tracks of a street railway company organized or in process of organization, shall be valid until the board of railroad commissioners has certified, after public notice and a hearing, that such location, extension or alteration of location is consistent with the public interests."

It was a case where selectmen, who were to lose power, dominated the House, but there were good arguments in favor.

Representative Schofield's substitute for the Luce election bill was offered, and argued at length by that gentleman until adjournment.

The Senate refused to make Evacuation day, March 17, a legal holiday.

The committee on street railways reported the bill to permit the Boston Elevated Railway Company to lease the lines of the Old Colony Street Railway Company in the limits of Boston.

Biliousness is a condition characterized by a disturbance of the digestive organs. The stomach is debilitated, the liver torpid, the bowels constipated. There is a loathing of food, pains in the bowels, dizziness, coated tongue and vomiting, first of the undigested or partly digested food and then of bile. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets allay the disturbances of the stomach and create a healthy appetite. They also tone up the liver to a healthy action and regulate the bowels. Try them and you are certain to be much pleased with the result. For sale by all druggists.

ROCHAMBEAU DAY FETE.

Elaborate Preparations For Unveiling Statue of Great Frenchman.

The unveiling of the Rochambeau statue at Washington the latter part of May will be a notable function, says the New York Tribune. The president is taking a deep personal interest in all the arrangements for the ceremony, and the committee, composed of Assistant Secretary of State Pierce, Colonel T. A. Bingham and Commander Raymond P. Rodgers, has arranged for their being successfully carried out. President Roosevelt has expressed his willingness to make an address, and it is his wish that all the military organizations in the vicinity of the capital should participate in the exercises, which will make the occasion what it should be, an imposing military demonstration, since it is to do honor to the commander of the French forces in America during the war of the Revolution.

The French government will be represented by a general of the army and two aids, an admiral of the navy and two aids and two officials of the foreign office, with their staffs. Count Rene de Rochambeau and Count Gaston de Lafayette have accepted the president's invitation to assist at the ceremony. The foreign guests will be entertained by the government during their stay on this side of the water, and everything will be done, both by the officials having the matter in charge and by those hostesses who are arranging functions in their honor, to make their stay in America a memorable one.

For the first time since her husband was accredited to Washington, four years ago, Mme. Cambon will visit that capital, and during the festivities that will mark the unveiling will act as hostess of the French embassy, which has had no mistress since the recall of M. Patenotre. Although she has never been in America, many members of the diplomatic corps have had the privilege of meeting Mme. Cambon, and she is said to be a woman of distinguished presence, wit, vivacity and charm.

The statue for the unveiling of which such elaborate preparations are being made is a replica of the memorial erected three years ago at Count Rochambeau's birthplace, Vendome, and was designed by Fernand Hamar, a young French artist of note and reputation. The figure is of bronze, heroic in size, and represents the officer in the uniform of a field marshal of France, standing with his right arm upraised as though giving the command for an attack. A symbolical study at the base—the figure of a woman holding aloft the flag of France, with her feet on the prow of a vessel—suggests the sympathy of France, the aid she sent across the sea to the young republic. The arms of the United States, of France and the Rochambeau family are also arranged about the foot of the statue. The day selected for its unveiling, May 24, is the anniversary of Rochambeau's entrance into the military service of his country. It will be placed on the southwest corner of Lafayette square, opposite the statue of Count Rochambeau's compatriot and companion in arms, the Marquis de Lafayette.

GREAT COUNTRY HOUSE.

Anson Phelps Stokes Plans Novel Mansion at Darien, Conn.

Anson Phelps Stokes, who has put his country seat, Shadow Brook, at Lenox, Mass., on the market, has had plans prepared for a large mansion at Collender's Point, Darien, Conn., says a special dispatch from Stamford, Conn., to the New York Times. The plans have been made by Mr. Stokes' brother, a member of a New York firm.

The structure will be a rambling affair, constructed principally of brick. It will be built at the water's edge and will command an excellent view of the sound. It will be 146 feet long, and the main building will be sixty feet wide, with two L's at the rear, which will measure forty feet square. The rooms will be very large. The living room as provided for in the plans is as large as an ordinary dwelling.

It is estimated that the house will cost over $250,000. The plans call for the beautifying of the thirteen acres of land comprising the site and the erection of fine stables. Farther back in Darien, at Oxridge, Mr. Stokes has just acquired 190 acres of the richest farm land in that section. He does not intend to make any changes in this land immediately. It will be drawn on to supply his big establishment.

American Looms Abroad.

American ribbon looms are being imported by Swiss manufacturers. These looms are much more expensive than those made in Switzerland, even leaving freight and duties out of account, but the manufacturers find it profitable to use them because of their great solidity of construction and the much larger amount of work they do.

The American Invasion.

We sat and smoked; a half pay bore
Was holding forth upon the war,
And, seized with weariness extreme,
I fell asleep and dreamed a dream.

I dreamed that Britain's trade was bust
By deal and corner, ring and trust,
And withered at the stern rebukes
Of iron kings and 'bacco dukes.

But, though our merchants all had failed,
A general comfort still prevailed,
For any man could live and save
On bonuses that Yankees gave.

A pipeful of Virginia leaf
Earned you a plate of western beef,
And artificial teeth in sets
Were won by smoking cigarettes.

The entry of the Yankee bars
Was free to all who chose cigars,
And, what was very strange to me,
Cigars were also given free.

I shouted in my dream, "I'll take Six cocktails and a rattlesnake!"
I felt a friendly elbow's poke,
And, lo, the vision went to smoke.

Archbishop Dead.

New York, May 6.—Archbishop Corrigan died at 11.05 o'clock last night. Although he had a good day yesterday and was talking to his secretary at 20 minutes to 11 o'clock his heart gave way at 11 o'clock. The end was most praceful, the last breath passing without any evidence of pain.

Dr. Keyes and Dr. Delafield, the archbishop's physicians, held a consultation at 2.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and found the prelate's condition so much improved that Dr. Keyes did not think it necessary to visit the patient in the evening and he did not return.

There were present seven priests and the archbishop's two brothers, Father Corrigan and Dr. Corrigan and the latter's son, Joseph, the nurses and servants. All got to the room just in time to see the prelate breathe his last.

The archbishop's illness really dated from the end of February of this year when, in going through the Kelly memorial chapel, in course of construction in the rear of the catheoral, he fell between some beams, and to keep himself from falling to the floor below he had to hold himself up by the armpits. The strain was very great and before he recovered from the effects of the accident he was attacked with pneumonia.

Archbishop Corrigan was born in Newark, N. J., in 1840.

A Flurry In Wall Street

New York, May 6.— The Stock Exchange firms, Offenbach & Moore, Henry Bros. & Co., and Lockwood, Hurd and Co., announced their suspension in the order named at the opening of the market yesterday. The amount of their joint liabilities is variously estimated at from 2,000,000 to $5,000,0000. Two of the insolvent firms announced that they hoped to settle in full and resume. No very definite statement was forthcoming from the parties most interested. The day closed with the usual rumors of more failures and criminal prosecution.

Preacher Called to Testify

Salem, Mass., May 6.—City Marshal Knight yesterday obtained summons calling several persons into court to testify in the case against James Shanahan, whose place was unsuccessfully raided on Sunday. Slaughter Aboard Ship

Port Townsend, Wash., May 6.—British vice-consul Klocker yesterday received a letter from Capt. H. REVENUE INSTRUCTIONS

Tobacco Dealers and Manufacturers Must Register

CHANGES IN THE LAW

Can Be Met Without Loss by the Exchange of Unaffixed Stamps—Repeal of Special Taxes Does Not Relieve Dealers From Holding Certificates

Washington, May 6.—Preparations for a change from the present war revenue taxation to the revised law which goes into operation on July 1 have advanced so far that the particulars can now be announced, giving both manufacturers and tax collectors some weeks in which to shape their affairs to conform with the new requirements without an abrupt departure from the established lines of business. One of the first problems presenting itself to the manufacturer who must continue to pay a tax is how to dispose of his present supply of stamps without a loss, as many business men have had expensive experiences with such changes in the law and with revisionary rulings involving drawbacks or the repayment of special taxes collected illegally.

Under the repeal act of April 12 bankers, brokers, pawnbrokers, custom house brokers, proprietors of theatres, circuses, public exhibitons, bowling alleys, dealers in tobacco, manufacturers of tobacco, and a few other business interests, are exempt from taxation and their official relation with the internal revenue department will cease on June 30, except for rights accrued or liabilities incurred prior to the repeal. The new law provides that the tax on fermented liquors shall be $1 per barrel, the tax on snuff and tobacco 6 cents per pound, and on large cigarettes $3 per thousand. Instructions relative to the exchange of all stamps for the new denominations have been issued by the commissioner of internal revenue.

Brewers and manufacturers of tobacco and snuff in Massachusetts having possession of unaffixed stamps issued for the payment of tax at the old rate upon beer, tobacco and snuff may present the same to the collector in Boston on or after the date when the new rate of taxation goes into effect, for exchange under the provision of law. Each lot of stamps must be accompanied by a schedule of the stamps presented for exchange, setting forth in columns under appropriate headings the number of each denomination and the amount of cash paid. There should be presented with the stamps and schedule an order for stamps at the new rate of tax, specifying the denominations desired. The total value of the new stamps ordered should be made to correspond as nearly as possible with the total value of the old stamps returned for exchange. Where it is impracticable to order new stamps exactly corresponding in value with those returned, the order for such new stamps should be made for an amount slightly exceeding the value of those returned, and there should be transmitted or presented with such order cash sufficient to pay for the excess of new stamps required.

Upon receipt of stamps for exchange with a schedule and order, collectors will have the old stamps counted, noting the denominations and values on the schedule and issue to the owner new stamps of equal value. The stamps returned for exchange, together with a schedule giving the name of each brewer or manufacturer who returned the same, and showing in columns under appropriate headings the number of stamps of each denominaton returned, the value thereof, the amount of cash, if any, received to balance exchange, will then be forwarded to Washington.

When stamps are presented for exchange, collectors will be allowed to take a reasonable time for counting or examining them, for preparing schedules, making entries and completing all transactions pertaining to such exchange with care and accuracy. In order to prevent loss to the government and confusion and delay in the settlement of accounts, collectors have been requested to advise brewers and manufacturers of tobacco and snuff to purchase as few stamps of the old issue as will meet their requirements until July 1, 1902, and to order from Washington beer, tobacco and snuff stamps of the present rate of tax in sufficient quantities only to meet current demands, in order that their stock of such stamps to be returned on June 30 may be reduced as low as possible.

Revenue collectors all over the country have been requested immediately to make a requisition on the Washington office for the new series of stamps, up to the amount of an established three months' supply. These stamps are to be denominated "series 1902" to distinguish them rom the former issues. They may be needed before the end of the current tax year for the advance preparaton of merchandise which properly will come under next year's taxation.

MADE DOCTOR OF LAWS

Lord Kelvin, the Eminent Scientist, Honored by Yale University

New Haven, May 6.—Before a background of the American and English flags inter-draped, Willam Thompson, first Lord Kelvin, of the University of Glasgow, received from Yale university the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. The ceremony took place in Battell chapel. The occasion was a remarkable one because it was the first time in over 100 years that a special assembly has been held at Yale for the conferring of an honorary degree.

The ceremonies were short. After the preliminaries Lord Kelvin was presented for the degree by Professor Chittenden. President Hadley conferred the degree as follows:

"To some of the men of science it is given to render practical service by their discoveries; to others it is given to use those discoveries as a means to the profounder understandings of the laws of the universe. Yours has been the honor of combining both these results in the work of a sngle life. You have joined the different regions of the earth by your investigations of the submarine telegraph; you have joined the different realms of human thought by your contributions to physical theory. In recognition of this long and glorious service, wherein each successive achievement which seemed to the world a culmination of your labor was with you only the starting point for severer labors and the stepping stone toward achievements yet higher, we confer upon you the degree of Doctor of Laws and admit you to all its rights and privileges."

Lord Kelvin responded feelingly with thanks for the honor conferred and after a tribute to Yale reviewed briefly the development of the teaching of science in universities.

Charges Not Proven

Boston, May 6.—The commission appointed recently by the Boston Presbytery to try Rev. Dr. Scott Hershey, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Boston, on charges preferred by several of his parishioners, has concluded its report and finds in substance that the clergyman has done no wrong. On this decision the complaints against Dr. Hershey are dismissed and the prayer of the petitioners that the pastor be requested to resign is denied.

Had Been Mourned as Dead

Stonington, Conn., May 6.—After an absence of 10 years, John Fish returned to his home Monday bearing a commission as captain in the British army. At the age of 19 he left New London and went to San Francisco, afterward going to South Africa, where he enlisted. Some years ago news of Fish's death reached his mother here, and until yesterday she had no intimation that the report was untrue.

Diamond Thief Held

Boston, May 6.—Leonard Pierce, the 19-year-old Detroit youth, who stole $1600 worth of diamonds Saturday afternoon from the store of N. G. Woods & Sons, was in court yesterday and held in $3000 for the superior court. The police officials are doing all in their power to induce Pierce to talk about himself, but thus far with little success. He is apparently a victim of the opium habit.

Saloon Keeper Kills Himself

Woburn, Mass., May 6.—Dennis McGrath was found dead in his place of business on Main street yesterday, with his throat cut and a knife beside him, and it is supposed that he committed suicide. He had been a saloon keeper here, but had just been refused a license for the coming year.

Charged With Stabbing

Boston, May 6. After three days' search for the assailant of James Perry, the brewery driver who was stabbed luring a riot in South Boston last Friday, the police yesterday arrested Hubert H. Waldron. It is claimed that Waldron has been identified as the man who stabbed Perry.

Laborers Have Strong Support

Providence, May 6.—The contractors voted yesterday not to grant the demands of the 300 building laborers for eight hours and more pay. The latter will secure the support of the building trades council, which controls 3000 skilled mechanics.

Quarrymen's Threat

Stonington, Me., May 6.—A strike at the quarries here is threatened June 1. The men have demanded an eight-hour day at the same rate of wages as at present received and if this is not granted it is the understanding that the men will stop work.

Suicide In Insane Asylum

Northampton, Mass., May 6.—John Moore, who was committed from Holyoke to the state insane asylum on Saturday, took his life by hanging with a roller towel last night. He was 30 years old. His insanity was due to acute melancholia.

Killed Himself While Under Arrest

Bangor, Me., May 6.—Ezra Fisher, aged 35, under arrest on charge of stealing hens, committed suicide in a cell in the police station yesterday by hanging. He took a belt which he wore and used it as a noose.

Sciatic Rheumatism Cured After Fourteen Years of Suffering.

"I have been afflicted with sciatic rheumatism for fourteen years," says Josh Edgar, of Germantown, Cal. "I was able to be around but constantly suffered. I tried everything I could hear of and at last was told to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which I did and was immediately relieved and in a short time cured, and I am happy to say it has not since returned." Why not use this liniment and get well? It is for sale by all druggists.

NEWS IN BRIEF

The postoffice at North Conway, N. H., has been advanced from the fourth class to the presidential class.

Amesbury, Mass., voted to reject the sewerage act passed by the legislature of 1901, authorizing the town to build a system of general sewerage. The amount of $3500 was appropriated for surface drainage.

John Davis, one of the associate justices of the United States court of claims, died at Washington of Brights disease. Judge Davis was a native of Massachusetts, was in his 52d year and during his busy life had filled many important public positions.

At a meeting of the Marconi wireless telegraph company at New York a bid for the completion of the station at Cape Cod was accepted and the signing of a contract was authorized.

The University of North Carolina has been suspended from the Southern Inter-Collegiate Athletic Association on the charge that recently two professionals have played on its baseball team.

Clarence A. Mears of Rockland, Me., tried to take his life by drinking laudanum. He was discovered in time for physicians to save his life.

Beef Inquiry Begins

St. Louis, May 6.—Thirty-two witnesses have been summoned by Attorney General Crow to testify before the state supreme court, where an investigation of the alleged beef trust begins today. It is said that under the anti-trust laws of Missouri the beef companies can be prohibited from doing business in this state if they are found to be violating the statutes.

Demonstrators Shot Down

Athens, May 6.—Revolt is reported among the inhabitants of the Island of Thasos, in European Turkey, against the collection of vexatious taxes. The governor of the Island ordered the gendarmes to fire on the demonstrators, with the result that a great number of men, women and children were killed.

Minister Run Down by Car

New Orleans, May 6.—Rev. B. M. Palmer, D. D., a Presbyterian minister known throughout the country, was knocked down by a trolley car yesterday and perhaps fatally injured. His arm and leg were broken, his head was injured and he is thought also to be hurt internally. Dr. Palmer is 83 years old.

Starting and Staying.

At the start in a long race, the advantage often appears to be with an outsider. But the race is won not in starting but in staying. The quality which wins is staying power. It is so in the race of life. Staying power wins, and as a rule the best stayer is the man with the best stomach. All physical strength is derived from food which is properly digested and assimilated. When the food eaten is only partly digested and assimilated there is a loss of nutrition which means a loss of strength and the general result is physical break-down.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery gives strength and staying power, because it cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of the food eaten, and so strengthens the body naturally by the nutrition derived from food.

"I was troubled with indigestion for about two years," writes Wm. Bowker, Esq., of Juliaetta, Latah Co., Idaho. "I tried different doctors and remedies but to no avail, until I wrote to you and you told me what to do. I suffered with a pain in my stomach and left side and thought that it would kill me. Now I am glad to write this and let you know that I am all right. I can do my work now without pain and I don't have that tired feeling that I used to have. Five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' cured me."

Accept no substitute for Golden Medical Discovery. There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are easy and pleasant to take. A most effective laxative.

CUBA'S FOREIGN POLICY

Will Be For Particularly Close Relations With Spain

GRATEFUL TO AMERICANS

For Honorable Fulfillment of Promises—Palma Opposed to Commercial Treaty as at Present Outlined—Principal Points In Coming Message

Havana, May 7.—President-Elect Palma arrived yesterday at Cienfuegos on board the steamer Julia. Thousands of persons flocked to the wharf to welcome him there.

Senor Palma has employed his time while on the way from Santiago to Cienfuegos in outlining his first message to the Cuban congress. It is said that in this message he will signify his intention of making Cuba's foreign policy one of close relations with all nations, and especially with Spain. He will accentuate in this message the profound feeling of gratitude which Cuba owes the United States, and he will decalre the latter country has given the whole world an example of the political sincerity by honorably fulfilling the joint resolution of congress in making the Cuban people free.

In his message the president-elect will urge the union of all political factions in Cuba, and say he counts on the co-operation and good faith of the Spaniards in the island.

Senor Palma will declare himself as opposed to a commercial treaty between Cuba and the United States, until it is known that the reduction of the American duty on Cuban sugar is to be more than 25 percent. The president-elect will say he feels sure that this reduction will amount to 32 per cent of the present duty. Senor Palma will make no estimate for war expenses or for the maintenance of the Cuban navy.

The persident-elect will advise the Cuban government to distribute cattle among the poor farmers of the island, who will pay therefor in instalments. He will recommend the cultivation of coffee and fruit in Cuba and say that the island should not rely solely upon its tobacco and sugar crops.

He will also recommend sending representatives to Washington to study the details of the workings of the department of agriculture.

Senor Palma will say he considers the Isle of Pines to be useless to the United States on account of the shallow water there. He will not consent that any flag other than the Cuban be raised at Havana.

He will propose that the work of sanitation, begun by the Americans, be continued, and he will urge the need of hospitals.

There is to be no change in the coinage of Cuba at present, but Senor Palma will say he intends to raise a loan to pay the Cuban revolutionary army when Cuba has money to pay the interest on this loan.

Poet and Novelist Dead

London, May 7.—F. Bret Harte, the well known American novelist, poet and writer of Western tales, who had been for a long time a resident of England, first in an official capacity and more recently as a writer, is dead. The newspapers make very sympathetic comments on the death of Bret Harte. "His work," says the Pall Mall Gazette, "was the common property of Anglo-Saxons on both sides of the Atlantic." Mr. Harte was born in Albany, N. Y., in 1839.

The Pope Hears Bad News

The Pope was greatly depressed and said: "It has been one of the greatest bitternesses of my long life to see the strongest champion of the militant church claimed by death. Archbishop Corrigan was very affectionate to us. We esteemed and loved him greatly."

CHAFFEE'S REPORT

Of the Killing of Thirty-Five Moros Who Endeavored to Escape

Washington, May 7.—The war department last evening received the following cablegram from Gen. Chaffee:

"General George W. Davis reports Saturday, 1 p. m., May 3, prisoners that had been disarmed sitting on open hill top and surrounded by strong guard, at a concerted signal, sprang to their feet and rushed down the hill. Several endeavored to seize rifles from guard; one succeeded while soldier was drinking canteen. Direction of the flight such as to bring them to the rear of the company, so that firing upon the Moros would endanger our men. Guard and one company opened fire without orders, killing 35. Nine were recaptured and the others escaped. Regret this accident, as it was desired to release the prisoners, except a few of the leaders, and encourage the return of others to peaceful labors."

Arkansas' Facetious Governor

Little Rock, May 7.—Governor Jefferson Davis yesterday pardoned a negro named Thompson on condition that Thompson go to Massachusetts within the next 30 days with the intention of becoming a citizen of that state. Thompson was convicted of assault with intent to kill and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. The governor pardons Thompson because he has "heard many expressions of sympathy by the citizens of Massachusetts for what they were pleased to call the poor oppressed negro of the south, and desires that they shall have an opportunity to reform a certain portion of the negro population of our state."

American Talent Appreciated

Berlin, May 7.—Herr Bleichroeder, the Rosebery of the German turf, has discharged every German who has anything to do with his racing stables, and from trainer to stable boys he has replaced them with Americans. Herr Bleichroeder is convinced that Americans know how to get the best out of racing horses, and he intends to employ no other nationality in his stable.

Leroux Denies Dreyfus Yarn

New York, May 7.—Hugo Leroux, the French lecturer, in a despatch to the Associated Press, denies that while in Chicago a few days since he stated that Captain Dreyfus had confessed. He did not make any reference to Dreyfus in the lecture referred to, and that the interview, widely published throughout the country, was an invention.

Delarey's Men Hold Out

Pretoria, May 7.—The peace situation is developing encouragingly. Several of the nearer commandoes have received the burgher delegates in an amicable spirit. Commandant Beyers has announced his willingness to abide by the decision reached by the Transvaal government. Considerable opposition to the peace movement, however, is developing among General Delarey's force.

Spanish Cities Shaken Up

Madrid, May 7.—Earthquake shocks were felt yesterday in five cities. At Murcia the cathedral and the convent, as well as a number of houses, were damaged. The population became panic-stricken. At Alberique a number of houses were detroyed. The disturbance dislodged great masses of rock in the Fuen-Santa Mountains.

Cassels' Body Not Yet Claimed

Boston, May 7.—John D. Cassels, who was electrocuted at the state prison, left no will nor instructions with regard to the disposal of his body. If relatives do not claim it within two days it will be buried in the prison yard.

"I have been afflicted with sciatic rheumatism for fourteen years," says Josh Edgar, of Germantown, Cal. "I was able to be around but constantly suffered. ADMIRAL SAMPSON DEAD.

In Command of United States Fleet in Cuban Waters During the Spanish-American War.—An Authority on Torpedoes.

Washington, May 7.—Read Admiral William T. Sampson, retired, died at his home in this city at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The immediate cause of death was a severe cerebral hemorrhage. He had been in a semi-conscious state for several days and yesterday forenoon suffered a severe cerebral hemorrhage.

Mrs. Sampson has broken down under the severe strain, and but for the critical condition of the admiral, she would have been confined to her bed.

The Pall bearers have not yet been selected. Mrs. Sampson suffered a slight accident a few days ago while attending the wants of the Admiral and has been in bed since.

She probably will not be able to attend the funeral services.

REAR ADMIRAL SAMPSON.

It has been suggested to Mrs. Sampson that the naval cemetery at Annapolis would be a proper place for the last resting place of the Admiral, while other friends have represented to her that he should be buried in Arlington cemetery, near this city. Admiral Sampson resided in Annapolis eight years, during four years of which he was superintendent of the academy there. Mrs. Sampson prefers Annapolis, but the matter is not definitely decided.

William T. Sampson was born in Palmyra, N. Y., Feb. 8, 1840. His father was a farm laborer and could not afford to let his son devote much time to his school books. He kept hard at work with his books, however, and Principal Farmer of the Classical Union school took a great liking to the boy and helped him in his studies.

Mr. Farmer enlisted the interest of W. H. Southwick of Palmyra and Congressman Morgan in young Sampson, with the result that Mr. Morgan offered to appoint him to the Naval academy when there was a vacancy. When the examination was held, young Sampson's percentage was higher than that of any other applicant for the nomination.

William Sampson entered the Naval academy in 1857 and was graduated first in his class three years later. His first cruise was made in the frigate Potomac in 1861, and during that year he was promoted master. He was detailed to the ironclad Patapsco in 1864. The Patapsco was one of the vessels on the South Atlantic blockading squadron.

On Jan. 15, 1865, Lieutenant Sampson was executive officer of the Patapsco, and he was ordered by the admiral of the fleet to enter Charleston harbor and remove or destroy all submarine mines and torpedoes with which the city was protected from invasion. This was an exceedingly difficult and dangerous task.

As soon as the ironclad entered the harbor she was met with a rain of bullets from the sharpshooters on the forts. Several of the men on the Patapsco were struck, and Lieutenant Sampson, who was on the bridge, seeing his men falling all around him, ordered them below while he remained a target for the rebel rifles. The men had scarcely obeyed the order when there was a big explosion, and

Good Afternoon.

It is up to the Mayor and Chief of Police to stop the malicious mischief reported in different parts of the city —the breaking of windows, damage to unoccupied houses and property, disturbance of religious meetings, etc.

Word comes from London that J. Pierpont Morgan will receive $12,500,000 in stock of the new shipping combine in return for his services in organizing and financing it. It is reported that he also received from the United States Steel corporation, $100,000,000; Metropolitan Securities company, $30,000,000; American Bridge company, $15,000,000; ship combine, $12,500,000; Northern Securities company, $15,000,000. While the corporation attorneys say these sums are "by no means excessive" the common people who are unable by frugality to save a few thousand in a life time think differently, and it is these people who have to earn the money for the corporations. It is not surprising that labor is restless, and demanding a share of the earnings.

The necessity of a wide entrance into Washington street from Hancock street is generally admitted, and double tracks on Washington street will make it more imperative. The mound and the fountain congest travel at this point, and the gathering about the fountain on summer Sundays greatly disturbs religious services. While the title of land is in dispute the City Council should meet the officers of the church with some compromise measure. Neither the city or the church has much money to spend in establishing or defending land titles, especially if there is an easier way out of it. The suggestion of a few years ago is a good one,—the church to surrender all claims to land outside of the chains if the city will put a granite curb and sidewalk around the church where the chains now are. This would not only accomplish the street improvements which are demanded, but would bring about an improvement of the church grounds which would greatly benefit the appearance of City Square.

Drift of Opinion.

☞It is not specially hazardous to predict that after the president has affixed his signiture to the oleomargarine bill the principal thing that will happen will be another demonstration of the commercial axiom that "business is stronger than law."—Providence Journal.

☞ Complaint is made that citizens of Boston who go before aldermanic committees are not treated with ordinary courtesy. It is sadly true that too many officials have apparently forgotten how to act as gentlemen—If they ever knew.—New Bedford Standard.

☞Now that the price of roast beef sandwiches sold in the Capitol restaurants at Washington has been advanced five cents, the members of the House and Senate may take notice of what is being said about a beef trust. There is nothing like an object lesson.—Beverly Times.

☞Mr. Brooks Adams is reported to have said; "Now, if an author wants to publish a book, he no longer seeks a Boston publisher, but secures one in New York." The statement is unsupported by any evidence. There is considerable difference, so far as publishing is concerned, between the Boston of 1875, say, and the Boston of 1902, but some Boston publishers are today among the most successful in the field, and their good will is sought, not alone by Boston authors, but by authors all over the world. That time Mr. Adams shot into the air.—Boston Journal.

NEW PATROL WAGON.

Much Expected of It and the New Signal System.

The patrol wagon to be used in connection with the police signal system has been delivered to the department and is now at police headquarters on School street. It will not go into service, however, until May 15. The wagon was built by Henry E. Emerson and is a credit to him. The body is painted black and the wheels have rubber tires. On the sides are the words, Quincy Police Department.

The seats are so arranged that they can be dropped down and the wagon used as an ambulance. Officer Timothy J. Golden has been appointed driver of the team. Officer Barry will accompany it on its day trips and Officer Holloran on its night trips.

The Little Minister.

Quincy will have an opportunity to see Howard Thompson's great production of the Scotch Comedy "The Little Minister" next Friday evening.

The cast includes several Scotch artists of note. The foremost of these is Miss Alexia Durant a young actress of great talent. Miss Durant first played the part of Lady Babbie about a year ago at Her Majesty's theatre, Aberdeen, Scotland. Since her advent to America she has played throughout the West to crowded houses. Miss Durant would never have consented to play at Quincy Music hall, next Friday evening, had not her many Scotch friends in Boston and Quincy promised their support.

The play will be well staged. Special scenery having been built for Music hall. The great mob scene in the first act promises to be the greatest stage picture ever seen in New England.

The cast will be as follows: Gavin Dishart, Frank W. Thomas; Rob Dow, E. A. Leary; Wlaryworld, Frank McHurdy; Tammas Whamond, Frank Brunner; Capt. Holliwell, George L. Church; Sheriff Riach, Sidney Smith; Lord Rintoul, George Simpson; Nanny Webster, Miss Sarah Kingsley; Jean Baxter, Jennie Bruce, and Lady Babbie, Alexia Durant. The minor parts are equally well cast.

The prices are within reach of all and the tickets are on sale today at Music Hall pharmacy.

Old Rubber Social.

On Wednesday, May 14, the Epworth League of the Atlantic Methodist church are to hold an "old rubber social" in the vestry of the church. The League has been divided into two sections and a lively contest is in progress, each side endeavoring to collect the most rubbers, which will afterwards be sold. The leaders are H. O. Cassidy and Miss Mattie Dutton. In connection with the social there will be the reading of a poem, and the singing of a song, both written for the occasion, followed by a short entertainment and ice cream sale under the auspices of Miss Edith Greenerd. The admission will be free. The committee will be glad to receive donations of old rubbers of any kind on that evening or before.

No Loss of Time.

I have sold Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy for years, and would rather be out of coffee and sugar than it. I sold five bottles of it yesterday to threshers that could go no further, and they are at work again this morning.—H. R. PHELPS, Plymouth, Oklahoma. As will be seen by the above the threshers were able to keep on with their work without losing a single day's time. You should keep a bottle of this Remedy in your home. For sale by all druggists.

THE GAS WENT OUT.

Quincy Will Get No Reduction in Price.

The New Company Turned Down.

Also the Petition of Eugene F. DeNormandie.

The joint Committee on Rules of the Legislature gave a hearing Tuesday afternoon on suspending rules so as to admit the bill to authorize the incorporation of the Quincy Gas Co. Among those present were Mayor Bryant, Judge Everett C. Bumpus, City Clerk James F. Harlow, Commissioner Knowlton, Councilman Adams, City Solicitor Blackmur, Senator Sprague, Representative McKnight, Eugene F. De Normandie, Thomas J. Lamb, Herbert F. Doble, John W. McAnarney and others.

Several of those present spoke and urged that the rules be suspended.

After the hearing the Committee voted to report adversely on suspending the rules, and the bill will not come before the Legislature this year.

The Committee on Public Lighting of the Legislature also voted Tuesday to report leave to withdraw on the petition for a reduction in the price of gas charged in the city of Quincy by the Citizens Gas Company.

Gaskell—Lounder.

A very joyful event took place at high noon yesterday at the pretty residence of Mr. David Brown at 14 Farrington street, Wollaston, when Mr. George L. Gaskell, the ticket agent at the Wollaston station, and Miss Violet May Lounder of Vanceborough, were made one by Rev. Edward A. Chase, of the Wollaston Congregational church.

It was a very quiet affair, only a few intimate friends were present, but the pretty bride and the beautiful flowers made it an occasion not soon to be forgotten by those present. We wish the young couple much joy. May they long remember the sixth day of May and the golden knot so delightfully tied by Brother Chase.

That Pale Face
Tells you that you need iron and you can have it in the most approved and agreeable form by taking Pept-iron.

This new iron tonic ironizes the blood, and that means it gives the face, lips, cheeks, and ears a good, healthy color, and strengthens and tones the whole system.

It is a specific for paleness so common to delicate women and girls, for all anemic and dyspeptic conditions in either sex at any age, for nervousness, weak, unstrung nerves, poor circulation, cold hands and feet.

Needs Iron

It is pleasant to the taste, acceptable to the stomach, and does not injure the teeth nor cause constipation.

"I have now been taking Pept-iron six weeks," said a grateful lady the other day, "and am realizing great benefit, feel stronger, and know by what my friends say that I look better. I am glad my confidence in Hood's Sarsaparilla led me to take Pept-iron."

THE LEGISLATURE.

Gay Substitute Rejected and Luce Bill Engrossed in House.

The House again endorsed the principles of Luce election bill on Tuesday, by passing the amended bill to be engrossed, after rejecting the Richard L. Gay substitute championed by Schofield of Malden, and it now goes to the Senate. If it passes the Senate the different parties in Quincy will next fall make direct nominations of two candidates for Representatives, and for the City election will make direct nominations for Mayor, Councilmen at large and Councilmen from Ward, School Committee at large, and School Committee from wards.

The bill as passed provides:

First—That the nomination of candidates for all elective city offices, and for the office of Representative in the General Court from districts wholly within a city (like Quincy for example), in caucuses of political parties, shall be made by direct plurality vote.

Second—That where nomination papers for candidates are required by law, such papers shall, for nominations under this act, be signed by a number of voters equal in the aggregate to not less than five for each ward in the city or district.

Third—That returns of caucuses of political parties at which direct nominations are made for candidates for elective city offices and for the office of Representative in the General Court in districts comprising more than one ward, shall be made according to the provisions of section 124 of chapter 11 of the Revised Laws. In Boston the Election Commissioners and in other cities the Registrars of Voters shall canvass said returns and determine the results thereof. Recounts of ballots shall be made as provided in section 126 of said chapter. In the case of candidates for the office of Representative in the General Court in districts comprising more than one ward, the City Clerk shall file in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth the certificate of nomination required by law.

Mr. Drinkwater of Braintree moved to substitute for the adverse report of the Committee on Constitutional Amendments the resolve accompanying his petition that the question of holding a constitutional convention be submitted to the people. He said a constitutional convention had not been held in 50 years, and the Consititution should be put in shape to withstand another century of progress. The people will in time demand such a convention. The House however rejected the substitute and gave leave to withdraw.

PAPERS AND MUSIC

At Meeting of Monday Evening Club of Atlantic.

"Robert Louis Stevenson" was delightfully treated by Dr. William Gallagher of Thayer Academy in his thirty minute talk before the Atlantic Monday Evening club this week. The Doctor gave us glimpses, though necessarily hasty ones, of the Bohemian and the serious sides of his mixed character, his intense earnestness in the profession to which he was early wedded, his patient plodding, his excessive industry in preparing his works for publication, his domestic affections and the sad physical afflictions which never left him for one day during the last fourteen years of his life.

The Doctor read a number of the authors bright and pithy sayings, and also from his serious and devotional works, and succeeded in making us appreciate and sympathize, as never before, with this loving hero of the nineteenth century.

Miss Lillian Waterhouse read from Mr. Dooley several selections using the Dooley dialect in a manner to convulse the audience.

Mrs. Sanford Small announced a fine musical program which was received with much favor by the audience who recalled the several artists in their various numbers.

Mr. Parmeles sang "Bedouin Love Song" by Hawley; Miss West, "Song of Thanksgiving" by Allitsen, "A Message" by Frey and "Mighty Lak a Rose" by Nevin; Mr. Gilbert Daggett, formerly of the "Weber Quartette" sang "Thine" by Bohm and "The Rosary"; Mr. Skeer, "The Bird and the Rose," "Old Love Song," by Chandon, and "Little Red Fox" by Somerville.

Mr. Parker Daggett accompanied Mr. Gilbert Daggett, and Miss Maude I. Houghton of Boston was the accompanist for the other artists.

The committee for the evening were Mrs. Ida Waterhouse, Mrs. Sanford Small and Miss Emilie Gassett.

The next meeting will be May 19, when Mr. Frank E. Parlin, Superintendent of the Quincy public schools, is to speak on "Literature for Children."

☞After all the money that has been spent on ships of war in the few past years and after all the eulogies of secretaries who have "built up the navy," it is rather discouraging to read in the report of a congressional committee that few of the ships have any fighting value. If they haven't that, pray what value have they? And how do we know that the money asked for now will be any better spent?—New Bedford Standard.

Many people object to a scavenger's license being granted to Henry H. Faxon or to allow him to dispose of the sewage from his houses as has been his custom in the past, believing it to be a menace to health. The "ditches" are not considered healthy in their natural state, but are much worse mixed with sewage and dangerous to residents of Woodward avenue, Whitney road and Russell park.

A Nautical School.

The latest educational scheme is a sea-going academy, says a Philadelphia dispatch. The school will be conducted on "The Young America," a modern full rigged sailing ship with auxiliary steam power, built especially for the purpose, which is set forth as follows:

A curriculum that prepares for college or business; physical development and discipline incident to sea life under United States naval regulations; travel and observation in all the principal countries of the world; study of foreign commerce by direct contact with the commercial methods and needs of all purchasing nations.

The first cruise will begin in September, 1903, and the roster of the school is already partly filled.

Four years will be the full course, but pupils may be enrolled for one year or more. In the first year, from September to June, the ship will visit these ports: Edinburgh, Christiania, Copenhagen, Antwerp, London, Havre, Gibraltar, Marseilles, Nice, Naples, Tunis, Algiers, Tangiers, Maderia, Barbadoes, Trinidad, Grenada, St. Vincent, St. Lucia, Martinique, St. Kitts, Santa Cruz, Porto Rico, Kingston, Havana, Annapolis, New York, Newport.

IS STILL FAR AWAY

No Prospect of Early Adjournment of Congress.

ARGUMENT ON PHILIPPINES

Will Be Prolonged Because Republican Speeches Have Provoked Opposition to Make Attack—Cuban Sugar and Canal Tangles

Washington, May 7.—Prospects of an early adjournment of Congress which were so good six weeks ago, are now pretty slim. The Republicans will have to make some notable concessions in order to get away early, and it remains to be proved that they will do so. The Philippine debate shows no sign of abatement.

The prediction made so emphatically last Saturday that when the Republican leaders in the Senate really took up the Philippine question in earnest they would do so with such effectiveness that the Democrats would have nothing more to say, finds little support today. The Republican speeches already scheduled have served to provoke the opposition to make emphatic attack; the minority members of the Philippines committee have had a meeting at which it was decided to pursue the campaign vigorously and the longer the Republicans talk the more the opposition will have to say in reply.

Mr. Spooner is hard at work on his speech which will represent the resources of the War Department as worked up by an exceedingly clever lawyer. Mr. Foraker, who will follow, is expected to make the greatest "effort" of his life in eulogy of the flag. On the other side, Senator Hoar is preparing a speech to be delivered in about a week. This will probably be the greatest speech of his life, if the energy and enthusiasm which he is putting into it afford any test. His speech will go far to remove the partisan aspect into which the present inquiry has fallen.

The Cuban sugar tangle shows little signs of clearing as a result of the threatened extra session of Congress in case the present one adjourns without action. The House insurgents say that the President would never do such a thing, in the face of a presidential campaign, and in private conversation they profess to be unmoved by the prospect. They say they are willing to do something for Cuba, but that it must be by other means than a lowering of the protective duty. They suggest rebate devices o various kinds. No one doubts that the Senate will respond to the wishes of the Administration, but the trouble will come in breaking up the alliance in the House between the insurgent Republicans and the Democrats.

The President is also desirous that adjournment shall not come till a canal bill has passed. Sentiment is moving towards the Spooner amendment. It is said that Senators are finding on inquiry that there is no assurance that the Nicaraguan Canal could be built for the $189,000,000 which was the commission's estimate. This is believed to have been kept low to hold down the French bid, and in any event the element of uncertainty is large. The Senate as it gradually realizes this, feels more inclined to leave the choice of route to the President's discretion.

Hanna Pleads For Rathbone

Washington, May 7.—The case of Estes G. Rathbone, who was convicted in the Cuban courts of maladministration of his office in the island, was the subject of an extended conference at the White House last night. Senator Hanna made an earnest application to the president for a new trial for Rathbone. It is understood that up to this time no final determination has been reached.

Kidnapped Child Located

Washington, May 7.—Ambassador Choate cables that he succeeded in locating Margaret Taylor, the Cincinnati girl, who was kidnapped in 1898 by her aunt, in Bordinghera, Italy. The ambassador has supplied the Cincinnati detective, who is looking into the case, with a letter of introduction to Ambassador Meyer at Rome, to facilitate his quest.

As a Mark of Respect

Washington, May 7.—Secretary Moody has decided to send the armored cruiser Brooklyn to Havana to bring General Wood and his staff here on May 20 after the government is turned over the new Cuban republic. The ship is sent as a mark of respect towards the new nation.

Wall Street Flurry Over

New York, May 7.—Wall street has recovered very generally from its demoralization of Monday. There are no important developments in the affairs of the three stock exchange houses. Those suspensions followed the collapse in the securities controlled by W. Seward Webb and Arthur L. Meyer.

Boer Loss Was Heavy

Cape town, May 7.—The O'Kiep (Western Cape Colony) relief column has occupied Steinkopf (to the north of O'Kiep), which was strongly held by the Boers. The British lost six men killed and had eight wounded. The Boer losses are said to have been heavy. The Boers asked for British medical assistance.

UNFAIRNESS CHARGED

Beveridge Thinks Democratic Discussion of Philippines Is One-Sided

Washington, May 7.—For almost four hours yesterday a fiery discussion of the Philippine situation raged in the senate. It was started by Mr. Beveridge, who made some sharp strictures on the members of the opposition because, as he said, they persisted in telling in hteir speeches only one side of the story.

While he admitted that some outrages had been committed by American soldiers in the Philippines, Mr. Beveridge said it was true, too, that unparalleled kindness had been shown by the American troops to Filipino prisoners and Filipino wounded. Food and medicine had been shared with them, and they had been succored on the battlefield and cared for tenderly in the hospital. While saying that the omission to tell this side of the story by the Democrats was unintentional, he suggested that it was unfair to make an arraignment of the American soldier and not tell both sides.

Mr. Carmack and Mr. Rawlins warmly resented any imputation of unfairness. Mr. Rawlins declared that no partisan motives had actuated the opponents of the present Philippine policy, but that they were moved only by patriotism and love of country.

Mr. Turner delivered a scathing criticism of the methods practiced by the military authorities in the Philippines, dwelling particularly upon the alleged order of General Smith, whom he denounced as a monster in human form. He urged the Philippine committee to turn all the light possible on the Philippine question to the end that the people might be fully informed on the situation.

Opposition Not Serious

Washington, May 7.—The threatened opposition to the confirmation of Commissioner Evans's nomination as consul general to London is not likely to materialize. Senator Burton of Kansas, who has been expected to lead in it, is quoted as saying that he would express himself in the Senate as opposed to confirmation, but that he would not carry his hostility farther.

Queen's Condition Still Critical

The Hague, May 7.—Advices from Castle Loo early this morning declare that Queen Wilhelmina's condition again excites grave anxiety. Another consultation of the Queen's doctors was held at 11 o'clock last night. The result of this consultation is not known. Extreme secrecy is maintained as to the contents of the telegrams despatched from Loo palace. It is said the queen is so weak that she has been unable to take any nourishment since last Saturday.

Big Commission For Syndicate

New York, May 7.—Following the meeting yesterday of the Corporation, it was stated that the syndicate which is to underwrite the $250,000,000 of new 5 per cent. bonds will receive a stated commission of 4 per cent. upon the actual amount of bonds bought by the syndicate. In brief the syndicate pledges itself to take up 40 per cent., or $100,000,000 of the total issue.

FAT NERVES.

A whirl of excitement was recently caused in the scientific world by the news that the mystery of nerve action has been solved.

It is announced that healthy nerves are fat nerves—and that it is the fat in the core of the nerve which is sensitive and by hardening and softening creates nerve action.

Maybe this explains why Scott's Emulsion has always been such a remarkable remedy for nervousness.

Scott's Emulsion feeds thin nerves with the best of all fats, the pure cod-liver oil and streagthens them with the best of nerve tonics, the hypophosphites.

For all forms of nervousness and neuralgia take Scott's Emulsion.

CIVIC LEAGUE TO ACT

Won't Ask Aid of City Officials In Closing Saloons at Bath

Bath, Me., May 7.—The Civic League of this city has decided to inaugurate a determined fight against the liquor dealers and landlords through the injunction process, and it is announced that action will be brought against several of the leading saloons in a few days.

The league members held a conference with Mayor Hyde and his proposition was that the league suspend their efforts through an injunction, and he would undertake to regulate the violation of the liquor laws by establishing stringent rules, prosecution of those who made sales to minors and to men already intoxicated and to those whose families were in want, and limiting the business hours of the saloons.

The league decided they could not have any connection with such a plan and will carry on the work without the co-operation of the municipal authorities.

Lynn Meat Dealers Suffer

Lynn, Mass., May 7.—Between 1500 and 1700 employes of the General Electric company, representing at least 4000 consumers, have formed an anti-beef-eating league. The members have pledged themselves to to abstain from the consumption of Western packers' products for 30 days, with the expectation that by that time there will be a fall in the prevailing high prices. The movement is being taken up generally, and the promoters expect that nearly all of the 5000 employes of the General Electric company will join the league. Already the local dealers are beginning to suffer. They say that it will be necessary for them to shut up their meat departments if the members of the league stand by their pledge.

For Patriotic Instructions

Boston, May 7.—Hon. Charles S. Parker, special aid to the commander-in-chief of the Massachusetts department, G. A. R., has called a meeting of ex-senators and representatives, past department commanders, clergymen, school committeemen and others interested in the work of patriotic education and military instruction in schools, for Saturday, May 10, at 2.30 o'clock at the capitol. The meeting has to do with the preparation of a program to meet the requirements of the special law requiring patriotic services in the public schools at sessions just preceding Memorial day.

Poisoner Will Confess

Waterville, Me., May 7.—James F. McManus of this city has received a letter from Charles L. Beal, now serving a life sentence for the murder of his father 14 years ago. Beal writes that his confession will be seen in the papers in few days. McManus was one of the witnessess of the state. Beal asks McManus to assist him at the next pardon hearing. The elder Beal was poisoned by the administration of strychnine in whiskey.

Hunger May Bring Surrender

Warren, R. I., May 7.—Because the family resisted the efforts of the town's health officers to fumigate the building, against which there had been a quarantine since February by reason of smallpox cases, it has been decided to put the members of it on short rations. This family, named Dumas, numbers 15 persons, and since the quarantine was established, the town has provided food for all.

Nearly Fifty Buildings Destroyed

Danbury, Conn., May 7.—Betwen $500,000 and $600,000 is the latest estimate of the loss by the fire which destroyed the business section of New Milford. Nearly 50 buildings, including most of the stores in the place, two banks and three hotels were burned. The fire started in the stables of the New Milford House. The cause is unknown.

In Memory of Wolcott

oBston, May 7.—The Roger Wolcott memorial committee has made a contract with Sculptor French for a memorial to the late Governor Wolcott. Under the law passed recently the governor and council will assign a suitable place for the memorial at the state house, either in the grounds or within the building.

Railway Petition Dismissed

Boston, May 7.—The board of railroad commissioners yesterday dismissed the petition of the Concord and Boston street railway for permission to issue $50,000 in bonds, and ordered "all information bearing upon the criminal conduct of parties to be laid before the attorney general of the commonwealth."

Convicted of Murder

North Hero, Vt., May 7.—The jury in the Coangelo murder trial returned a verdict of not guilty last night. Antonio Coangelo was placed on trial on May 1 for the alleged murder of John Julian on Dec. 17, 1900. Julian's body was found on the railroad tracks at Alburg, with a bullet embedded in his skull.

the ironclad was hurled out of the water. She had been blown up by a mine. Then the vessel sank, and 70 of the crew went down with her. Lieutenant Sampson was blown about 100 feet, but he was rescued with about 25 of his men.

After this he was detailed to the Colorado, the flagship of the European station, and while on that vessel he was commissioned a lieutenant-commander.

Sampson was promoted to the rank of captain in 1889. When the fleet was sent down to Havana, Captain Sampson was placed in command, and raised his flag on the cruiser New York. At the outbreak of the war he was made acting rear admiral by President McKinley.

In the navy Sampson was regarded as an authority on torpedo work, and his lectures, delivered at the war college, produced a favorable impression all over the world. In conjunction with Lieutenant Strauss, he devised the double-deck, or superimposed turrets. While chief of the bureau of ordnance he assisted in the construction of the gun factory at Washington.

Following his service as president of the board of inquiry as to the cause of the destruction of the battleship Maine in Havana Harbor, Feb. 15, 1898, and his service during the Spanish War, Admiral Sampson was made commandant of the Charlestown Navy Yard in 1899.

He remained in charge there until failing health compelled him to relinquish his duties in the latter part of September, 1901.

Since then Admiral Sampson has spent most of his time in Washington, and his health has been failing rapidly. In February of this year he was retired from the navy, having reached the age of 62.

The Sampson-Schley controversy aroused by the publication of "Maclay's Naval History" and the "Gunner Morgan" incident are of too recent happening to call for extended recital.

Admiral Sampson was twice married and had two sons and four daughters.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops.—JESSIE PINKEY HALL, Springville, Ala. This Remedy is for sale by all druggists.

IGNORING PARTY LINES

People Taking More Interest In Municipal Politics

BUT A JUST RECOGNITION

Of the Importance and Position of Local Affairs Over State and National Issues—Wage-Earners as Well as Business Men "In Politics"

Boston, May 8.—All sections of the country were represented in the delegates who met here yesterday to participate in the proceedings of the eighth annual meeting of the National Municipal League and the tenth national conference for good city government. The sessions will continue until Friday evening. The opening session yesterday afternoon was held in the rooms of the Twentieth Century club, James C. Carter, president of the National Municipal League, presiding.

Samuel B. Capen, on behalf of the committee of arrangements, welcomed the delegates to Boston; Speaker Myers of the house of representatives, on behalf of the state, made a welcoming address, and Mayor Collins spoke in behalf of the city.

The secretary of the National Municipal League, Clinton R. Woodruff of Philadelphia, presented a paper on "A Year's Municipal Progress," in which he said that the concrete achievements of the past year have been more numerous and far-reaching than in any preceding one.

Said he: "The city has assumed a place in our political, social and industrial life, which can no longer be safely ignored. As an illustration of the growing appreciation of the municipal problem I need only cite the country-wide interest in the recent Greater New York mayoralty campaign. Nor has the interest in the situation abated. Keen eyes and interested ones are watching every move of Mayor Low and District Attorney Jerome and their colleagues. Their successes are rejoiced over, their missteps criticised and discussed.

"I think it can be said without the slightest exaggeration that the affairs of New York city are attracting as much attention as any other phase of political activity, city, state, or national. This is a just recognition of the importance and position of municipal affairs. This appreciation of and interest in the municipal affairs is not confined to New York. Those of Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland, San Francisco, St. Louis, not to mention many another which might be appropriately included, are written about and discussed in a way that clearly indicates that the people are awakening to their true value.

"At the same time that the business men are 'going into municipal politics,' the wage-earner is doing likewise. In many respects the most significant feature of the past year from a municipal standpoint has been the election of labor men to important municipal office.

"Whatever else these events may indicate, they show conclusively that municipal citizens are ignoring party lines to a hitherto unprecedented extent. Thus far the experiments have proved successful, but, putting this question aside, it is clear that the consideration of state and national party politics is having less and less influence in many sections of the country. The Greater New York election indicates the same thing.

"The overwhelming vote in favor of municipal ownership at Chicago's election of last month shows the drift of public sentiment. Chicago, it is true, may not be ready for such an experiment, but this vote indicates how heartily tired its people are of the scandals and corruption incident to the private ownership of municipal monopolies, and it may also mean that the people realize that it is doubtful whether they have the right to put it into the hands of a few to make enormous profits at the expense of the many, even if there were no corruption.

"The work of establishing the merit system in the cities proceeds with substantial if not rapid progress. As in other fields of municipal activity, New York forms the storm center."

At the evening meeting the chief address was by Charles J. Bonaparte of Baltimore on "The Movement of Honest Government." He spoke of the decline of the officeholder from high ideals to the position where he willingly tolerated bribery and stuffing ballot boxes. According to the idea of some people, politics was not a matter of concern for those interested in city affairs, but for those who hoped for money or office. Quoting from an interview of Richard Croker, Mr. Bonaparte declared that civil service reform is the key to the situation.

J. H. MacFarland was the last speaker. Illustrating what he said by stereopticon views, he related the history of the last campaign in Harrisburg, by which they had elected a good mayor and inaugurated a progressive administration.

THIEF'S HOT FLIGHT

Terminated by Running Into the Arms of a Policeman

Boston, May 8.—A daring robbery was committed in the jewelry store of W. L. Anderson in the Charlestown district yesterday afternoon, but the thief was captured after a women clerk followed him into the street, where she fired three shots from a revolver, for the double purpose of frightening the man and attracting a crowd. The man under arrest gave the name of George E. Lombard, aged 35, and told the police he recently arrived in Boston from his home in Maine.

The store was in charge of Mrs. Lillian Johnson, daughter of the proprietor. Lombard called at the store and asked to be shown some watches. He picked out the one he wanted, which was valued at $30, and then asked for a chain. As Mrs. Johnson reached into the window for a tray, Lombard ran out of the store with the watch in his hand. He started up Main street, and Mrs. Johnson, grabbing a loaded 32-calibre bulldog revolver, ran into the street. She was but a short distance behind Lombard. Mrs. Johnson did not dare to follow, and thereby go out of sight of the entrance of the store, so she fired three shots into the air. Lombard rushed into a house on Salem street, jumped out of the rear window and entered the rear door of a house on High street. He ran upstairs, and without stopping to explain to the frightened female occupants he left by the front door and fell into the hands of Patrolman Chase, who was looking for him, but was not aware he was so near at hand.

Fitchburg Carpenters Strike

Fitchburg, Mass., May 8.—As a result of demands made by the carpenters of this city, and being refused by the contractors, 60 men quit work yesterday, and considerable work has been tied up in consequence. The carpenters asked for a minimum wage of $2.50 for eight hours, and that such men as named by the union should be employed and discharged. The contractors refused to entertain the proposition regarding the hiring of men, but were satisfied otherwise.

Involves Quarter of a Million

Providence, May 8.—The sale of the plant of the Wardwell Sewing Machine company, in Woonsocket, was yesterday ordered by the appellate division in a decree entered by the bondholders against the company, involving over $250,000. The complainants assert that the bonds payable six years ago have not been met, and it is asked that the respondent company be ordered to pay principal and interest, or be barred from the redemption of the property.

Serious Elevator Accident

Haverhill Mass., May 8.—Peter Brooks, who has won considerable notoriety in boxing bouts, is employed in Chick Bros.' shoe factory. While on an errand to Owen's building yesterday he started the elevator to carry him to the third story. He stood in the doorway as the elevator shot upward and was caught between the automatic floor and a beam and was terribly crushed, but he may survive.

Brewery Strike Continues

Boston, May 8.—After a long conference between the joint committee of the Central Labor union and striking brewery workers' organizations, and the executive committee of the Boston Brewers' association last night, it was found impossible to arrive at an agreement by which the existing strike could be settled and the conference adjourned sine die.

Lack of Public Interest

Manchester, N. H., May 8.—The leaders of the Prohibition forces of New Hampshire and representatives of the advocates of a local option liquor law met in debate in this city yesterday and threshed out the whole subject of liquor legislation. The debate did not arouse much interest on the part of the public and the attendance at both sessions was small.

Britishers Want to Celebrate

Providence, May 8.—A request has been forwarded to all the mill agents in this state by Thomas Wheelan, secretary of the British organizations here, asking that their plants be closed on June 26, thereby affording opportunity for all who wish to celebrate in a fitting manner the coronation of the King of England.

SHOTGUN GOVERNMENT

Declared to Be Necessary In the South

"NIGGER'S FACE IN SAND"

Generally Followed by Subjecting His Body to the Same Treatment, According to Pitchfork Tillman—Declares Negroes Shall Not Rule

Washington, May 8.—Discussion of the Philippine bill in the senate took a sensational turn again yesterday. Mr. McComas, referring to the alleged cruelties of American soldiers in the Philippines—cruelties which he deeply deplored—told of some of the cruelties which had occurred on both sides during the Civil War. Neither side, he held, was to be held responsible for those regrettable occurrences, as neither side approved of them. In this connection, he suggested that senators from South Carolina and Mississippi, "where there is less popular liberty than in any others," were shouting loudest for constitutional liberty in the Philippines.

There remarks drew a sensational reply from Mr. Tillman, who declared that it was no longer possible to sneer away the responsibility for the infamies committed by the Americans in the Philippines. He said that if it had been known in the south that the reins of government were to be given to the negroes the Civil War would have been prolonged indefinitely. He insisted that, in order to maintain their self respect, the white people of the south had been obliged to subdue the negro by whatever means they could, using the shotgun as one of the means. He frankly described how the negroes had been defeated at the polls, admitting that the whites had gotten just such majorities as were necessary.

"When we get ready to put a nigger's face in the sand," he shouted, "we put his body there, too." He declared that the people of the south never would submit to negro domination, and he hoped Republican senators would turn from their "game of deviltry in the Philippines" and assist the south to rid itself of the threat of negro domination.

Mr. Burton vigorously arraigned Mr. Tillman for his utterances. He asserted that the senator who could defend slavery and government by the shotgun could not be expected to think well of senators who were trying to carry good government to the Filipinos. He was astonished that a senator in one breath should make an appeal for unsullied government in the Philippines and in the next should boast of crimes almost unparalleled in history.

Mr. Burton followed with a warm defense of the government's policy in the Philippines and became involved in a heated colloquy with Mr. Rawlins of Utah, because he had denounced some of Mr. Rawlins' statements as false. He paid a brilliant tribute to General Funston as one of the great heroes of the army.

The house yesterday began consideration of the bill to enable the people of Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico to form constitutions and state governments and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original states. Representative Knox (Mass.), chairman of committee on territories, and Mr. Rodey (N. M.) made extended speeches in support of the bill. Mr. McRae (Ark.), while favoring the admission of the three territories, gave notice of an amendment to consolidate Oklahoma and Indian Territory and admit them as a single state. The house adopted the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill.

Volcanic Disturbances

St. Thomas, D. W. I., May 8.—Cable communication southward from St. Lucia ceased suddenly yesterday afternoon. Fire and smoke from the eruption at St. Vincent are said to be visible from St. Lucia and distant detonations are audible in the Leeward Islands, in the French West Indies, and here. It is reported that the volcanic craters on Dominica are showing signs of activity.

Biliousness is a condition characterized by a disturbance of the digestive organs. The stomach is debilitated, the liver torpid, the bowels constipated. There is a loathing of food, pains in the bowels, dizziness, coated tongue and vomiting, first of the undigested or partly digested food and then of bile. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets allay the disturbances of the stomach and create a healthy appetite. They also tone up the liver to a healthy action and regulate the bowels. Try them and you are certain to be much pleased with the result. For sale by all druggists.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Wall street has had a little flurry. It did not affect any very big stocks and its sweep did not extend very far, so that there are few disastrous results from it. It has been enough however, to set men to thinking and to questioning how long it will be before some other paper house tumbles down, and as to how many houses there are that are not relying to some extent on paper support.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ Miss Holman says she jilted Marconi because he was so absorbed in his work that he could take no interest in anything else in life. If the reason is the true one it's good. The fellow who is entirely wrapped up in his business at all times and places is not a good family man, and as a Romeo he is distinctly out of place. At the same time Marconi is likely to become one of the great names in science and one of the men of power and fortune in the world. The man who arrives at either of these distinctions usually has to be a man absorbed in his business to a degree that makes him absent-minded on all other subjects. The woman, then, has the choice of somebody to love or somebody to admire and get abundant money from. Which is the better game?—Brockton Enterprise.

☞ One Jefferson Davis, who happens to be at the present time Governor of Arkansas, has forced himself into brief notoriety by a gratuitous insult to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. He has granted a pardon to a negro criminal, serving a sentence in the Arkansas Penitentiary for an assault with intent to kill, on condition that he become within the next 30 days a citizen of Massachusetts. It does not appear that the criminal in question was ever a resident of this State, but Governor Davis gives as his reason—"having just returned from the North and having heard many expressions of sympathy by the citizens of Massachusetts for what they were pleased to call the poor oppressed negro of the South, and desiring that they shall have an opportunity to reform a certain portion of the negro population of our State." The people of the North have no special sympathy for violators of the law, black or white, and if there is any law by which this criminal can be returned to Jefferson Davis it should be invoked. He must have had an uncomfortable time of it, during his visit to the North.—Lynn Item.

☞ It is a good thing not to go into hysterics over the revelations of cruelty in the treatment of Filipinos. For clearly proven cases there should be emphatic, but dignified, denunciation. This country cannot aford to have the world see that it sanctions inhumanity in any place where it is responsible for humanity. But for the many vague and uncertain romances which returned soldiers are now for the first time coming forward to relate there must be a suspension of judgment until their testimony can be sifted to the bottom—and the narrators are either disclosed as liars or are proven to have told the truth. And the mistake of judging the whole army by any one bit of testimony must be sturdily avoided. Men are different in the army as they are different everywhere, and no judgment which lumps the whole as very good or very bad is either safe or reasonable.—New Bedford Standard.

BOARD OF TRADE.

The Place Master Builders Association Strives to Fill.

First Annual Banquet at the Greenleaf.

Theophilus King, Mayor Bryant and Others Speak.

The first annual banquet of the Master Builders and Traders Association of Quincy exceeded expectations, and should do much to more firmly establish the association which strives to take the place of a board of trade.

The list of guests below shows that different parts of the city were well represented, and also many lines of business.

From 7.30 to 8.30 there was a reception in the parlors of Hotel Greenleaf, during which time the Lord family of this city furnished music on banjo, guitar and mandolins, some numbers calling forth encores.

The banquet was served by Landlord Estabrook in the regular dining room, with the addition of the main entrance corridor, which was necessary to accommodate the large attendance.

The menu:

Mock Bisque.
Roast Young Turkey, Cranberry Sauce.
Green Peas, Mashed Potatoes.
Lobster Cutlets. Shrimp Salad.
Olives. Radishes. Cucumbers.
Parker House Rolls.
Banana Fritters, Wine Sauce.
Orange Sherbet. Frozen Pudding.
Nut Cake. Macaroons. Fruit Cake.
Bananas. Apples.
Toasted Crackers and Cheese. Coffee.

President J. W. Pratt opened the past prandial exercises saying the objects of the banquet were sociability, and to show that the association is alive.

Ex-Mayor John O. Hall was introduced as master of ceremonies. He said it was not simply an association of builders and contractors but really a board of trade which welcomed all business men of the city. Its objects were the general welfare of the city, and it proposed to become a factor.

Theophilus King said the association should be of value to members as individuals and to the city. It remained for members to say what the association shall be. He took "Building" for his text, saying none can shirk it; all must build; must make a record: work overtime if necessary. What you are seeking honestly and truly will benefit Quincy. He spoke at length on the value of a pay roll, taking an establishment employing 100 as an example. He showed how many would be benefited directly and indirectly. The American citizens were more of a power than people of other countries because they live better. We are a building nation, a building people. We must build ourselves, build our city and unite in building our country.

Mayor Bryant continued the subject of building. He said the city is bound to be more successful than ever; that everything was prospering. A government building was sure to come. The Fore River plant will cause our city to increase rapidly in population. All business of the city will feel the increase. Force and energy were necessary for success. The boy who waits for the whistle to blow is not the most successful in business. Don't be afraid to put in extra time. It will lead to advancement.

Postmaster Hammond thought the postal service of Quincy was in advance of the city in mails, hours, etc. The $12,000 toward a government building was a starter, but too small to secure a desirable location. He hoped to see the bill for $100,000 for land and building pass next December. He should welcome suggestions from the business men for the improvement of the mail service.

Ex-Mayor Hall urged those present and the business men of the city to join the association, and thereby assist in the onward movement. The association wants 150 or 200 new members.

Henry H. Faxon, the last speaker, was surprised to hear of the opposition to his having a scavenger's license. He was glad the Mayor was stirring up the Police department, but regretted the rapidly increasing expenses of the department. He reiterated his oft-told statement that it was a mistake to change from the town to a city form of government. He predicted that corruption in cities would lead to an overthrow of that form of government within 30 years.

The banquet was over about 11 o'clock.

At the tables were:

President J. W. Pratt, Mayor Bryant, Theophilus King, ex-Mayor John O. Hall, Senator Eugene H. Sprague, Postmaster Charles L. Hammond, Representative Frank E. Badger, Representative John McKnight, Chief of Police J. W. Hayden, Assessor Charles H. Johnson, Tax Collector E. G. Cleaves, Napoleon B. Furnald, William Westland, George H. Field, A. W. Stetson, F. MEETING OF NATIONS

At the May Festival at the Quincy Point Church.

The annual May festival at the Washington Street Congregational church, Quincy Point, was opened Wednesday evening. The entertainment consisted of a musical cantata entitled "A meeting of Nations."

The American entertainers were Ruth Newcomb, Estelle Tirrell, Mary Gay, Emma Hayden.

Delegates from various countries were as follows:

England,—Lillian Martin and Maud Joyce.

Scotland,—Isabelle Mitchell and Robert Mitchell.

Ireland,—Maisie Oliver and Harry Oliver.

France,—Clara Bushnell and Henry Cook.

Germany,—Beatrice Lowe and Lester Squire.

Italy,—Florence Bryant and Irving Hayden.

Spain,—Eleanor Crane and Edith Stone.

Holland,—Edith Middleton and Russell Oliver.

Switzerland,—Helen Lincoln and Willis Middleton.

Sweden, Esther Sidelinger and David Melville.

Norway,—Ethel Hersey and Loretta Lowe.

Russia,—Irene Bryant, Mabel Skinner Harold Hayden, Joseph Lincoln.

China,—Russell Newcomb.

Japan,—Viola Hayden.

A large and appreciative audience greeted the delegates with enthusiasm. The young people were highly complimented on the realistic presentation of the different countries and their excellent singing. China and Japan were heartily encored, being very picturesque.

The tables were prettily decorated and laden with useful and fancy articles, flowers, candy etc.

A salad supper and an entertainment entitled "The Little Women" will be the attraction this evening.

Peculiar Views.

Editors of the Ledger:

In the letter of "Common Sense" in Tuesday's issue of your contemporary on the enforcement of the liquor law, appear a great many peculiar views, but the most peculiar, to my mind, is the one the writer expresses when he says that as much injustice can be wrought by enforcing law as by letting it rest. This is the feeling that has made such organizations as Tammany Hall possible, and it is responsible for the half-hearted way in which a good many laws are put in force.

We should assume that it is just to enforce every law to the limit until there is so much evidence to the contrary that the legislature repeals or modifies it. The less that is left to the discretion of the police, no matter how discreet they may be, the more uniform will be the results.

The observations of "Common Sense" on overalls and interpreters are entirely too subtle and are based on wrong assumptions. The fact that the man who needs an interpreter is the man most often prosecuted, is due, not to the fact that he is a foreigner, but because he is the most often an offender. Citizen.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Senator Sprague Secures Reconsideration of Street Railway Bill.

In the Senate Wednesday, on motion of Senator Sprague of Norfolk, the bill to incorporate the Deerfield, Whatley & Hatfield street railway was recalled from the Governor. Senator Sprague was appointed a messenger to secure the bill. Senator Sprague moved, when he got back, to reconsider the vote enacting the bill to incorporate the company. The motion prevailed, and the bill was laid on the table.

The bill to regulate the revocation street railway companies was passed to be engrossed.

The bill providing for the lease of Old Colony street railway lines in Boston to the Boston Elevated Company was held up in the Senate by Senator Fales who seeks to include Dedham within the five cent district.

The Committee on Ways and Means reported ought to pass on the "Governor's bill" relative to approval of street railway locations. The House passed the following bills to be engrossed: To regulate the assumption of risks by employes; to provide that wages of employes shall be paid in lawful money of the United States, and to prohibit the employment of women and minors in factories and mercantile establishments outside the hours specified in the printed notices posted in such factories; to authorize boards of health to regulate public bakeries.

For the Ledger.

Little Church Green.

The approach to Washington street from the north, or Hancock street, certainly demands now, the giving up the little green near the fountain.

If one draws an imaginary line from the fountain as approached from Hancock street, this line takes the green nearly all, and gives a fine wide approach to Washington street.

At the other angle towards the side, a line drawn, leaves the steps or middle part of the fountain secure for people on foot leaving out the little drive way now used.

For symmetry and to give children and people on foot the comfort possible, this carries out somewhat the idea that the committee to locate the fountain had in mind when they placed it in its present position.

This committee was composed of Hon. Charles Francis Adams, Rev. D. M. Wilson, Dr. J. A. Gordon and the Secretary of the Village Improvement society.

Ex-Mayor Fairbanks has the plans that they hoped then to carry out, drawn by Mr. Herbert Whitman. These included a sidewalk leading front of the church to the fountain, but leaving out the short cut across the way, now used. Were this given up, a few seconds or a minute more would allow people to drive around the fountain on the north border, and it seems as if all would be benefitted.

Mr. Adams had the advice of Frederick L. Omstead, our great landscape engineer and gardener, and there is no more commanding situation for the fountain than where it now sits, but all about it at present, even the pretty green, is out of place. The drive way would not be missed when all is well laid out, and all would be improved by the old idea of the Fountain Committee, modified to suit present needs.

Leaving out the question of ownership, or of money, or of damages, let us do the best for all concerned here.

Annie E. Faxon,
Secretary Q. V. I. S.

SCORE FOUR TO ONE

Adams Academy Defeats Milton Academy.

Adams Academy nine played its annual game with Milton Academy at Milton Wednesday afternoon. The match was the most exciting one that the Adams nine has played this year and the work of the team was most satisfactory, great improvement in team work being evident.

Reardon caught, and in spite of his lame ankle had ten put-outs and no errors to his credit. The game was really a pitchers' battle, and both Doble and Hodges pitched splendid games, but the support given Doble was much better than that given the Milton pitcher.

Moyle played the best all-round game. His two and three base hits sent in two of the four runs credited to his side, and his fielding record, as the score shows, was extremely good. Galvin, who is one of the new players on the nine, distinguished himself by a good catch in right field, and Thomas played his position without an error.

For Milton,—Pierce, Field and Ware played the best fielding game, and Pierce did the best batting.

As the Milton Academy nine has beaten St. Mark's school and Thayer academy, the victory for the Adams boys in a well-played game, with three of the four runs earned, is very gratifying.

Bishop Potter Overworked

New York, May 8.—Bishop Henry C. Potter of the Episcopal diocese of New York late yesterday afternoon attended an entertainment given by the boys of the choir school of the cathedral of St. John the Divine. When the time came for the bishop to begin his address it was found that he had gone to sleep in his chair. When he was roused he recovered himself immediately. The bishop had been speaking only a few minutes when he fainted, but recovered consciousness in a short time. He was later sent to his home. Dr. Silver states that the divine is very much better and that he is suffering from overwork.

ADAMS DROPPED.

Not One of the Fortunate Ones to be Appointed Aid.

Gov. Crane at a meeting of the executive council on Wednesday, appointed Joseph E. Shaw of Lynn, formerly deputy fire marshal, as deputy chief of the district police, in charge of the new fire marshal's department of the force; C. Frank Rice of Somerville, chief aid of the same department, and the following aids, all formerly aids to Fire Marshal Whitcomb: James Anderson, Springfield; Maurice F. Casey, Haverhill; James B. Dunn, Boston; Frank. R. Morrison of East Boston; Robert E. Molt, Millbury; John H. Scott, Milford.

The men dropped are: Warren W. Adams of Quincy, Henry A. Collamore of New Bedford, Abraham Guggenheimer of Boston, Silas P. Smith of Boston, George W. Williams of Boston, and George F. Crittendon of Northampton.

Mr. Adams had a strong endorsement but for some reason was early picked as one to be dropped.

Church Playground.

Largely through the efforts of Rev. E. A. Chase, pastor of the Wollaston Congregational church, and his interest in children, the grounds and vacant lots about his church have been fitted up for playgrounds, and Saturday will be the opening day. There will be a tennis court, and also grounds for basket ball, volley ball, croquet, etc. For the younger children there will be a sand garden. Rev. Mr. Chase will give the grounds his personal supervision, and the success of his plans will be watched with interest.

The high tension to which the nervous system is constantly subjected, has a depressing effect, and soon headache, backache, neuralgia, rheumatism, sciatica, etc., develop in severe form. Such was the case of Mail Carrier S. F. Sweinhart, of Huntsville, Ala., he says:

"An attack of pneumonia left me with muscular rheumatism, headache, and pains that seemed to be all over me. I was scarcely able to move for about a month when I decided to give

NOT GUILTY.

J. Frank Kemp Discharged by Justice Avery.

A greater part of attention of the District court was occupied this morning in hearing the alleged assault case against J. Frank Kemp, a South Quincy machinist. The complainant was H. W. Adrian, who went to Kemp's shop for a piece of work done for him, and claims he was locked in and not allowed to depart.

Mr. Kemp testified that he gave orders that the work should not be delivered until paid for, and that Adrian was prevented from removing it, but that he, personally, was not a prisoner. Employes of Mr. Kemp corroborated his evidence and Judge Avery rendered his decision promptly.

W. G. A. Pattee appeared for Kemp, and J. J. McAnarney for Adrian.

PLAN IS IMPRACTICABLE

Experts Decide Against Post Check Currency

CONFUSION IN BOOKKEEPING

As Well as Harsh Usage of Silver Certificates Are the Principal Objections—Canadian Engraved Note Is Looked Upon With Favor

Washington, May 8.—The joint board of experts appointed by the postmaster general and secretary of the treasury to consider the post-check currency scheme for the transmission of small sums of money safely through the mail, which was expected to be of especial value in rural communities remote from a money order postoffice, has reached the decision that it is impracticable on several accounts. Chief among these is the fact that the adoption of the scheme would involve the two departments in a confusion of double bookkeeping, as the notes would have to be presented and cashed at the postoffices and afterward sent to the treasury for redemption. Moreover the treasury has the utmost difficulty now in its struggle to keep up with the demands of retail trade for new one-dollar silver certificates, though millions of these are still kept in circulation in remote parts of the country long after they have become filthy and tattered, and wholly unfit for adaptation to the post-check plan. What would happen if an additional supply were made necessary by an increased volume of redemptions it is hard to say.

The board will recommend, in place of the post-check scheme, the adoption of a slightly modified form of the Canadian money order system, which furnishes engraved notes for different small sums, beginning at 15 cents and running up as high as $2.50. The board will propose that the United States fractional notes run no higher than $2. It is proposed that for each note, whatever its size up to $1, 1 cent be charged, so that for 2 or 3 cents at the outside almost any sum can be procured by combination, up to the point where the money order proper would come into play. One-half the fee would go to the carrier who sells the notes, and the other half to the government.

In the postoffice appropriation bill, which has just become a law, there occurs a paragraph directing the postmaster general to investigate and report to congress, as soon as possible, "the advisability and practicability of purchasing and adopting a uniform metal lockbox, at a price not to exceed 50 cents, for the purpose of selling the same to patrons on rural free delivery routes at cost." Taking this paragraph in connection with the recommendation of the board recently appointed to go over the whole rural delivery box question that a uniform size and quality of box be decided upon and the privilege of making this be thrown open to competition by all manufacturers on an equal footing, the postmaster general has put out an advertisement for proposals for supplying durable, safe and weatherproof metal boxes, 18x6 inches in size, at a cost not exceeding 50 cents, including paint and lock. It is doubted at the department whether there will be many responses, the price being so low; but the fruits of the advertisement are expected to furnish the postmaster general with much of the material he needs for the report to congress which he is directed to make.

Civilians Tormented Sailors

Vienna, May 8.—The facts of the reported arrest at Trieste of four sailors from the United States cruiser Chicago for alleged disorderly conduct in a cafe are as follows: Last Sunday evening four sailors from the Chicago were baited by a crowd of civilians while ashore at Trieste. The police interfered and arrested one of the civilians. The conduct of the American sailors ashore was above reproach.

Going Abroad For Pleasure

New York, May 8.—Mrs. Cushman K. Davis, widow of the late United States senator from Minnesota, emphatically denies that she is en route to Europe to wed Don Abazuza, formerly Spanish secretary for the colonies. The evening paper which prints the denial quotes Mrs. Davis as saying that she is going to Europe on a pleasure trip.

Palma's Cuban Tour

PRESIDENT WILL SIGN IT

Stringent Oleomargarine Bill Will Soon Become a Law

Washington, May 8.—All doubt of the president's intentions with respect to the signing of the oleomargarine bill was removed yesterday, when it was announced that he would give it his approval.

The oleomargarine bill imposes a tax of 10 cents a pound upon oleomargarine colored with the same coloring materials that the butter makers use, and also imposes a tax of 10 cents a pound upon genuine butter which has been reworked and renovated to remove any rancidity which may exist and produce a uniformity of grade, color and taste. This has been done extensively by country storekeepers and others who buy in small quantities from small dairymen, and after improving the quality and its merchantable price through such treatment, reselling it at a somewhat lower price than creamery butter. It further requires all such butter to be branded: "Adulterated Butter," "Process Butter," or "Renovated Butter." It further imposes a heavy license tax upon manufacturers and wholesale and retail dealers in this article.

Miraculous Escape From Death

Crystal Falls, Mich., May 8.—Three miners employed at the Armenia iron mine dropped a distance of 250 feet and live to tell of their experience. They had boarded a cage preparatory to descending in it when the brake on the cage became loosened and with its human freight it dropped to the bottom with great velocity. Other men hurried down expecting to find mangled corpses, but beyond a broken leg sustained by one of the miners, bad cuts by another and a severe shaking by all, the occupants of the cage were none the worse for the thrilling descent.

Gotham's Stock Failures

New York, May 8.—There are no developments respecting the three stock exchange firms which suspended on Monday after the severe break in the securities of the so-called Webb-Meyer syndicate. It is said that the resumption of business by these firms is contingent almost entirely upon the attitude of Mr. Webb, who was reported to have had a protracted conference with Arthur L. Meyer yesterday, with what result, if any, could not be learned.

Proceedings Kept Secret

Scranton, Pa., May 8.—The executive boards of the United Mine Workers of America for the three districts comprising the anthracite coal region met here yesterday to consider the report of the special committee which had been in conference with the presidents of the coal carrying railroads and to decide whether the men are to remain at work or go on strike. Nothing was done of which any definite knowledge would be given the public.

Boy Charged With Murder

Atlanta, May 8.—As the result of the death of 6-year-old Colin McDougall, Victor Nutall, aged 11, was arrested yesterday, charged with murder. It is alleged that Nutall, with two companions, forced the McDougall child to go with them into a street sewer and while there Nutall is reported to have compelled him to remain under the filthy slime until he had swallowed sufficient sewer gas to have caused his death.

Prince of Short Story Writers

London, May 8.—Bret Harte will be buried next Thursday at Frimley in Surrey. Deep sorrow at his loss and admiration for his work are expressed in obituary notices. Regarding Bret Harte's place in the literary world he is variously compared to Dickens, Stevenson and Kipling, and by the London papers he is accepted with all his limitations as the prince of short story writers.

Powerful Engine of Destruction

Berlin, May 8.—Professor K. Birkeland, the Norwegian physicist, has been in Berlin recently for the purpose of demonstrating the powers of his electromagnetic cannon before a number of experts in electrical artillery. Theoretically, Professor Birkeland's device can throw a projectile weighing two tons a distance of 90 miles, or even further, by sufficiently prolonging the tube.

Diamond Fined and Fired

Albany, May 8.—The judgment of conviction of Thomas J. Diamond, former police captain of New York city, for violating his duty as a public officer in permitting a disorderly house to remain open, was yesterday affirmed by the supreme court. Diamond was fined $1000, which he paid, and as a result of the conviction was dismissed from the police force.

Bridge and Cars Burned

Des Moines, May 8.—The breaking down of a tank car filled with oil caused a costly wreck at Talmage last night. The conductor was killed. The tank car fell from the bridge over the Grand river, dragging with it three cars. The oil was ignited and the bridge and the cars were burned.

Airship Worked Well

Paris, May 8.—Augusto Severo, the Brazilian aeronaut, has repeated the experiment he made last Sunday with his airship La Paix. The motors and steering gear of La Paix apparently worked satisfactorily at yesterday's test.

NEAR JAPAN'S COAST

American Takes Possession of Island In Name of United States

Honolulu, April 30.—A brand new island has been acquired by the United States. It came neither by conquest or annexation, but by the right of discovery, was the title secured, in this, the 20th century, when man believes he knows the whole world. Three Honolulu men hold the title to the island, and expect to become millionaires as a result of their new possession. The island was "discovered" by Captain Andrew Rosehill June 29, 1889, and he formally took possession in the name of the United States, hoisting the Stars and Stripes on a cocoanut tree.

Valuable deposits of guano were found upon the island, and with the expectation of working the deposits, Rosehill wished to obtain legal title to the property. He made application to the state department immediately upon his reutrn to Honolulu in the same year, but the negotiations dragged on, and it was only during the last month that he received notification from Washington that upon giving bond in the amount of $50,000 he would be allowed to take formal possession. The United States still exercises sovereignty over the island, and reserves the right of eminent domain, to build a naval station, establish coaling stations or do what it pleases.

This latest acquisiton of territory on the part of the United States is called Marcus Island. It is situated about 800 miles southeast of Yokohoma, the same distance north northeast of Guam, and about 2800 miles west of Honolulu. There is but one possible obstacle to the deal, the probable interference of Japan, for the island is so close to her coast as to make it a very good base of operations in case of war by the United States. It is said that a Japanese colony has been established upon the island and since it was learned that the United States was making an effort to secure possession, and Captain Rosehill's claim may be resisted.

New Dominican Government

Washington, May 8.—Cable advices state that Jiminez, president of Santo Domingo, has signed a relinquishment of his claims to the presidency, and an his part Horatio Vasquez, the late vice president, has granted amnesty to the adherents of the late government and assumed the presidential office.

THE TRYING TIME

In a young girl's life is reached when Nature leads her uncertain steps across the line which divides girlhood from womanhood. Ignorance and neglect at this critical period are largely responsible for much of the after misery of womanhood. Not only does Nature often need help in the establishment of the womanly function, but there is almost always need of some safe, strengthening tonic, to overcome the languor, nervousness and weakness, commonly experienced at this time.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription establishes regularity. It is a strengthening tonic, soothing the nerves, encouraging the appetite and inducing restful sleep. It contains no alcohol neither opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

"I wish to tell you the benefit we have received from using your remedies," writes Mrs. Dan Hall, of Brodhead, Green Co., Wis. "Two years ago my daughter's health began to fail. Everything that could be thought of was done to help her but it was of no use. When she began to complain she was quite stout; weighed 170, the picture of good health, until about the age of fourteen, then in six months she was so run down her weight was but 120. She kept failing and I gave up, thinking there was no use, she must die. Friends all said, 'You will lose your daughter.' I said I fear I shall. I must say, doctor, that only for your 'Favorite Prescription' my daughter would have been in her grave to-day. When she had taken one-half bottle the natural function was established and we bought another one, making only two bottles in all, and she completely recovered. Since then she is as well as can be."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

NOVELIST FORD KILLED

Shot Down by Brother, Who Then Takes His Own Life

ENMITY BETWEEN THEM

Due to the Disinheritance of the Murderer by Their Father, Who Left an Estate Valued at $5,000,000, Because He Objected to Athletics

New York, May 9.—Paul Leicester Ford, the novelist, was shot and killed yesterday by his brother, Malcolm Webster Ford, writer and athlete, who immediately sent a bullet into his own breast, dying instantly. The shooting occurred in the handsome new mansion which Paul Ford had recently built.

At the time of the shooting there were in the house besides the two brothers, Mrs. Paul Ford, Miss Elizabeth R. Hall, the novelist's secretary, and the servants. The novelist was sitting at his desk in his library. Miss Hall was at her desk about 30 feet from Mr. Ford.

Malcolm Ford called, and went to his brother at his desk. Words were exchanged in a tone so low that Miss Hall could not hear what was said. Suddenly there was a revolver shot and Miss Hall darted from the room. Then, according to the statements of the police, Miss Hall said to herself that she must act more bravely and re-enter the library.

Meanwhile Malcolm Ford had called her. As she turned toward him he placed his revolver to his heart, fired and fell, dying instantly. When Miss Hall turned to look at Paul he still was standing at his desk, but rapidly losing strength. She helped him to a sofa and then ran next door for Dr. Baruch. In less than five minutes Dr. Baruch arrived, but about 20 minutes after he was shot Mr. Ford died.

Ford's body was made, immediately after the shooting, could not be ascertained, but it appears from the statement of certain persons acquainted with the details of the tragedy that the body lay where it fell, on a rug in the library, for some time, possibly several hours, so great was the excitement in the house. In fact the murder and suicide were not known to the coroner until about 2:30 p. m., and not to the police until 4:25 p. m. Dr. Baruch said that the time between 10:20 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. passed so rapidly that no one in the house realized it.

Information from reliable sources makes it appear that Malcolm Ford called to get money from his brother, and meeting with a refusal shot him. Dr. Baruch said that the murder was a result of temporary mental aberration on the part of Malcolm Ford, due to nervous exhaustion.

It is said that there was enmity between the two brothers, and consequent bitterness, and that it was of 11 years' standing; that never since the death of their father have they been on intimate or brotherly terms. This alleged enmity on the part of Malcolm is said to have been brought about by the fact that the father of the boys disinherited Malcolm and that this action on the father's part was because he did not wish Malcolm to devote himself to an athletic career.

Paul L. Ford was 37 years old, a novelist of much note. He was married about a year ago to Miss Grace Kidder. He was the son of Gordon L. Ford of Brooklyn, who died 11 years ago, and left an estate of some $2,000,000 divided between his children, with the exception of Malcolm W., who was disinherited by the will. Mr. Ford is the author of "The Hon. Peter Stirling," "The Great K. & A. Train Robbery," "The True George Washington," "The Many Sided Franklin," "Tattle Tales of Cupid," "Janice Meredith," and a collection of short stories. He also edited the writings of Thomas Jefferson, the writings of John Dickinson and numerous other works relating to American history and bibliography. He was a member of the Players, Reform and Grolier clubs, the Century association, and Sons of the Revolution.

Malcolm W. Ford was born in Brooklyn, Feb. 7, 1862. He was educated at the Brooklyn Polytechnic institute. He took up athletics while at school and for a number of years won championships in this country and Canada. He was the all-around amateur champion for half a dozen years. He was so passionately fond of athletics that he is said to have neglected everything else to devote the time to running and jumping. He married a daughter of Robert Graves, a wall paper manufacturer, but they were divorced. He was a member of the Lawyers' club.

MAIL IS STOPPED

Postoffice Department Acts on Letters Sent to Supposed Clergymen

Boston, May 9.—The postoffice department at Washington has issued a stop order for all mail addressed to Rev. J. J. Green, box 11, South Billerica, Mass., as well as that addressed to Rev. Henry Desmazes, also of South Billerica. According to the postoffice authorities at South Billerica the mail addressed to both of these men was intended for Dr. John W. Grady of this city. Recently there have been numerous advertisements in the papers of cures for various ailments performed on clergymen of the names mentioned above, who offered to give information regarding their cases free of charge.

According to the postoffice authorities much mail was sent to the supposed clergymen. Basing his action upon complaints of persons who had replies to the letters, Inspector Snow began an enquiry. He failed to find the clergymen to whom so much mail matter was sent, but found a resident, Henry Desmazes, in Billerica, who had permitted the use of his name to Dr. John W. Grady of Boston.

Continuing the inquiry Inspector Snow found that there were Dr. John W. Grady and Dr. James W. Grady in Boston, occupying offices in the same building, but apparently not associated with each other, although brothers.

The postoffice department has stopped the mail addressed to Green and Desmazes on the ground that these names are fictitious.

A CITY BURIED UNDER LAVA.

20,000 of the 25,000 Residents of St. Pierre, Martinique, Lost Their Lives.

St. Thomas, D. W. I., May 9.—The British steamer Roddam, Captain Freeman, which left St. Lucia Wednesday for Martinique, returned to St. Lucia at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Roddam brings a report that the town of St. Pierre, Martinique, has been totally destroyed as a result of the volcanic disturbances in the island. Almost all the inhabitants of St. Pierre are said to have been killed. The Roddam reports that all the shipping in the port has also been destroyed.

The Quebec Steamshin company's with all on board.

The Roddam was almost completely wrecked. Her captain was seriously burned and 17 of her crew are dead.

Late reports say that at least 20,000 people out of the population of 25,000 in the city are dead. The city is reported to have been overwhelmed under the flow of lava from the surrounding volcanoes after most of the houses had been destroyed by the violence of the earthquakes.

The town of St. Pierre, the commercial capital of the French island of Martinique, is on the west coast. The port there has only an open roadstead. The town has a population of about 25,000.

The island of Martinique contains several extinct volcanoes, the highest point being Mont Pelee, with an altitude of 4430 feet.

It was announced from St. Thomas on May 3 that St. Pierre had been covered with ashes to the depth of a quarter of an inch as a result of the outbreak of the Mont Pelee volcano and the town appeared to be enveloped in fog.

A second dispatch from St. Thomas, dated May 6, said the flow of lava from the Mont Pelee volcano, which began last Saturday, had completely destroyed the Guerin factories, situated about two miles from St. Pierre. It was also reported that about 150 persons had disappeared and that a great panic prevailed at St. Pierre.

Another dispatch from St. Thomas, dated May 7, said advices received that morning from the island of St. Vincent, B. W. I., announced that for some days earthquakes had been experienced in the neighborhood of the Soufriere crater, which had been smoking and rumbling. The people in the vicinity of the volcano were leaving for places of safety. This St. Thomas dispatch said further that cable communication with the island of Martinique was interrupted the morning of May 7, and that cable communicaton southward from St. Lucia, in the Windward Islands, ceased suddenly the same afternoon.

It was reported that the volcanic craters on Dominica, B. W. I., were

The Massachusetts Civil Service Reform Association earnestly opposes Senate Bill 312, which requires that no policeman of the cities of the Commonwealth outside of Boston shall be discharged without a formal trial before the "appointing and confirming powers." We are glad to hear it. The position of policeman is altogether too secure now, especially for those who are no credit to any force.

Trade between the United States and Porto Rico is growing remarkably. We now take over half the exports of the island and supply four-fifths of all the imports. This year the Porto Ricans will buy $10,000,000 worth of goods from us, or five times as much as when they were under Spanish rule.

The selection of the Duchess of Marlborough, nee Vanderbilt, by the Queen of England, to be one of her attendants at the coronation ceremony has angered many of the English peeresses, but it is intended, it is stated, as a delicate compliment to American womanhood.

The Rhode Island society of the Cincinnati has offered a gold medal to the person who composes the most appropriate air to which the words of "America" may be sung. The society believes America should have a national anthem of her own instead of using the same air as "God Save the Queen" with a slight change of tempo.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The number of immigrants that arrived at New York last week—25,120—slightly exceeds the population of such thriving cities as North Adams, Everett, Waltham and Quincy, and very nearly equals the total population of Barnstable.—Boston Journal.

☞The condition in which the Concord & Boston Street Railway promoters find themselves may well make our Board of Aldermen hesitate before granting franchises to corporations that are willing to promise anything for the sake of getting control of them.—Waltham Free Press.

☞Nashua, N. H., is in the throes of her first happiness over the prospect of a government building as indicated by the omnibus public building bill before congress, and the Telegraph confidently declares that "Everybody will be glad to go to the new postoffice no matter where it is located." Nashua is not a very big burg, but the Telegraph will discover ere long that every site which is mentioned for the new building will be found inconvenient and out of the way for the majority of the people of the city. Just wait until a few land owners get into the contest and see how the people object to walking a couple of blocks beyond one site to get to another that happens to be in favor.—Haverhill Gazette.

COL. F. W. PARKER.

Ashes of Famous Quincy Educator in Final Resting Place.

The remains of Col. Francis Wayland Parker, the first superintendent of the public schools of this city, and a noted educator, were laid in their final resting place at Manchester, N. H., on Thursday.

A dispatch to the Herald says: With military honors and with tributes of love and esteem from his former fellow-townsmen, the ashes of the late Col. Francis Wayland Parker, famous throughout the country as an educator, were interred this afternoon in the Parker family lot in Piscataquog cemetery. Col. Parker had often expressed a desire to be buried in his native city, and his remains were laid away in land that once belonged to his father, in a spot that was his favorite playground in his youth.

During the funeral services, all business was suspended in West Manchester and the citizens turned out en masse to pay their last respects to the ashes of their beloved townsman. Assembled at the grave, beside the relatives, were old personal friends of Col. Parker, members of his old military company, the 4th New Hampshire, and a large number of teachers and children of the public schools.

As the casket containing the ashes was borne into the cemetery by four veterans, who served under the colonel in the 4th New Hampshire, it was received with bared heads by the members of Louis Bell Post, G.A.R., while a distant bugler played "Nearer My God, to Thee." As the casket rested beside the grave a chorus of High school pupils sang "Some Sweet Day By and By." The Episcopal burial service was then read by the Rev. C. R. Bailey and was followed by the G. A. R. ritual performed by officers of the Louis Bell post.

After singing by the chorus, John G. Hutchinson, secretary of the 4th New Hampshire Regiment Association, dropped a silk American flag in the open grave and delivered a brief eulogy of his dead colonel. Taps were then sounded by Herman Greaver, the old 4th regiment bugler, and the services were concluded.

The honorary bearers were Mayor William C. Clarke, Charles W. Bickford, superintendent of public instruction; Former Superintendent William E. Buck and Chairman of the School Board George H. Towne.

The People Aroused.

One of the first uses Chief Hayden should make of his new patrol wagon is to send it to what is known as Foy's corner, at the junction of Water and Quincy streets, and give a free ride to the gang of young loafers and hoodlums who nightly gather there and make life miserable for everybody, and especially the people of the Presbyterian church.

Handfuls of gravel are thrown at the window when services are being held and people going to and from the church are treated in the same manner. Any word of remonstrance is greeted with an outburst of laughter and a flow of language that would do credit to a Malay pirate.

It is no uncommon thing for a family unfortunate enough to live in that neighborhood to be rudely disturbed by a rock coming through their window.

Recently the gang has adopted a new scheme to make things unpleasant, and that is to trip pedestrians by means of a rope stretched across the sidewalk a few inches above the ground. This scheme was successfully worked a few nights ago upon a young lady coming from the Presbyterian church. She was thrown down and bruised and as she fell a sound of rude laughter reached her ears.

The law abiding people of this neighborhood have now become thoroughly aroused and demand that this kind of work must stop, and if the police can not do it they declare that they will take the law into their own hands.

CHIEF SUSTAINED.

Mayor Bryant Finds Evidence Sufficient Against Faircloth.

Mayor Bryant has made the following report after a hearing given to Georga Faircloth, the driver of the Fire department recently removed by Chief Williams:

"By section 2 of ordinance 1 of the city of Quincy, the Chief Engineer of the Fire department is held responsible for the discipline, good order and proper conduct of the officers and men constituting the department and he is given authority to remove or suspend any officer or member of the department.

"In the case of George Faircloth, the chief removed him for a violation of several rules laid down by the Chief for the management of the department, and upon request of Mr. Faircloth I gave him a hearing upon the charges preferred by the Chief.

"Upon all the evidence I am obliged to find that there was sufficient cause for the Chief's exercise of authority and making the suspension. Although on some of the charges it didn't seem to me that there was sufficient evidence to warrant a man being dismissed from the service, yet upon others I find sufficient evidence to the effect that the man violated the rules of the department. I therefore make the following finding:

"In the matter of suspension or removal of George Faircloth by the Chief of the fire department, I do not find sufficient reason to revoke the order of the Chief, and I do find sufficient evidence to have enabled the Chief to make the order for removal.

Great Success.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Quincy Point church closed last evening a very successful season with a salad supper and a play in two acts entitled "The Little Women" being adapted from the book of that name. It was published in the Ladies Home Journal and was presented under the direction of Mrs. F. S. Barry with the following cast of characters:

"Meg,"	Lauretta Lowe.
"Jo,"	Ethel Hersey.
"Amy,"	Esther Sidelinger.
"Beth,"	Marian Johnson.
"Laurie,"	Willis Middleton.
"Mr. Lawrence,"	Russell Newcomb.
"Hannah,"	Helen Sherbourne.
"Mrs. March,"	Ruth Newcomb.

The children had evidently been well [illegible] appreciation of the different characters they represented. The audience was large and all seemed delighted with the program, especially the children. They listened with rapt attention and applauded the good acting with as much discrimination as their elders.

This was the second and last night of the May Festival. A large number has attended each evening and the ladies will add a good sum to their earnings for this season.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Referendum Attached to Boston District Option Bill.

Representative Badger favored local self-government Thursday in the House by voting with the majority to attach the referendum to the district option bill. Representative McKnight was not recorded. The vote on ordering the amended bill to a third reading was 85 to 51.

The referendum is regarded as exceedingly objectionable by the advocates of the bill, who are not anxious now about the passage of the bill. An amendment of Representative Keith of Brockton, however was adopted limiting licenses in suburban districts to one in 1,000.

The committee on Public Lighting has followed up its adverse report on the Quincy gas bills by reporting leave to withdraw on the McNary, Horgan, Nichols and DeDormandie bills. The committee, however, reported a bill on petition of Thomas P. Larkin, that cities and towns may authorize street railway companies to furnish electric lighting service therein.

The Judiciary committee reported the following rule for adoption:

No. 29 A member of either branch, who directly or indirectly solicits for himself or others any position or office within the gift or control of a railroad corporation, street railway company, gas or electric light company, telegraph or telephone company, aqueduct or water company, or other public service corporation, shall be subject to suspension therefor, or to such other penalty as the branch of which he is a member may see fit to impose.

By a vote of 90 to 100 the house refused to change the name of the town of Maynard to Assabet.

The Senate passed the Sunday candy bill to a third reading.

The committee on Ways and Means reported ought to pass on the bill to appropriate $2000 to defray the cost of sending a Massachusetts State team from the marksmen of the active militia to the annual competition at Sea Girt, N. J.

The committee also reported ought to pass on a bill to expend $1500 on the State Camp Ground at Framingham.

James White was arraigned for violation of the town by-laws of Weymouth. Case continued one month.

Knocked Into a Cocked Hat.

The expression "knocked into a cocked hat" is familiar to every one, but perhaps its origin is not so generally known. Cocked hat was a variety of the game of bowls in which only three pins were used, set up at the angles of a triangle. When, in bowling tenpins, all were knocked down except the three at the corners, the set was said to be "knocked into a cocked hat," whence the popular expression for depriving anything of its main body, character or purpose.

VALUE OF VEGETABLES

Doctors Advise Cereal Diet to Kill Beef Trust.

CLAIM MEAT IS NOT ESSENTIAL.

Physicians Say Other Edibles Are Just as Nutritious—Dr. Cyrus Edson Predicts Abattoirs Will Soon Be Replaced by Factories For Food Products—Noted Chemist Favors Cereals.

That there is a way to best the beef trust and that the time is almost at hand when little or no meat will be eaten by either rich or poor is the firm belief of many persons today, among them prominent physicians and men of science, says the New York Evening Telegram. It has only needed the soaring of the prices of steaks and roasts to dizzy heights to arouse thinking people to a realization that after all meat is not essential to human existence, scientists and physicians declare, and to a belief that there is just as much nutriment and less digestive work in other forms of food, such as cereals, fruit, etc.

All the properties contained in the flesh of beasts, they maintain, can be found in the vegetable world, and consequently we might just as well be vegetarians, especially when the trust boosts the price of meat so high it can't be got anyhow. One of the most interesting predictions yet made in consequence of the beef trust is that uttered in an interview with a reporter by Dr. Cyrus Edson, who says that undoubtedly it will not be long before the abattoir will be replaced by manufactories of food products. Dr. Edson was seen at his home in New York and asked if he thought it possible for the human race to give up meat altogether and obtain the same sustenance from other foods.

"It can be done perfectly," he declared. "I think all scientists will agree that some day we will all be vegetarians. Instead of abattoirs we shall have manufactories for food products containing the proteids, the carbohydrates and the fats in sufficient proportions to support human life.

"The proteids, sometimes called the albumenoids, which we get in meat are also contained in certain vegetables. Take beans, for instance, or even fish, and the same properties are found. We find them also in the casein of milk and cheese. Aside from milk, the food containing the most albumenoid and proteid matter is the egg.

"The banana is a universal food and contains all the elements in pretty nearly the correct proportion necessary to support life, build up the body and run the fires of life.

"The laboring man, for instance, needs at least 120 grams of proteid matter, 56 grams of fat and 500 grams of carbohydrates—that is, sugar, bread, etc.—a day. Of these things the proteid matter is absolutely essential. The cheapest way of getting proteid is through skimmilk. It is estimated that skimmilk is about one-third the value of pure milk and that a given amount—say a gram—of proteid matter in the form of such milk costs one-fourth of what it would in the form of beef—that is, one-fourth of what the price of beef was before the recent raise in the market.

"These same properties that are found in meats are found, then, in cheese, skimmilk, beans and bananas and make one just as strong and as vigorous as though taken in the form of meat. Fish and oysters are very rich in proteids and can be made to take the place of meat very satisfactorily, especially when accompanied by a diet of cereals and fresh vegetables.

"Then there are nuts. They are very valuable as food and contain proteid matter as well as fats. It is simply a question of time, and the time may now be hastened, when all these things will take the place of meat and fulfill all requirements of the human body."

Dr. George F. Shrady said he considered it quite possible to go from one year's end to the other without eating beef and be well and strong. Many, he said, already did this.

"One can derive all the nourishment one needs and wants out of other animal food than beef," he said, "and man can readily live the year round without it."

Professor H. W. Wiley, chief chemist of the department of agriculture at Washington, in a discussion the other day called forth by the present prevailing high price of beef earnestly advocated the more general use of cereals as food.

Into Sewer Trench.

The horse of F. H. Smith of the Quincy Fair became frightened at Houghs Neck Thursday afternoon and ran away. There were two ladies in the carriage at the time and before they could stop the animal he ran into a pole. This cleared him from the carriage. The horse continued on the run until near Litttlefield's, when he pitched head first into the sewer trench, striking the concrete at the bottom of the trench with force enough to kill him. The ladies escaped without injury.

Fire at Braintree.

An alarm was sounded from Box 24 at Braintree at 8.30 this morning for a fire in a dwelling house on River street, owned by Mrs. John Long and occupied by Cushing Faxon. The fire started in one of the chambers and worked up to the roof before it was checked. The damage will not be large.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops.—JESSIE PINKEY HALL, Springville, Ala. This Remedy is for sale by all druggists.

HAMPTON ROADS MEETING

Between President Lincoln and Confederate Leaders Described In Detail—Nothing but Unconditional Surrender Would Be Accepted

Washington, May 9.—Discussion of the Philippine bill continued in the senate yesterday. Mr. Burton referred, as instances of atrocious cruelty, to the battle of Mounded Knee, to the Mountain Meadow massacre and to the massacre of Union soldiers at Fort Pillow and contended that the action of the American troops in the Philippines was, in most instances, entirely within the regulations of civilized warfare.

Mr. Carmack delivered a scathing denunciation of the conduct of military operations in the Philippines and denounced General Smith, branding him as a "scoundrel" and "murderer," who has dishonored the American army and had done nothing but butcher a whole people.

In a sarcastic response Mr. Dolliver scorchingly arraigned Mr. Carmack. Mr. Carmack's reply was of such a nature as to cause him to be called to order for a statement reflecting upon Mr. Dolliver, but the incident ended in good feeling.

Mr. Vest made a forceful and effective speech in response to a statement made by Mr. Tillman that at the historic conference in Hampton Roads in 1864 between President Lincoln, William H. Seward, secretary of state; Alexander H. Stephens, vice president of the confederate states; R. M. T. Hunter, former United States senator, and John A. Campbell, formerly justice of the United States supreme court, President Lincoln wrote upon a piece of paper "save the Union," then, handing it to Stephens, said, "Alex, take this paper and fill up for yourselves the conditions of peace between the two countries."

Mr. Vest said the story had been denied by John H. Reagan of Texas, who was the last surviving member of the confederate cabinet. He knew personally, said Mr. Vest, without having been present at that celebrated interview, that the incident was without the slightest foundation.

A deep silence had fallen upon the chamber and every senator on the floor listened to him with rapt attention. With great deliberateness he continued:

"If true it would mean that the confederates could have placed in that sheet of paper the perpetual establishment of slavery and the right of secession, the most extreme demand that had ever taken locality even in the dream of any confederate." From the lips of Stephens and Hunter had come to him, he said, the details of what took place. Upon the return of the commissioners of the confederacy he had heard their official report, as Mr. Reagan heard it, he being a member of the cabinet and the speaker a member of the confederate senate. "I am today the only surviving member of the 26 gentlemen who acted as confederate senators," he said.

Mr. Vest then stated that what did happen at Hampton Roads was this: That when the president and Secretary Seward met the commissioners of the confederacy, Mr. Lincoln, addressing himself to Mr. Hunter, said:

"In the first place, gentlemen, I desire to know what are your powers and instructions from the Richmond government," avoiding, said Mr. Vest, as Mr. Hunter told him himself, the words "confederate states."

Mr. Hunter, to whom the inquiry was addressed, said: "Mr. President, we are instructed to consider no proposition that does not involve the independence of the confederate states of America."

"Then," said Mr. Lincoln, "the interview had as well terminate now, for I must say to you, gentlemen, frankly and honestly, that nothing will be accepted from the government at Richmond except absolute and unconditional surrender."

Mr. Vest said that this terminated the interview, and as the confederate commissioners retired President Lincoln, addressing Stephens, who was the last to go out, said:

"Stephens, you are making a great mistake. Your government is a failure, and when the crash comes, as it soon must come, there will be chaos and disaster which we cannot now foresee which must come to your people."

"This account of that interview," continued Mr. Vest, "substantially and almost word for word as I have given it, came to me from Mr. Stephens and Mr. Hunter."

Mr. Vest said that he considered it his duty to make this statemet in order that history may not be falsified; in order that the men who were said to have refused this offer at the hands of President Lincoln should not be made to sin in their graves, adding: "For if they had refused what was said to have been tendered to them by the president they would have been accessories to the murder of every man who fell from that time in defense of confederate cause, and they should have given the lie to the intentions which they professed when they risked everything, everything that is held dear amongst men, in defense of the confederate cause."

While the deep silence still reigned in the chamber as he spoke and with every eye directed toward him, Mr. Vest concluded as follows:

"It may be but a very short time until I shall join the 25 colleagues I had in the confederate senate, and I did not want this statement to go into the record of this country without my statement of these facts and my solemn denial that there is a shadow of truth in this assertion which has been going the rounds of the newspapers of the country for the last few years."

The bill to place three stars in the American flag had the right of way again yesterday in the house. General debate was closed at 3 o'clock, and the bill was then read for amendment under the five-minute rule. The only amendment adopted was one providing that nothing in the act should be construed to legalize polygamy. During the day a resolution expressive of the regret of the house over the death of Rear Admiral Sampson was adopted and a committee of seven members was appointed to attend his funeral.

King's Story of Trouble

Chicago, May 9.—Developments indicate that H. E. H. King, who was attacked and found unconscious in military uniform on a doorstep in Wilmette, is the son of Brevet General H. A. King, retired, of Washington. He says that he is a Cuban war veteran, who had suffered expulsion from home by his father because he had been court-martialed and expelled from West Point. The charge of signing false vouchers was brought against him at the military academy by M. A. Elkins, according to King, and at the point of a revolver he made Elkins retract the charges in writing. This retraction, he says, was stolen from him here when he was assaulted.

CURING CONSUMPTION.

When Scott's Emulsion makes a consumptive gain flesh it is curing his consumption.

The weight is the measure of the consumptive's condition. Every pound of weight gained is a matter for congratulation.

Exactly what goes on inside to make the consumptive gain weight when taking Scott's Emulsion is still a mystery.

Scott's Emulsion does something to the lungs, too, that reduces the cough and the inflammation.

More weight and less cough always mean that consumption is losing its influence over the system.

For all stages of the disease Scott's Emulsion is a reliable help.

SAMPSON IS EULOGIZED

In an Order Issued by Secretary of the Navy

WON PLACE IN FRONT RANK

Of Those Who Placed Our Navy In the High Position It Now Holds—Life-Long Devotion to Duty With a Fruitage of Splendid Achievement

Washington, May 9.—Secretary Moody yesterday afternoon issued the usual formal order announcing to the service the death of Admiral Sampson, as follows:

"The department with deep regret announces to the service the death of Rear Admiral William T. Sampson.

"Rear Admiral Sampson entered the service Sept. 24, 1857, as an acting midshipman, and graduated first in his class on June 1, 1861. From that time he served with fidelity and gallantry in the Civil War and in the [illegible]. On the 33 years which followed, happily years of peace, he devoted to the country, without sparing, a brilliant intellect, cultivated by learning, directed by industry, and inspired by patriotism. As teacher, administrator, organizer and commander, at sea and on shore, he so conducted himself in these years that by the common consent of his professional brethren he won a place in the front rank of those by whose efforts our naval establishment was adapted to modern conditions and made fit and instantly ready for the work for which it was designed.

"These years of patient, unremitting toil, almost unnoticed as they passed, found their reward when the time of trial came, and are a sure foundation of his enduring fame. By the universal voice of his associates he was marked as one of those upon whom the responsibilities of high command might rest safely. That command became his in the war with Spain. The part which he played there is now in the keeping of history. After the close of that war the late commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the United States, President McKinley, in a letter to Rear Admiral Sampson, said:

"'Let me assure you that I have the highest appreciation of your service as commander-in-chief of the Atlantic naval forces during the Spanish war, in blockading Cuba, co-operating with the army, directing the movements of the great number of vessels under your orders, and at last, after the most effective preparation, consummating, with the gallant officers and men under your command, the destruction of the Spanish fleet.'

"The service needs not to be reminded of those personal qualities which won the respect and affection of his companions in arms, from whose lips come abundant testimony at this hour.

"This record of life-long devotion to duty with its fruitage of splendid achievement renders his name illustrious in the annals of the navy, and places it high on the roll of those who have deserved well of the republic.

"As a mark of respect to his memory flags of the navy yards and stations and vessels in commission will be displayed at half-mast from sunrise to sunset and 13 minute guns will be fired at noon from the navy yards and stations on the day after the receipt of this order.

The Social Realm.

For you and me what wiser thing than simply day by day
To live in peace and gentleness to smooth a brother's way,
To meet our neighbor cheerily, to dwell in honest mirth,
To see in every lowly heart, the sign of heavenly birth,
Where'er we go, whate'er we do, to scatter smiles or tears,
And send God's sunlight shining down the path of varied years.
We well may try in little things to make this old world bright,
And set in every dusky place, a beam of heaven's light.

40,000 Persons Perished.

The awful story of the destruction of the city of St. Pierre, Island of Martinique, is so gruesome in its outlines, so appalling to the imagination, so unprecedented in the history of the western hemisphere, and in nearly all modern history, that a reader's mind finds difficulty in grasping the story as anything more substantial than a hideous dream. Would that it could be dismissed as such! But there is too much reason to fear that when the whole truth is known, so far as it can ever be known to mortal man, the certainty will be found substantially as bad as was indicated in the first stunning and seemingly incredible announcement.

This appalling disaster has a somewhat nearer interest to the people of the United States than would have been the case had it occurred at any time previous to our war with Spain. Now, the larger part of the island area washed by the Caribbean Sea either belongs to the United States, or is in such very close and peculiar relation to this country that our people are forced to feel that, in some sense, whatever concerns any part of the West Indies touches us.

The Danish Islands of St. Thomas, St. Croix and St. Kitts, lying between Porto Rico and Guadaloupe, are comparatively contiguous to Martinique. Those Danish islands will undoubtedly be transferred to the United States within a short time, notwithstanding the vigorous efforts at Copenhagen to prevent the ratification of the treaty.—Boston Advertiser.

FOLLY ON WHEELS.

Why Mr. Faxon so Dubs the New Patrol Wagon.

The comment of nearly everyone who looks at the new addition to the Police department, the patrol wagon, is that it is a well built and a handsome looking wagon, but why have it so heavy? Henry H. Faxon calls it "Folly on wheels," and is not far off. It would appear that someone had made a mistake in having such a heavy wagon built. As it is today, it weighs 1500 pounds. With the driver and officer who accompanies it, the weight will be nearly a ton. This is too much for one horse, especially when he is supposed to make quick time in answering a call.

The wagon has rubber tired wheels, which make it run easier, but it will not take many calls a day to use a horse up. Take for instance a call from Atlantic. By the time the wagon reached there the horse would be about ready to drop if he made any kind of time.

In Boston, it is said, that none of the patrol wagons are as heavy as Quincy's and that some of them only weigh 1000 pounds. Then again, the runs in Boston are shorter, and it is not as hard work for a horse to haul a ton at a trot over pavers as it is on level ground.

It would seem that a much lighter wagon would have answered every purpose, and would have been much easier for the animal who has to draw it, even though he is a heavy horse.

Granite Exchange.

The Granite Manufacturers' Association of Barre held a largely attended meeting in their hall Wednesday evening. The gathering was very harmonious and unanimous in all its actions. It was voted to make a few corrections in the prices which the Exchange suggested, and it was also voted to employ travelling men to solicit work for the smaller manufacturers who are not individually doing business enough to have their own men out. All the manufacturers expressed themselves as satisfied with the workings of the exchange.—Daily Times.

ANNUAL BANQUET.

Unity Club at Young's Hotel—Those Present.

One of the most enjoyable banquets ever given by the Unity club of Wollaston was held Friday night at Young's hotel, Boston. Fifty-nine members and friends assembled at the hotel at about seven o'clock where an informal reception was held until dinner was announced. Three long tables and the head table were comfortably filled.

After singing by a quartette composed of Mr. and Mrs. H. Y. Follett, Mrs. H. E. Sawyer and Mr. Ray Finel, the following menu received close attention for over an hour:

Little Neck Clams.
Cream of Tomatoes, aux Croutons.
Consomme Danphine.
Fillet of Beef, Jardiniere Sauce.
Roast stuffed Chicken.
Vol au Vent of Lobster, a la Creme,
Apricots, Glace, Chartreuse,
Capron Cutlets, Macedoine.
Demi Glace aux Fraises,
Strawberry Shortcake
Ice Cream. Sherbet.
Strawberries.
Coffee.

Mr. Charles F. Harper, president of the club was toastmaster and interesting and witty speeches, interspersed with songs by the quartet brought the evening to a close. Among the speakers were: Representative W. H. Lewis of Cambridge, Rev. F. W. Pratt, of Wollaston, Rev. Dr. Todd of South Quincy, and Mr. Morris B. Smith, sub master at the Quincy High school.

The ladies looked charming in pretty gowns. Every one enjoyed the dinner, the post prandiel exercises and the music and thought the closing of the season of the Unity club the banner one of all.

Lieut. Bumpus' Death.

William J. Gibbs of Springfield, who was present at the massacre in Balangigia, when Captain Connell, Lieut. Bumpus and members of the 99th regiment were killed, testified Friday at Washington before the Senate Committee on the Philippines.

Describing the mutilation of the bodies by Filipinos after the attack, he said that the eyes of Lieut. Bumpus of Quincy, Mass., were dug out; his face was hacked and smeared with jam, and toy flags were stuck into his eye sockets. Others of the dead had their fingers and different parts of their bodies chopped off.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE "PLAY ACTORS."

Ross and Fenton to Star In Vaudeville—Rumor Again Busy With May Irwin's Name.

Ross and Fenton, those one time favorites of the vaudeville houses, are to return to their first love. Lawrence Weber is to put them at the head of a company of "specialty artists," with which he will next season make a tour of the country.

There have been in the vaudevilles during the past decade performers who have essayed what they have been pleased to term "burlesques," but it is safe to assert that Ross and Fenton are about the only players whose work has entitled them to consideration as strictly legitimate burlesquers of high class plays.

During his long engagement with Weber & Fields Mr. Ross has been thinking out the most available subjects for this sort of treatment, and when he goes on his tour next season with Miss Fenton he will not have to rely upon his old material, which, good though it is, is pretty well worn out. He has concocted a number of burlesques of current successes, and they are said by those who have seen them to be excellent.

There are those who are of the opinion that Ross would make his mark as a legitimate actor, and some of his momentarily serious work in several of his skits would seem to bear them out in this view.

Well, if rumor hasn't got things frightfully twisted, May Irwin may next season be a member of the Weber & Fields aggregation. In commenting upon the announcement a number of newspapers have affected to believe that Miss Irwin in making the change is doing a very foolish thing. That may sound pretty, but it is a fact that Miss Irwin is of more value as a member of the Weber & Fields company than she is as a star.

When the coon song was at the height of its popularity, May Irwin was the vogue. It did not seem to make a particle of difference what sort of play she had she was a success just the same. That was due to the fact that she sang these ridiculous jingles as no one else in the country was able to sing them. Besides, any one who harbors the idea that May Irwin cannot act is laboring under a very gravely mistaken impression. She was for some time a member of Augustin Daly's stock company and did some very dainty work in that home of the classical drama and sometimes of unclassical "adaptations."

But no matter how much money Miss Irwin may be making on the road now, she is no longer the vogue. Those persons who like the class of entertainment provided by her go to see her, but they are not satisfied if she fails to offer a good play. The coon songs have lost their power to carry a commonplace farce, and while Miss Irwin doubtless could go on indefinitely as a pretty fair money making stellar proposition it is probably true that if she ever intends to abandon the uncertainties of management the present is about the best time she could select for getting out, especially as she is now enabled to retire gracefully with the prestige of a practically uninterrupted series of successes.

A basso who is rapidly forging to the front is Clarence Whitehill. Mr. Whitehill enjoys the unique distinction of being the only American who has ever appeared at the Opera Comique in Paris, and Marengo, Ia., the place of his birth, is correspondingly proud.

Mr. Whitehill's professional debut was made in 1898 as Friar Laurence in "Romeo and Juliet," Brussels being the city in which he appeared. M. Carre, at that time director of the Opera Comique, was present and was so well pleased with Mr. Whitehill's work that he at once engaged him. His debut in Paris was made as Nilakantha in "Lakme." Since that eventful day in Brussels Mr. Whitehill has sung practically every one of the well known basso roles of grand opera. It was due to the advice of Mme. Melba that Mr. Whitehill determined to adopt the stage as a profession. Giraudet and Sbriglia were his preceptors, and it is therefore not surprising that, having a naturally fine voice, he should have acquired an excellent method. In this country Mr. Whitehill is perhaps best known through his connection with the companies of Henry W. Savage.

OUR POLO PLAYERS ABROAD

Previous International Matches

The Schedule

INTERNATIONAL athletic contests have become so numerous lately that they have almost ceased to be a novelty. Their interest, however, has not diminished, and if one looks at the yacht racing rivalry between England and America for an example it would seem as though popular enthusiasm increased with each new contest. In track athletics, rowing, cricket and the visits of professional golfers these international exchanges of sporting rivalry have been of vast benefit to the sport itself, and the present year will not close without additional illustrations of a similar character.

The particular event that will stir the sporting blood of England and America this season will be polo. The coming meeting will be the second international contest for the magnificent gold cup presented sixteen years ago by the Westchester Polo club of Newport, R. I., emblematic of international polo superiority. During these sixteen years the cup has been in possession of the Hurlingham club, near London, the oldest polo headquarters in Great Britain, and after many fruitless attempts to send over an American team to wrest the prize from the original victors success has at last crowned the efforts of the American Polo association, and the strongest quartet of players on this side of the Atlantic has been brought together for the international conflict. The encounter will take place on the field of the Hurlingham club, the conditions calling for the best two out of three games.

The first tournament for the international cup was played in the summer of 1886 on the old Newport polo field, when a strong English team was in this country, and it was their presence here that led to the offer of the cup. Polo was then in its infancy in this country; but, although our players made a stiff fight, they were defeated in two straight games, and the cup went at once to England. The victorious English team was composed of Sir John Watson, captain; Malcolm Littel, Captain R. Lawley and Captain T. Home. The American quartet was Thomas Hitchcock, Jr.; W. K. Thorn, Reginald Belmont and Foxhall Keene. Belmont died a few years ago. Thorn has not been active in the game for some time, but Hitchcock continued to be one of the most fearless players until a severe fall at Meadowbrook, N. Y., about three years ago nearly closed his earthly career, and in late years he has only appeared in small contests at Aiken, S. C.

Foxhall Keene alone remains actively in the game. At the time of the first international match he was a Harvard sophomore, but he had already shown all those evidences of dashing, fearless and accurate riding that have placed him at the top of the American polo list. Keene will be the captain of the American team, and, as he has played frequently at Hurlingham within recent years, he will be the best posted member of the challenging team in the English game, which differs in two or three radical points from the American method. For the last three years Keene has kept his best polo ponies on his English estate at Melton Mowbray, Leicestershire, but he brought some of them out last year when he played on the Lakewood (N. J.) team for the polo championship of America, which that club, one of the newest in the association, won.

Foxhall Keene will have for his American team J. M. Waterbury, Jr.; Lawrence Waterbury, John E. Cowdin and R. L. Agassiz. The Waterbury brothers are the youngest of the lot, but all are veteran players, cool headed, suburb riders, accurate in hitting and thoroughly cognizant of the necessity of team work, a necessity that is sometimes overlooked in the desire to perform a stroke of individual brilliancy. Agassiz will be the substitute. Larry Waterbury is practically certain to be the back of the team, a position which he has filled most creditably for the past three or four years. Monte Waterbury is likely to be seen in the important position of No. 1, Keene in his favorite place at No. 3 and the reliable Cowdin at No. 2.

Keene's ponies, which he used in the Lakewood club games last year, were sent out to England soon after the close of the season here, and over twenty ponies for the other players were shipped a short time ago. They are now at the Rugby club stables in charge of a skilled trainer from the Rockaway (N. Y.) Hunting club. All of the preliminary arrangements for the international tournament have been made by Foxhall Keene. The American team has already been entered in some of the early club competitions.

Among these is a tournament at the new polo club at Roehampton from May 12 to 17 and at Hurlingham May 21 to 24. The final "limbering up" game before the big contest will be at Ranelagh May 26. Then at Hurlingham on May 31 the first international match will be played, followed by the second Monday, June 2, and the third, if necessary, on Tuesday, June 3. That will be the day before the famous Derby, and the American poloists will visit that historic race in a body.

These preliminary games with the leading English poloists will give the visiting team much needed practice in the features of the English game that are not allowed here. Mr. H. L. Herbert, chairman of the American Polo association, admits that this is a serious handicap to the Americans, but he hopes for the best.

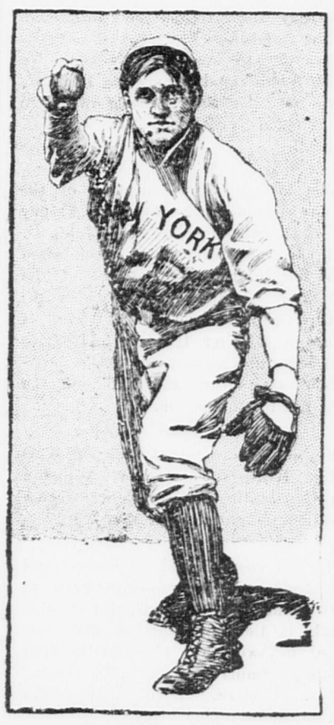

Hooking mallets and off side play will be the chief points with which the Americans must become familiar. The Hurlingham rule regarding the former says, "No player shall crook his adversary's stick unless he is on the same side of the adversary's pony as the ball or in a direct line behind."

No definite announcement has yet been given regarding the makeup of the English team that will defend the trophy won sixteen years ago, but estimates that have been made indicate that the quartet will come from the following: W. S. Buckmaster, Charles Miller, George Miller, Walter Jones, Cecil Nicholls, A. Rawlinson and F. M. Freake.

AMONG THE BALL TOSSERS

Christy Mathewson is again pitching a splendid game of ball for the New York "fans." Christy's stock took a decided slump last year toward the close of the season, but that was due to his being overworked by Captain Davis. Under Jack Doyle's expert guidance Christy will not be permitted to twirl too many games, and it is probable that he will continue his good work throughout the entire summer.

Mathewson is undoubtedly one of the most popular players in the game today. Aside from his ball playing, the Bucknell student is an entertaining companion, and players and public alike are not backward in expressing their appreciation of him.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON.

It is likely that Mathewson will continue to play professional ball for several years. He finds it a profitable business and delights in the outdoor life which his avocation places within his reach.

This is Willie Keeler's eleventh year in baseball. In the ten years he has played already he was a member of a championship team six times. He played on the Binghamton (N. Y.) team in 1892, when it won the championship of its league. He played on the Baltimore team in the three years that that club won the championship and on the Brooklyn team in its two years of championship.

Comiskey is quoted as saying that the five Washington pitchers constitute the strongest corps in the American league.

A STRIKE CONFERENCE

End of Washington Mills Strike Believed to Be Near

Lawrence, Mass., May 10.—A very harmonious conference between representatives of the American Woollen company, the striking weavers of the Washington mills and the state board of arbitration, was held yesterday afternoon. The request made by the committee in behalf of the strikers was:

First—That the premium system be abolished.

Second—That in its place that weavers be given an increase of wages of 20 percent.

Third—That no discrimination be made against weavers on account of activity in the strike.

As a result of the conference, the following was given out b the officials of the American Woollen company:

"The American Woollen company regrets that they cannot see their way to accede to the request to alter its present rates and methods of payment of wages, excepting that for lost time through holidays or breakdowns due to shafting, engines, or high water; allowances in premium will be paid in proportion to the actual time worked; and in addition, when an employe is absent for recreation or otherwise, not exceeding one day in the month, such absence will be treated as though a holiday and will not be allowed to interfere with the securing of the premium. The company makes no discrimination against weavers on account of activity in the strike excepting that no weavers now at work will be removed. So far as possible weavers will be given their old looms in the order in which they return to work—the first come, the first served."

A mass meeting of the striking weavers will be held today, at which time the conference committee will make its report. It is thought that the conference was satisfactory to both sides. The mill officials are hopeful that the strike will be at an end by Monday morning.

Fatal Cure For Intemperance

Thomaston, Me., May 10.—Charles L. Beal, who is serving a life sentence in the state prison here for the murder of his father at Clinton in 1888, yesterday made a public confession, admitting that his father came to his death through drinking whiskey in which he (Charles) had put a quantity of strychnine. He claims, however, that he is innocent of the crime for which he was convicted in that the poison was administered under the impression that it would cure his father's intemperate habits and with no desire or intention to do the murder.

What Colored People Want

Hartford, May 10.—At the New England conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion churches yesterday Bishop Walters submitted petitions to congress against the disfranchisement laws in the southern states. The petitions received the unanimous endorsement of the conference. The petitions favor the bill creating a commission to inquire into the condition of the colored people of the United States and the bill forbidding railroad officials separating passengers on account of race or color.

Property Goes to Daughter

Hartford, May 10.—Judge Thayer yesterday rendered a decision in the famous Kennedy will case sustaining the appelees, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Pitkin, and refusing to reopen the case. When Colonel Henry Kennedy of this city died about three years ago he made his daughter, Mrs. Pitkin, the principal heir to his estate, amounting to $900,000. A number of persons, headed by Barnett Johnson, attempted to have the case reopened and their appeal has been before the court for two weeks.

Teacher Shot by Pupil

Chelsea, Me., May 10.—An accidental shooting occurred yesterday, wherein Miss Amy B. Heath, a teacher in a local school, received a bullet just above the base of the brain. The shot was fired by James Judge, aged 13, a pupil. The bullet was removed and Miss Heath is on the road to recovery. It is alleged that the revolver was fired in a spirit of boyish bravado, due to the reading of novels.

Burglars Got Nothing

DOROTHY VERNON OF HADDON HALL.

By CHARLES MAJOR. Illustrated by Howard Chandler Christy. The Macmillan Co. 12mo, $1.50.

Charles Major is perhaps the most popular teller of love stories among living novelists. In Dorothy Vernon, as in his earlier novel When Knighthood was in Flower, time and distance lose their significance under his spell. He has the rare and happy faculty which brings home to the heart the spirit of gallant times and the imperious call of youth's springtime.

Well written from first page to last, this novel is worthy to rank as one of the best pieces of American fiction, and as literature. Mr. Major has discovered what potent implements are language and style in the creation of romance, and he has mastered their use. All praise to him for this; it cannot fail, moreover, to add to his popularity, thus earning for his willingness to labor and improve two rewards, one material, the other artistic.

The romance is the chief concern with this author; it is the very root as well as the flower of his gift. This is a historical tale, so far as period, scene, and minor characters are concerned. Indeed, even his hero and his heroine, and the romance itself, are based upon historic fact. But we are after all ever in the land of lovers, the best of realms in which to dwell in romantic fiction. Dorothy Vernon is an Elizabethan maid, but there is in her a suggestion of wilful young womanhood as it reveals itself through the ages, a touch of the eternal feminine in her defiance of authority for the sake of the man she loves. She is not a historic figure, interesting on account of its distance from the women of to-day; she is flesh and blood of this twentieth century, all gentleness and roused fury in defense of her all; all love and strength and fortitude under persecution and opposition, a living, loving, lovable girl, ready to risk all for the sake of "him," a living woman of to-day. She will appeal more potently, we think, to the popular imagination than did even the heroine of the earlier book, because she is depicted in more vigorous lines and stronger colors, because Mr. Major has mastered his trade.

The elopement of Dorothy Vernon with John Manners is an historic episode; Haddon Hall belongs to this day to their descendants, the Dukes of Rutland. Queen Elizabeth visited the castle; the state chamber, where she rested overnight, is still shown to visitors in its original state. Mary Stuart, too, enters the story, to rouse the jealousy of Dorothy. In short, the lover of the accuracy of history in fiction may rest contented with the story; but he will probably care little for that once he has been caught by the spirit and freshness of the romance.

STATEHOOD BILL WINS

House Would Admit Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma

OVERSTREET'S AMENDMENT

To Join New Mexico and Arizona as the State of Montezuma Meets With Defeat—Delegate Smith Seized With Sudden Illness Near End of Debate

Washington, May 10.—The opposition in the house to the bill for the admission of Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico collapsed at the last minute in the house and the bill was passed without division as it came from the committee except for a few verbal amendments. The real test came on an amendment offered by Mr. Overstreet to join New Mexico and Arizona and admit them as the state of Montezuma. It was beaten, 28 to 106, and all opposition then ceased.

The bill as passed provides enabling acts for Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico, similar in form to former enabling acts, with the exception that the constitutional convention of New Mexico is empowered to designate the name by which the new state shall enter the union, and in the case of Oklahoma the convention by irrevocable ordinance shall express the consent of that state that congress at any future time may attach all or any part of Indian Territory to it. The enabling acts differ from each other chiefly in reference to the public lands appropriated for educational and public purposes.

The closing scenes of the debate were accompanied by a dramatic incident which narrowly escaped being a tragedy. Delegate Mark A. Smith of Arizona, who has been fighting for the admission of his territory for a dozen years, had just made a vigorous speech against the Overstreet amendment when he was seized with a rush of blood to the head. He was conveyed to the lobby where several physicians who are members of the house by the prompt administration of powerful heart stimulants saved him from a stroke of apoplexy. He later rallied and was removed to his hotel.

Yesterday's debate on the Philippine bill in the senate was mild. Mr. Teller contended principally that the Filipinos were capable of self-government and of establishing a government quite to equal to some European governments.

Denial From Minister Walker

Washington, May 10.—Senator Lodge read a communication to the senate committee on the Philippines yesterday from Rev. William H. Walker of Lynn, Mass., denying the truth of the recent dispatch crediting him with making certain statements regarding the treatment of Filipinos. Senator Patterson remarked that a jail was too good for any newspaper man who would circulate a story such as had been published.

New and Old Commissioners Meet

Washington, May 10.—Eugene F. Ware, who is to succeed H. C. Evans as commissioner of pensions, was at the White House yesterday and met the retiring commissioner. The three had a conversation and it was announced that Mr. Ware would take charge of his office as soon as he is confirmed. Mr. Evans, who was confirmed by the senate yesterday, will leave for London in the near future.

No Breach of Neutrality

Washington, May 10.—Strong representations from the Boer clubs of Philadelphia and vicinity have been received by the attorney general, protesting against the further supply of the British army in South Africa from the United States. There is little doubt that the answer in substance will hold that there has been no breach of neutrality.

Hanna's Fight For Rathbone

Washington, May 10.—Senator Hanna yesterday presented to the president a memorial prepared in behalf of Estes G. Rathbone, urging the president to grant a new trial and to set aside the sentence imposed in Cuba on Rathbone for alleged maladministration of Cuban postal affairs.

Barrows Held In $10,000

Washington, May 10.—H. A. Barrows, the late disbursing clerk of the census office, yesterday waived examination in the police court and was held for the action of the grand jury under $10,000 bonds on the charge of embezzlement of $7495 of government funds. Bail was furnished.

Knox Will Run Again

Washington, May 10.—Representative Knox is a candidate for renomination. There has been some doubt about Mr. Knox caring to remain in public life. Mr. Knox permitted himself to be persuaded and will do his best to be returned to Washington.

President Signs Oleo Bill

Washington, May 10.—The president yesterday signed the oleomargarine bill.

Dynamite Fishermen Caught

St. Andrews, N. S., May 10.—The dominion fisheries protection cruiser Curlew arrived in port yesterday with three captured vessels, the first fruits of the dynamite prohibition law. Two of the vessels hail from the United States, but were in Canadian waters under modus vivendi license. All three had been found with dynamite aboard for fishing purposes.

The BIG SOAP BUBBLES ...AH GRIM BLEW

Ah Grim, the boy giant, felt blue.
Said Jackie, "I know what we'll do;
Soap bubbles we'll blow.
They'll please you I know.
All colors—bright green, red and blue."
Some pipes and some soapsuds they got
And carried them out to the "lot,"
Then each his pipe took.
In the bowls some suds shook.
And blew till the bubbles upshot.

Ah Grim's were a terrible size.
The townsfolk they filled with surprise.
"A fleet of balloons."
"A cluster of moons."
Said they, "o'er the housetops arise!"
Out came the militia band green
And shot at the bubbles; 'twas mean.
With sharp thunder sound
They dropped to the ground
While the suds fell and washed the town clean.

An Experiment With Scouring Rush

If we take a small vial of nitric acid and immerse any ordinary leaf therein, we shall quickly see it dissolve, literally eaten up by the acid. But what does the scouring rush do under such circumstances?

Immediately upon its introduction to the acid the sizzling process begins. The green pulp of the stem is gradually consumed, the tube, however, still retaining its shape, becoming paler and paler in color until after a few hours our specimen is transformed into a pure white, alabasterlike column, which defies any further attack upon the acid.

Upon taking it from the vial and washing it carefully in running water, we hold in our hands a beautiful tube of pure, glassy flint or silex, an object of great microscopic beauty of construction. Our scouring rush is no longer a vegetable, but a mineral, and in observing its skeleton of stone we easily understand the secret of its utility as a scouring rush.—William H. Gibson in Sharp Eyes.

As Maudie Understood It.

"Mamma, does Mrs. Brown want to sell her baby?" asked Maudie.

"I don't think so, my dear. Why?"

"I was at Nancy Brown's house this afternoon, and her mother was singing, 'Buy, oh, my baby!' all the time."—Harper's Bazar.

A Music Loving Spider.

Mr. W. J. D. Leavitt, writing of his experiences in playing the great organ formerly in Music hall, Boston, tells a pretty story of his most regular listener, a spider which had taken up its abode in the organ case over the performer's head. It remained there for about a year. Mr. Leavitt says:

It was a musical little fellow, and when I began to play it would spin down almost to a level with my left shoulder and gently swing to and fro and listen. When I had finished a piece, it would draw itself up to its nest, and when I began another down it would come again and resume its position as an interested listener.

Little Tom's Grandpa.

Little Tom's grandfather was a candidate for governor and was unfortunately defeated. The day after election Tom, who is always full of the news of the day, came beaming into the kindergarten, saying: "Good morning, Miss Brown. My grandpa was elected all to pieces."—Exchange.

The World a Garden.

The world is a garden,
Children the flowers:
Smiles are the sunshine,
Tears are the showers.
Frowns are the weeds
That should never find room
In a well tended garden

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Prices of Commodities Have Reached Highest Notch For Years

New York, May 10.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Prices of commodities on May 1 rose to the highest point in recent years, gaining 6.6 per cent over the corresponding date last year.

Railway earnings are steadily gaining, full returns for April exceeding last year's by 10.6 percent, and 1900 by 25.0 percent. Bank exchanges at this city reflect the striking decrease in speculation.

Footwear shops in New England have received more orders, although the aggregate new business is not heavy. Western jobbers have not taken all their spring shoes, while there is a general tendency to delay placing contracts for fall. A few small concessions in prices are reported. Local jobbers report a brisk demand from retailers at the summer resorts. Shipments from Boston continue much smaller than a year ago. Leather is steady.

Holders of cotton goods are not urging sales at the expense of values. Woolen goods are scarce, but the demand is still confined to substitute orders caused by the strike.

More encouraging weather reports have made the outlook brighter for a normal wheat yield. Exports from all ports of the United States during the week amounted to 3,477,378 bushels, flour included, compared with 5,579,037 in the preceding week, but there appeared an increase over the 3,153,721 bushels shipped a year ago.

Gambling Joint Cleaned Out

New York, May 10.—Between 200 and 300 boys and men, including "The" Allen, notorious as an alleged gambler, were taken into custody in a sensational raid made by the police on an alleged gambling house yesterday. Inspector Brooks and Captain Chapman, with 40 policemen in plain clothes, planned the raid. At a given signal the attacking force battered in the doors with axes. They even had ladders ready and mounted to the second floor, entering by the windows. Over 300 people were completely trapped. The police say they found the various rooms fully equipped for betting on the races and all sorts of gambling apparatus was seized. In all 240 people were taken to the station house.

Stately Funeral Service

Washington, May 10.—With a pomp and circumstance exceeding that of any naval funeral in this country, in recent years at least, the late William T. Sampson was yesterday laid at rest. Every department of the national government was represented, including the executive, by the president and his cabinet, and the judiciary, by the United States supreme court. The diplomatic body, accompanied in many cases by their ladies, attended the church services. The military and naval features of the ceremonies were brilliant and impressive. They were conducted under direction of Rear Admiral Terry.

Life Savers Rendered Aid

Highland Light, Mass., May 10.—Schooner J. D. Ingraham, coal laden, was unable to round Race Point during a gale yesterday and was driven back off here, where she let go her anchors and hoisted distress signals. The crew of the Highland station boarded the schooner and gave assistance to the crew, who could not manage the schooner. The life savers were obliged to land two miles down the beach, getting their surf-boat back by team.

Settling Down

San Domingo, May 10.—Former President Jiminez of the Dominican republic and his ministers have left the foreign legations here, where they had sought refuge. Quiet has been restored in the city. The hospitals are full of men who were wounded in the last engagements. The United States cruiser Cincinnati arrived here yesterday.

Four Guards For One Prisoner

Halifax, May 10.—An armed guard of four privates with a Boer prisoner in charge arrived here last evening on the steamer Beta from Bermuda. It is understood that the Boer will be taken to England to give important information to the British government.

Health Department's Big Job

New York, May 10.—Fifty inspectors of the health department of New York, assisted by as many more patrolmen, took samples of all the milk arriving in this city this morning. It is estimated that the brigade held up at least 1,500,000 quarts of milk.

No Overtures Made "Recently"

New York, May 10.—A member of the International Steamship combine is authority for the statement that no overtures have been made recently to the owners of the Cunard line to bring that company into the proposed combination.

Rebels Gaining Ground

Port of Spain, B. W. I., May 10.—The occupation of Caracas by the Venezuelan revolutionary forces is considered as certain within a short time. They are victorious everywhere.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, May 11.
Sun rises—4:28; sets—6:54.
Moon sets—10:53 p. m.
High water—1:30 a. m.; 2 p. m.

The storm in the north has reached the lower St Lawrence valley and has caused light showers in New England. The cool wave covers the entire country east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio river, with temperatures ranging from 2 to 23 degrees below the seasonal average. The weather will be fair and cool in New England. On the coast the winds will be brisk northwest. Storm warnings are displayed from Sandy Hook to Eastport.

PUNISHMENT.

Social progress has done away with a great many forms of punishment once administered under the laws of enlightened people. But nature never changes or modifies her penalties. She still has the same punishment for the man who neglects or abuses his stomach as she had in the far off days "when Adam delved and Eve span."

The physical discomfort, dullness, sluggishness, irritability, nervousness and sleeplessness which are visited upon the man who eats carelessly or irregularly have been from the beginning the evidences of disease of the stomach and its associated organs of digestion and nutrition.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures the diseased stomach and enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food, so that the sluggishness, irritability, nervousness and sleeplessness which result from innutrition are cured also.

"I was taken sick nine years ago with fever," writes Mr. M. M. Wardwell, of Linwood, Leavenworth Co., Kansas. "Had the doctor and he broke up the fever all right, but I took diarrhea right away; he couldn't cure it and it became chronic, and then he gave up the case. I got so weak with it and had piles so badly I couldn't lie down, nor hardly sit up. Was that way two or three months; thought I would never be well again, but picked up one of Dr. Pierce's Memorandum Books one day and saw your description of catarrh of the stomach. I thought it hit my case. We had a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the house that was got for mother. You recommend it for catarrh of the stomach, so I went to taking it. The one bottle nearly cured me. I got two bottles next time and took one and one-half and was well. I haven't been bothered with diarrhea since."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness.

Good Afternoon.

Senator Wetmore of Rhode Island in seven years' service in the upper chamber of the national Congress has never made a speech.

The state entomologist of New Jersey has started on his war of extermination against the mosquitoes. The city of Elizabeth has the benefits his first efforts.

The use of diphtheria serum in Berlin during 1901 resulted in the lowest death-rate from the disease ever known in that city, the deaths being 469, prior to the introduction of the serum they ranged from 1,300 to 3,600.

The ideal industrial condition will come when the employer realizes fully the rights of the workman as a fellow producer. Capital represents crystallized effort of the past; labor is present energy and skill. They are equally important and when in harmony hold the destinies of the world.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Remember that you will never gain, but always lose, by being afraid to do the thing that seems to you right, by following the crowd without cultivating your own individuality.—May Ladies' Home Journal.

☞ Eden is only bounded by the limits of the sphere. Adam lacked wisdom so far as not to consider fully the advantage at hand before seeking greater ones beyond his reach. Content our weapon, we may laugh at flaming swords. Eden is ours if we elect to move forward and possess it. —Dr. C. C. Abbot in the May Lippincott.

☞ Life has its compensations. If we weary of viewing the disagreeable proceedings of General Smith in Samar or if we become discouraged at the ascendancy of the trusts we can turn with joy to the contemplation of Mr. Whitelaw Reid's coronation knee breeches. Every cloud has a silver lining.—Chicago Chronicle.

☞ The decision of the president not to take the stump in the coming congressional campaign is gratifying to those who like to see the office which he holds invested with all possible dignity and reverence. Only in the most urgent crisis, and where he can clearly contribute something that no other man can to the understanding of essential issues by the public, should the president permit himself to be drawn into the active waging of a political contest. His proper sphere is above that of partisanship, as the servant and representative head of the whole people.—Philadelphia Times.

☞ Thanks, Mr. Brooks Adams. Much of your remarks applies also to President Pritchett's proposition, even though you do not allude to it especially. Boston is in a transition state, one is free to confess, and it needs to hear the truth before sinking into a condition that is neither hay nor grass nor good sole leather. For mercy's sake let the Bostonian broaden his mind, concentrate his faculties, and cultivate an individuality instead of always imitating every other freak in the universe. It wouldn't astonish me to find the Hub turning over a new leaf when we have all tasted the disappointment of over "cultivation" and our new made aesthetics, and found what mistakes we have committed in the name of progress.—Herald.

☞ Merchants of the city have been solicited for merchandise for fairs and for one purpose and another till they have felt compelled to form an organization against it. The fair season is nearly over and probably it will not interfere with the success of many such affairs for this spring, but the merchants seem to agree that there will be a change another fall and that the "sandbagging" method of sending a committee to wait on a merchant, and ask what he is going to give will be met with a polite negative all along the line. Such combinations have been made in many cities in self-defence, and Brockton seems likely to join the movement.—Brockton Enterprise.

☞ The city of Newburyport was one of the petitioners before the legislature for the right to construct municipal conduits for the burying of the wires, and having failed to get permission is now considering the project of private enterprise in putting the wires underground. There doesn't appear to be any difference of opinion on the part of any one as to the advisability of getting the wires underground, and the only question is as to the method. The issue of municipal conduits has been before the legislature for several years, and the sentiment does not appear to be any more encouraging for the idea than it was several years ago, the objection being not only on the ground of expense for the municipality, but in the fact that electric insulation has not yet been perfected to the degree that insures safety in the proximity of high and low tension wires. Until it is achieved and until the legislators of the state undergo a complete conversion, there is slight prospect of municipal conduits being adopted, and the only alternative is to secure the best kind of an agreement possible with private companies, which the majority of the cities in the commonwealth are doing, and up to date no complaint has been heard from any who have made the experiment.—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ When his wife died, the late J. Sterling Morton had erected over her grave a tombstone bearing the inscription, "Caroline French, wife of J. Sterling Morton and mother of Joy, Paul, Carl and Mark Morton." "Why did you put the boys' names in?" inquired a friend of him one day. "I took my boys out to the cemetery," said Mr. Morton, "and showed them their mother's grave. 'Boys,' I said, 'your mother is buried here. If any one of you does anything dishonorable or anything of which she would be ashamed if she were alive, I will chisel your name from her tombstone.'"—Brockton Enterprise.

Double Tracking.

Work was commenced this morning double tracking Hancock street, between Adams and Squantum streets. It was intended to commence work at the Adams street end, but Hancock street at its junction with Greenleaf is torn up by the Metropolitan sewer so work was commenced opposite Merrymount road. Gore & Co. are doing the job and they have a gang of seventy five men at work.

Keep the Balance Up.

It has been truthfully said that any disturbance of the even balance of health causes serious trouble. Nobody can be too careful to keep this balance up. When people begin to lose appetite, or to get tired easily, the least imprudence brings on sickness, weakness, or debility. The system needs a tonic, craves it and should not be denied it; and the best tonic of which we have any knowledge is Hood's Sarsaparilla. What this medicine has done in keeping healthy people healthy, in keeping up the even balance of health, gives it the same distinction as a preventive that it enjoys as a cure. Its early use has illustrated the wisdom of the old saying that a stitch in time saves nine. Take Hood's for appetite, strength and endurance.

Naval experts put down the active life of a modern battleship at about 15 years. A hundred years ago battleships lasted nearly six times as long and were in active service nearly the whole time of their commission.

Fore River Ship Yard.

The Fore River Ship and Engine Company has just purchased a very complete hook and ladder truck for its yard fire department.

Work on the concrete dock along the new fitting-out wharf at the Fore River shipyard was begun Monday. The dock will be the foundation upon which the big gantry crane that has just arrived at the yard will travel. As soon as a sufficient length of concrete has been finished the crane will be set up so as to be ready for immediate use.

The housings and mechanisms of the new set of large plate rolls that are the latest addition to the equipment of the ship tool house at Fore River are being put in their places and the machine will be at work before long. The rolls were made in the shipyard's own shops. Two of them are the fine pieces of Krupp steel that were once the shafts of "Jim" Fisk's famous old steamer, the Providence, and the third was forged and finished entirely at Fore River.

There will be a mile of gravity railroad tracks under the new Fore River shiphouse—itself the greatest piece of shipbuilding mechanism in the country, and perhaps in the world. The construction of the battleships New Jersey and Rhode Island is being pushed as fast as possible and the gravity road will bring materials from all over the yard to every part of the shiphouse under which they stand.

The official government test of the casting of the 20-ton steel stem of the battleship New Jersey was made at Fore River, Monday. The great lump of metal was raised 10 feet from the ground by a temporary derrick and then dropped by the cutting of the suspending rope. The test was entirely satisfactory.

Seventy-five more pneumatic tools have been added to the equipment at Fore River, making the number now in use in the yard several hundred. The "air" for them is supplied by the new 5000-foot compresser recently installed in the power house, the 1000-foot compresser formerly in use being held in reserve now.

The staging for the battleship Rhode Island is all up under the shiphouse at Fore River and the raising of the frames has begun.

One of the largest and quickest shipwright jobs that has been done on Boston harbor for a long time has just been finished by the Fore River Ship and Engine Company at its Quincy Point yard. It is a rudder forging for the British steamship "Nyassa" which is undergoing repairs at the Townsend & Downey works. The forging is wrought iron and weighs 9,620 pounds, and the total height is 36 feet two inches, breadth six feet eight inches, and the diameter of the stock is eight inches. The Fore River Company completed the work in three weeks.

The overhauling of the steam yacht "Duchess," Leonard J. Busby of New York, owner, is about finished and her master expects her to leave the Fore River yard, where she lay all winter, next week.

Base Ball.

Quincy High school lost to Milton High school at Wollaston park yesterday 9—3. High school was handicapped in the fact that most all of the players were put in unaccustomed positions. The number of errors made was the result of this change, however, the heavy wind was as largely due to the poor throwing as it was to the weak batting. In the whole game there were only seven hits on both sides. High school was unable to foul Mahoney safely while Milton could early foul Fallon's swift ball. Hunt at second played a steady infield game while Brown and Devaney handled the ball clumsily. Decoste's star catch at center was the feature.

The friends of Mr. Ralph Foss of of Beach srreet, are pleased to see him about his duties again.

The wall in front of the Nancy Brackett estate which was recently partly torn down by hoodlums is being repaired.

Work has been commenced fitting up the rear room on the upper floor of the Savings Bank building for the telephone exchange office.

McGrath Bros. have been setting up a monument in the Central cemetery, Randolph, on the lot of Mrs. Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, of Metuchen, N. J.

A high wind prevailed all Friday night and it was decidedly cold. The wind was strong and the air cold this morning but it warmed up some by noon.

Frank Pollock, a Quincy young man who has been employed in New York, has been transferred to the Boston office of his firm, and will make his home in Quincy.

The Edward Hewiston Associates expect to give a superfine concert at Wollaston, Tuesday. They have several new selections and will be assisted by the well known basso, Mr. Arthur Beresford.

Mr. Reuben Hersey of Hingham is erecting two new cottages on the Terrence Keenan property, which he purchased a few years ago. If some Quincy residents had half of Mr. Hersey's enterprise there would be many more desirable houses to rent.

In order that the general public may be better accommodated, Postmaster Hammond has arranged so that hereafter, after the Money Order department at the Quincy office closes at 6 o'clock, letters may be registered at the stamp window until the office close. This will be a great convenience.

The Magazines.

The May number of the New England Magazine is an excellent compendium of what is of timely interest to these states. The new yard of the Fore River Ship and Engine company at Quincy, forms the subject of a most interesting illustrated article by Ralph Bergengren under the title of "Shipbuilding in Massachusetts." It is richly illustrated and by a paper as well as an industry in which Quincy will take pride.

Clarence Hawkes of Hadley, Mass., depicts a New England character, the "Country Doctor," in his story of that title in the May National and gives a thrilling description of a ride the doctor made to save a village from destruction of flood. Aloysius Coll of Connellsville, Pa., presents in "The Hurricane of the Hive," an epic story of the life of the bee people. Alice E. Allen contributes a delicious little sketch of a proposal in the orchard. The National's fiction expresses the spirit of the Spring.

The May number of The Pilgrim has a distinct out-of-door flavor. Mr. Sylvester Baxter leads the magazine with an article on "The Picturesque Aspects of Municipal Socialism" which to a great extent, is a description of the work done in Boston to provide out-of-door recreation for the masses. The illustrations are plentiful and beautiful as well. Mr. Wilhelm Miller, of the Encyclopoedia of American Horticulture, contributes a second of his gardening articles. This one suggests ways for using wild flowers in the home garden.

The editorial department of the Review of Reviews for May gives an excellent summary and exposition of the various measures before Congress. There are also illuminating paragraphs on foreign politics—the French elections, affairs in the far East, and the South African situation, with discriminating comment on the career of Cecil Rhodes and the purpose and probable results of his remarkable benefactions.

Should be Sacredly Kept.

The New Bedford Veteran Firemen, at a regular meeting held Wednesday evening, voted that hereafter the association will take no part in any playout, engine trial or muster which is held on Memorial day. The New Bedford association is the first one in the country to pass such a vote. The opinion of the members, as expressed at their meeting and by their vote, was that Memorial day should be sacredly kept for its own purpose, and that engine trials are out of place on that day.

Assessors' Notice.

TO the inhabitants of the City of Quincy, and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein: You are hereby required to bring in to the Assessors of said City

On or Before June 15, 1902,

True and Perfect Lists of all the Polls, and Schedules and Estimates of all the Personal Estates and Real Estate for which you are liable to pay taxes.

Persons Holding Estates in Trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the Assessors with Statements in relation to such estates.

When the estates of persons deceased have been divided, or have changed hands from other causes during the past year, the Executors, Administrators, or other persons interested, are required to give notice of such changes, and in default of such notice will be held to pay the taxes assessed.

Blank forms for "Return of Property for Taxation" can be procured of the Assessors.

The following may serve as a guide to assist in making up Schedules and Statements:

Number of Polls 20 years and upwards; Money at interest; Amount of Money on hand, including deposits in Banks, etc., other than Savings Banks incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth; Railroad, Town, City, State and other Bonds (except those of the United States); Shares and Stocks of Insurance, Manufacturing and other incorporated companies chartered or organized under the laws of any State other than Massachusetts; Goods, Wares, Merchandise and other stock in trade, within or without the State; Household Furniture, exceeding $1,000 in value; Horses, Mules, Carriages, Oxen, Cows, other neat Cattle not less than one year old, and Swine and Sheep not less than six months old; Income from Profession, Trade or Employment exceeding $2,000; Personal Property held in trust or by wife or minor children.

Attention is hereby called to Section 32 of Chapter 12 of the Revised Laws.

"Whoever, with intent to defeat or evade the provisions of law in relation to assessment or payment of taxes, delivers or discloses to an assessor or an assistant assessor a false or fraudulent list, return, or schedule of property as and for a true list of his estates, not exempted from taxation shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment in jail not exceeding one year."

MORTGAGED PROPERTY—A mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the city or town in which it lies, within the time prescribed by the notice under Sect. 41, a statement under oath of the amount secured thereon or on each separate parcel thereof, with the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagor or mortgagee. If such property is situated in two or more places, or if a recorded mortgage includes two or more estates or parts of an estate as security for one sum, such statement shall include an estimate of the interest of the mortgagee in each estate or part of an estate. The assessors shall, from such statement or otherwise, ascertain the proportionate interests of the mortgagor or mortgagee respectively in said estates, and shall assess the same accordingly. If, in any year, such statement is not brought in, the tax for that year on such real estate shall not be invalid hereby for the reason that the interest of the mortgagee therein has not been assessed to him.—Sect. 45, Chap. 12, Revised Laws.

When a statement in conformity to the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under Sects. 16, 17 and 18 of Chap. 12 of the Revised Laws. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, no statement or return is required from either the mortgagee or mortgagor unless requested by the assessors in writing.

The Assessors will be in session at their office every Thursday morning from 9 to 11 o'clock. Blanks will be furnished to all applicants.

A BANANA TREE.

The Fruit Grows Small End Up and Is Cut While Unripe.

Contrary to popular belief, bananas do not grow on the tree as they hang in the grocery, but with the small end of the fruit pointing upward—to all appearances upside down.

There is probably no other fruit of such universal consumption about which so little is known to the average person as the banana. Something like 100,000,000 bunches are annually eaten in this country alone, but scarcely one man in a thousand not connected with the business knows what a banana tree looks like.

The fruit is never allowed to ripen on the tree, but is cut half or three-quarters "full"—that is, half to three-quarters developed—according to the distance it is to be shipped, and comes to maturity by feeding from the stalk, which contains a large amount of sap. Bananas cut in this way attain practically the same size as if allowed to remain on the tree, in which case the bunch becomes too much of a burden for its support and either falls or breaks the tree and ripens on the ground.

After the cutting the plantation is "cleaned," which merely consists of severing the standing trunks within a few feet of the ground, and a new tree comes forth from the remains of its predecessor, so that the fruit in all stages of growth is to be found at the same time and the yield is continuous.

An Anecdote of Wordsworth.

A contributor to the London Spectator thus writes to that journal:

Your interesting article on "Vastness and Isolation" recalls to my mind Wordsworth's own interpretation of the lines

Those obstinate questionings
Of sense and outward things,
Fallings from us, vanishings—

as reported to me by the late Professor Bonamy Price. One day as he was walking with the poet in the hills he asked him what he meant precisely by the words "fallings from us, vanishings." Wordsworth's answer was to this effect: "Sometimes I find myself in a mood in which the whole material universe seems to fall away. The sense of outward things is lost. Nothing remains but an immaterial self, detached from all physical conditions. In order to get back into the known world of consciousness I have to clutch at something—so." Here he grasped the bar of the gate on which they were leaning at the moment. I was much struck by the story at the time and made a note of it.

George Washington's Sobriquets.

Washington was called by many sobriquets. He was first of all "Father of His Country." "Providence left him childless that his country might call him father." Sigourney calls him "Pater Patriae;" Chief Justice Marshall, the "American Fabius." Lord Byron in his "Ode to Napoleon" calls him "The Cincinnatus of the West." For having a new world on his shoulders he was called the "Atlas of America." The English soldiery called him by the sarcastic nickname of "Lovely Georgius." Red Jacket, the Seneca Indian chief, called him the "Flower of the Forest." The Italian poet Vittorio Alfieri called him "Deliverer of America." In The Gazette of the United States he was called the "Savior of His Country." His bitter opponents sarcastically called him the "Stepfather of His Country" during his presidency.

Dangers of Procrastination.

Landlady—I s'pose you noticed that long whiskered old gentleman who sat opposite you at dinner today? That is Professor Driebones, and you can have his room, as he is going west on a scientific exploration—strangest thing you ever heard.

New Boarder—What is?

Landlady—The object of his tour. He has been told that a prehistoric cave has been discovered out west, and in it sat ten skeletons around a petrified table.

New Boarder—Well, well! Why didn't the fools change their boarding house sooner?

Tea in the Time of Buddha.

At the time of Buddha China was enjoying a large foreign commerce in tea. It was carried by her junks to Japan, Korea, Tonquin, Anam, Cochin, Burma, Siam, India, Ceylon, Persia and Arabia. According to one record, it was sent to a great black river country west of Arabia, from which it was separated by a long and very torrid sea, which must have been Egypt. It was carried by caravans to Manchuria, Mongolia, Kuldja, Tartary, Tibet, Persia and northern India.

A Boy's Definition of Peace.

"Can you tell me the meaning of the word peace?" asked Miss Gray of a little boy who had just recited a patriotic poem in which the word occurred.

"Peace means when you ain't got no children," answered the child.

"How is that?" asked Miss Gray.

"When my mother has washed and dressed her six children for school in the morning, she says, 'Now I'll have peace.'"—Chicago Tribune.

The Politician's Friends.

"I never found it necessary to do so," said the other. "As soon as I was not in a position to favor him my friend always went back on me."—Washington Star.

Grass fires continue to demand the attention of the fire department which is called out frequently upon still alarms to extinguish them.

Several of the young misses of the East Milton gymnasium improved the opportunity while the firemen are absent from the engine house to practice on the sliding pole. It is good practice and may serve them a good turn some day.

A pleasing entertainment was given at the meeting of the Thursday Evening club this week.

There is a movement on foot to form a new social club at East Milton. The promoters say that they will exclude some of the things that helped wind up the Unquity club, and that it will be carried on in a more business like manner.

It has been found necessary to open up the sewer trench on Adams street near Mechanics street from the surface. When the contractors started in it was with the intention to tunnel. A shaft was sunk to a depth of forty feet but as several pumps were unable to keep it free from water, the idea of tunnelling had to be given up. The expense of opening up the trench from the surface will be greater than tunnelling.

SUCCESSFUL FAIR.

Mansion School Girls Work For City Hospital.

One of the social events of the season at the Quincy Mansion school was the sale Friday afternoon and evening in Livermore hall, for the purpose of endowing a contagious ward at the Quincy city hospital.

The "gym" where the sale was held was very prettily decorated for the occasion. Booths were arranged on all sides of the room and in the center, and were gaily decked with buntin, colored paper and Japanese lantern.

The students were becomingly gowned and did their best to encourage the visitors to purchase.

No fair is considered complete without a palmist tent and the two ladies who read palms did a rushing business. There was also a wireless telegraph office in one corner from which startling telegrams were frequently issued. The fair netted a goodly sum.

Dr. Horace Mann Willard and Mrs. Willard received many callers during the evening who congratulated them upon the work of the school. One of the guests was Mme Rodee of Ogdensburg, N. Y., a sister of Maj. Gen. Wesley A. Merritt, U. S. A.

The students in charge of the several booths were as follows:

Enjoyable Dance.

IN THE TEMPLE OF RUIN

By WILLIS EMERY

Copyright, 1901, by Frederick R. Toombs

MONTE CARLO was the scene of this little adventure. The season was early June. The gardens were sweet with a thousand odors and silvery with moonlight, but in the casino there were glaring lights and a heat that seemed to strike upon the top of one's head and the scents that are bad counterfeits of flowers.

A young gentleman named Wilmot, whom I had met in Paris, had dined with me at the hotel, and we had then strolled across to the place where visitors are expected to spend their money in the purchase of nervous prostration. I had never visited this temple of absurdity before, but Wilmot, who had spent some years abroad, had been there often—much oftener, in fact, than any real friend of his would have wished. On this occasion he lost about 20 louis without winning a bet.

"Well, well!" he cried. "I'm not in luck tonight. Aren't you going to play?"

I confessed that I could see nothing in the sport. I had tried it elsewhere and had found, as one who lacks the instinct always will, that gambling is the most disappointing of the polite vices.

All the seats at the table were occupied, but there was no great crowd about. Two or three men were dodging here and there to lay their bets, but we had room to spare at the end of the board, where we remained awhile to watch the faces of the players.

There were no great gains or losses. I was interested principally in two women who sat side by side, one of them mildly successful, the other steadily losing. It was amusing to observe that the woman who lost was angry with the woman who won and not with the croupier who swept in her money nor with herself for being so foolish as to play.

Among those who lost was a young gentleman with a typical Yankee countenance and the tall, thin, strong figure that matches with it. I sympathized with him because he was a fellow countryman and also because he was a long way from home and so might be the more seriously embarrassed by the sort of indiscretion which this place was built to encourage. I observed that his eye was always on the wheel when the ball was rolling and that when it fell in the wrong place he started as if with a spasm of pain.

I had seen him lose about 200 francs upon the numbers 31, 32 and 33 when a very charming young woman, simply dressed and escorted by a youth who looked as if he might be the brother of the player, approached the table and addressed the object of my interest. He had no seat, but was reaching over between two other gamesters to lay down his bets.

At the sound of the woman's voice he straightened up, withholding his money, and turned to speak to her. Their conversation was surely no business of mine, and I moved aside, but I could not help hearing her beg him to come away. She was not insistent, and she veiled her anxiety beneath some thin excuse of a social duty that he was neglecting, yet the essence of the affair was obvious. I felt a strong desire to take the young man by the collar and march him out of the place, but the etiquette of Monte Carlo forbids such help from man to man. So I remained passive, while the croupier announced the number 32.

The young woman, whom I rightly judged to be the wife of the player, turned away, hiding considerable vexation. She had accomplished nothing except that she had prevented her husband from putting down his money at a time when he would have won.

Though I felt that any gains he might make would only bind him more securely to a folly that could have but one conclusion, I was so full of human frailty as to wish that he might win. It was not possible from where I stood to watch the rolling ball with any accuracy or to get a notion where it would fall even in the very last instant, but he was nearer, and his face told me unmistakably when the infernal bit of ivory narrowly missed his numbers.

In half an hour not one of them had won, and the croupier had changed the last of the notes from the small roll which had been tightly clinched in the young man's left hand. His last supply of 5 frank pieces quickly vanished, and he began to bet "petit monnaie" from his pockets. He had a surprising quantity of silver, and whenever I fancied he had come to the end of it he would thrust a nervous hand into another pocket and bring forth the value of one more wager.

I think, however, that his very last 5 frank piece was on the board when the croupier called 32. The young man had upon this number the value of $1, the smallest sum that may be bet at Monte Carlo. When the bet had been paid, he had 180 francs, or $36. With this encouragement he laid down his money more liberally, and almost immediately won again upon 31.

Then I could see in his eyes that hope was alive in him. It always seems so natural that fate should relent. The element of pity in a human heart is shocked by the brutality of chance and is very slow to believe that the ultimate intention can be bad. It may have seemed only fair to this young gentleman that he should have a turn of luck upon his last coin and should win enough to recompense him for his sufferings. He wiped the sweat from his brow and went into the silly struggle with a new courage.

But the little ivory ball that cared nothing for him or for his sacred obligations to his wife refused to perform the small service that was requisite. Instead it tantalized him by falling into 17, which is on one side of 32, and then into 20, which is upon the other side of it. And I could see the poor fellow's heart leap in his bosom.

Watching this performance, I got my first comprehension of the gambling passion, which has for its basis a fatuous pugnacity; an aimless, agonizing resistance to an impalpable foe. At the outset I wished this man to stop playing. I knew that he was doing a foolish thing. At the last I merely wished him to win, and I saw his coin dwindle with no more rational feeling than sorrow and wrath that he must stop, give up, go away beaten.

I remembered hearing that an English nobleman, Lord Arrelsford, whose wealth had been a byword on the continent since the recent death of his uncle, had won 45,000 francs on the day before our arrival. Why could not such luck come to this man who needed it rather than to that Crœsus to whom ten times the sum would be of no importance? When one asks why, why, why, he is beginning to be a gambler, for a sane man knows there is no why in the matter.

"That man is losing more than he can afford," whispered Wilmot. "I don't like the look of him."

"Nor I," was my rejoinder. "Confound those numbers! Why don't they come?"

"They won't show again," said Wilmot, with the confidence of an experienced gambler who is always deceived with the notion that he has some small insight into the ways of chance. "He is on his last legs."

"I don't think he has another franc in his pockets," said I, "but it looks as if he were going to make another search."

"So you've noticed that hand of his, eh? It's hovering around his hip pocket, and it's not money he has there."

"You don't mean"—

"I mean just that," whispered Wilmot. "He wouldn't be the first man who's shot himself over that table. The croupiers are watching him."

"Gracious heavens!" I exclaimed. "Did you see his wife?"

Wilmot nodded, with his eyes full of meaning.

"This is a terrible place," he said. "Edge over a little nearer to him, and if he loses his next bet look out!"

The croupier called 5. Our friend had three coins remaining. He covered 31,

HE WOULD THRUST A NERVOUS HAND INTO ANOTHER POCKET.

32 and 33. Again the ball whirled around. It seemed to me that it rolled for half an hour before it fell sharply against one of the divisions of the wheel and bounced back.

I waited for the croupier's word, but the ball had not come to rest. It was spinning like a top on the edge of the wheel, upheld only by the force of its rotation and seemingly fixed on the revolving disk. I got a glimpse of it, and it was poised above the number 32. Immediately it fell with a little click.

"Twenty, black, even and above!" called the croupier. And I saw our young gentleman's hand go trembling to his hip pocket, while his figure straightened rigidly.

I laid my hand upon his sleeve, and he turned like a flash.

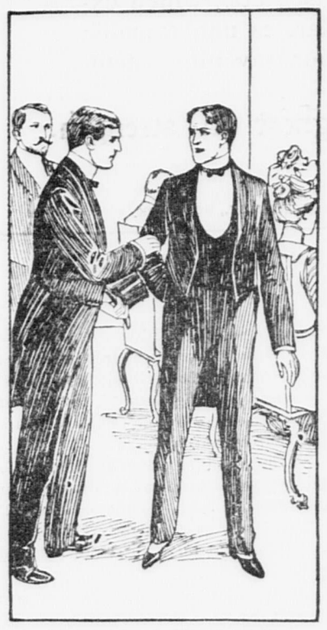

"Don't do it," said I in a low tone. "Think of her."

"Why, what the devil do you mean?" he demanded and drew forth his hand hastily.

I had a firm grip on him before I perceived that what he had taken from his pocket was not a revolver, but a wallet.

The sight staggered me, and yet in a tenth part of a second I perceived that his folly was really almost as bad as the one I had anticipated. By his anxiety I knew that the money in the wallet must be a reserve, the loss of which would leave him stranded.

It was hard to say that which I knew should be said, but at that moment I caught a glimpse of his wife and brother approaching somewhat hastily through the long rooms.

I LAID MY HAND ON HIS SLEEVE.

"Pardon an entire stranger," said I, "but you know we're both Americans, and"—

"Well, upon my word!" he cried.

—"and you—you really mustn't lose any more. You're not Lord Arrelsford, you know. You can't afford"—

"Bless my soul!" he said slowly as he fixed his bright blue eyes upon me. "I really like your impudence. If I'm not Lord Arrelsford, who the deuce am I? You may know more than I do about my financial situation, but, by George, sir, I know my own name!"

Lord Arrelsford turned to the table and took from his wallet a sum of money that made me dizzy. When I recovered consciousness, Wilmot was leading me away.

"Nicknackitorian."

London shopkeepers' slang is a dialect in itself and one that is always changing. What, then, is a "nicknackitorian?" We know not the word today, but, looking recently through some old law cases dating about a hundred years back, I was puzzled to find it applied in all good faith to describe a plaintiff in the sheriff's court. On further search it turned out to be a piece of forgotten cockney slang for a dealer in bric-a-brac.

The evidence showed that this plaintiff kept a sort of old curiosity shop, in which he dispensed "mummies," poisoned arrows, the head of King Arthur's spear and a genuine manuscript of the "first play acted by Thespis and his company in a wagon!" The defendant, a woman, had actually bought and paid for some of these rarities, but she died after having commissioned the embalming of an orang outang to add to her collection, and for this her executors refused to pay. Counsel for the defense poured contempt on the mummy of the orang outang and called it a "stuffed monkey."

But the "nicknackitorian" won his case. His profession was more taking than his name.—Manchester Guardian.

Doubtful Praise.

Mr. Faxon was the oldest patron of the "select boarding house" in which he lived, and his landlady sometimes referred people to him for a recommendation of her table.

His wish was to praise the food highly, as he could conscientiously do, but one day he overstepped his mark.

"I'm dyspeptic, sir," said a man who had gone to Mr. Faxon to make inquiries about the boarding house, "and my food has to be simple and well cooked—no high seasoning, no indigestible compounds."

Mr. Faxon looked at him with a bland and reassuring smile.

"My dear sir," he said in his most impressive manner, "you need have no fears. All I have eaten in the ten years I have been under Mrs. Brown's roof would not interfere with the digestion of the most delicate baby, sir, in the land."

Hiding the Children.

A ticket examiner entered a compartment wherein a respectably dressed lady was comfortably seated. He did not notice a long, flat package lying on the opposite seat, covered with a traveling rug and a newspaper carelessly thrown over it, and he probably would have left the compartment oblivious of its existence had not a pair of sweet, pretty eyes peeped over the top and in a cautious tone the owner of them inquired:

"Mamma, has the man gone yet?"

The artful mother confusedly explained that her child was only three and entitled to travel free, but curiosity impelled him to further investigation, and a robust young girl of apparently ten revealed herself.—London Tit-Bits.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For Week Beginning May 11. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Jesus the living bread.—John vi, 22-35, 48-58.

It was the common custom of Christ to represent Himself and His work by apt and comprehensive figures. He calls Himself "the door," the "good shepherd," the "water of life," the way" and in the passage before us the "living bread." "I am the living bread which came down from heaven. If any man eat of the bread, he shall live forever, and the bread that I will give is My flesh, which I will give for the life of the world."

Christ's reference to Himself as "the bread of life" and "the living bread" occurred in connection with the feeding of the five thousand on the shores of the Galilean sea. The multitudes flocked around Him the next day, apparently hoping and expecting that He would continue to supply their physical needs. But this was not His mission upon the earth. While He did not underrate or ignore the importance of the body, His principal mission upon the earth was to save the souls. Hence He used the opportunity presented in connection with the miracle to place this fact before the multitudes and to impress upon their minds the superior importance of that which supports eternal life rather than the present life. "Labor not," He says, "for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of Man shall give unto you. For him hath God the Father sealed." Then in the discourse following He goes on to present Himself as the bread of life, or the one able to give and support spiritual eternal life, as bread or food does the physical life.

Christ became the living bread, or the bread able to give us eternal life, by laying down His life for us on the cross. There His body was broken and His blood was shed for our salvation. By faith we partake of His body and blood, or the results of His sacrifice for us. The living bread is not to be bought. It is a gift of God. Bread that supports the physical life is purchasable, and there have been times when it was most expensive. But not so the living bread. God offers it to us as a free gift. It can be had without money and without price. This may seem to us incredible. It may be hard to realize that such a boon as eternal life could be had for the acceptance, but let us remember that Christ has paid the price of our salvation, and therefore God is able to offer it to us as a free gift upon the condition of our acceptance of it.

Bread to be of use must be partaken of. Its mere existence will not keep us alive. We must actually eat of it if we would live. So we must actually partake of Christ by faith if we are to be saved. The living bread has been prepared, but we must eat to be saved. Let us therefore accept Christ's work in our behalf and be saved by what He has done for us.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ex. xxvi, 4-15; Deut. viii, 1-5; Isa. lv, 1-7; Matt. iv, 1-4; vi, 11; vii, 1-12; xxvi, 26-28; John xxi, 14-17; I Cor. x, 16.

Maintaining Moral Sentiment.

It takes line upon line and precept upon precept to form and maintain an exalted moral sentiment in a neighborhood. And sometimes labor in this direction seems lost. But when we hear our missionaries give an account of the state of society in heathen lands, the utter lack of ideas and sentiments which seem so common with us as to be almost natural, we realize that these years of Christian teaching have borne fruit.

But we may not conclude that the children of even Christian parents will imbibe lofty ideals and possess stanch characters without right teaching and continuous care. But we have the promise that our work shall not be in vain in the Lord and that he that goeth forth weeping, sowing precious seed, shall doubtless come again rejoicing, bearing his sheaves with him.—American Friend.

Doing Good.

To do good and communicate forget not. The man who wants a chance so to act will soon find an opportunity. No one need go with his hands in his pockets for want of something to do for God and the good of humanity. There is work on every hand to which he is lovingly invited.—Philadelphia Methodist.

"To Sift Thee as Wheat."

Sifting is a slow process sometimes. It takes time to get down to the grain, and that is what God wants, the true and sweet kernel. We don't make bread of chaff.—Episcopal Recorder.

A True Way.

The true way of softening one's troubles is to solace those of others.—Mme. de Maintenon.

Be Still.

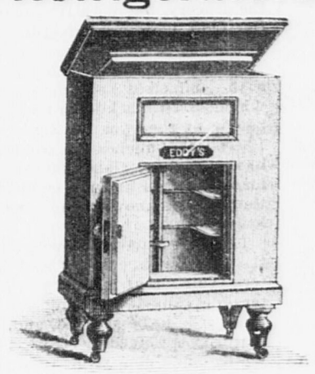

O heart of mine, be calm and still
And ever trustful be;
Learn thou that God's almighty will
Is right and best for thee,
Though from the shore
There stretch before
The raging billows of the sea.

And dost thou deem that He whose hand
Did first the sea outpour,
Who bade it sweep the shining strand
With thunder in its roar,
Hath not the power
To make it cower
And tremble to the very core?

He brought thee in His wisdom here
Upon its verge to stand,
With rumbling chariots in the rear
And hills on every hand,
Thy faith to test;
Then be at rest,
For this is God's benign command.

Behold! The winds are beating back
The sullen, angry sea;
The billows fly and leave a track
That leads to liberty!
So, heart be still;
A higher will
Shall ever choose the best for thee.

FORTY THOUSAND DEAD

Latest Estimate Regarding Calamity In St Pierre

BUT TWENTY SURVIVORS

Eighteen Vessels Burned and Sunk With All on Board—Description of Island Noted For Fantastic Savagery of Volcanic Scenery

St. Thomas, D. W. I., May 10.—It is now estimated that 40,000 persons perished as a result of the volcanic eruption in the island of Martinique.

San Juan, P. R., May 10.—The cable officials here have received advices from the island of Dominica that a schooner which has arrived there from the island of Martinique reports that over 40,000 people are supposed to have perished during the volcanic disturbance in Martinique. The cable repair steamer Grappler was lost with all hands during the eruption of Mt. Pelee, at St. Pierre. The Grappler was one of the first ships to disappear.

Washington, May 10.—The following cablegram has been received at the state department:

"Point a Pitre, May 9, 1902, "At 7 o'clock a. m. on the 8th inst., a storm of steam, mud and fire enveloped the city and community. Not more than 20 persons escaped with their lives. Eighteen vessels were burned and sunk with all on board, including four American vessels and a steamer from Quebec named Roraima. The United States consul and family are reported among the victims. A war vessel has come to Guadeloupe for provisions and will leave at 5 tomorrow.

"Ayme, consul."

The latest available figures show that the total population of the island of Martinique is 185,000 people, of who a 25,000 lived in St. Pierre and, according to Mr. Ayme, have nearly all perished.

The consul at Martinique is Thomas T. Prentiss of Melrose, Mass. He was born in Michigan and was appointed from Massachusetts as consul at Martinique in 1900. The vice consul at Martinique is Amedee Testart, who was born and appointed from Louisiana in 1898.

Bridgetown, Island of Barbadoes, B. W. I., May 10.—Volcanic dust from the eruption in the island of St. Vincent is still falling here. The roads and houses are covered an inch thick.

The Island of Barbadoes is over a 100 miles from the island of St. Vincent.

St. Pierre was the largest city and the commercial capital of the island of Martinique, the biggest of the French West Indies, whose greatest elevation is Mt. Pelee, 4430 feet high, the eruption of which, after a long period of inactivity, has destroyed the town.

The city of St. Pierre was of about 25,000 people, the great majority being of black or mixed blood. It was on the northwest coast and was the only fortified port on the island. It has no harbor, properly speaking, but an open roadstead, protected except during periodical hurricanes.

St. Pierre was settled by the French in 1635, and was well built and prosperous. It was divided into two parts, known as the upper and the lower towns. The lower town was compact, with narrow streets, and unhealthy. The upper town was cleaner, healthier and handsomely laid out. There was in the upper town a fine botanical garden and an old Catholic college, as well as a fine hospital.

Martinique is in the Windward group. The island has the same general characteristics as its nearest neighbors with some peculiarities of its own. Its extreme length is about 45 miles from northwest to southeast, and the main part of it is in the shape of an oval with rough edges, its greatest width being 15 miles. At the lower end of this main part, the old Fort Royal Bay—since the French revolution called Fort de France Bay—cuts in so deep as to come within six miles of meeting the inlets of Le Robert and Le Francais on the other side. Fort de France is the political capital, and a railway runs from this city to St. Pierre.

The whole area of the island, nearly 400 square miles, is mountainous. The mountainous interior is torn and gashed with ancient earthquake upheavals, and there are perpendicular cliffs, deep clefts and gorges, black holes filled with water and swift torrents dashing over precipices and falling into caverns—in a word all the fantastic savagery of volcanic scenery, but the whole covered with the rich verdure of the tropics. Mt. Pelee, the largest of the group of volcanic mountains, had long been inactive as a volcano, although in August, 1851, it had a violent eruption. It is in the northwestern end of the island and near the foot of its western slope, fronting the bay, St. Pierre was built. The total population of the island is reckoned at 175,000, of whom 10,000 are whites, 15,000 of Asiatic origin and 150,000 blacks of all shades.

Martinique has interesting claims to historical distinction. Empress Josephine was born there, as was Mme. de Maintenon, the latter passing her girlhood on the island as Francoise d'Aubigne. At Fort de France there is a marble statue of the Empress Josephine. Martinique, called by the Indians, Madiana, was discovered by Columbus in 1502. The French during the war for American independence made it a great naval station. The British seized it in 1762, 1781, 1794, and 1809, finally restoring it by the treaty of Paris in 1814. The slaves rebelled in 1782, 1833, and 1839; slavery was abolished in 1848. Since 1866 the colony has legislated for itself on duties and public works. The island's chief articles of export are sugar, coffee, cotton and cocoa.

Martinique became an interesting point in this country during the recent war with Spain. The first news of the arrival of the Spanish fleet of Admiral Cevera came from St. Pierre. At 9:30 in the morning of May 11, 1898, the cruiser Harvard arrived at St. Pierre, and at 6 o'clock the same evening a faithful correspondent at Fort de France communicated to the Harvard's commander the fact that the Spanish torpedo boat destroyer Furor had put into Fort de France. The destroyer turned out to be the Terror instead of the Furor, but the important fact that Cervera was on this side of the ocean was established.

DELIBERATELY PLANNED

A Survivor of the Balangiga Massacre Gives His Testimony

Washington, May 10.—William J. Gibbs of Springfield, Mass., formerly corporal of Company C., Ninth infantry, told the Philippine committee yesterday the story of the massacre of soldiers at Balangiga. He also described the mutilation of the dead soldiers and told of the disappearance of one soldier whom the natives charged with criminal assault, but, he said, the charge was not believed. He said the natives were dissatisfied because they were compelled to work.

The witness stated that Captain Connell, who commanded the troops, did not treat the natives right, as he destroyed their supply of food. He said the massacre was deliberately planned and he judged that boys participated, as he saw a number of them lying about dead.

To Dispossess Beef Trust

Jefferson City, Mo., May 10.—Attorney General Crow last night filed in the supreme court ouster proceedings against the Armour Packing company, the Hammond Packing company, the Cudahy Packing company, Armour & Co., and the Krug Packing company for alleged violation of the state anti-trust laws, in combining to fix and maintain prices and to control the supply of dressed, cured and smoked meats and lard in Missouri. An alternative writ was issued returnable May 30. United States Attorney General Knox telegraphed yesterday for a copy of the evidence and Mr. Crow will furaish it at once.

Archbishop Corrigan's Funeral

New York, May 10.—The body of the most Reverend Michael A. Corrigan, D. D., archbishop of New York, was interred yesterday in the crypt of St. Patrick's cathedral. The funeral was conducted with all the impressive solemnity and ceremony of his church and attended by a remarkable gathering of clergy. A vast multitude assembled to pay last reverence to the dead prelate. The chimes played, the bells tolled from the spires, and after that more than 1000 priests, 17 bishops and eight archbishops and Cardinal Gibbons filed in.

Senatorial Deadlock Continues

Dover, Del., May 10.—The "Union Republican" members of the legislature, who are in the majority and who stood out for the election of J. E. Addicks as one of the two United States senators from Delaware, thereby causing a deadlock and consequent failure to elect, met yesterday and reiterated their determination to insist upon their right to name one of the senators. This action is regarded as closing the door against the effort which has been in progress looking to the election of senators at a special session of the legislature.

Protested Innocence on Gallows

Wheeling, May 10.—John Mooney and Frank Friday were hanged yesterday on the same scaffold, with a simultaneous drop, for the murder of James Hervey. Prominent Spaniard Murdered

COAL STRIKE ORDERED

Lackawanna Collieries Will Be Idle on Monday

A RESERVE QUALIFICATION

Leaving the Question of Making Strike Permanent to Convention to Be Held on Wednesday—Men Necessary to Preserve Property Remain at Work

Scranton, Pa., May 10.—A general strike of the miners of the anthracite region has been ordered for Monday next, but the order has a reserve qualification attached. The question as to whether the strike is to be made permanent is left to the decision of a convention of delegates of all the local organizations of the mine workers to be held at Hazelton next Wednesday.

The miners' executive committee of the three districts met twice yesterday and when the last session concluded President Mitchell assembled the newspaper men and read to them as follows, from a type-written paper:

"To the anthracite mine workers of Pennsylvania:

"Gentlemen: The executive committee. The anthracite mine workers who were delegated by the Shamokin convention to represent you in the negotiations with the railroad presidents and mine operators for the purpose of obtaining increased wages, shorter hours and better conditions of employment, have exhausted all peaceable, conciliatory and honorable means at their command and have failed to secure any concessions of a tangible nature, and, while under the resolutions adopted by the Shamokin convention authority was vested in the executive committees should they fail in the negotiations to inaugurate a strike at whatever time, in their judgment, held out the greatest promise of success, the committees, after three days' serious deliberation, feel that in justice to the anthracite mine workers and those dependent upon them, before a general strike is inaugurated the question should be further considered by a delegate convention, in which representatives from the various local unions shall be fully instructed by their constituents and prepared to vote in favor of or in opposition to a complete cessation of work.

"In the meantime all persons employed in or around the collieries, strippings, washeries and breakers are instructed to temporarily abstain from working, beginning with Monday, May 12, and continuing thereafter until a final decision is reached by a delegate convention, which will convene May 14 at Hazleton.

"The instructions for all men to suspend work on Monday do not include firemen, engineers, pump men and other labor necessary to preserve the properties of the operators."

There is not a particle of question but that the miners will religiously obey the order and that on Monday next not so much as a shovelful of coal will be mined in the Lackawanna valley.

Morgan's Aid Not Asked

New York, May 10.—At the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., the report that a direct appeal for a settlement of the differences between the miners and operators had been made to Mr. Morgan was denied. It was added that no communication had been received from Mr. Mitchell.

A Sudden Transition

HOLLAND'S "WONDER" BOAT

Expects to Build an Enlarged Fulton to Cross the Atlantic.

After the submarine boat Fulton, on which an explosion occurred the other day, injuring some of her crew, had rested on the mud at the bottom of Peconic bay, Long Island, for fifteen consecutive hours last November, with five or six men playing cards and feasting as comfortably as they might in the smoking room of a hotel, she was called John P. Holland's "wonder" boat, says the Philadelphia Press.

No such test had ever been made before. The news was cabled to France, where naval experts awakened an international interest in submarine warfare after the British had allowed it to slumber for half a century. Modern French submarine boats have made longer runs and faster time than any of the Holland fleet, but the Fulton broke all records for remaining under water.

Thus it was that Prince Henry had a keen eye for the new Holland boat on his visit to this country and watched her as she dived under the keel of the imperial yacht Hohenzollern and came to the surface again a half mile away. The fact that the Austrian naval attache was on board the Fulton on her ill fated trip gives some indication of the interest taken in American submarine boats by foreign governments. Mr. Holland has talked sanguinely about ultimately crossing the Atlantic with a sister ship to the Fulton.

The United States navy has six boats of the Holland type. The construction of the Fulton differs from the others. She is large enough to carry five torpedoes instead of three and is provided with a conning tower. The power comes from a 150 horsepower gasoline engine. Her limit of speed on the surface is ten knots an hour and when submerged about eight knots an hour. Her surface radius of action is announced as 400 miles in ordinary cases, although it is said that she could be sent 2,500 miles in an emergency. Her radius of action while totally submerged is fifty miles. The entire distance can be made at one run, without the necessity of coming to the surface.

This is not the first accident to the Fulton. Shortly after her Peconic bay test she suddenly went to the bottom. It was explained that the accident was due to carelessness in leaving valves open, and the boat was raised without much damage. John P. Holland is quite enthusiastic about the future of his submarine boats. He has fought his way to government recognition through many obstacles. He is a small, shrewd looking man, with merry, twinkling eyes, a tinge of Irish brogue and a well developed sense of humor.

DANCED TO FIDDLE MUSIC.

President Leads His Cabinet In Old Time Reel.

Particulars were recently learned of the festivities at Secretary and Mrs. Long's farewell dinner the other night to the president and the cabinet on board the Dolphin, says a special from Washington to the New York World. President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the secretary of state, the secretary of the treasury and Mrs. Shaw, the attorney general, the secretary of agriculture and Miss Wilson, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Terry, Lieutenant Commander and Mrs. Gleaves, Miss Jones, niece of the postmaster general, and Miss Long comprised the party.

The boat was lavishly decorated. A big dolphin picked out in electric lights swung between the masts. The government conservatories had been ransacked for palms and flowers and potted plants. The Marine band was stationed on the deck just above the saloon hatchway and played during the evening.

After dinner the president learned that one of the sailors played the fiddle. The jackie was summoned, and the president asked him if he could play a good old fashioned "shake-down." The sailor said he could and struck up the Virginia reel. The president and his cabinet ministers chose their partners and, with the president in the lead, "shook it down" on the deck in lively style.

The only mishap was when Secretary Wilson in turning a sharp corner fell on the slanting deck. Everybody laughed at the secretary, and the president shouted:

"Get up, you old cornstalk!"

The dance was not strenuous enough for the president. Two other jackies were sent for and gave a broadsword exhibition. Then two more came and boxed three lively rounds. By this time it was 11 p. m., and the Dolphin put in for shore.

May In Umbria.

Say, O wander lover, say,
What is May in Umbria?

Days that never dim nor darkle;
Nights that spangle, nights that sparkle;
Dawns that flame with burnished splendor;
Eves that melt in raptures tender;
Noons that glow with sapphire burning;
Singing waters seaward yearning;
Shouting weir and lilting shallow;
Green on fertile field and fallow;
Grain in ripples, grain in billows;
Silvery poplars, silvery willows;
Music making contadini;
Glossy curls and dark eyes sheeny;
Nightingales in copse and clover,
Each a little lyric lover;
Cuckoo gossips never quiet;
Blossom revel, blossom riot;
Every breeze abrim with fragrance
From the hill and valley vagrants;
Roses in the tangled coppice,
Privet, pimpernel and poppies;
Harebells, thyme in purple stretches;
Vervain, violets and vetches;
Stately corn flags hued as fire is;
Honeysuckle, orchis, iris.
Web as delicate and dear as Ever shah beheld in Shiraz.
And through all, above and under,
Something moving like a wonder,
Something vigorous and vernal,
Evanescent, yet eternal!

Such, the wander lovers say,
Such is May in Umbria.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Permission to Hotels for Sunday Shaving Refused.

The House yesterday refused to pass a bill which would permit the barber shops in hotels to open on Sundays. There was quite a heated debate on the question. The Socialist members opposing on the ground that labor unions did not believe in Sunday work.

A bill was reported in the Senate to incorporate the Abraham Lincoln Life Insurance company with a capitol of $200,000. The bill permits the company to do business under the general laws, Chapter 118 of the Revised Laws. It is the first life insurance charter granted for forty years for a stock company which can not incorporate under general laws.

In the Senate yesterday Senator Sprague voted in the affirmative on ordering to its third reading the House bill to make certain points in the law as to risks assumed by employes, questions of fact and not of law.

There was a long discussion in the House on the bill to permit cities and and towns to set aside one-half of one per cent of their taxes for the purpose of providing work for their citizens in time of business depression. The discussion was not completed at adjournment.

The bill to authorize the Boston Institute of Osteopathy to grant the degree of doctor of osteopathy was hotly debated in the House. Fuller of Bridgewater opposed as the bill would enable the three persons who run the institute to grant degrees to any person who had $500 in his pocket. The bill was refused a third reading by a vote 50 to 65.

An Open Letter.

To Henry H. Faxon, Esq.

In your Hotel Greenleaf speech of May 7, before the Master Builders and Traders' Association, in speaking of your 80 years trying to be an angel, and having so completely failed, that you have been unable to start a single pin feather, it would seem to be abundant proof, especially to an intellectual and discerning mind like your own, that you have been all these 80 years working in the wrong direction.

Your open confession would seem to lighten the burden of responsibility in regard to some of your other very peculiar statements, that trusts formed by the capitalists are a blessing and tends to cheapen the articles for consumption, and that the only organization that threatens the well being of this republic is that of labor.

If it is true 'tis terrible. But it is not true. The Roman Patricians were just of your opinion: down with the humbler classes; down with Plebians; they have fought our battles; they have builded us a mighty nation; we will now enjoy the fruits of their labor, and they shall be our slaves. So said the Roman Patricians; so say you.

Respectfully,

B. M. Holmes,
Laborer.

OCEAN CABLES DOOMED

Fessenden Believes His Aerial Problem Solved.

DISTANCE NO LONGER A FACTOR

Latest Wizard of the Air Claims All That Is Required Is Additional Amount of Energy and That Wireless Telegraphy Will Be Established Across Oceans Within Five Years.

"Telegraphing through space by means of etheric waves is no longer a theory; it is now an actuality, and I hazard nothing in predicting the ultimate abandonment of the old transatlantic cable."

Professor Reginald A. Fessenden, the new wizard of the air, in talking with Lieutenants Hudgins and Beecher of the naval equipment bureau and Superintendent Tittman and Assistant Wainwright of the United States coast and geodetic survey at his experiment station on Wier's point, Roanoke island, thus commented on his new wireless invention, says a Washington dispatch to the New York Journal. Professor Fessenden was referring to the fact that a message of 127 words from Chief Moore of the weather bureau had been received through space from Cape Hatteras to Wier's point, a distance of fifty-three miles.

"I don't mean," Professor Fessenden continued, "to appear overenthusiastic, but I know what can be done with my invention, and the possibilities in store are almost illimitable. In my experiment over fifty-three miles I used a quarter inch spark, which was really more than was required—a sixteenth inch flash would have done quite as well—and in order to communicate over greater distances it is only necessary to lengthen the spark and supply additional energy."

"Do you think it will ever be possible to utilize your system for communicating with points on both sides of the Atlantic?" one of the visiting board asked.

"Not only possible, but a practical certainty. Before the end of five years—indeed, in probably less time—we shall be able to transmit messages across the ocean with more rapidity and precision than it is now or ever can be done by the old cable method."

Putting the receiver to his ear, Professor Fessenden opened his key—an ordinary Morse instrument—and answered a call. "I've got a message for you from Moore," said the operator at Hatteras, and then, calling Operator Dorman, Professor Fessenden, with the others of the party, stood beside the operator while he copied a message. It came through faster than the ordinary operator sends and much faster than the common run of commercial operators are able to receive. Part of the message, which was of a private character, was coded.

"How long before you will be able to telegraph over greater distances?" was asked the inventor.

"Just as soon as we can get our instruments in shape," he replied.

"Distance is not a factor. It will be quite as easy to talk over a much greater space as it is to talk over the fifty-three miles between the Wier's point station and Cape Hatteras. All that is required is additional energy and enlarged wave sparks. I believe I have solved the problem of wireless communication, and it is certain that this system has been evolved from the complex to the simple.

"The coherer which other wireless inventors have regarded as essential in this work is not used by me; instead I employ an invention of my own, the 'wave detector,' which is more powerful and can be worked with more accuracy and with less force and energy than is necessary in the coherer."

Within a short while, probably within two months, the weather bureau will erect wireless stations along the middle and north Atlantic coast, where they will receive wireless meteorological messages from ships far out at sea. The bureau plans to equip certain vessels with Fessenden instruments, and when properly attained they will be able to communicate with the shore stations quite as accurately as by wire. In this manner the weather bureau hopes to be able to predict ocean storms far in advance of their arrival.

Latest In Handshakes.

Every now and then some extraordinary fad turns up in society, becomes the rage and then vanishes, leaving behind a sense of wonder that "one could have been so silly." Do we not all remember how, a few years ago, people used to pull one another's hands down from on high when shaking hands, as if pulling a bell rope? Lately there has appeared here and there a new thing in the way of shaking hands. Take your friend's hand with your fingers and move it slowly to the left and then to the right exactly as if you were pushing a horizontal bolt. The effect on the pushee, according to The Tatler, is very funny at first. Is this to be the fad of the future? If so, it ought to be styled the "push bolt shake."

Trade In Rare Butterflies.

The trade in rare butterflies is increasing in London, and ingenious deception, according to the Cleveland Plain Dealer, is practiced regarding them. Ordinarily butterflies are caught and killed. Then girls are employed to smear the gauzy wings with thin mucilage and sprinkle fine metallic powder of various colors on the wings. In this way the collector can be supplied with the most beautiful specimens almost while he waits.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The management of the Castle Square theatre makes the interesting announcement that the attraction at this playhouse the coming week will be the play of "Ingomar." Infrequent performances of this play, in recent years, make it almost a novelty to theatre patrons of today and its coming presentations will undoubtedly give pleasure to a vast public The version of the play to be followed at the Castle Square is that used by Julia Marlowe Taber which is the adaptation, by Maria Loveall, of Friedrich Halm's "Der Sohn Der Wildniss." It is not generally known that "Friedrich Halm" is the non de plume used by Eligius Francis Joseph, Baron von Munch-Bellinghausen, born at Cracow in 1800, and that the "Ingomar" of the present day followed a half dozen successful productions by this author. The play was written fifty years ago and had its first English production nine years latter at Drury Lane, London; its American production, simultaneously at the Bowery and Broadway theatres in New York, following six months after its hearing in London. Performances of the play have been given all over Europe and America and it has become almost a dramatic classic. Following "Ingomar" on Monday, May 19th, comes a production of "The Butterflies." The usual distribution of chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinees until further notice.

COLONIAL THEATRE

"The Strollers," now running with great success at the Colonial theatre, Boston, have received exceptionally fine criticisms from the Boston dailies of April 29th. From all comments gathered it seems to have made an honest success and a genuine hit. "The Strollers" in consequence will no doubt be booked throughout New England next season. The Herald says: Taken as a whole, play, music and company, both principals and chorus, the piece can be summed up best by the slang expression, "a corking good show," just the kind that should keep the Colonial filled as it was last night, during its entire engagement. The Globe adds: The "musical drollery" is one of those nondescript dramatic structures that have been so much in evidence for the past half dozen years, a little of the burlesque, a very little in the way of plot, quite a lot of vocal music and dancing, handsome scenery, elegant and numerous costumes, shapely girls, comedians of both sexes and all combined in a hodgepodge, brisk in action and designed merely to serve as an entertainment. This is "The Strollers."

KEITH'S THEATRE.

The principal atttraction at Keith's Boston playhouse during the week commencing May 12 will be "A Scene in the Orient at Evening," and it is to be put on with a degree of magnificence never before attempted in vaudeville There will be no scenery, as such, the entire stage being draped with rich Oriental hangings, and all the accessories that are employed in the interior decoration of dwellings in the Far East. The persons who are to appear in this scene are Prince Abbas Ben Omar and Princess Lalla Torquia, who have been received at many important social functions in Boston during the past month. Manager Keith saw them at a private performance and prevailed upon them to appear before the patrons of his theatre in several of the dances for which the Orient is noted. Those who are wont to complain of the lack of novelty in the varieties will surely find it in this act. The show surrounding this "feature act" will be one of the strongest of the spring season, including Willis P. Sweatnam, Stephen Grattan and Maude White, Lilie Western, Janet Melville and Evie Stetson and the Blossoms.

AUSTIN AND STONES.

"The waltz queens," as the peerless performers in the U. S. Talma Ladies Military band were dubbed by the managers of the Charleston Exposition, are coming to Boston. Under the baton of the eminent lady director, Helen May Butler, these handsome and accomplished artists will be seen and heard at Austin & Stone's museum, where their engagement opens on May 12 for a fortnight. The band is made up of 20 accomplished young women instrumentalists, including seven soloists, and there is no woman's band in America, at present, to compare with this. The program will include selections to inspire every American, to thrill every sturdy Scot, to enthuse every joyous Celt, to fascinate every loyal Briton, to charm the children of Italy, and to captivate every audience of whatever nationality. Critics who have heard the band at Buffalo and Charleston and elsewhere praise its music in superlatives.

VOLCANO ON ST VINCENT

SOUFRIERE IS IN ERUPTION

Majestic but Awful Sight as Great Mountain Tried to Rid Itself of Molten Lava—Several Districts In Northern Part of Island Destroyed

Kingston, Island of St. Vincent, B. W. I., May 12.—After numerous earthquakes during the preceding fortnight, accompanied by subterranean noises in the direction of the Soufriere volcano, in the northwestern part of the island, a loud explosion occurred Monday last from the crater and the water in the crater lake ascended in a stupendous cloud of steam and exploded heavily. The noises grew louder continually till Wednesday morning, when the old crater, three miles in circumference, and the new crater formed by the last eruption, belched smoke and stones, forcing the residents of Wallibou and Richmond valley to flee to Chateau Belair for refuge.

The thunderous noises, which were continually increasing, were heard in islands 200 miles away.

At midday the craters ejected enormous columns of steamy vapor, rising majestically eight miles high and expanding into wonderful shapes, resembling enormous cauliflowers, gigantic wheels and beautiful flower forms, all streaked up and down and crosswise with vivid flashes and lightning, awing the beholder and impressing the mind with fear. The mountain labored to rid itself of a mass of molten lava which later flowed over, in six streams, down the side of the volcano, and the greater noises following united in one great, continuous roar all evening, through the night to Thursday morning, accompanied with black rain, falling dust and favillous scoria, attended with midnight darkness all Wednesday, creating feelings of fear and anxious suspense. On the morning of Friday there was a fresh eruption and ejections of fiery matter, more dust covering the island, in some places two feet deep.

The crater is still active as this dispatch is sent and great loss of life is believed to have occurred. The lava has destroyed several districts with their livestock. People are fleeing to this town, streams are dried up and in many places a food and water famine is threatened. The government is feeding numbers of sufferers from the outbreak.

Great physicial changes have taken place in the neighborhood of the Soufriere.

Several districts have not yet been heard from and the scene of the eruption is unapproachable. Every hour brings sadder news. The nurses and doctors are overworked. It is impossible to give full details at present.

As a result of the disaster on this island all business has been suspended for three days. The public mind is still unsettled, fearing further disaster.

Among the deaths are whole families whose corpses are in several places, still lying unburied. The dead will be interred in trenches.

St. Thomas, D. W. I., May 12.—Reports from the island of St Vincent say that up to the afternoon of Friday last over 500 deaths had occurred there owing to the volcanic outbreak in that island. Definite news, however, is lacking.

Quakes In Aleution Islands

San Francisco, May 12.—The Alaska Commercial company has received from its agent at Unalaska, Alentian islands, a letter dated April 10, giving information of volcanic disturbances in that portion. The letter says: "Unalaska has been shaken up by earthquakes lately and on several occasions the ground was covered with fine ashes from some valcano. Reports reach us from Unimak to the effect that with every westerly wind the village is covered with some kind of ashes, indicating that some western volcano is in action."

Military Against President

Panama, May 12.—News has reached here from Costa Rica that the military element in the neighborhood of San Jose, the capital, is in insurrection, refusing to recognize the authority of Asuncion Ecquivel, who was inaugurated president May 8. The insurrectionists are proclaiming Demetrio Yglesias as president of the country. Yglesias has declined to take part in the revolutionary movement.

CUBAN FLAG OVER MORRO

Announces Arrival of President-Elect Palma at the Cuban Capital

Havana, May 12.—At 8:23 yesterday morning a large Cuban flag was hoisted over Morro Castle here. This was the signal that the steamer Juda, with President-elect Palma and his party on board, had been sighted, and cheers went up from the thousands who had patiently awaited the Juda's arrival since daybreak. The crowd cheered for the new president and for the flag, which was hoisted over the famous fortress for the first time.

It was a moment of exultation for the Cubans, and the fact that the Stars and Stripes floated from its customary flagstaff beside the Cuban flag over the castle did not lessen their enthusiasm.

The Cuban flag flying over Morro was the same one which was first raised over the senate chamber. It was sent to the castle yesterday and fastened to the halyards of the flagstaff used to signal the nationality of incoming vessels. When the smoke of the Juda was seen in the direction of Matanzas, the flag was hauled up. As it rose the bands stationed along the water front played the Cuban national hymn, steamers saluted and church bells were rung.

When he arrived at the wharf, President-elect Palma was welcomed by Vice President Esteves, in a brief speech. A pretty feature of the reception here was Senor Palma's welcome by 23 young Cuban women dressed in costumes representing the American republics.

From the wharf President-elect Palma was escorted to the palace by members of the rural guard. General Wood, his staff and the secretaries received Senor Palma at the palace. From here the president-elect proceeded to the municipal council building, where speeches were made by the mayor of Havana and Senor Zayas. The latter welcomed Senor Palma in behalf of the people of all classes and all political beliefs. Replying, Senor Palma said that his reception was a gratifying experience, and, judging from what he had seen since his arrival in Cuba, the people were unanimous in support of the incoming government. This, he said, boded well for the republic. General Wood accompanied Senor Palma to the residence of General Maximo Gomez, where the president-elect will reside until his inauguration, May 20.

Coroner Blocked by Judge

Omaha, May 12.—Coroner Brailey yesterday empanelled a jury and proceeded to thea home of Judge Eller, accompanied by the sheriff, and demanded that he be permitted to hold an inquest over the remains of the judge's son, who died, it is alleged, under Christian Science healing. Judge Eller informed the sheriff that in order to hold the inquest he would have to break down three doors, tear the American flag from the coffin and break a lock with which the coffin was secured. Brailey said he felt such action would be brutal and decided to let the affair pass without further official notice.

A Schooner's Meanderings

Biddeford, Me., May 12.—Schooner Annie R. Lewis, loaded with lathes, went ashore on Nigger island Thursday night and stove a hole in her bottom. She broke away from her moorings at the wharf at Biddeford Pool Saturday night and tipped over, broke two of her masts and crushed in the roof of the coal shed on the wharf. The vessel then floated into the gut and collided with the tug Joe Baker, which was considerably damaged. The schooner is now on beam ends in Pool harbor.

Circus Meets a Bad Crowd

Paris, May 12.—Barnum & Bailey's circus was the cause of a serious riot at Beziers yesterday. The crowd seeking admission to the performance was greater than the tent could accommodate and those who were unable to enter began stoning the circus employes. One had his skull fractured and will probably die. They cut the tent ropes and several thousand persons forced their way to the arena. Troops were finally called out and restored order.

Anthrancite Miners Idle

Scranton, Pa., May 12.—There will be no coal mined in the Scranton end of the anthracite region today. Even though the strike order was not certain of being religiously obeyed, there would be no mining, as the companies agreed at a meeting of the general managers and superaintendents that no attempt would be made to operate.

Springfield, Ills., May 12.—The Wabash Continental limited has again broken all previous records on that road. The train made the distance from Decatur to Granite City, 105½ miles, in 93 minutes, including two stops. Part of the run was made at a 90-mile-an-hour clip.

AGAINST THE PACKERS

Sweeping Injunction Prepared by the Government

MANY PARTIES TO DEFENSE

Conspiracy, Combination, Blacklisting, Illegal Cartage Charges and Other Unlawful Acts Are Charged—Trusts Program of Procedure

Chicago, May 12.—With the full approval of Attorney General Knox, District Attorney Bethea on Saturday evening filed with the clerk of the federal circuit court here a bill for an injunction sweeping in character, designed to destroy the alleged giant conspiracy to illegally control the meat trade of the United States. District Attorney Bethea served notice that at 2 p. m. on May 20 he will appear before federal Judge Grosscup and ask for a temporary injunction against the packers and their representatives under the Sherman national anti-trust law.

What the defendants will do, now that the government has begun the long-talked-of proceedings, was forecasted by one of their representatives. They will not make a fight on May 20, according to this authority. They will submit to the entry of an order enjoining them from the acts complained of in the bill and will promise to refrain from further alleged violations of the law until the time of the next hearing. That probably will be about June 20. Before the latter date they will have filed a demurrer, in which the insufficiency of the government's petition will be alleged. This demurrer, it is said, will raise an important point under the interstate commerce regulations, probably to the effect that the shipping of meats to one's own agent in another state under a certain agreement is not interstate commerce. In the event that the demurrer shall be overruled, the packers will still have privilege of filing an answer which will necessitate a further hearing on the merits of the government's charge. If, on the other hand, the demurrer shall be sustained, the federal attorney can file an amended bill.

Copies of the government's bill were received at Mr. Bethea's office from Washington Saturday. The district attorney and his assistants then made out a notice to the defendant's counsel and after swearing to the bill, Mr. Bethea filed it.

The petition charges conspiracy, unlawful combination, blacklisting, illegal cartage charges, an illegal credit agreement, creating fiase market prices, illegally depressing the market and accepting railway rebates.

All of the principal packing companies organized under the laws of New Jersey, Michigan, New York and Illinois are made parties to the defense, and all are residents of Illinois, save Mr. Sulzberger and Mr. Noyes of New York, and E. C. Swift of Boston.

The government recites that their plants and yards are at Chicago, Omaha, Sioux City, St. Joseph, Kansas City, East St. Louis, Cudahy, Wis., Hammond, Ind.

Woodland and Bogs Burned

Plymouth, Mass., May 12.—The forest fire which started in Carver on Friday morning and spread through the woods into Plymouth is still burning, although a large gang of men has been constantly fighting it, but it is thought now to be under control. Many acres of woodland have been burned over and all over the hills numerous piles of burning cord wood are to be seen. Many cranberry bogs are badly damaged.

TWO WEEKS HENCE

Latest Time Set For Disposition of Philippine Government Bill

Washington, May 12.—Senator Rawlins, senior Democratic member of the senate committee on the Philippines, expresses the opinion that a vote can be reached on the Philippine government bill towards the end of the present week. Other members of the committee think the date of the vote may be postponed until some time next week, but none of them place the vote later than the 24th inst. They say that whenever the debate is exhausted they will agree to vote, but that they object to naming a day for a vote until they are quite certain that there is nothing more to say pertinent to the subject.

Today is District of Columbia day in the house. Special orders have been made for the consideration of several bills to follow the disposition of district business. They include the bill to authorize the issue of passports to residents of our insular possessions; the bill for the reorganization of the consular service and a day for the consideration of the war claims. The conference report on the omnibus claims bill will also be considered this week.

Laid In Pasture Many Months

The Weirs, N. H., May 12.—The body of Joseph E. Dalton, aged 64, who disappeared last July, was found Saturday night in a pasture about a mile from here. As Dalton disappeared soon after drawing a pension, his relatives alleged that he had been the victim of foul play. A sum of money was found in the man's pocket, together with a watch and other articles. The body had shrunk to a mere skeleton, and the clothing was in shreds. No inquest was considered necessary.

Unwelcome Visitor Laid Out

Boston, May 12.—John Smith was an unbidden guest at a Polish wedding feast in a hall here last evening and attempted to seat himself at the banquet table. There was strenuous objection made to his action and Smith hurled a glass at the objector's head without hitting him, whereupon the Pole threw a bottle at Smith, striking the latter on the head, causing a compound fracture of the skull. Smith was carried to the hospital and his assailant escaped.

Counterfeiters Sentenced

New York, May 12.—Judge Thomas has sentenced five counterfeiters who were arrested in a raid at Corona, L. I. Santos Carusi was sentenced to eight years in Sing Sing prison, Antonio Schairo to nine years and Marino Masso to eight years; Frank Ajello to nine years and Paul Notto to 3½ years in Elmira reformatory.

Alleged Kidnapper Caught

Stremo, Italy, May 12.—Miss Clara Taylor of Cincinnati, who is alleged to have kidnapped her niece, Margaret Taylor, was arrested at Berdighers by assistance of a United States consular agent. Miss Taylor has been living under the assumed name of "Mrs. Keith."

Sciatic Rheumatism Cured After Fourteen Years of Suffering.

"I have been afflicted with sciatic rheumatism for fourteen years," says Josh Edgar, of Germantown, Cal. "I was able to be around but constantly suffered. Good Afternoon.

Now that the barbers have shaved their hours, they probably expect to do less loafing.

Probably offenders against the law, who fall into the net of the police, will find the patrol wagon quick enough.

The federal action on the illegal combination of the meat packers is assurance not only that there has been a violation of the statutes but that the present administration believes in fair play for the consumer.

China is taking her place in civilization if the official reports of the enormous increase in the postal service count for anything. Mail expansion is a good sign, and one of the most notable ones in this country also at the present time.

According to Commissioner of Labor Carroll D. Wright, a conservative estimate of the wealth of this country is $95,000,000,000. The total money in the United States is $2,500,000,000, or about $32 per capita, as against $14 in 1860. The average amount due each savings bank depositor in the country is $409, and it is interesting to note that the savings deposits alone exceed the actual total of money and is ample to cancel the entire debt of the federal government.

Drift of Opinion.

☞Mayor Sullivan of Hartford finds that wearing a crown isn't necessary to produce insomnia. Plain mayors, chosen by the vote populi, have their troubles.—Meriden Record.

☞In the biography of William Black, published only a few days ago, Bret Harte is described by the English novelist as "the most extraordinary globule of mercury—comet—aerolite gone drunk—flash of lightning doing catherine wheels—I ever had any experience of." This bit of portraiture must come as a complete revelation to most if not all Americans.—New York Tribune.

☞Governor Cummings of Iowa is also a Republican, and he takes quite a different view of the trusts from that expounded by Senator Beveridge the other day. He also talks about the tariff in a way to make cold shivers run down the backs of some timid people. "I believe," he says, "that the consumer has a better right to competition than the producer has to protection. Competition we will have, that of our country preferred, but that of the world, if necessary." Now we expect to see Governor Cummings called a demagogue; but he has quite a following in Iowa.—New Bedford Standard.

☞Secretary Root is shirking no responsibility and dodging no facts in this Philippine matter, and his reply to the senate's inquiry ought to be read by every man in the country. It recites the facts—which cannot be disputed—that for over two years in certain provinces of the islands attempts were made to maintain the authority of the United States by "extraordinary forbearance and a magnanimous and benevolent policy," that this effort failed signally, and not only was the authority of the United States defied in these provinces, but they were made the nursery for the rebellion in other quarters. When they were visited with the reality of war, in three months' time peace was established and with it virtual acknowledgement of the authority of the United States throughout the islands, and the results gained are deemed sufficient justification for the policy pursued. The secretary refers to General Order 100, recognized as the rules of humane war, and points out that no order contrary to those rules has been issued by the department or by any commanding officer, and that the policy of war to the full limit of those rules, if it was deemed necessary by the officers on the spot, met with his approval. That there have been cases of individual outrages he does not deny, and his transmission of the record of over 300 courts-martial for such offences is his answer as to the department's policy in those matters.—Haverhill Gazette.

Col. Parker's Wish.

The Manchester, N. H., Union in its report of the burial of Col. F. W. Parker in that city May 8, contained the following paragraph of local interest:

It is difficult to imagine anything more entirely in harmony with the wishes of Colonel Parker than the beautiful exercises of the church, the Grand Army and the schools, which were carried out and about his grave under the clear May skies. The writer distinctly remembers an early summer day when Colonel Parker, then superintendent of schools in Quincy, Mass., looking out from the upper room of the Washington school at Quincy Point and seeing the scores of acres of violets that extended to the bluffs that rose sharp from an inlet of Boston bay, said that nothing would please him more than to have the school children cover his grave with the sweet blossoms when he was laid to rest. And although his life work carried him far from the Massachusetts city, and it was not for the children of Quincy Point to deck his grave, his wish, expressed nearly twenty-five years ago, was fulfilled in spirit when Parker Hutchinson, a son of John G. Hutchinson, who was born on the same day of the month as was Colonel Parker, and was named after him, covered with sweet peas the casket which contained the beloved dust of the great teacher, in the name of the school children of Manchester.

Cook for Congress.

Among the political gossip of a Sunday paper was the following:

Louis A. Cook, the Norfolk county clerk of courts, formerly of Weymouth but now of Dedham, is said to be meditating a congressional candidacy in the new 12th district. Mr. Cook has discovered that under the new districting the Norfolk county delegates in the congressional convention will be able to control the nomination and, if they want to do so, take it away from the Hon. Samuel L. Powers of Newton, Middlesex county. It is not known that the new aspirant has met with any very extensive encouragement. It is doubtful whether any candidate could make much headway against Mr. Powers, who is yet in his first term, and has not conspicuously misbehaved. —Herald.

Quincy is not in the Norfolk county Congressional district, where she should be, especially in this case, when it would be a pleasure to assist Judge Cook if he desires the nomination. Norfolk County has a good opportunity now to elect a Congressman, but he must come from some town outside of Quincy or Milton, as we are in the Tenth district. However, Judge Cook makes an excellent clerk of courts, and his term will not expire for many years.

Death at Atlantic.

The funeral of Mary Colligan, the 12 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Colligan was held from their home on Hunt street Saturday morning. Miss Colligan has been sick for the past year and although her death was expected, it came as a shock to her many friends, particularly among her playmates. Mass was celebrated at the Sacred Heart church at 9 A. M., Rev. Fr. Johnstone officiating. At the conclusion of the Mass, Mr. Ed Dufault sang "Passing out of the Shadows." As the body was being borne from the church the choir sang "Nearer My God to Thee." The flowers were many and beautiful, most of them from her little friends. The pall bearers were Henry Granahan, James Brennan, Cornelius Leary and Edward Colligan. The interment was at West Quincy.

Biliousness is a condition characterized by a disturbance of the digestive organs. The stomach is debilitated, the liver torpid, the bowels constipated. There is a loathing of food, pains in the bowels, dizziness, coated tongue and vomiting, first of the undigested or partly digested food and then of bile. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets allay the disturbances of the stomach and create a healthy appetite. They also tone up the liver to a healthy action and regulate the bowels. Try them and you are certain to be much pleased with the result. For sale by all druggists.

PATROL WAGONS.

What They Weigh in Other Cities—Quincy One Not Heavy.

Editors of the Daily Ledger:

Kindly allow me to correct the wrong impression the public would get from reading your article on the Patrol Wagon.

The Milton wagon weighs 1260 lbs. without a top and is not suitable for an ambulance.

The wagon at Station 5, Boston, weighs 1800 lbs., and is a combination patrol and ambulance.

The wagon at Station 4 weighs 1900 lbs., and I was told that these two wagons were the latest and best patrol wagons in Boston.

The ambulance wagons in Boston which are built to carry not over 4 persons weigh 1300 and 1400 lbs.

The patron wagons are built strong enough to carry ten to twelve people, if necessary, and must of necessity weigh more. You cannot find a covered patrol and ambulance wagon in Boston or any other city, that weighs less than 1500 pounds. One cannot be built lighter and have the necessary strength and conveniences that a wagon for the purpose should have.

If one horse can easily haul the patrol wagon in Boston, weighing 1800 pounds or can haul the Milton wagon up their steep grades, I guess the people of Quincy need not fear but one horse can easily haul its patrol wagon weighing only 1500 pounds when the load will consist of not more than three men, except in rare cases.

For your information as to what one horse can haul in this city, I will point to you the Hose wagon in Ward 2, which weighs without a driver 2800 lbs.; the Hose wagon in Ward 4, which weighs 3200 lbs., and both in going to a fire frequently carry an additional load of five to six men.

The wagons used by the City of Quincy, without tops, in its Water and Sewer departments weighing 1300 lbs., and these wagons are nearly always carrying a load of from 500 to 2000 lbs. additional beside the driver and helper.

Yours respectfully,
Henry E. Emerson.

A Fine Entertainment.

The Little Minister a comedy drama was presented at Quincy Music hall on Friday evening of last week to a large and appreciative audience. The cast as follows: Gavin Dishart, Mr. Frank W. Thomas; Rob Dow, Mr. E. A. Leary; Wearywarld, Mr. Frank McHardy; Tammas Whamond, Mr. Frank Brawner, Peter Tosh; Mr. C. H. Wetherbee; Sheriff Riach, Mr. Sidney Smith; Lord Rintoul, Mr. G. R. Simpson; Capt. Halliwell, Mr. G. L. Church; Nanny Webster, Miss Sara Kingsley; Jean Baxter, Miss Hope Gage; and Lady Babbie, Miss Alexia Durant.

Mr. Thomas guided by a ministerial appearance and a clerical voice overcame the difficulties of playing in his home town and his work was really excellent and he well deserved the applause which greeted him. He was at his best in the Caddam Wood scene.

Mr. Leary was fully equal to the demands of Rob Dow both in voice and appearance and by his effective work proved himself a player far above mediocrity.

Mr. Brawner's impersonation of the religious but short-sighted and bigoted Tammas Whamond, was very good, the lines being read with feeling and understanding. While the droll and humorous acting of Mr. McHardy as Wearywarld captivated the audience. Mr. Church as the English officer and Mr. Smith as the Sheriff acted their parts with ease and acceptability. Mr. Simpson proved to be an ideal Lord Rintoul. Miss Durant as Lady Babbie plainly demonstrated her ability in this line of work, and proved herself a young woman of talent, her work gave unquestioned satisfaction to her delighted listeners. As Nanny Webster, Miss Kingsley was certainly a success, and her work showed careful and efficent preparation, while Miss Gage did some character work as the Scotch servant Jean Baxter.

The play as a whole was an excellent production considering that this was the first public performance. The experienced hand of Mr. McHardy as the stage director was seen all through the piece.

Eight Hours at Navy Yard.

An agreement has been reached whereby the men who recently quit work at the navy yard dry dock at Portsmouth, N. H., will return to work today. They have been out for about ten days, and have asked for an eight-hour day with increased pay, which have been granted by the contractors. The work at the navy yard has been considerably put back on account of the strike.

Raised the Limit.

An important meeting of the Granite City club was held Saturday evening. At this meeting the by-laws of the club were amended raising the membership limit from one hundred to one hundred and twenty-five. The club now has some fifteen or more names on the waiting list and it will not be long before the new limit is reached.

A JUMPING CAT.

She Makes Leap of Ten and Twelve Feet in Mid Air.

Someone's pet cat climbed one of the trees in front of ex-Mayor Hall's residence on Sunday. The cat climbed as far as it could go on one limb. Then it evidently got frightened and could not get down. In order to reach the cat a boy would have to climb up through a lot of wires and no one cared to do that. Night came on and the cat was still there. Scores of people saw the poor cat but no one took any steps to get her down and she remained there all night.

This morning the cat was discovered still perched in the top of the tree. People then thought it about time something was done and N. B. Furnald of the M. S. P. C. A. caused Chief Engineer Williams to be notified by telephone and about 9 o'clock he sent a couple of line men. They hesitated about climbing the tree through the network of wires, but one ventured and was within arms length of the animal when the cat made a leap of about 12 feet to another limb, and from there another leap of perhaps 10 feet to th top arm of the high telephone pole. She was frightened from this perch and jumped another 5 feet to a limb, and then about 30 feet to the ground. Of course she landed on her feet, and as quick as scat was off.

Boston "L" Extending.

According to information that has come to the surface in the past few days, it is stated that the Boston elevated railroad has bought the Old Colony street railway system, which controls the electric road traffic in the eastern part of Massachusetts.

Many changes have been made in the officials of the Old Colony company in the past few weeks.

Only a few of the leading officials know of the sale, but it is understood that it was consummated a few weeks ago. The news of the transaction was not given out, for the reason that it was feared that it might influence the stock of the company.

The Old Colony system includes all the principal lines in the eastern and the southeastern part of the state, and the purchase of it by the Boston elevated shows that an effort is being made to combine the electric companies all under one head and management. —Boston Globe.

Young Man Missing.

William R. Martin of Washington street Weymouth is reported as missing from his home since Sunday noon. The young man, who is 13 years of age left home Sunday noon on his bicycle for a ride. As far as his parents knew he intended to return home by night. He did not, however, and although inquiries have been made at all places where it is thought he might be, no trace of him has been found. The boy was extra tall for his age. He had reddish hair and when last seen he wore his Sunday suit, with a standing collar, blue tie and light shoes. He rode a Snell wheel.

SATURDAY'S SPORTS.

Dorchester Defeats Thayer.

Thayer Academy lost the third game of the season Saturday to the crack Dorchester High nine 20—13. Up to the fifth inning the game was close and exciting and it looked like Thayer's victory until they went to pieces and added to their list of errors. Two of Thayer's regular men were out of the game, while Kelly and Gallagher filled their positions successfully; the former played the best of any of the home team. Thayer showed especially in this game their weakness in batting while at times they fielded well.

If they improve by Tuesday in this line, they will surely be a strong proposition for Brookline.

There were no sensational plays in the game but the batting of Capt. Brady was a feature. Brady used good judgment and had a speedy ball but found the plate with difficulty, while Hammond's pitching was to the contrary. With the score 17—8, Thayer made a rally in the last few innings but of no avail, they could not bat strong enough to lessen the big lead of their opponents.

Trap Scores.

Messrs. Horace and Bullard shot eight rounds each on Saturday in the cup contest of the Wollaston Gun club, the former making five 12s, a 11, 8 and 7, while Bullard made a 13, two 11s, a 10, three 9s and a 6, out of a possible 15 at 21 yards.

In the regular order of events the scores were:

Ten unknown, Bullard 7.
Ten unknown, Barry, Tuttle 8.
Fifteen unknown, Tuttle 10.

Merrymount Golf.

The Merrymount golf club was the scene Saturday of two special events. A team match, the first the club has ever had was rather dsscouraging but the qualifying round for the spring cup, considering the condition of the grounds at this time, was rather gratifying to the club. There was not however a large entry for this cup. The team match was good considering only two were of the first class.

Facts About the Institution Endowed by Cecil Rhodes.

COMPOSED OF SEVERAL COLLEGES.

Each Is Distinct In Itself, but All Are Under One Head, the Vice Chancellor—Course a Three Year One—Curious Customs of the University—Life There Pleasant, but Expensive.

The unique will of Cecil Rhodes, giving to every state in the United States two scholarships in the University of Oxford of $1,500 a year each, has created wide interest in the famous old institution, and it is not hard to find out in Philadelphia what student life and work at Oxford is like, for a number of Philadelphians went there in their youth, says the Philadelphia Times. Barclay H. Warburton, owner of The Evening Telegraph, went there; Barton Willing, the brother-in-law of John Jacob Astor, went there; the late Ellis Ashmead Bartlett and his brother, William Ashmead Bartlett, who married the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, were Oxford men; the Rev. Frederick Burgess, formerly rector of St. Asaph's church, at Bala, and now bishop of Long Island, is an Oxford man, and so also are E. Cholmeley-Jones and Julian Story.

Oxford is admitted to be architecturally the most beautiful spot in England. It lies between two rivers, the Thames and the Cherwell, a great array of spires, towers, quadrangles and ancient buildings, carved with a sumptuousness such as is not seen today. It has gardens and lawns incredibly well kept, and it is over 800 years old.

Here is a list of all its colleges, with the dates of their several foundations: All Souls, founded in 1437; Balliol, 1282; Brasenose, 1509; Christchurch, 1525; Corpus Christi, 1525; Exeter, 1314; Hertford, 1874; Jesus, 1571; Keble, 1866; Lincoln, 1427; Magdalen (pronounced Maudlin), 1456; Merton, 1264; New, 1380; Oriel, 1324; Pembroke (after which Pembroke hall, at Bryn Mawr college, is modeled), 1624; Queen's, 1340; St. John's, 1555; Trinity, 1555; University, 1249; Wadham, 1609; Worcester, 1283. Then there is the Bodleian library, founded in 1612, which has had the right since 1610—though this right, of course, it has not invariably used—of getting without payment a copy of every book published in the United Kingdom.

The young men who go to this aged and beautiful place go there as their own masters. They may work or idle, for there are no recitations, and the examinations, save those for honors, are not hard. If the young men are Americans or if they are extremely rich or well born, they go to Christchurch. That is the fashionable college, the one to which the royal family and the great peers' sons go.

Afterward, for his matriculation, he takes an examination that is called the "little go," or "responsion." Then he takes "moderations," or "mods;" then "divinity school," then the "great go," which gives him his degree. The "divinity school" examinations are very hard. The other examinations are easy, and a great latitude is permitted to the student in the subjects which he is examined in. But these are the "pass" courses, those taken by young men who desire a degree and nothing more. The "honor" courses, on the other hand, are much harder than any of those of American colleges.

Each college at Oxford is distinct in itself and varies from its neighbor colleges in its rules, yet all are under one head, the vice chancellor. It is as though Yale, Cornell, Harvard and Pennsylvania, without changing their ways, should unite in West Philadelphia under Provost Harrison. West Philadelphia then would be a younger, littler Oxford.

The undergraduates wear in hall—that is to say, in the refectory—their caps and gowns, and they wear them also at chapel and at lectures. In hall they have a pleasant time, eating sumptuously, with beer from the buttery and with wine now and then. The dons sit at one set of tables, the undergraduates, according to their years, at another. After dinner they go to their common room, where a formal English dessert is served to them, with port and sherry, nuts and fruit. If later on they go down town, they may be "gated"—that is to say, if they do not return before 9 o'clock they are fined sixpence and if not before 12 o'clock a shilling.

Each college has two proctors, four proproctors and four "bulldogs," a group of ten unsleeping fellows who in all sorts of disguises prowl about the town looking for undergraduates who are doing wrong. A proctor can, if he is ill natured, lead an undergraduate an insufferable life, for Oxford is old, its system never changes, and hence it has many absurd rules. These rules are usually regarded as dead letters, but a crabbed proctor may bring them to life at any time.

Life at Oxford is expensive and pleasant. The atmosphere to a youth of literary bent is the most inspiring one in the world, but this atmosphere does not appeal to the mathematical and scientific youth. He goes to Germany, for the German universities have far outstripped in science their old English sister.

The course at Oxford is a three year one. A scholarship of $1,500 annually is not a lavish sum to pursue it on.

Empress Dowager Talks English.

The empress dowager has been picking up a few English phrases and tried their effect on her guests at the recent ladies' audience, says the North China Herald—"Hao tu yiu," "Ha-p'i niu yierh," "Te-rin-ko t'i."

ENSEMBLE CLUB

Give a Delightful Musicale in Colonial Hall.

The musicale given by the Ensemble club on Saturday evening at Colonial hall, under the auspices of the Tennis Club, was a success in every way. Nearly two hundred were present from Quincy and neighboring towns, and the hall, which is an ideal one for a concert, was well filled. The audience was most enthusiastic.

The members of the Ensemble club are: Violins—Miss Clara L. Baxter, Mr. Robert B. Porter and Mr. Arthur W. Hall; Cello—Mr. Herbert W. Barker; Piano—Miss Sara H. Whicher.

The club has been meeting at intervals during the winter for mutual entertainment and the concert of Saturday evening was the natural outgrowth of the winter's practice. Under the direction of Mr. Buckingham the orchestral work done by the club was surprisingly good. Another season ought to show even better results. The program had been chosen with great care, and its variety added much to the enjoyment of the audience.

Miss Emery sang beautifully. Her selections were most pleasing and she gave "The Mission of a Rose" with charming effect. The violin obligato with her songs was played by Mr. Hall.

Both Mr. Porter and Mr. Hall received favorable comment for their violin solos.

The hardest work of the evening fell to the lot of Miss Whicher, the pianist, she playing all the accompaniments and the piano score for the orchestral numbers. Her friends would have been pleased to hear her in a piano solo.

The work of the strings in the orchestral part was excellent. The tempo and the shading was much better than is generally noted in amateur performances.

Although Mr. Frank Baxter's name did not appear on the programe, he did efficient service with accessory instruments, especially the snare drum.

The ladies of the club were given handsome bunches of pinks at the conclusion of the first numbers in which they they took part.

It is hoped that the Ensemble club will give a similar concert next season.

The Hours Shaved.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the barbers of Quincy was held Sunday afternoon in Doble's Hall. It was called to order at 2.30 P. M. by James Edwards, president of the Barber's Union. The first part of the meeting was open to all and remarks were made by Mr. Edwards, Mr. Somers, Mr. Kelly and others. The open meeting was closed at 3.30 P. M. and a union meeting was then held and the following hours of closing adopted:

Mondays at 6 P. M.; Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Fridays at 9 P. M.; Saturdays at 12 P. M.; holidays at noon. On nights previous to holidays, shops may be kept open till 10 P. M. A uniform price list was adopted being practically the same asis now in vogue.

Sunday Work Stopped.

There have been numerous complaints of late that there is more building Sundays at Houghs neck than there should be. A week ago quite a gang of men came out from Boston or some other place and put in the day building cottages. Yesterday another gang appeared and were hard at work when Officer Holloran appeared on the scene and ordered work stopped. His order was immediately obeyed and as the desired end had been accomplished no arrests were made.

Appeal for Charity.

Rev. Dr. Todd preached in exchange Sunday morning with Rev. Dr. Scott F. Hershey, and made an appeal for more charity for the shortcomings of others on the part of church members, as well as everybody else. It was an appeal for the adoption of the Christ life in everyday living as far as possible. Dr. Todd also read the report of the commission of which he was chairman.

Arbitration Will Prevail

Detroit, May 12.—After a long session the street railway employes of this city resolved to submit the dispute with the Detroit United railway over their demand for a raise in wages from 21 cents an hour to 25 cents an hour to arbitration. The company last week refused the raise demanded and offered the men instead a raise of 22½ cents an hour and also offered to submit the entire question to arbitration.

Lawrence, Mass., May 12.—After three weeks' idleness the striking weavers of the Washington mill returned to work this morning. About one-sixth of those who struck have secured employment in other factories.

Dry Dock Strikers Win

Portsmouth, N. H., May 12.—The men who recently quit work at the navy yard dry dock returned to work this morning. New Haven, May 12.—The dual track athletic meet on Yale field between Yale and California universities resulted: Yale, 85 8 points; California, 4 1-6 points. In the track events the Yale track athletes were superior, but in the field events the advantage was partly with the visitors.

Children Found Dead Body

West Derry, N. H., May 12.—A man's body was found in the woods here by children. The body was nude save an undershirt. There were no marks to suggest death from an external cause save exposure to the elements, following exhaustion. The man must have been about 45 ears old.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops.—JESSIE PINKEY MALL, Springville, Ala. This Remedy is for sale by all druggists.

THIRTY THOUSAND DEAD

Lie Beneath Molten Lava From Mount Pelee

THE MARTINIQUE DISASTER

Has Caused a Large Portion of the Northern End of the Island to Be Laid Waste—Details of the Havoc Wrought by Nature

Fort de France, May 12.—Advices received here from the vicinity of St. Pierre (10 miles from here) contain further details of the terrible volcanic upheaval which resulted in the utter destruction of that town and the death of nearly all its inhabitants.

The crater of Mt. Pelee had been wearing its "smoke cap" since May 3, but there was nothing until last Monday to indicate that there was the slightest danger. On that day a stream of boiling lava burst through the top of the crater, plunged into the valley of the River Blanche, overwhelming the Guerin sugar works and killing 23 workpeople and the son of the proprietor.

A commission was appointed by the governor to investigate the outbreak and it returned a reassuring report on Wednesday evening. But about 8 o'clock on Thursday morning a shower of fire rushed down on St. Pierre and the coast from Le Carbet (which had a population of 6000) to Le Precheur (which had a population of 4000) burning up everything in its path.

Throughout Thursday the heat in the vicinity of St. Pierre was so intense and the stream of flowing lava was so unremitting that it was impossible to approach the town during the early part of the day. As evening approached the French cruiser Suchet, after a heroic battle with the heat suffocation and sulphur fumes, succeeded in making a dash toward the shore, nearing the land close enough to enable her to take off 30 survivors of the disaster, all of whom were horribly burned and mutilated.

St. Pierre at that time was an absolutely smoke waste, concealing 30,000 corpses, whose rapid decomposition necessitates, in some cases, instantly completing their cremation, which was only partially accomplished by the lava.

The inhabitants of Fort de France were panic-stricken the morning of the disaster, when the sky suddenly blackened until it was as dark as at midnight. The sea shrank back 30 yards, hot rain began to fall, while gravel the size of walnuts poured down on the town. This lasted about 15 minutes and then the town began to resume its normal aspect. The 450 survivors who were brought here from the vicinity of St. Pierre by the French cable repair ship Pouyer Guertier came from Le Precheur, where, surrounded on all sides by flowing lava, they were nearly roasted to death and expected momentarily to be engulfed.

The work of relief is progressing here on the most extensive scale possible, but, in anticipation of disturbances, the treasury building and the warehouses are guarded by troops.

The latest reports received here showed that lava continues to pour down the slopes of the mountain, slowly engulfing the whole north side of the island, while fresh crevasses are continually opening.

All the hills surrounding Le Carbet and Le Precheur are covered with refugees, to the number of about 5000, who are being taken away gradually. In the meanwhile, provisions are being conveyed to them.

The corpses which are heaped in the ruins of St. Pierre are not only completely naked but are frightfully mutilated.

Heap of Smoking Ruins

Paris, May 12.—The minister of marine has received a cable dispatch from the commander of the cruiser Suchet, dated Fort de France, saying that he conducted a search at St. Pierre Saturday. The captain reports that the town is now a mere heap of smoking ruins, under which the victims of the catastrophe are buried. The Suchet was able to convey some of the inhabitants of Le Precheur to Fort de France, but could not reach the northernmost part of the island, on account of the dense rain of ashes which was falling.

The captain of the Suchet further reported that the Mt. Pelee volcano had a threatening aspect Saturday evening. Subterranean rumblings were still heard, flashes of flame frequently belched from the volcano and stones were thrown out with immense force.

A dispatch from Fort de France says there is no doubt that Governor Mouttet and the commander of the troops at St. Pierre, Colonel Dain, are dead.

Other dispatches confirm the reports that the American and British consuls and their families perished.

A French cable official who went to St. Pierre reports that the cremation of the bodies of the victims has begun. The waves of lava are still reported to be flowing northward. They have extended even to Le Carbet.

Wilhelmina Is Improving

The Hague, May 12.—The bulletins issued at Castle Loo concerning the condition of Queen Wilhelmina have been reduced to one a day and it is expected that they will soon cease altogether. The marked improvement in her majesty's condition continues, and the constant attendance of her physicians is no longer necessary.

A FIENDISH CRIME

Murderer Mutilates Victim's Body and Dances Upon It

Bridgeport, Conn., May 12.—At the Atlantic Hotel yesterday, Lawrence Bressano, a fireman in the hotel, crept into the meat room and split the skull of Michael Tornish, the chef, with a meat cleaver. He then took a large butcher knife and slashed the body in a most horrible manner. He cut off the nose and ears, gouged out the eyes and then cut strip after strip of flesh off the face of the unfortunate victim.

When the upper part of the body was unrecognizable, Bressano jumped on the body and danced from the head to the feet of his victim until the police, attracted by the freizied yells of the murderer, arrived. Bressano then turned his attention to the police and was not subdued until one broke a club over his head and another knocked him senseless to the ground with the buckle of a belt.

Bressano admitted the murder, and said he felt better for having committed it. It is believed that trouble over a woman led him to kill his fellow workman.

Day of Drowning Tragedies

Lawrence, Mass., May 12.—When the water was drawn off the canal yesterday the dead bodies of two men were revealed on the bottom. One was that of Jerome M. Dunphy, a suicide, 28 years old. A few minutes later the body of Albert Hainsworth, 43 years old, was seen. He probably met his death by accident. Andrew Frost, 12 years old, was fishing with two companions near the mouth of the canal last night and was sitting upon the limb of a tree which overhung the stream when he lost his balance and fell in and was drowned.

Collegians In Runaway Accident

Lawrence, Mass., May 12.—Philip H. Carleton, instructor in English at Harvard college, and Paul Coburn, a senior at Harvard, were badly injured in a runaway accident yesterday. They were driving with Mrs. Coburn and her sister when the horse became frightened and ran. The men were thrown from their seats in front. It is feared both may have received severe internal injuries. The women were uninjured.

Burglar and Confederate Caught

Springfield, Mass., May 12.—Mrs. Laura Snell Coville of Rockville, Conn., was arrested in Somers, Conn., yesterday after a long chase by Springfield detectives. She is charged with assisting her lover, Charles H. Borden, in disposing of stolen goods. Borden, who is under arrest here, admits that he committed several of the long series of burglaries of the past six months in this city.

Ex-Governor Marble Dead

Waldoboro, Me., May 12.—Former Governor Sebastian S. Marble died here Saturday evening, aged 87 years. His health had been gradually failing for the past five years. Mr. Marble was president of the state senate in 1887, and upon the death of Governor Bodwell in that year became acting governor, in which position he served until 1889. He was a lawyer by profession.

Mormons' Estimate of Enemies

Boston, May 12.—Elder Clyde of the Boston conference of Latter Day Saints, in the semi-annual New England conference of that sect here yesterday, made a bitter attack upon the enemies of Mormonism, saying that if it were not for the paltry dollars they got they would never be preaching the word of God. The hall was well filled with believers at the opening session.

Two Aeronauts Killed

Paris, May 12.—The airship called La Paix, belonging to Augusto Severo, the Brazilian aeronaut, made an ascension this morning. The airship exploded and Severo and one of his assistants were killed.

A Baseball Fatality

Westchester, Pa., May 12.—Walter L. Myles, 18, a junior at the normal school in this city, died yesterday from injuries received in being struck by a pitched ball in a baseball game here Saturday.

THE ODD PENNIES.

For the sake of saving odd pennies do not buy an inferior emulsion of cod-liver oil when you really need Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion costs more to buy because it costs more to make.

The difference in price is pennies. The difference in results is pounds—pounds of flesh—and days of new strength and comfort.

The consumptive and others who have lost flesh get more cod-liver oil into their systems by means of Scott's Emulsion than in any other way.

Day of Drowning Tragedies

Lawrence, Mass., May 12.—When the water was drawn off the canal yesterday the dead bodies of two men were revealed on the bottom. One was that of Jerome M. Dunphy, a suicide, 28 years old. A few minutes later the body of Albert Hainsworth, 43 years old, was seen. He probably met his death by accident. Andrew Frost, 12 years old, was fishing with two companions near the mouth of the canal last night and was sitting upon the limb of a tree which overhung the stream when he lost his balance and fell in and was drowned.

Collegians In Runaway Accident

Lawrence, Mass., May 12.—Philip H. Carleton, instructor in English at Harvard college, and Paul Coburn, a senior at Harvard, were badly injured in a runaway accident yesterday. They were driving with Mrs. Coburn and her sister when the horse became frightened and ran. The men were thrown from their seats in front. It is feared both may have received severe internal injuries. The women were uninjured.

Burglar and Confederate Caught

Springfield, Mass., May 12.—Mrs. Laura Snell Coville of Rockville, Conn., was arrested in Somers, Conn., yesterday after a long chase by Springfield detectives. She is charged with assisting her lover, Charles H. Borden, in disposing of stolen goods. Borden, who is under arrest here, admits that he committed several of the long series of burglaries of the past six months in this city.

Ex-Governor Marble Dead

Waldoboro, Me., May 12.—Former Governor Sebastian S. Marble died here Saturday evening, aged 87 years. His health had been gradually failing for the past five years. He was a lawyer by profession.

The hall was well filled with believers at the opening session.

SYMPATHY OF AMERICA

For Martinique Sufferers Takes a Practical Form

GOING TO FURTHEST LIMITS

Of Executive Discretion For Rescue and Relief—Generous Supplies of Food, Clothing and Medicine and an Appropriation of $200,000

Washington, May 13.—The president himself turned his attention yesterday to the extension of relief to the sufferers from the terrible catastrophe in the lesser Antilles. Secretary Hay was ordered to acquaint Secretary Root and Secretary Moody with the president's message and they were charged to carry out the details of the arrangements. The treasury department was instructed to co-operate and this will mean the employment of the revenue cutters and the medical officers of the marine hospital service. The war department, with its well organized supply departments, was regarded as in better position than any other institution to take charge of the relief measures.

Fortunately the navy has a handy ship in the Dixie, which arrived in New York recently from a training cruise. She is admirably adapted to the service required for her now. Secretary Moody immediately telegraphed orders to Captain Berry, her commander, to ship army supplies to be offered him, and to sail at the earliest possible moment for Martinique. He was authorized to extend relief to other islands if he found any necessity for so doing.

The scientific departments of the government will avail themselves of the opportunity to send on the Dixie as passengers two professors from the geological survey and a Harvard volcano specialist will also be given passage. The U. S. S. Buffalo, also a converted merchant freighter, will be used as a relief ship if the Dixie does not suffice.

Adjutant General Corbin, Quartermaster General Ludington, Commissary General Weston and Surgeon General Sternberg were charged by Secretary Root with the arrangements of the part of relief measures pertaining to the war department. After a consultation, official orders were drafted for the guidance of the three supply departments, giving the scheme of distribution as follows:

Three medical officers, with $5000 worth of medical stores, etc.; one subsistence officer, with $70,000 in stores, consisting of rice, dried fish, sugar, coffee, tea, canned soups, condensed cream, salt, pepper, and vinegar; one officer of the quartermaster's department with $20,000 worth of clothing supplies for men, women and children.

The orders directed that these officers and stores be sent on the Dixie, to be distributed at such points as may be designated by the navy officer in command of the Dixie, under instructions given by the secretary of the navy.

The medical officers are to render such medical aid as may be in their power in addition to the distribution of medical supplies.

Captain Gallagher, of the subsistence department, will proceed on the Dixie to Martinique. He will be in complete charge of the distribution of the stores, and a fund of $5000 was allotted to him for emergency expenses. The character of the president's instructions to the departments concerned in the relief work may be gathered from the text of the following letter from Secretary Hay, which was delivered to Secretary Moody immediately after the president had seen Consul Ayme's message:

"The president directs me to express to you his wish that your department go to the furthest limits of executive discretion for the rescue and relief of the afflicted inhabitants of the islands in the Carribbean."

The quartermaster's supplies to be transported on the Dixie will include about 500 tents, suitable clothing for men, women and children and camp equipage. The subsistence supplies include about 500,000 rations.

The house passed by an overwhelming vote a bill granting $200,000 for the relief of the sufferers in the great calamity in the West Indies. The amount was limited to $200,000, owing to the fact that large private contributions were being made. The discussion was brief, Mr. Underwood (Ala.) being the only one to speak in opposition. The bill was passed by 196 votes to 9.

The senate concurred in the house amendment to the bill making an appropriation of $200,000 for the relief of the people of the French West Indies.

Not a Moment Lost

New York, May 13.—The orders from Washington to load the Dixie with provisions reached the quartermaster's department here yesterday afternoon. She will be loaded with clothing, rations and medicines before noon tomorrow and will leave for the scene of the volcanic eruptions by night. Inside of an hour Major Brainard awarded contracts for 400,000 rations, consisting of rice, codfish, bacon, salt, evaporated milk and canned chicken soup.

Generous Porto Ricans

Washington, May 13.—Captain Stirling, commandant of the naval station at San Juan, P. R., has notified the navy department that the collier Sterling is being loaded there with voluntary contributions of supplies and will leave for Martinique as soon as possible.

Bridgeport Labor Troubles

Bridgeport, Conn., May 13.—The Mason Builders' association yesterday granted the demand of the hod carriers for a minimum wage rate of $2 for an eight-hour day. The Master Carpenters' association yesterday discontinued all work on which its members are engaged. This locks out 100 journeymen carpenters. The linemen and polemen of the United Traction company struck yesterday because the company discharged the inside electricians, instead of giving them an eight-hour day with an increase of wages.

Tucker Declines Chief's Position

Everett, Mass., May 13.—Sergeant Frank W. Tucker of the Chelsea police force was confirmed as Everett's chief of police by the aldermen last night. Mr. Tucker declined to accept, saying that he believed the citizens of Everett favored the retention of Chief Pendergast. He also anticipated that the perturbed state of mind of the citizens at the present time would be detrimental to his performance of the duties of chief.

Blaze at Historic Lexington

Lexington, Mass., May 13.—A fire which threatened to take away a group of buildings in the centre of the town last night caused a request of assistance from Waltham. The fire probably started from the short-circuiting of the electric current which ran a motor in a wagon factory. Before the Waltham engine, 20 men and the fire chief reached the scene the fire was under control. The loss was $8000.

Creditors Will Get Nothing

Boston, May 13.—Timothy L. Connelly, a contractor, and former president of the Boston common council, yesterday filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, showing liabilities amounting to $113,847. His unencumbered assets foot up to less than $100. He has real estate valued at $16,000, which, however, is entirely mortgaged to creditors holding secured claims.

Want Soda Sales Limited

Boston, May 13.—The Evangelical Alliance of Boston and vicinity, composed of clergymen of the evangelical churches, has sent a petition to the Massachusetts senate to amend the bill passed by the house last week so as to limit the sale of soda, ice-cream and confectionery on the Lord's day to drug stores, "in the interest of order, temperance and civil righteousness."

Many Firms Burned Out

Boston, May 13.—A stubborn fire in the lumber district last night caused the fire department considerable hard work and much anxiety. The fire was confined, however, to a large five-story brick building owned by the Badger estate and occupied by a number of firms. All suffered practically a total loss of stock and fixtures, the total on the fire being about $30,000.

Nature Building New Harbor

Nantucket, Mass., May 13.—The cut through the beach at the east end of the harbor has been considerably increased by the winter and spring storms, and is gradually deepening the harbor. It is thought that the new cut will give Nantucket a better harbor than the island has ever known, and all without the expenditure of a single cent.

Manslaughter Charge Quashed

Bridgeport, Conn., May 13.—The charge of manslaughter against George W. Holt of Pittsfield has been nolled. Sept. 30 last Holt fell asleep in the cab of his locomotive and caused a collision and four deaths at Long Hill. Holt lost his right hand in the collision and the state's attorney considered that sufficient punishment.

The Gilman Estate Contest

Bridgeport, Conn., May 13.—George W. Smith, nephew of the deceased wife of George F. Gilman, the tea merchant, yesterday filed in the probate court notice of an appeal from the action of the commissioners on the Gilman estate, who disallowed his claims against the estate, which aggregated $273,000.

Strike In Malden Mill

Malden, Mass., May 13.—Thirty back tenders in the cloth printing room of the Cochrane Manufacturing company went out on strike yesterday, in order to enforce a demand for more pay. Their weekly wages has been $9 and the men want $10. Some other employes have gone out in sympathy, but the mill is not greatly discommoded.

Faith In Rural Guard

Havana, May 13.—President-elect Palma had two conferences with General Wood yesterday. Palma has evidenced much interest in the rural guard and its ability to maintain peace in the island. This was a subject of discussion at both of his conferences with Wood. The president-elect is denying himself to visitors until he completes his message to the Cuban congress.

THE HORRORS OF ST. PIERRE.

Poisonous Gases Probably Caused Instant Suffocation--Corpses Everywhere and Plague Feared.

Fort de France, May 13.—It now seems to be generally admitted that about 30,000 persons lost their lives as a result of the outbreak of the Mt. Pelee volcano, at St. Pierre, on Thursday last. Careful investigation by competent government officials show that the earlier reports of The Associated Press were accurate.

Briefly put, in 10 minutes, last Thursday morning, the city of St. Pierre disappeared in a whirling fire vomited from Mt. Pelee, and 30,000 persons were instantly and horribly killed, and the volcano, which for more than 50 years had been a quiet lake, occupying its ancient crater, in which picnic parties bathed, suddenly discharged torrents of fiery mud, which rolled towards the sea, sweeping everything before it.

Then the last cable communication was broken and the doomed city was isolated from the world.

The commander of the French cruiser Suchet gave the American consul at Guadeloupe, Louis H. Ayme, the first news of the appalling disaster the day after it occurred. Mr. Ayme has reached the desolate spot where St. Pierre stood and confirms the awful story in all its essential features.

From an interview with Colonel Ayme, who is a trained newspaper man, a correspondent of The Associated Press learned the following facts regarding the destruction of St. Pierre:

Thursday morning found the inhabitants of that city anxiously looking towards the thick clouds shrouding the Mt. Pelee crater. All day Wednesday horrid detonations had been heard. These had been echoed from St. Thomas, on the north, to Barbadoes, on the south. During the night of Wednesday these had ceased, and only fine ashes, like rain, fell on St. Pierre. As this continued, Governor Moutiet, who was then at Fort de France, tried to stop the panic which the volcanic disturbance caused. He declared the danger would not increase, sent a detachment of soldiers to prevent a general exodus of the inhabitants and later went to St. Pierre himself with his wife.

The British steamer Roraima arrived at St. Pierre some time afterwards, with 10 passengers. They were all watching the rain of ashes, when, with a frightful roar and terrific electric discharges, a cyclone of fire, mud and steam swept down from the crater over town and bay, destroying a fleet of vessels at anchor off the shore.

There the stories stop. Twelve survivors only are in the military hospital at Fort de France, while 30,000 corpses are strewn about or buried in the ruins of St. Pierre, or else floating, gnawed by sharks, in the surrounding seas. Twenty-eight charred, half-dead human beings were brought here. Sixteen of them are already dead, and four others only are expected to recover.

The Associated Press steamer, chartered in Guadeloupe, reached Martinique at 6:30 Sunday morning. The lofty hilled island was hidden behind a huge veil of violet, or leaden colored haze. Enormous quantities of the wreckage of large and small ships and houses were met with. Huge trees and too often, floating bodies, with flocks of sea gulls soaring above and hideous sharks fighting about them, were floating here and there. From behind the volcanic veil came blasts of hot wind, mingled with others ice-cold.

At Le Precheur, five miles north of St. Pierre, canoes with men and women, frantic to get away, begged for a passage on the steamer.

The whole north end of the island was covered with a silver gray coating of ashes resembling dirty snow. Furious blasts of fire, ashes and mud swept over the vessel, but finally St. Pierre was reached.

The city of St. Pierre stretched nearly two miles long along the water front and half a mile back to a cliff at the base of the volcano. The houses of the richer French families were built of stone. The ash-covered hills were flanked by the still smoking volcano. The ruins were still burning in many places and frightful odors of burned flesh filled the air. With great difficulty a landing was effected. Not one house was left intact. Everywhere were viscid heaps of mud, of brighter ashes or piles of volcanic stones. The streets could hardly be traced. Here and there amid the ruins were heaps of corpses. Almost all the faces were downward. In one corner 22 men, women and children were mingled in one awful mass, arms and legs protruding as the hapless beings fell in the last struggles of death's agony. Through the middle of the old Place Bertin ran a tiny stream, the remains of the River Goyave. Great trees, with roots upward, and scorched by fire, were strewn in every direction. Huge blocks and still hot stones were scattered about. Most notable was the utter silence and the awful, over-powering stench from the thousands of dead.

Careful inspection showed that the fiery stream which so completely destroyed St. Pierre must have been composed of poisonous gases, which instantly suffocated everyone who inhaled them, and of other gases burning furiously, for nearly all the victims had their hands covering their mouths or were in some other attitude, showing that they had sought relief from suffocation. All the bodies were carbonized or roasted.

Unless prompt measures are taken for the disposal of the thousands of dead bodies at St. Pierre, a fearful plague is almost certain to develop there.

ST VINCENT CUT OFF

Belief That More Than Seven Hundred People Have Perished

Castries, St. Lucia, May 13.—Steamer Spheroid has arrived here with St. Vincent advices up to Saturday. She reports that 700 persons are known to have perished by the eruption of Soufriere volcano, and that this number is being constantly increased by reports from the searching parties that are out. The craters are now quiescent. The configuration of the mountain is entirely changed. Estates, chapels and everything in the vicinity of the volcano is buried in lava. In some cases entire families perished.

Postmaster's Accounts Short

Norfolk, May 13.—Postmaster Samuel L. Burroughs of Portsmouth is missing and United States Postoffice Inspector Bulls is in charge of the accounts, which are short.

Whooping Cough.

A woman who has had experience with this disease, tells how to prevent any dangerous consequences from it. She says: Our three children took whooping cough last summer, our baby boy being only three months old, and owing to our giving them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, they lost none of their plumpness and came out in much better health than other children whose parents did not use this remedy. Our oldest little girl would call lustily for cough syrup between whoops.—JESSIE PINKEY HALL, Springville, Ala. This Remedy is for sale by all druggists.

Good Afternoon.

The Fire department is being reorganized fast, but how about the reduction in the number of assistant engineers?

The officials of the St. Louis fair have again exercised the prerogative of changing their minds and the official announcement is now made that the exposition will be postponed until 1904.

A firm in Massachusetts is making the medals for the English coronation exercises. According to the London newspapers which decry the "American invasion" this is adding insult to injury.

The prompt appropriation of $200,000 by Congress for the relief of Martinique again emphasizes the fact that we are a christian nation. Supplies are being rushed to the island with all possible speed.

When the City Hall appropriation was under discussion in the City Council there was an inquiry whether the sum of $13,000 would include all extras and furnishings. The reply was that it would. But will it?

The workingmen's organization of New York will build a veritable palace for the use of their clubs, societies and associations. This follows the plan advocated by the late Sir Walter Besant in many of his writings.

We feel like giving a hearty cheer for our respected townsman the Rev. James Todd. He is a good disciple of the Prince of Peace and long may we have the honor of and privilege of counting him one of us. His recent work among the First Presbyterian churches in Boston scores another for him.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ If the Boston & Maine enables local passengers to travel to Boston at the rate of from 69 to 90 miles an hour with its new engines, the trip will become a veritable pastime.—North Adams Transcript.

☞ The Herald says that the barns were not destroyed in the Shenandoah valley under Grant's order to Sheridan in '64. The Herald is mistaken in this, as in many other things. Its zeal to paint everything concerning our army in the Philippines as black as possible leads it to say things that are not so. The Shenandoah valley was lighted up at night by burning barns as far as the eye could see, when Sheridan fell back towards Harper's Ferry after the close of the campaign. The writer was there.—Malden Mail.

☞ I bring you good news from Washington. Everything there, I believe, is in good condition. Your government deserves your confidence. You read in the newspapers about this or that detail, this or that sensation; but do you ever stop to think what a very little part those are of the real, general, large ongoing of all the interests of the country and your government at large? There may be a question about minor details, but on the whole your administration is conducting affairs so as to command your confidence and your sustaining heart and hand and sympathy. It sees the wrongs, it sees the evils, it sees the faults quicker than you can see them, and puts forth every effort, as it should, and as you ought to criticise it for not doing, to correct those evils and those faults.—Hon. John D. Long at Pine Tree State Club.

☞ Lawyers say there is no law to prevent the pardoned negro from Arkansas from coming into Massachusetts in accordance with the terms named by Governor Davis, and so long as he behaves himself he will be permittted to remain. If he should stop off on the way and settle down in some other State, it would be a violation of his parole, but the Governor of Arknansas could do nothing about it. No other Governor would honor a requisition for the pardoned criminal, and Davis might not bother himself about the affair any further. He got his shot at Massachusetts and that was all he wanted.—Lynn Item.

☞ We see in our daily papers that the Prince of Wales is invited to pay us a visit. It costs a good deal of money to entertain princes, particularly in cities where the debts are large and the taxes high, and there is a great scarcity of money for needed public improvements. But as the theory of our government now is that nobody on the great South American continent can sell even a coaling station to anybody but us, it is important that we should try to maintain peace with all nations, and as a foreign war might cost us more in one week than to entertain all the princes of Europe, let us welcome his royal highness if he wants to come, and give him palace cars, and canvas-back ducks, and a degree of LL.D. from Harvard with the hope that he may go home as much pleased as was his royal cousin of Germany.—Our Dumb Animals.

Mean Suggestion.

"Why has Jones turned vegetarian?"
"I suppose because it costs him nothing for board that way."

No Loss of Time.

I have sold Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy for years, and would rather be out of coffee and sugar than it. I sold five bottles of it yesterday to threshers that could go no further, and they are at work again this morning.—H. R. PHELPS, Plymouth, Oklahoma. As will be seen by the above the threshers were able to keep on with their work without losing a single day's time. You should keep a bottle of this Remedy in your home. For sale by all druggists.

ANOTHER DROPPED.

Assistant Engineman Barry Dismissed by Chief Williams.

Chief Williams has dismissed another member of the permanent force of the fire department. This time it is Michael P. Barry of the Central Fire station, who received a letter from the Chief on Monday notifying him that his services were no longer required.

Chief Williams when interviewed would give no other reason for removing Barry than for the good of the service.

Barry when seen said the notice was a surprise to him, and he knew of no reason why he should have been discharged, and that the notice he received simply notified him that his services were no longer required. He further said that he should ask for a hearing.

Michael P. Barry has been a member of the Fire department for twenty years, and for the past twelve years has been stationed at the Central station. He was what is known as an all-round man. He held an engineer's license and has served as assistant engineman of the steamer and driver. For the past year he has been superintendent of the fire alarm.

ABOVE ESTIMATE.

Specifications for Remodelling City Hall Must be Revised.

Although a number of builders figured on the remodelling of City Hall, but three submitted proposals, and they were rejected, as they were more than could be expended. The amount appropriated by the City Council was $13,000 and the lowest bid was received from Marr & Waterman, whose estimate was $14,562. The other two bids were: Deegan & Hallowell $16,658, and W. R. Lofgren $19,600.

The figures were somewhat surprising to the Mayor and Commissioner, as the plans and specifications had been gone over very carefully with a reliable builder, the estimate being below the amount appropriated.

In going over the specifications Monday afternoon with the builders present after the bids had been opened, it developed that there had been some misunderstanding in regard to the specifications, which was one reason why the figures were so high.

It is understood that new specifications will be drawn and more bids solicited.

The Education of the Future.

That what has been taught in schools and colleges is a small part of education has long been acceeded.

Within a few years the aim to bring about a practical element in schooling has come, and each new departure from old methods is a wide stride forward, and in a right way.

The Simmons Female College is setting its feet in paths that shall bring comfort and order where they are needed. The funds left for this purpose have matured sufficiently to warrant the building college houses as soon as a suitable site is selected.

The best thought of teachers and leaders in this work has chosen four new lines to work on for the welfare of women who wish to be fitted for a self supporting life. They will step aside from crowded paths and lead the students along where a practical everyday knowledge of things shall be acquired, but one still that shall embrace the best, the most thorough mental and intellectual study to take into living issues. This is a hint only of the delightful story of Simmons college that Miss Sarah Arnold of Boston told to an interested audience of ladies yesterday afternoon in Quincy.

The science of applied arts in life, the study of horticulture, laying out of grounds, sanitary science in homes, domestic science as needed in the purchasing and preparation of the foods that build our bodies, the care and training of the young, the knowledge of the value and best uses of money, the proportion of things as applied to capital and labor, household economics, these with the best technical work, are a part of what is laid out.

Miss Arnold is Dean of the college and those who were present at Mrs. W. T. Babcock's listened with great interest and all felt grateful that a large generosity was destined to be of such value to future women and young girls. Those who are advanced in years can go there to make even late preparation for the method to earn independent living, and today it is thought wise that no female shall be without a vocation that can be renumerative.

The Ancients.

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company nominated officers Monday evening and also made arrangements for the annual parade the first Monday in June.

—Philadelphia policemen carry canes with curved handles. They are sometimes useful in reaching for escaping law-breakers.

TWELVE TO FIVE.

Rockland High Won Its Game at Quincy Yesterday.

Adams Academy lost to Rockland High Monday at Merrymount Park, by score of 12 to 5.

Doble pitched throughout for Adams, but was hit hard, thirteen hits being made off him. Adams found little trouble in hitting the visiting twirler, but constantly flied out. They started out well but after the third inning not another man crossed the rubber.

Studley and Mansfield each made three hits for Rockland while Gould and Powers were each credited with two baggers. Moyle also secured two bases on a hit.

Weston played the best of any of the home men, having three singles, four assists and no errors, while Bennett and Thomas each pulled two hits during the game.

Captain Reardon again played his position as backstop and with his still stiff leg caught a difficult high fly.

The score by innings:

Rockland,	1	0	6	0	0	2	0	2	1	—12

THE SOUTH QUINCYS

In the Field to Defend the Championship of Quincy.

Last year's champions of Quincy, the South Quincys, have reorganized for 1902, and have arranged games with very strong amateur teams, including Hartford A. A., Arlington, Norwood and the Marions of Brighton.

The team will include all of last year's men, namely: Rich catcher, Dunn pitcher and 3d base, Birnie 1st base, Duffy 2d base, Pirovano short stop, Flynn right field, A. Mullane centre field, Austin left field, and Bjorklund extra pitcher.

The Park Commissioners are spending several hundred dollars on the diamond, and the supporters in South Quincy have contributed an amount sufficient to buy new uniforms, so all in all the sport in Ward Three will be up to high-water mark.

J. F. Pirovano has been elected captain of the team and under his generalship the team should win the majority of games played.

On May 24, the team plays its first game with the Concord Junctions at Concord Junction, and May 30th at 9 o'clock on the Ward Three playground will cross bats with the Hartford A. A. of Dorchester.

A. C. Marnock of No. 15 Penn street, is manager.

To Reorganize.

The followers of the Fore River Ship and Engine Co.'s base ball team are surprised to hear that the association had disbanded. On Tuesday morning Manager Paterson sent in his resignation to take effect immediately. For some time there has been a feeling at the Point that the team would prosper better if run by some association outside of the plant, and when matters came to a head Mr. Paterson resigned and a new association took charge of the affairs. It is not known as yet who will be the new manager.

"Explosive Mixture of Gas"

Washington, May 13.—Secretary of the Navy Moody has received from Secretary Frost of the Holland Torpedo Boat company a report in regard to the explosion which occurred on board the submarine boat. Mr. Frost says that the accident was due to an explosive mixture of gas, generated in some way by the storage battery, which had collected under the battery deck and there had been ignited.

TWO FAMILY DWELLING.

Eleven Room House to Be Built at a Cost of $2,000.

[Copyright, 1902, by C. H. Venn, 41 West Twenty-fourth street, New York.]

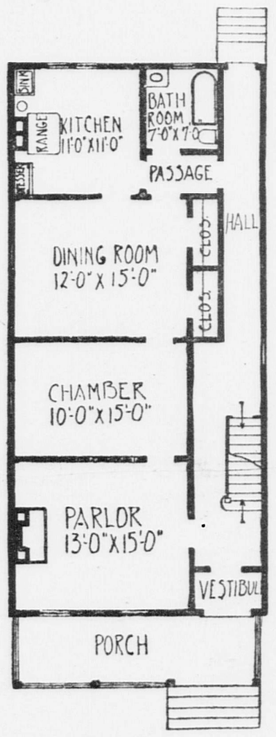

As a rule, two family houses are built for speculative purposes, and it is always advantageous to erect them on corner lots. The two family house for which plans are herewith shown is designed for such a lot, as light is thus secured on three sides.

The location of the chambers on both floors is the same, but the dimensions vary. The parlor on the first floor is lighted by two windows and has a fireplace with tile mantel and mirror. The kitchen has a double window giving good light and ventilation. The same holds good of the dining room, which is further provided with two large closets. The second floor contains one more chamber than the first, a small room over the hall in front. The cellar, which should have a concrete bottom, has two entrances, one from the yard, the other from the hall, and is provided with coal bins and store bins for both families.

The foundation walls are built of hard burned brick, with footings of concrete twelve inches thick. The framing timbers are of well seasoned spruce, built in balloon style. The exterior is covered with surface hemlock boards, laid diagonally, with building paper and finally with white pine clapboards laid six inches to the weather. All exterior trims are of white pine, and the exterior walls should be painted canary, with dark brown trimmings. Put plenty of red roofing paint on the roof.

Dimensions.—Front, 23 feet; side, 48 feet. Height of stories: Cellar, 6 feet 6 inches; first, 9 feet 6 inches; second, 9 feet. Cost to build, $2,000.

MAN BEFORE BREAKFAST.

More Ill Natured Than Woman, Says an Observant Restaurateur.

"Of course," said an avenue restaurant keeper, "I think my business gives me the best opportunities in the world for judging human nature. My observations have led me to the conclusion that women, as nervous as they are supposed to be, are more good natured than men. The test for this trait comes at breakfast time. Now, I suppose that my customers are about as cheery a lot as frequent any restaurant in the city. A good many of them are newspaper men, who, as a usual thing, take life as it comes without much complaint. If you take them in the evening or late at night, you will find them the most companionable lot imaginable. But let me tell you there is a difference in the morning.

"As friendly as I am with most of the men who come in here, there is not one whom I would care to provoke before he gets his breakfast. Most of the 'kicks' are made concerning the first meal of the day. The waiter is too slow; the steak is too rare; the steak is too well done; the eggs are not fried properly or are boiled too little or too much. But by the time the average man has had a good meal and a cup of hot coffee 'Richard is himself again.'

"Now, with women it is different. I don't know whether it is because they wake up less hungry than men or whether an empty stomach affects their nerves to a less degree, but those who get their breakfast here seldom annoy us with complaints."—Washington Post.

Don'ts For Literary Beginners.

Don't tell the editor what your family or friends or literary acquaintances say of your manuscript.

Don't urge the editor to buy your manuscript because you need the money to help you in contributing to the support of your family or in making your way through college.

Don't assume a jaunty, sarcastic or insistent tone with the editor. Don't coyly ask him to "permit this literary dove to nest in your olive tree or else return it to the ark at the above address."

Don't try to temper the severity of his judgment by sending him pressed flowers with your manuscript or to impress him with your literary power and experience by telling him that you "write on the spur of the moment and never correct."

Bear in mind, in short, that the best way to submit a manuscript is simply to submit it and let it speak for itself.—Franklin B. Wiley in Ladies' Home Journal.

Snow In Venice.

"I saw Venice once under unusual circumstances," said a traveler. "At the time of which I speak that sunny, smiling land was wrapped in snow. Our folks were a bit surprised, but the natives were amazed. To the real Venetians snow is a thing they do not know how to deal with. Many persons remain all day in bed indulging in hot drinks and pass their time in doing nothing. The children, to their extreme satisfaction, are not sent to school, as the streets and squares are covered with snow. Those courageous persons who venture abroad only walk at the slowest pace. To cross a bridge is considered hazardous, if not foolhardy. St. Mark's square is entirely deserted. Even the pigeons are invisible."

Mizpah.

How many people know that the monument that Laban and Jacob set up near the borders of Canaan and called "Mizpah," or a lookout, was erected in suspicion rather than love? The literal meaning was this: "The Lord watch between thee and me when we are absent one from the other, and see that you are not up to some new trick as soon as my back is turned."

So when it is inscribed in an engagement ring it might mean, "The Lord watch and see that you do not flirt when we are absent one from the other."

Those who use the text are sometimes wiser than they know.

Strong Even In Death.

A yew tree almost destitute of branches or bark grows abundantly in the Caucasus to a height of from fifty to sixty feet and a diameter of a little over two feet. It grows slowly, but its timber is almost indestructible except by fire. It is considered superior in durability, appearance and toughness to mahogany, which it otherwise somewhat resembles. In some large forests of this tree it is very difficult to distinguish the live trees from the dead ones, the latter being very numerous and said to stand for 100 years after death without exhibiting decay.

Helene—How long did you stay in Paris on your trip to France?

Emma—Oh, a week altogether.

Helene—But surely you could not take in everything in such a short time!

Emma—But we did, all the same. You see, there were three of us. Mamma took in the picture galleries, I studied the shops and things, and papa examined the local color in the cafes.—Exchange.

Plump Birdie.

She (after the service)—You dreadful fellow! Why did you smile during the offertory?

He—I couldn't help it. There was Miss Addie Pose singing "Had I the wings of a dove." The mental picture of a 200 pounder trying to fly with a pair of four inch wings was too much for me.

When the first baby howls at night with the colic, the father and mother look reproachfully at each other, as if to say, "You got me into this!"—Atchison Globe.

A Medicine for Old People.

Rev. Geo. Gay, Greenwich, Kas., is past 83 years of age, yet he says: "I am enjoying excellent health for a man of my age, due entirely to the rejuvenating influences of Dr. Miles' Nervine. It brings sleep and rest when nothing else will, and gives strength and vitality even to one of my old age."

"I am an old soldier," writes Mr. Geo. Watson, of Newton, Ia., "and I have been a great sufferer from nervousness, vertigo and spinal trouble. Have spent considerable money for medicine and doctors, but with little benefit. I was so bad my mind showed signs of weakness. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I know it saved my life."

Dr. Miles' Nervine

Saved me from the insane asylum," Mrs. A. M. Heifner, of Jerico Springs, Mo., writes. "I was so nervous that I could scarcely control myself, could not sleep nor rest, would even forget the names of my own children at times. I commenced using Dr. Miles' Nervine and it helped me from the first, and now I am perfectly well."

GREAT COAL STRIKE ON

Hundred and Forty-Five Thousand Preparing For Long Struggle

Philadelphia, May 13.—Mine workers throughout the entire anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania, to the number of 145,000, formally began their struggle yesterday for increased wages and shorter hours. Never in the history of hard coal mining has a tie-up been so complete, not one of the 357 colleries in the territory being in operation.

There is every indication for the belief that the suspension which was to cover only the first three days of this week will be made permanent by the miners' general convention which will meet at Hazelton tomorrow.

Absolute quiet prevails everywhere. In pursuance of the request of the district executive boards all the local unions throughout the regions met yesterday and elected delegates to the Hazelton convention. It is significant that in every instance where the vote of a "local" became public property the ballot showed a decided majority for a permanent strike unless the operators grant concessions.

The coal companies in various parts of the regions have already made preparations for a siege.

Queen's Regency Terminates

Madrid, May 13.—The brilliant weather yesterday encouraged the crowds to pour out into the streets of the city and every thoroughfare was filled with merrymakers. The appearance of the streets was in strong contrast to the scene which was being enacted within the palace. Here the queen regent was sorrowfully taking leave of her ministers and practically relinquishing to the hands of her son the solemn charge which she has so faithfully fulfilled for the past 16½ years. When the queen regent withdrew her pen from the parchment conferring the order of the golden fleece upon the Duke of Cumberland, her regency really terminated, although until the king takes the oath on May 17, his mother remains officially the queen regent.

Biliousness is a condition characterized by a disturbance of the digestive organs. The stomach is debilitated, the liver torpid, the bowels constipated. Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets allay the disturbances of the stomach and create a healthy appetite. They also tone up the liver to a healthy action and regulate the bowels. SERIES OF EXPLOSIONS

Causes Terrible Destruction In a Pittsburg Suburb

NAPHTHA CARS COLLIDED

Leaking Fluid Caught Fire From Switch Light and Crowd Drawn to the Scene Were Enveloped by Flame From Subsequent Explosions

Pittsburg, May 13.—The Sheraden yards of the Pan-Handle railroad was the scene last evening of one of the most disastrous explosions and fire known in this section for many years. A score of lives were lost and about 200 persons were so badly burned that, according to the pudgment of physicians in attendance, 75 percent of them will die from the effects of their injuries.

The cause of the catastrophe was the explosion of a train of naphtha cars which was being switched at the yards. In the switching the rear car telescoped a car forward. The leaking naphtha ignited from a switch light, causing an explosion which threw the flames 50 feet high. Much of the escaping naphtha ran through Corks Run to Espion borough, a distance of 1½ miles, and caused another explosion, blowing to atoms the Seymour hotel and the Collins house, and badly wrecking a frame building nearby, in which were congregated 200 or more sports from Pittsburg and vicinity, betting on the races, baseball, etc. Few of the occupants of this building escaped injury, many being badly hurt.

The first car of naphtha exploded about 4:40 o'clock and the spectacle soon attracted a large crowd on the streets, lining the hills on both sides of, and parallel to the railroad. The second car exploded about 5 o'clock, but it was 6:15 when three more cars of the deadly stuff went up with a roar that could be heard for miles, that the work of destruction really began.

A torrent of flame belched forth on each side of the track, sweeping back the terrified spectators like a charge of artillery, and sending a shower of flame over their heads.

The scene that followed beggars description. The successive explosions had heated the air to such an extent, that, before the third explosion, many were rendered unconscious by the extreme heat and the gaseous fumes, and were being carried away when the torrent of flame swept over the excited crowd.

There was an awful hush for a moment, then followed a scene of frenzy. Men and women, their clothing ablaze, their faces scorched and blistered and their hair burning off their heads, ran wildly shrieking, hither and thither, only intent to escape from that awful furnace of fire. Some gave vent to frenzied appeals to kill them and put them out of their misery, and little children with their curly locks and light summer clothing, small pillars of fire, cried pitcously as they were swept along by the tide of burning humanity.

The townspeople did all in their power for the stricken victims, and all the Pittsburg ambulances were immediately dispatched to the scene with a corps of physicians. Many of those not seriously burned were removed to their homes in Sheraden, while others were sent to the various Pittsburg hospitals and the dead removed to undertaking establishments in Sheraden and vicinity and to the Pittsburg morgue.

Severo's Fatal Blunder

Paris, May 13.—Paul Renard, the head of the government balloon establishment at Meudon Park, has been interviewed concerning the catastrophe to Senor Severo's airship. He said the disaster was caused by defects in construction, and that Senor Severo was evidently not familiar with aerostatics. He committed the blunder of placing his motors too close to the balloon. A spark of flame from the motors certainly ignited the envelope, says Renard, and caused the explosion.

Creditors Lose Heavily

Will Americans Relinquish Control of the Philippine Islands

Washington, May 13.—An important contribution to the discussion of the Philippine government bill was made in the senate yesterday by Mr. Foraker. He maintained that the United States could not leave the islands until order had been restored and until a stable government had been established. He declared that this government would not come away from the islands under the present or the next administration, even though the latter be Democratic, because the American people never would consent to poltroonery.

Mr. Foraker read some editorials from the Denver News, of which Senator Patterson is the proprietor. The editorials maintained that the United States must retain control of the Philippines and put down the insurrection among the Filipinos. With keen sarcasm, the Ohio senator declared that the editorials did not read as did Mr. Patterson's speeches read now.

Mr. Foraker held that the policy adopted in the Philippines was one of the kindest and gentlest possible and in strict accord with the instructions of President McKinley. He declared that the minority had attacked the army—from the commanding general to the humblest private—all because the army had resented outrages without parallel in cruelty, committed by the Filipinos. The American army, he said, had shown a humanity unsurpassed in history. The American people always had stood by their army and they always would.

Haytians Up In Arms

Cape Haytien, Hayti, May 13.—Most alarming reports have reached here from Port au Prince, the capital of this republic. The supporters of several candidates for the presidency, in succession to President Sam (resigned) came into conflict before congress yesterday and put an end to the election by that body, which was to have taken place yesterday. Shooting occurred in the streets of Port au Prince. The fighting resulted in a triumph for the opponents of the government. The troops at the arsenal surrendered without any resistance, and the government passed into the hands of the revolutionists. Only two men were killed and three wounded. Former President Sam still occupies the palace, but he will embark today. A provisional government has been established under the presidency of Boisrond Canale. He says all the towns of the republic are in a state of revolution.

Quick Knockout For Erne

Fort Erie, Ont., May 13.—Joe Gans, the Baltimore light-weight pugilist, is champion in his class at last, after knocking at the door for the past 10 years. Frank Erne lost last night a fight at Fort Erie which was a decisive tussle, although of very brief duration. The end came with startling suddenness. The men were scarcely warmed up when Gans, trying cautiously, caught Erne napping and landed a hard right on the ear. Erne started to spar somewhat wildly and the black sent out a left jab as a feeler. It went home right through Erne's guard, drawing blood from his nose, and Gans rushed in. He slapped left to the face and right to the point of the jaw. The blow completely settled Erne. He sank slowly to the floor, fell on his back and was rolling over on his stomach when he was counted out.

Noll Gets His License

New York, May 13.—Although at the meeting of the New York Presbytery a month ago the application of Vincent Noll of this city for a minister's license was denied by an overwhelming vote, the presbytery, by an unanimous vote, decided yesterday to admit the young man. At a former meeting Mr. Noll gave the ministers the impression that he considered the Adam and Eve story as allegorical rather than historical. Mr. Noll has since satisfied the presbytery of his orthodox.

Harvard Beats Yale In Debate

New Haven, May 13.—Harvard defeated Yale last night in their annual intercollegiate debate. The verdict of the judges was unanimous Harvard had the affirmative of the question: "Resolved, That the immigration of Chinese laborers to our insular possessions should be prohibited by law."

Tacoma, Wash., May 13.—David Thompson, the British contractor, arrested in Seattle on a charge of having absconded with $70,000, has been taken east from Tacoma in charge of two deputy United States marshals, who will deliver him to the British authorities at Boston.

Irishmen to Attend Unveiling

New York, May 13.—The American-Irish Historical society decided last night to attend the ceremonies of the unveiling of the Rochambeau statue at Washington, from the fact that Rochambeau had 1600 men of Irish birth or parentage in his command.

Morgan Eluded Interviewers

MINISTERS NOT EXEMPT

Must Pay Their Share For Support of Nutmeg State Military

Willimantic, Conn., May 13.—Rev. Lyman G. Horton of New Bedford, Mass., while in this city yesterday, was ordered to appear in police court to answer a charge of evading the payment of military tax. Mr. Horton formerly resided here, and the tax collector said he did not pay the tax for the years 1900 and 1901. Mr. Horton said in explanation that when requested to make the payment he was under the impression that ministers of the gospel were exempt, and desired to investigate before paying. He came to town yesterday, he said, and went to pay his bill, but was unable to find the tax collector.

Judge Lyman allowed the case against the minister to be dropped upon the payment of the taxes and all costs. Mr. Horton did so and left immediately for New Bedford.

A Quart Baby.

Now and again there is an item in the newspapers concerning the birth of a puny baby so small that a quart cup holds it comfortably. If the article told all the facts it would probably tell also of a mother who in weakness and misery had looked forward to the baby's advent with shrinking and fear.

To have fine, healthy children the mother must be healthy, and it is the common testimony of mothers that the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription not only promotes the mother's health but also gives her strength to give her child.

"Favorite Prescription" accomplishes these results by tranquilizing the nerves, promoting a healthy appetite, and giving refreshing sleep. It increases physical vigor and gives great muscular elasticity, so that the baby's advent is practically painless. It is the best of tonics for nursing mothers.

"I gladly recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. J. W. G. Stephens, of Mila, Northumberland County, Va. "Before my third little boy was born I took six bottles. He is the finest child and has been from birth, and I suffered very much less than I ever did before. I unhesitatingly advise expectant mothers to use the 'Favorite Prescription.'"

The dealer who offers a substitute for "Favorite Prescription" does so to gain the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, containing 1008 pages, is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the cloth-bound volume, or only 21 stamps for the book in paper covers. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

STRIKE PROPOSITION

Will Probably Prevail at Convention of Miners

WILL BE BARE MAJORITY

Whichever Way the Question Is Decided—Stationary Firemen Want Miners to Endorse Their Demands, Which Complicates the Situation

Hazleton, Pa., May 14.—The situation regarding the continuation of the present total suspension of work in the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania is a trifle clouded. The apparent overwhelming sentiment for a strike which was in evidence Monday is not quite so prominent now, and predictions are freely made that whatever the delegates in the convention today determine upon, the winning side will have only a bare majority.

President Mitchell and his fellow officials still maintain silence and every attempt that has been made to get their opinion of the situation has proved futile. The indications are, however, that the delegates favoring a strike are in the majority and will win their fight in the convention.

The proposition of the stationary firemen to go out with the mine workers if the latter will endorse the firemen's demands for a shorter work day without a reduction in wages, has helped to complicate the situation. The radical strike advocates insist that the Miners' union should accept the proposition which would cause the operators a large financial loss through the flooding of the mine workings.

The convention will conduct its business behind closed doors. President Mitchell will be elected chairman and will make an address in which he will give in detail all that has transpired between himself and the coal presidents since the Shamokin convention.

National President Mitchell and District Presidents Nicholls and Fahy arrived here last evening from Scranton. President Mitchell stopped off at Freeland, nine miles north of here, where practically the entire population of the town turned out to welcome him. He made a brief speech in which he counselled the miners to act wisely.

Frequent conferences were held last night by the leaders in preparation for the convention. It is not unlikely that the convention will be in session for several days.

Working In Puritan Mills

Plymouth, Mass., May 14.—The American Woolen company started 14 looms in the Puritan mill yesterday which created considerable surprise to the striking weavers of that mill. None of the strikers returned to work and it is not known where the weavers were obtained. The strikers are still firm in their sympathy with the weavers at Olneyville.

Will Settle by Arbitration

Detroit, May 14.—An agreement to arbitrate the pending wage question was yesterday signed by the officers of the local Street Railway Men's union and the Detroit United railway. The men recently asked for a raise in wages from 21 cents an hour to 25 cents and the company refused it, at the same time making a counter offer of 22½ cents.

Strikers Win Two Contests

Pittsburg, May 14.—Two of the big strikes inaugurated lately were officially declared ended yesterday, the workmen in both instances being the gainer. The carpenters to the number of 5000 returned to work today at the maximum wage of $3.50 per day and 2300 structural iron workers resumed work at 47½ cents an hour.

Beaver Brook Strike Off

Lowell, Mass., May 14.—The woolen weavers of the Beaver Brook mills met last night and after a lively debate unanimously voted to declare the strike off. They will all return to work.

Neglected to Pay Poll Tax

Richmond, May 14.—More than 1700 Democrats and 1542 white Republicans lose their votes in 27 counties in North Carolina by failure to pay the requisite poll tax. The colored delinquents are 7348. This indicates the conditions in 71 counties remaining in North Carolina.

ST. VINCENT'S LOSS.

Estimated at 2,000---Provisions for 100,000 Needed Immediately for the Relief of Martinique Sufferers.

Fort de France, Martinique, May 14.—The United States government tug Potomac, which came to Martinique from San Juan, P. R., cruised along the coast of the island Monday afternoon. She encountered an inky-black column of smoke which made it necessary for her to go five miles out of her course.

Words fail to describe the present situation at St. Pierre. A small detachment of French troops is making efforts to inter the dead, although the government seems to be strikingly unconcerned as to what is done in this direction.

LOCATION OF MARTINIQUE.

The looting of the dead has begun already. While coming to Fort de France the Potomac picked up a boat containing five colored and one white man whose pockets were filled with coin and jewelry, the latter evidently stripped from the fingers of the dead. Lieutenant McCormick, the commander of the Potomac, arrested these men and turned them over to the commander of the French cruiser Suchet.

The northern section of the island is depopulated. Provisions are needed here for 100,000 people immediately. A shipload of lime is also needed at St. Pierre for sanitary purposes. The stench there from the dead bodies is overpowering.

Mt. Pelee was still erupting smoke and fire at a late hour Monday night.

The French cruiser Suchet is here and the city of Fort de France is quiet.

It is reported from the British island of Dominica that 300 survivors of the St. Pierre disaster have reached there in canoes.

Many strange and incomprehensible incidents are recounted of St. Pierre. The charred remains of a woman with a silk handkerchief, unburned and in perfect condition, held to her lips, have been found there. The crisped bodies of young girls have been found, but the shoes they wore were unhurt.

Every praise is given United States Consul Ayme. He has worked indefatigably to succor the survivors. He has bandaged the limbs of the wounded and has worked without sleep and without food. He is now thoroughly exhausted.

Forty persons rescued from the city are now in hospital here.

In addition to the specie already secured, jewels to the value of $200,000 were recovered from the bank at St. Pierre Monday.

The only woman known to have survived the disaster at St. Pierre was a negress named Fillotte. She was found in a cellar Saturday afternoon, where she had been for three days. She was still alive, but fearfully burned from head to toes. She died in the hospital here.

ICE AND ALSO COAL.

May Soon be in the Hands of the Trusts.

According to the morning papers another gigantic trust has been launched in New England with a capital of $16,000,000. It will be known as the New England Consolidated Ice Co., and it has just been incorporated under the laws of New Jersey.

The company which is organized upon the same plan as the Standard Oil and United States Steel Co., aims to control the ice business in New England. Control of many of the ice companies has already been secured and among the companies cited is the Quincy Ice Co.

Up to the present time, however, it can be said that none of the ice companies doing business in Quincy have been absorbed. Negotions looking to that end, however, have been in progress some time, and it is reported that it will only be a matter of a short time before the three companies in Quincy, viz: Meadow Brook, Crystal Spring, and Eaton Bros., will have been taken over by the trust.

It is also reported that the new company will not confine its work to ice but will also deal in coal.

Glee Club Concert.

It was really gratifying to the members of the Edward Hewitson Associates to sing to such a large and enthusiastic audience as greeted them at the concert Tuesday evening at the Wollaston Baptist church. The entire program, consisting of eleven selections, went off to perfection. The great success is largely due to the most efficient leader, Mr. H. Y. Follett, who has so faithfully drilled the club.

The club is also under obligations to Mr. Follett for securing the services of the noted basso, Mr. Arthur Beresford. His voice was grand, powerful and in the best of tune. His renderings of "Bedouin Love song," "Persian Serenade" and "Scotch War song" were delightful, and gave such pleasure that there was repeated applause.

The club orchestra made its first appearance and met all expectations. Their playing was very fine and they are worthy of praise for perfecting an orchestra in such a limited time. Mandolin and violin duets afforded much pleasure.

The last, but not least, on the program was "The Viking's Farewell" by the Glee club, who were accompanied on the orgam and piano by Mrs. Alma Faunce Smith and Mr. Arthur Sprague. It was a fine selection and rendered by the club as well as by the accompanists, in a manner rarely displayed.

EXTRA TRAINS.

Five More Each Way Between Quincy and Boston.

Other Improvements Also Promised.

A Shelter at Wollaston Station Among Probabilities.

By the summer arrangement of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., which goes into effect next month, all the Quincy stations on the main line will have five additional trains each way as follows:

QUINCY TO BOSTON.

Leave Quincy.	Arrive in Boston.
9.42 A. M.	10.02 A. M.
10.42 A. M.	11.02 A. M.
1.42 P. M.	2.02 P. M.
3.42 P. M.	4.02 P. M.
6.42 P. M.	7.02 P. M.

BOSTON TO QUINCY.

Leave Boston.	Arrive in Quincy.
6.58 A. M.	7.19 A. M.
8.58 A. M.	9.19 A. M.
12.58 P. M.	1.19 P. M.
1.58 P. M.	2.19 P. M.
2.45 P. M.	3.06 P. M.

All the above trains to Boston will stop first at Quincy Adams two minutes earlier, and at Wollaston four minutes, Norfolk Downs six minutes, and Atlantic eight minutes later.

The trains from Boston will also make stops at Atlantic, Norfolk Downs, Wollaston and Quincy Adams.

All the above trains both inward and outward are midway between hourly trains and will give half-hour service in place of hourly service.

It is possible, also, that the 10.50 P. M. theatre train will leave later or that there will be a new train for the Quincy stations at 11 or 11.10 P. M.

Two new Sunday trains each way are also anticipated.

When the new schedule goes into effect the longest waits for inward trains will be between 5.19 and 6.12 A. M., 11.12 and 12.12, 12.12 and 1.12, 2.12 and 3.12, 4.12 and 5.12, 8.08 and 9.12, 10.08 and 11.10 P. M. With these seven exceptions, all the Quincy stations will have half hourly service from 5.19 A. M. to 11.12 P. M., and between 7 and 9 A. M. even better.

The longest waits for outward trains will be between 7.28 and 8.28 A. M., 9.28 and 10.28, 10.28 and 11.28, 11.28 and 12.28, 7.28 and 8.28 P. M., 8.28 and 9.28, 9.28 and 10.28.

With the exception of the year 1895, Quincy will have more trains than ever before.

It was on April 2 that City Solicitor Blackmur at the request of Mayor Bryant took up the movement for better service which has resulted so successfully, although while in office in 1899 he had negotiations with the railroad officials for new depots, more trains and better freight facilities.

We quote in part from Mr. Blackmur's letter to President Hall:

FREIGHT HOUSE.

"Two years and a half have since elapsed and we are still doing business at the little freight station which was so inadequate at that time. It is true that the additional sidings have been put in, and in fact they have been extended on three different occasions, and yet we have no more sidings for freight than we actually need at the present time. In fact I believe we are still short of track room now. There are being delivered to us from fifteen to twenty-five cars per day, but the building itself, which was the greatest source of complaint and is a small structure, with a single door, inacessibly placed, has not been replaced or improved.

"The freight business which the road does at Quincy probably amounts to $5,000 or $7,000 a month, and the consignees have the greatest difficulty in obtaining their goods from this little building. The freight house is an exceedingly small building with a very small platform. The building is inaccessibly placed and almost completely surrounded by the buildings of the Richards' hay and grain firm, from which shipments of hay and grain are being almost continuously made, the teams and cars blocking up the entrance to the small freight house. One car only can be unloaded at a time at the freight house and the freight soon chokes up the one small passageway in the building. Goods in many cases have to be lifted bodily over freight, which causes more or less damage. If a car of freight comes in at night, it is almost impossible to get the goods the next day. This is the same condition as existed before and which the railroad people themselves recognized as requiring a change.

PASSENGER SERVICE.

"In order to enable you to see at a glance how little has been done for us in the way of train service at Quincy, and how we are retrograded in this respect, I furnish you herewith a table of train service between Quincy and Boston for twenty-five years, compiled by myself from the time tables advertised in the Quincy Patriot and on file at the Public Library."

Year.	Population.	Trains per Day Inward.	Outward.
1875,	9,155	21	22
1885,	12,145	27	23
1890,	16,726	31	29
1895,	20,912	49	49
1896,	20,912	24	23
1900,	23,899*	27	27
1902,	25,307	28	27

*The National Census of 1900 was taken just after a period of great depression in Quincy's then greatest industry, the granite business, and a great many families had temporarily removed to Barre, Vt., because of said depression.

This population is given as the estimate of the State Board of Health for Quincy and is based upon the ratio of increase between 1895 and 1900, and is far less than the probable increase in population. There has been a very large recent growth in this city and many new industries, notably the construction of works by the Fore River Ship and Engine Co.

Sunday trains from 1890 to 1896:—Never less than 9 each way, and as many as 15: now only 10 each way.

"You will observe by this that we are given very many less trains than we had in 1890 and 1895, and that we are given but few more trains than we had twenty-five years ago, although our population has nearly trebled. We have now only hourly service the greater portion of the day."

"The city is becoming a centre for the street railways, who dump their passengers at your station at Quincy, and yet the street railway can never seriously compete with you in traffic between Quincy and Boston.

"As a result of stationing competent men at the Quincy station for a period of ten days last month, which ten days were continuous, it was found that the average number of passengers taking trains at that station was between four and five thousand per day. I know that six years ago the income of the station was about $4,000 a month from passengers, and I take it that was half what should be credited to Quincy as a like amount must have been taken in at Boston. At present time the passenger service has increased very greatly; you know how much.

These matters are only those which we were under the impression we satisfied you were real grievances two years and a half ago, and which were either to be remedied at once or to be adjusted within a reasonable length of time.

SHELTER AT WOLLASTON.

There is one other suggestions that I have to make, and that is that there should be a shelter shed built at the Wollaston station. Wollaston station does a very large business. When the railroad changed the running from the left to the right, the station was changed from the westerly to the easterly side of the track, but in anticipation of soon after having four tracks put in, the station was moved back some distance from the present tracks. The station itself has but a very small porch or covering; consequently there is a very large open space where the passengers congregate, waiting to take the trains, over which space there is no shelter, and there is much complaint by people as to their exposure while waiting for trains. We would therefore like to have a shelter shed at Wollaston.

IN CONCLUSION.

"Quincy has an opportunity to make great strides forward as a suburban city but I know you cannot realize how we are being handicapped by the railroad in the lack of accommodations and cooperations given the traveling public."

"I am creditably informed that between trains people are constantly coming to the ticket office to inquire when the next train goes, and then leave it to go down to the square and take their chances on the electrics, hoping to save time in getting to Boston that way. A man won't wait an hour for the next train even if he doesn't get there any earlier on the electrics. He prefers to be moving. In this way, I venture to say you are even now losing a great deal of patronage which you might otherwise easily obtain."

Since the writing of the letter April 2, City Solicitor Blackmur has had several interviews with General Manager Chamberlain and other railroad officials, and this week received the following letter announcing new trains, etc.:

Boston, May 12, 1902.

Mr. P. R. Blackmur, Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sir:—The ten trains which we added between Boston and Quincy, to take effect on our next time table, after consultation with you, is all that I can see my way clear to do at the present time.

I will personally have records made of the amount of business that is being done by passenger trains between Boston and Quincy this summer, with a view to giving you further facilities if we can see our way clear to do so.

In reference to the matter of better freight facilities at Quincy, would say that plans are being prepared now, and I see no reason why, from my standpoint, you should not hear from us in a very short time. I had President Hall on the 'phone this morning, and he wished me to say to you that he would like to see you further in reference to this matter.

Yours very truly,
W. E. Chamberlain.
General Manager.

City Solicitor Blackmur informs the Ledger that he has seen plans for improved freight facilities, but he is not at liberty to disclose them. He looks for an improvement in the near future which will be appreciated by the business interests of Quincy. The railroad officials will also investigate the needs of a shelter at the Wollaston station.

VICTORY FOR HIGH.

Defeated Volkmann School Boys 7 to 4.

A Surprise for Thayer Academy.

Victory Snatched from Them in the Ninth Innings.

Quincy High school won from Volkmann school Tuesday at Merrymount Park in an interesting game by score of 7 to 4. Quincy took the lead from the start and kept it throughout. The seventh inning was one of excitement when both teams vied with one another for superiority in run getting.

The High nine was on point of disbanding but after such a victory they are greatly encouraged, and will be no easy match for Adams if they play up to that standard.

There were no sensational plays in the game, but Howland, shortstop for Volkmann played a "gingery" game, while fine playing was done for the locals by Miller, Oswald and Brown. Hayward and Oswald also excelled in stick work. Volkmann had an abundance of errors while only three trifling ones were credited to High school.

Thayer Surprised.

Thayer Academy lost to Brookline Tuesday, 9—7, in the closest and cleanest game in which the team has participated. There was an almost sure victory, after the sixth inning but Brookline rallied and scored six runs in the ninth.

With the score 7 to 3 in Thayer's favor, at the first of ninth Brookline opened the inning with several hits together with bases on balls, and when Winslow was put in it stood 7—7. He pitched well, but, amidst the excitement, one hit together with errors, brought in two runs. He steadied down wonderfully, but too late.

When the Braintree boys came to the bat for the last time, they were as greatly excited as they were surprised and the first two men knocked little infield hits and were put out. Winslow reached second but Kelley ended the game with a fatal line drive to third.

Hammond pitched fine ball till he was rattled and in the seventh with men on second and third and no outs he kept his eye on the plate and used great judgment in allowing no man to reach first.

Barndollar pitched good ball but was hit hard, though not always safely and was not able to strike out a single man. Gallagher, Dow and Winslow hit well for Thayer while Iverson excelled for the visitors.

Pritchet and Walsh fielded in grand style, the latter robbing Thayer of what seemed to be safe hits.

Money and supplies can be sent to Cornelius Bliss of New York city, or may be sent direct to W. J. Flather, treasurer of the American National Red Cross association, at Riggs bank, Washington, D. C. France will never forget the spontaneous initiative of President Roosevelt or the significant generosity of congress."

Master Builders' Association Interviews the Officials.

At the regular meeting of the Master Builders and Traders Association held Tuesday evening a letter was read from Mr. Chamberlain, general manager of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, relative to the improvements in the train service between Quincy and Boston. A committee of the association has had this matter in charge and the improvement in train service and freight facilities is due in a great measure to the work of this committee who should share with the Mayor and City Solicitor the credit. The letter received from Mr. Chamberlain follows:

Boston, May 12, 1902.

Mr. Henry L. Kincaide and Mr. W. A. Bradford, Committee Board of Trade, Quincy, Mass.

Dear Sirs: In answer to your verbal queries in regard to freight facilities at Quincy, would say that plans are now being prepared to see what can be done at that place, and I expect to have them in my hands within the next three days and if possible, you shall hear from me within a week.

We fully realize that the place is growing, and that the freight facilities at the present time are not sufficient to properly transact the business.

Yours very truly,

W. E. Chamberlain,
General Manager.

The committee on the banquet reported that the affair was a financial as well as a social success. A vote of thanks was extended to Landlord Estabrook for the banquet served.

Ten were admitted to membership at this meeting.

IMPORTANT EVIDENCE

Claimed to Have Been Discovered by Pro-Boers

THEY ASK FOR A HEARING

Bearing Upon an Alleged British Camp In America—British Boasting of Buying Contraband Goods May Close Her Source of Supply

Washington, May 14.—Some Boer sympathizers in Philadelphia have asked for a hearing before the president reaches any conclusion on Colonel Crowder's report on the British purchases of horses and mules in Louisiana. They profess to have evidence in proper shape for presentation to our government that the British conducted a regular military recruiting station in connection with the purchases of live stock for South African war purposes. They have been informed that any proofs they have at hand will be received and considered.

There are some nice distinctions to bear in mind between legitimate and illegitimate traffic in a neutral country in things which can be and are liable to be used in a war between two other countries. Very few rules except generalities can be laid down for this class of cases. Horses and mules are contraband of war, for instance, but if sold in the ordinary course of trade it is not incumbent upon the seller or the seller's government to scrutinize the possible destination of every animal. The purchaser, because he happens to be a subject of the King of England, who is making war upon a South African republic, is not necessarily forbidden to drive his beasts into Canada or ship them for Jamaica, and what he does with them after that is no business of the American public. He may, indeed, send them directly to South Africa from one of our ports; there are large farms and mines in South Africa whose owners have as much right to work them during war times as after peace is declared. International trade in flour and beef and bacon does not have to end summarily because a surplus of these staples happens to be produced by a neutral nation while two other nations are fighting each other.

Of course, the general commercial immunity of the neutral nation does not extend to its products when on the high seas in the possession of a belligerent. The liability of articles which are contraband of war to capture and to destruction or diversion rests upon a wholly different basis. The horses and mules which may be innocently sold here are subject to forcible seizure if they cdoss the track of the wrong belligerent. In the case of British and Boers this risk is reduced to a minimum since everything sent from America or Europe to the British in South Africa goes by sea and the Boers have no navy. This circumstance, while it affects the practical application, does not touch the principle involved.

The militant nation which is wise will not deliberately make its own course more difficult and embarrass to no purpose the legitimate commerce of its neighbors by celebrating its purchases of potentially contraband goods with a grand procession, fireworks and the ringing of bells. There are extremes of candor at which both common sense and regard for the ordinary amenities revolt. The foolish nation sometimes indulges in such things, and thereby damages itself and its convenient neighbor at the same time. Possibly Great Britain may have been guilty of some follies of this sort in her conduct of her purchases in various parts of the United States. If so and if the result be a compulsory closing of her American sources of supply for the future, she will have herself and only herself to blame.

Nobody except the persons officially interested knows what is in Colonel Crowder's report. Neither can any one except the president say what will be done on the strength of the report. It would be a most unfortunate outcome of the whole business, certainly, from a commercial point of view, if the present case were to establish a precedent that would embarrass, for all coming time, the lawful disposal of the surplus products of this country whenever it chanced that two foreign countries, both of them friendly to us, were at war with each other.

This is a view, by the way, which the agitators inside and outside of congress are often unable to take. The enforcement of inferential as well as direct neutrality is liable to cut both ways. It may operate today to the passive advantage of a friend; tomorrow an enemy may be in a position to make profitable use of it.

JUGULAR VEIN TORN OPEN

Archie McEachern Meets With an Accident Which Causes Death

Atlantic City, N. J., May 14.—Archie McEachern, the well known champion bicycle rider of Toronto, while being paced by a motor tandem yesterday afternoon at the Coliseum track, met with an accident which resulted in his death 20 minutes later. The accident was the result of the breaking of the chain on the motor cycle. Riding the tandem were Alf Boake and Robert B. Thompson.

The effort was to establish a new mile record. Several miles had been covered when the chain broke and in the sudden slowing up of the damaged tandem McEachern collided with it and shot in the air. His head struck against a projecting board which cut a gash in his neck, from which blood spurted in a stream. The jugular vein had been torn open. He expired shortly after his removal to a hospital. Boake and Thompson were uninjured.

Treated Little One Well

London, May 14.—The Daily Mail publishes a long account of the life in London of Clara Taylor, the Cincinnati woman who is charged with kidnapping her niece, Margaret Taylor, and who is now detained in Italy. The paper says Miss Taylor tried unsuccessfully to make a living by journalism. She showed extraordinary love and devotion for her niece and starved herself in order to indulge the child with every procurable pleasure.

Madrid, May 14.—The streets of this city are assuming gala attire. A large section of the route to be followed by the procession on the day of the coronation of King Alfonso has been hung with festoons of foliage and flowers, among which are hidden multi-colored electric lamps. Triumphal arches are being constructed along the line of march and a number of private houses have been tastefully adorned.

Armenians' Lives In Danger

St. Petersburg, May 14.—Serious "Russian Easter" riots have occurred in the province of Kuban, north Caucasia, between Russians and Armenians. The latter were outnumbered and routed. The Russians then stoned the houses of the Armenians and pillaged their shops. The Armenians would undoubtedly have been massacred but for the timely arrival of troops. Many arrests were made.

RICKETY CHILDREN.

As likely to think of chairs as of children when we use that word rickety.

Children with loose joints, bow-legs, and soft bones have rickets. It is a disease due to improper feeding—and a typical disease for the workings of Scott's Emulsion.

For the weak growth of the bones Scott's Emulsion supplies those powerful tonics, the hypophosphites.

For the loss of flesh Scott's Emulsion provides the nourishing cod-liver oil in an easily digestible form.

It is these things that account for the rapidity with which Scott's Emulsion cures rickets.

Rickety children improve in every way under its influence.

BRAVE BOSTON OFFICER

Carries Aged Invalid Through Burning House to a Place of Safety

Boston, May 14.—The rescue of an aged invalid by Police Officer Lynn, who carried her down three flights of stairs through blinding smoke, was the sensational feature of a stubborn half-hour's fire in the flat house on Durham street yesterday afternoon. The damage will not exceed $3000.

The fire started in a storeroom and it is believed by the occupants of the building that it was set by thieves who intended to rob the flats during the excitement attending the fire, as it is said that repeated attempts have been made by different men to gain access to the house for that purpose. Two gold watches belonging to Mrs. A. J. Stimson were missing after the fire.

Move In Blondin Case

Boston, May 14.—Counsel for Joseph W. Blondin, under indictment for the murder of his wife, will probably have an expert chemist examine the specimens of what the government claims is human blood. Professor Wood was given the knives found in Blondin's trunk and which are believed to have been used to dismember the body of Mrs. Blondin, and some pieces of wall paper taken from the room where it is supposed Mrs. Blondin was killed. Dr. Wood decided that there was human blood upon the wall paper and knife blades and he also found traces of human cuticle on the knives.

While the house was being fumigated last evening, Patrolman King thought there was a fire in the house and pulled in an alarm and the fire department responded, being greeted with roars of laughter by the neighborhood.

Noted Woman Physician Dead

Boston, May 14.—Dr. Marie E. Zakrzewska, the pioneer woman physician of Boston, and one of the pioneers in America, founder of the New England hospital for women and children, and for nearly 40 years a director and physician there, died at her home in Jamaica Plain. She was born in Berlin in 1829. In 1853 she came to America and took her degree of M. D. in 1856.

Twenty-Five Buildings Caught Fire

Portland, Me., May 14.—A fire started in the city stables yesterday and within 10 minutes from the time the first alarm was sounded the stable was enveloped in flames and flying sparks had set fire to no less than 25 wooden buildings. A general alarm brought the entire department out and the flames were soon subdued. The whole loss probably will not exceed $10,600.

Clement, the high license and local option candidate for the Republican nomination for governor in the coming convention, is to make a carriage tour through Rutland county towns. Miser Died Natural Death

Belfast, Me., May 14.—Coroner Coombs was called to Jackson yesterday to investigate the cause of death of John Waite, an aged miser. Assessors' Notice.

TO the inhabitants of the City of Quincy, and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein: You are hereby required to bring in to the Assessors of said City

On or Before June 15, 1902,

True and Perfect Lists of all the Polls, and Schedules and Estimates of all the Personal Estates and Real Estate for which you are liable to pay taxes.

Persons Holding Estates in Trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the Assessors with Statements in relation to such estates.

When the estates of persons deceased have been divided, or have changed hands from other causes during the past year, the Executors, Administrators, or other persons interested, are required to give notice of such changes, and in default of such notice will be held to pay the taxes assessed.

Blank forms for "Return of Property for Taxation" can be procured of the Assessors.

The following may serve as a guide to assist in making up Schedules and Statements:

Number of Polls 20 years and upwards; Money at interest; Amount of Money on hand, including deposits in Banks, etc., other than Savings Banks incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth; Railroad, Town, City, State and other Bonds (except those of the United States); Shares and Stocks of Iasurance, Manufacturing and other incorporated companies chartered or organized under the laws of any State other than Massachusetts; Goods, Wares, Merchandise and other stock in trade, within or without the State; Household Furniture, exceeding $1,000 in value; Horses, Mules, Carriages, Oxen, Cows, other neat Cattle not less than one year old, and Swine and Sheep not less than six months old; Income from Profession, Trade or Employment exceeding $2,000; Personal Property held in trust or by wife or minor children.

Attention is hereby called to Section 32 of Chapter 12 of the Revised Laws.

"Whoever, with intent to defeat or evade the provisions of law in relation to assessment or payment of taxes, delivers or discloses to an assessor or an assistant assessor a false or fraudulent list, return, or schedule of property as and for a true list of his estates, not exempted from taxation shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment in jail not exceeding one year."

MORTGAGED PROPERTY—A mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the city or town in which it lies, within the time prescribed by the notice under Sect 41, a statement under oath of the amount secured thereon or on each separate parcel thereof, with the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagor or mortgagee. If such property is situated in two or more places, or if a recorded mortgage includes two or more estates or parts of an estate as security for one sum, such statement shall include an estimate of the interest of the mortgagee in each estate or part of an estate. The assessors shall, from such statement or otherwise, ascertain the proportionate interests of the mortgagor or mortgagee respectively in said estates, and shall assess the same accordingly. If, in any year, such statement is not brought in, the tax for that year on such real estate shall not be invalid merely for the reason that the interest of the mortgagee therein has not been assessed to him.—Sect. 45, Chap. 12, Revised Laws.

When a statement in conformity to the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under Sects. 16, 17 and 18 of Chap. 12 of the Revised Laws. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, no statement or return is required from either the mortgagee or mortgagor unless requested by the assessors in writing.

The Assessors will be in session at their office every Thursday morning from 9 to 11 o'clock. Blanks will be furnished to all applicants.

Cruiser Dixie Sails For the Island of Martinique

PEOPLE WERE HELD BACK

Soldiers and Policemen Prevented Them Leaving St Pierre When They Feared Eruption of Mount Pelee—Volcano Victims on St Vincent

Washington, May 15.—The United States cruiser Dixie sailed from New York late last evening with 900,000 rations, beside clothing, medicines and army surgeons, for the relief of the West Indian sufferers. She should reach Fort de France, Martinique, on Monday next. Meantime nearer places are sending such help as they can, while the New York Chamber of Commerce has bought the cargo of a ship now at St. Thomas and has diverted it to Martinique, which should be reached Friday. The Dixie expedition, however, will be the first large relief.

Unless some new outbreak of volcanic energy should occur, or unless an epidemic breaks out among the refugees—neither of which are at all improbable—the worst has been done. Governor Llewelyn reports from St. Vincent that Soufriere's victims are about 1600, but that the volcano is less active though threatening.

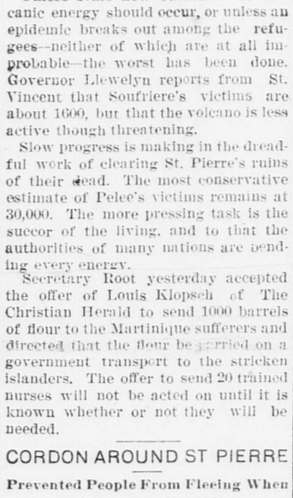

Slow progress is making in the dreadful work of clearing St. Pierre's ruins of their dead. The most conservative estimate of Pelee's victims remains at 30,000. The more pressing task is the succor of the living, and to that the authorities of many nations are bending every energy.

Secretary Root yesterday accepted the offer of Louis Klopsch of The Christian Herald to send 1000 barrels of flour to the Martinique sufferers and directed that the flour be carried on a government transport to the stricken islanders. The offer to send 20 trained nurses will not be acted on until it is known whether or not they will be needed.

CORDON AROUND ST PIERRE

Prevented People From Fleeing When City Was Menaced

London, May 15.—The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Barbadoes, B. W. I., who visited St. Pierre on board the royal mail steamer Solent, has learned from Dr. Artier, who miraculously escaped the disaster, that when the governor of Martinique, M. L. Mouette, and the insular officials had declared all danger from an eruption of Mt. Pelee to be past, a cordon of armed soldiers and policemen was placed around the town to prevent the people from leaving. Dr. Artier, however, went to the suburb of More Rouge. He was riding back to St. Pierre when the explosion occurred. He turned and fled precipitately across the mountains to Fort de France.

ST. PIERRE, WITH MONT PELEE IN THE DISTANCE.

With the exception of the prisoner who was confined in a dungeon at the time of the explosion, Dr. Artier is really the sole survivor of St. Pierre.

The signal station at Castries, Island of St. Lucia, reports that a large fire was seen Wednesday night in the direction of Fort de France, Martinique.

The incineration and burying of the dead at St. Pierre is still going on, but under great difficulties. The only men engaged in it are French soldiers. A small squad of them is at work, but the task is so dreadful that the burial parties can only work for a short time at a stretch. The thousand or so bodies found on the surface have been burned, but few of those in the ruins have been dug out. It will require months, unless a greater force of men is employed, before the dead are properly disposed of. The sand and ashes that cover the ruins of the city are still hot, and waves of heat come down from the crater of the volcano, making work among the ruins difficult, when it is not absolutely impossible.

Over Mt. Pelee there still hangs a great cloud of smoke. The eruption continues with diminished force. In the harbor of St. Pierre a steamship is in constant readiness to take away the workers if Mt. Pelee becomes more threatening. A watch is constantly maintained, ready to give warning, and if the lava turns in the direction of St. Pierre the place will be immediately deserted.

SIXTEEN HUNDRED DEAD

Eruption at St Vincent Moderating, but Anxiety Is Still Felt

London, May 15.—The governor of the Windward islands, Sir Robert Llewelyn, telegraphs to the colonial office from the island of St. Vincent, under date of May 13, as follows:

ISLAND OF ST. VINCENT.

"I arrived here yesterday and found the state of affairs much worse than had been stated. The administrator's reports show that the country on the east coast, between Robin Rock and Georgetown, was apparently struck and devastated in a manner similar to that which destroyed St. Pierre, and I fear that practically all living things in that radius were killed.

"Probably 1600 persons lost their lives. The exact number will never be known. Managers and owners of the estates, with their families, and several of the better class of people have been killed. A thousand bodies have been found and buried. One hundred and sixty persons are in the hospital at Georgetown. Probably only six of this number will recover.

"The details of the disaster are too harrowing for description. I got at St. Lucia a coasting steamer, which is running up and down the leeward coast with water and provisions. Twenty-two hundred persons have received relief. I have asked for medical officers from Trinidad and Grenada. All the neighboring British colonies are assisting generously. Every effort is being made to grapple with the awful calamity. All the best sugar estates in the Carib country are devastated, and the cattle are dead.

"The eruption continues, but is apparently moderating. Anxiety is still felt. All officers and residents are cooperating with me. The ladies are making clothing."

Volcano Still Rumbling

London, May 15.—The Fort de France correspondent of The Times in a dispatch describing the present condition of Mt. Pelee says that volcano is still rumbling and that three luminous points on the lower slopes of the mountain, which are casting incandescent rays, seem to presage a further calamity.

Canada's Contribution

Ottawa, May 15.—The Canadian parliament yesterday voted $50,000 for the relief of the sufferers of Martinique and St. Vincent. Half of the amount will go to each. The vote was unanimous.

Vesuvius Not In Eruption

Naples, May 15.—The report published in Paris that Mount Vesuvius is in eruption is without foundation.

Trouble Likely to Continue

Kingston, Ja., May 15.—The provisional government in Hayti, which was established by Boisrond Canale, a former president of Hayti, has pardoned the Haytien exiles in Jamaica, who are arranging to proceed to Port au Prince at the earliest opportunity. The party supporting M. Fouchard in his claim to the presidency of Hayti is determined to make an effort to get into power.

Molto Stricken With Apoplexy

Madrid, May 15.—King Alfonso, on horseback, yesterday reviewed the naval cadets at their camp at Carabanchel, just outside of Madrid. Just before the king arrived at Carabanchel, the captain general of Madrid, Lieutenant General Molto, fell from his horse from an attack of apoplexy. His condition is critical.

Jailbird Fatally Shot

Roanoke, Va., May 15.—When Jailer Craig entered the jail corridors last evening he was murderously assaulted by two negro prisoners who had hoped to make their escape. During a struggle which followed, one of the negroes was shot and fatally wounded by Craig.

LEADER NIXON RESIGNS

Could Not Retain Self Respect as a Tammanyite

HIS DECISION UNALTERABLE

Refuses to Allow a Vote of Confidence and Declares He Is Out of Politics—Tammany May Have No Leader For Some Time to Come

New York, May 15.—Louis Nixon, leader of Tammany Hall for nearly six months, resigned his position as leader yesterday at a meeting of the district leaders, held in Tammany Hall. While the resignation was not entirely unexpected it was not thought that Mr. Nixon would take such positive action until a later date, first waiting the action of the leaders to see if they would give him a vote of confidence. Instead of this he refused to allow any vote of confidence and went so far as to say that he would no longer retain his self-respect if he remained leader.

The meeting of the district leaders was called at the solicitation of Mr. Nixon. This action of Mr. Nixon followed a deadlock at the meeting of the sachems of the Tammany Hall society Monday, when Nixon's intention of retaining Thomas L. Feitner as grand sachem was frustrated by a tie, there being six of the sachems of the 13 for and six against the retention, the 13th, George C. Clausen, being absent. The action of that time caused a general discussion of the possibilities of Mr. Nixon losing control of the organization and the combination headed by John J. Carroll ousting him. Mr. Nixon, in an interview on Tuesday, said if he could not have the confidence of the leaders, he would "get out," and this threat has been carried into effect.

When Mr. Nixon arrived at Tammany Hall yesterday all the 37 leaders were present. As soon as the meeting had been called Mr. Nixon arose and said: "Gentlemen, I have decided to resign as the leader of Tammany Hall. This resignation is absolute and positive and will not be withdrawn. I wish it to take effect immediately. I feel that I cannot retain my self-respect and still remain the leader of Tammany Hall. My decision is unalterable."

There was a moment's silence when Mr. Nixon had finished. Then Michael C. Murphy made a complimentary speech in praise of Mr. Nixon. He did not say, however, that he wished him to remain as leader. He said that Mr. Nixon had done splendid work as the leader and he had the confidence of all the leaders.

Mr. Nixon jumped to his feet as soon as Murphy had finished and said: "I do not desire any vote of confidence, whatever."

He immediately left the room, followed by an outburst of hand-clapping. Once outside the meeting room, Mr. Nixon would only say to the newspaper men: "I am out as the leader of Tammany Hall. I am out of politics and am glad of it. I will devote my time to my business of shipbuilding and will talk about that by the hour, but I will not talk politics hereafter. The cause of my resignation is plain. I could have won out and elected Mr. Feitner grand sachem but I would not appeal to Mr. Croker."

Mr. Nixon was then driven away from Tammany Hall in a cab. Following the departure of Nixon several of the leaders remained for some time in groups chatting about the resignation and the possible developments. It was announced that a meeting of the executive committee of district leaders will be held Thursday, at which time Mr. Nixon's resignation will be acted upon.

Numerous rumors were rampant about the hall regarding the future policy of the organization. The most persistent one and one that was endorsed by several leaders was that there would be no actual leader of Tammany Hall for some time to come. This was coupled with a rumor that the finance committee would be abolished as well as the chairman of this committee. The chairman has always been the leader of Tammany Hall, and as such chairman had the handling of the funds of the organization in the political campaign.

The new civil service list does not give much indication of an improvement in the police force of the city.

Hail to Hobson, the hero of Santiago. Would that everybody in the city might have had an opportunity to greet him today.

Why not a shelter at Atlantic station too. The conditions are almost identical with those at Wollaston, except Atlantic has no platform.

It is not pleasant for Quincy people to think of taking ice from a trust, buying coal from a trust, being supplied with milk by a trust, buying all their groceries from a cooperative trust, etc., etc. It was hoped the trusts would not enter the local field.

We received this morning a pleasant call from D. MacDougall, B. D., editor of The Caledonian, an attractive illustrated family magazine published in the interest of the clan. All lovers of Scottish literature will find a fund of information in this interesting publication.

The Legislative committee was prompt to report leave to withdraw on petition for a new gas company in Quincy, being suspicious of the objects of the incorporators. The Legislature, however, is willing the city should have better service, and the report of the Gas Commission has been referred again to the Committee on Public Lighting.

There is probably a difference of opinion as to which Quincy needs the more, a commodious freight house and large accessible yard, or more trains to Boston. The City Solicitor in his letter to the railroad said it was more trains, but the business men of the city think differently. Frequent trains and cheap fares make it easy for Quincy people to shop in Boston, while inconvenience and delays in handling freight are serious and expensive for merchants. Trains at all hours of the day are appreciated by the travelling public, but the city government owes more to the business men of the city. The city officials and Master Builders and Traders' Association should work harmoniously together. We must have better freight accommodations.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ To the prosperous times in this country is attributed the doubling of the number of immigrants that are pouring in through the port of Boston and at other points, while as a matter of fact there is not actually work enough to keep all of the people now here steadily employed. The improvement in the times has not more than kept pace with the improvements in machinery, which are constantly displacing the workers here and there, so that there are hardly places enough to go around now, and therefore no call for an increase in immigration which there is likely to be considerable difficulty in assimilating. This unprecedented influx of aliens will but tend to aggravate conditions in a period of depression, and they should be advised to come slower and not overcrowd an already well-supplied labor market.—Lynn Item.

Great Ball Game to Come off Saturday.

First Hill Men vs. the Second Hill Men.

It is not often that enough business men in one locality can be gotten together to form two base ball teams in one afternoon. The fact remains, however, and the residents of the "First Hill" of Wollaston have challenged the residents of the "Second Hill" to play a game of ball at Merrymount park on Saturday, May 17, at 3 o'clock (sharp). The challenge has been accepted.

Both teams will be composed of well known business men of both hills and no doubt will give the attendants an enjoyable afternoon. The lady friends of each team have chosen their colors.

It is generally conceded that the First Hill team, is much the stronger, yet one of the members of the Second Hill team advises us that they have secured the services of an undertaker's ambulance to aid the members of the First Hill team in reaching their homes after the game.

The umpires will be Frank W. White and Dr. Charles E. Monroe.

Anniversary Week.

The Universalists intend to observe anniversary week by holding a grand mass meeting at Tremont Temple, Boston, on Wednesday evening, May 28, at 7.45. Rev. Henry Blanchard, D. D., of Maine; Rev. Frank O. Hall, D. D., of Mass.; Rev. Marion D. Shutter, D.D., of Minnesotta, will address the assembly on the general topic: "The Outlook." Seats free. Doors open at 7.

On Thursday evening, May 29, at 6.30, there will be a festival and banquet at Faneuil hall. Hon. Hosea M. Knowlton will preside and many able speakers are announced. Tickets $2.00 to be had of the pastor, or W. B. Eddy, Norwood.

Anniversary.

The Epworth League of Atlantic observed a very successful anniversary on Sunday evening. Reports were given of the work during the year, and a short address was given by the pastor. A pleasing vocal solo was sung by Miss Mabel F. Burr. The address of the evening was by Rev. T. H. Vincent of North Weymouth. This was both scholarly and inspiring—dealing with the law of "seek and find" in both temporal and spiritual matters. The outlook for the coming year is a bright one for both the Junior and Senior Leagues.

Keep Your Doors Locked.

Atlantic has been shaken from its calm by the strange pilfering propensities of two strawberry venders during the past week. The first theft began on Webster street, when an unsuspecting woman let the pedler into the house for a moment while she went for a dish to hold the berries. On her return to the door, she found no one, and several silver spoons which had been lying on a table near-by, were gone. Since then numerous other cases of startling theft have been reported, and the password in Ward Six is "Keep your doors locked."

THE BARN PARTY.

A Novel Gathering of the "Farmers" of Wollaston.

There were over 150 present at Brasee's hall Wednesday evening at the "Barn Party" given by members of the John Hancock Lodge, I. O. O. F.

As circulated, it was "a reg'ler Old Shindig of a party." To one who has never had the pleasure of attending one of these assemblages, it was indeed a strange adventure. The costumes were greatly variated and some were very funny, as well as the actions of those present.

About forty couples marched in to the music of Sprague's orchestra, led by Mr. and Mrs. Wardwell. Dance orders were distributed and from eight thirty to midnight dancing occupied most of the time. During the intermission "punkin pie," doughnuts and coffee were sold. During the evening a city young man tried to sell "gold bricks" to the farmers.

Mr. Wardwell was floor director, Mr. H. W. Battison acted as constable, and Messrs. Frank Merrill, C. F. West, George Walsh and C. E. Barker represented the refreshment committee.

The affair was very jolly and all shared equally in the fun.

Among those present were Professor Kaplan, Professor Baker, Mr. and Mrs. George Ela, Louis Ela, Clara Ela, James Teer, Frank Merrill, Knox Ruggles, C. E. Barker, Louis Cleaves, Mr. and Mrs. George Wardwell, Clarence Sargent, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. George Walsh, Fred Coombs, Fred West, Lola West, Arthur Whittier, Ida McNeil, Charles Somer, Mr. Parrott, Mr. Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McDonald.

Mira Brown, Joseph Thomas, Ernest Woodman, William Bennett, Jennie Saunders, Millie Saunders, Nellie Saunders, Carrie Saunders, Mabel Dorman, Louis Smith, Ethel Marr, Allan McKay, Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Haynes, Leslie Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson, Mr. William Anderson, David Howe, Jennie Martin, Joe Martin, Joseph Mitchell, Edward Mitchell, Robert Corthell, Albert O'Muer, Addie Conrad, W. W. Battison, Mr. Fletcher, Elvira Hirtle, Alice Hirtle, Emily Hirtle, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie, Mr. and Mrs. John McLeod, Mr. and Mrs. Sargent, Mr. and Mrs. D. Miller, Thaddy Dunn, Edward Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Mennimman.

The Machine Man.

A machine mender visited a house in Atlantic this week and asked if the "lady of the house" had an old machine she would like to sell. It happened that the woman had, and tempted by a too honest face and a glittering offer, escorted the tinker up stairs and let him inspect the machine in question. He chatted in an off hand way, while fixing a screw here and a bobbin there, and finished by promising to send a "party" down to look at it, as "this was a good article and he always could use good articles." He departed. A few hours after, the woman, by some instinct: chanced to look at the machine. Every attachment, including the shuttle, had vanished into thin air or into the silver-tongued mender's pocket. He may visit several towns. It is well to describe him as tall, thin, dressed in gray trousers, light tan coat and gray hat. Slight mustache and light hair.

Vote Rescinded.

The Barre, Vt., City Council has rescinded by a vote of four to one, a resolution requiring that all granite used by the city be purchased from quarries operated under the direction of the Quarrymen's Association.

In Opposition to Morgan

London, May 15.—The Daily Mail says that 10 members of the house of commons have promised to form a pool of $5,000,000 as a nucleus of a fund to start a line of Atlantic greyhounds in opposition to the Morgan combine. The promoters of this enterprise hope to secure mail and cruiser subsidies from the government.

Minister Wu May Leave Us

Pekin, May 15.—An imperial edict has been issued appointing Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese minister at Washington, to prepare a code of Chinese laws on modern lines. Wu Ting Fang will probably soon be recalled to China to undertake this work.

Sentenced For Conspiracy

Dublin, May 15.—A special crimes court at Ennis has convicted seven members of the United Irish league of conspiring to compel a man to surrender his farm. Sentences ranging from two to four months' imprisonment were imposed.

Fired of the Office

Melbourne, May 15.—The Earl of Hopetoun has decided to resign the governor generalship of the Australian commonwealth. He was sworn in as the first governor general of the Federated Australian colonies Jan. 1, 1901.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

ALONG THE SHORE.

The Yachtsmen Busy Getting Their Crafts into the Water.

This is the season of the year when those interested in yachts forget the pastimes that have occupied their attention during the winter months and talk nothing but boats. Owners of boats are busy getting their craft ready for the water. That means, generally speaking that the boats are being scraped and painted. Many boats are already in the water, those that are not will be in a few days, in season for Memorial day racing.

Perhaps one of the busiest places just now is at the basin at the Hanley Construction Co. works. Here during the winter months have been some of the handsomest private steam yachts that are owned in Boston harbor. Among these are the Doll, Nerita, Idalia, Kasage and Annie S., also the passenger boat Cape Cod. These are now resplendent in new paint and varnish. The brass and metal work shine like gold. The crews that man them during the summer are on board, and they are about ready for sea. Only waiting for word from their owners.

There are also in the basin the yachts Red Skin, Wyoem, Bohemian and Nabudlia. These are all ready for service.

The larger part of the boats hauled up here during the winter are gone yet there are still a few that have not been made ready for the water as yet.

In the shop there is building a 30-foot steam launch, and an 18-foot racing boat. Both are about ready for launching. Over near the marine railway the frame work has been set up for a large sloop yacht for Captain Baker of the United Fruit Co. She is 100 feet over all.

At Smith's adjoining they are busy building the challenger for the Quincy cup. For obvious reasons nothing will be said about her at present writing.

At Lelois there is not much activity, although most of the boats hauled up here during the winter are already in the water or will be soon.

Among those already in the water are the Claytonia, Osceola, Latonia, Brant, Apache, Beatrice, Edith, Canicum, Wildfire, and Tommy Crane's famous craft Undertaker. The Eric C., Autocrat and others are about ready for their first dip of the season.

A Fine Stable.

W. F. Loud & Son have moved their horses this week to the new and extensive barn built this spring on land bought of Mr. Carey, in the rear of their residence on Hall place, West Quincy.

The stable is, we think, the largest and most convenient for keeping a large number of horses of any in the city. Some thirty to forty can be taken care of in good shape; it having many of the modern conveniences for keeping horses. The hay and grain are kept on the second floor, and fed from there directly to the horse mangers. A large cellar is under the whole structure, and in the rear is a good chance for carting away the manure and rubbish.

Messrs. Loud & son are very extensive teamsters, and have been doing a successful business for many years, and we congratulate them on the fine stable they have just erected.

Old Rubber Social.

The "the old rubber social" at the Atlantic Methodist church Wednesday evening was a most successful one, over 300 pounds of rubber being brought in. The winning side was the one led by H. O. Cassidy. The entertainment included a vocal solo by Miss Julia Barber, vocal duet by Misses Priest and Greenerd, readings by Mr. John Moir, Mr. Cassidy and Janette Fanning, an original song by Mr. Cassidy, and a talk on "Rubber and its production, by the pastor of the church, illustrated by rubber specimens in various processes of manufacture. The entertainment was followed by a cobweb party and social.

The patrol wagon did not go into service this morning, as announced. It is said that the reason was that it has been decided to put a rail along the back of the seats. The date for the wagon to go into service has now been fixed for June 1.

LIPTON'S GREEN SAILS.

Part They Were to Play In a Joke Last Fall.

It has leaked out that Sir Thomas Lipton came to America last fall prepared to spring a huge joke on the Americans if he won the America's cup, says the May Woman's Home Companion. The other day a fire occurred in the loft of the carpenter shop where some of the rigging of the Shamrock II. had been stored. In the mass of partly burned sails were some pieces of vivid green. When opened up, several sails were hauled out from the wreckage, all of emerald green.

Later it became known that in the event of Shamrock II. winning two of the races this green suit was to have been worn in the third and deciding race. It is also said that this green suit of sails never saw the light of day, but was bent and stretched at night while the boat lay in the Horseshoe at Sandy Hook. The discovery of the green sails was the cause of much mirth.

Transplanting Trees at St. Louis.

The transplanting of big trees on the world's fair site at St. Louis is an interesting work, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. A deep trench is cut around the tree four or five feet from its base and the earth dug away beneath. Then a huge truck is backed up to the tree and securely fastened. The entire tree, forty or fifty feet high, is then tipped over on to the truck and another pair of wheels attached in front. Then, with sufficient teams to pull the heavy load, the tree is drawn to the place where wanted and restored to an upright position. Much care is required in the work, and the trees will receive constant attention until again well rooted.

A New Boat Scheme.

A Hamburg engineer is exhibiting the model of a new kind of steamer in Paris, says the Indianapolis Sentinel. The most noticeable feature of Herr Brohan's vessel is the disposal of the propellers, of which there are four, one forward, another just before the rudder and two at the stern. The vessel is flat bottomed, but there is a short keel in the center and two false keels forward, which would keep the hull off the bottom in case of grounding and between which the first mentioned screw revolves. The inventor believes that with a steamer 300 feet long, built according to design, he could make the passage from Havre to New York in four days.

A DISTINGUISHED VISITOR.

RICHMOND P. HOBSON.

Capt. Hobson The Hero of Santiago Harbor In Quincy This Afternoon.

Quincy is to be honored today by a visit from Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson, U. S. N., who sunk the Merrimac in Santiago harbor during the war with Spain.

Captain Hobson comes as the guest of John Adams chapter, junior Sons and Daughters of the Revolution, and it is a proud day for the young people who will give him a reception at the John Adams birthplace.

The visit of the distinguished officer is the outcome of a pretty little incident at a recent reception given Captain Hobson at the Vendome, Boston. Among those present at this reception was a little miss who is a member of John Adams chapter. When she was presented she asked the Captain to pay a visit to her chapter in Quincy. He said he would be glad to come and would do so. The invitation was later in the day supplemented by Miss Nightingale, director of the chapter. Today is the time fixed for the promised visit.

It was intended to show the guest through the historic First church and to visit the Fore River Ship plant, and other places of local interest. His time was so short, however, that this part of the program has been given up.

Captain Hobson will arrive in Quincy on the train due at 3.49. He will be met by Miss Mary E. Nightingale, director of the Junior chapter, Mrs. L. V. Titus, Regent of Adams chapter, and Rev. Ellery C. Butler, pastor of the First church.

The party will drive directly to the John Adams house where a brief entertainment has been provided. This will consist of brief remarks by Col. Anderson, Mr. Butler and probably Captain Hobson. A light lunch will be served, and all of those fortunate enough to obtain tickets of admission will be presented. Captain Hobson will take the train from Quincy Adams at 5.10.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Representative Badger Carries the Day on Gas Question.

Mr. Badger of Quincy did his best in the House Wednesday for his motion to reconsider the acceptance of the report of the public lighting committee that no legislation was necessary on the report of the gas and electric lighting commission. He told of the onerous condition in Quincy at present and procured a favorable vote on his motion, though a material minority was on the other side. Then he moved to recommit the report in order that a bill for the relief of Quincy might be prepared.

He was supported by Mr. Reed of Taunton who said that the mayor of Quincy appeared before the committee on rules to tell of the hard case of the city, but the committee refused to favor suspension of the rules to admit the desired bill for the relief of the city. He quoted from Commissioner Barker of the gas and electric light commission that the people of Quincy had a grievance.

Mr. McKnight of Quincy also told of the hardships suffered by the people of the city and supported the motion to send the report back to the committee on public lighting in order that a bill might be reported for the relief of the city.

Mr. McNary of Boston also favored the recommittal of the report, and corroborated the statements regarding the abuse in the gas situation in Quincy.

By a unanimous vote the House voted to send the report back to the committee on public lighting.

The Boston district option bill was engrossed by the House and goes to the Senate.

The time for a report on the Boston subway bill was extended to May 20.

The Mill tax bill again goes over, but a resolve was reported for a commission.

The bill to authorize cities and towns to purchase electricity for lighting purposes from street railways was passed to be engrossed.

In the Senate the Committee on Federal Relations favorably reported a resolve to provide for proper representation of the Commonwealth at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. It provides for a commission of three residents of the Commonwealth, to be appointed by the Governor after Feb. 1, 1903, and to be known as the Board of Louisiana Purchase Exposition Managers, and for an appropriation of $25,000. This money is to be expended under the direction of the Governor and Council, but no part of it until after the appointment of the three Commissioners.

MOODY TO THE RESCUE.

New Secretary of Navy Comes to a Car Conductor's Assistance.

They are telling a story in Washington about the new secretary of the navy. Mr. Moody was riding on one of the Boston surface cars and was standing on the platform on the side next the gate that protected passengers from cars coming on the other track. A lady, a Boston lady, came to the door of the car and as it stopped started to move toward the gate, which was hidden from her view by the men standing before it.

"Other side, please, lady," said the conductor. He was ignored as only a born and bred Bostonian can ignore a man. The lady took another step toward the gate.

"You must get off the other side," said the conductor.

"I wish to get off on this side," came the answer in tones that congealed the official into momentary silence. Before he could either explain or expostulate Mr. Moody came to his assistance.

"Stand to one side, gentlemen," he remarked quietly, "the lady wants to climb over the gate."—New York Times.

Path Not Strewn With Roses

Havana, May 15.—President-elect Palma says that the matter of making up the Cuban cabinet is causing him much worry and trouble. He wants to surround himself with men of experience and ability in whom he has confidence, but he also desires to maintain harmony among the political leaders. The president-elect held a long conference with the leaders and it is understood they objected to the men Senor Palma said he intended to appoint to the cabinet.

HARDENED TO COLD.

Natives of Siberia Don't Mind a Below Zero Temperature.

Frequently, when we could not expose our ears for two minutes without having them frozen, says a traveler in Siberia, the natives would go for an hour at a time with their hoods thrown back from their heads, and when it required constant watchfulness to keep our noses from freezing they did not appear to notice the temperature at all.

One morning in January I stood in perfect amazement at their disregard of the low temperature. They worked for at least half an hour with bare hands packing up the tent and utensils, handling the packages and lashing them together with icy seal thongs without experiencing the least apparent inconvenience, while I partly froze my fingers striking a light for my pipe with a flint and steel, the whole operation taking not more than three minutes.

The night before, happening to go out of the tent after our men had retired, I passed their camp, which was near by. Their fire had burned to a pile of embers, barely affording me light enough to distinguish the sleepers. They were lying coiled up on small deerskins, with their backs to the embers and their fur coats thrown loosely over their naked bodies.

The coat of one of them had slipped almost entirely off his body, leaving his back and shoulders exposed to a temperature of 18 degrees F. below zero, and, though his hair was frosted, he snored as soundly as if in comfortable quarters.

Mr. Gladstone's Catch.

"How many members of this house," asked Mr. Gladstone once in the course of a debate on electoral qualifications, "can divide £1,330 17s. 6d. by £2 13s. 8d.?"

"Six hundred and fifty-eight!" shouted one member.

"The thing cannot be done!" exclaimed another.

A roar of laughter greeted this last remark. But it was true, nevertheless. You cannot multiply or divide money by money. You may repeat a smaller sum of money as many times as it is contained in a larger sum of money, but that is a very different thing. If you repeat 5 shillings as often as there are hairs in a horse's tail, you do not multiply 5 shillings by a horse tail. Perhaps you did not know this before. Never mind; you need not be ashamed of your ignorance, for it was shared, as has been demonstrated, by the entire house of commons (bar one member), including the then chancellor of the exchequer.

How to Form the Reading Habit.

In order to organize odd minutes into fruitful hours one must have a consistent scheme and keep the means of carrying it out within reach. Too many people read the books which come in their way instead of putting themselves in the way of getting the right books. They buy and borrow without thought or plan because they do not understand that reading ought to be a resource as well as a recreation. Decide in advance what books you will read, and do not take up with those which drift in your direction. Do not burden yourself with a scheme so extensive that it discourages you; do not at the start plan courses of reading so vast that you are weighed down with their magnitude. Begin in a quiet and easy way by planning to read consecutively a few books in some field which interests you.—Hamilton W. Mabie in Ladies' Home Journal.

No Names Needed.

A western Kansas story shows how to be personal without mentioning names.

It was in a poker game at Colby. The sheriff of Logan county had been steadily losing to the treasurer of Ellis county. The treasurer of Ellis county had the misfortune to be possessed of but one eye, and he was a little clumsy in handling the cards. After a play in which the treasurer took a big pot from the sheriff the sheriff said, "Gentlemen, I ain't a-namin' no names, but if some of you don't quit raisin' cards from the floor he'll get his other eye knocked out!"—Kansas City Journal.

Assyrian Seals.

The ancient Assyrians nearly 6,000 years ago put in moist clay their seals, engraved in intaglio upon precious stones, on chests and doors, in order to prevent their being opened. There were no locks or keys in those days. If they wished to send a private letter, they would often seal it with a hippogriff, which fabulous winged horse was regarded as the emblem of secrecy. Centuries later the Greeks and Romans adopted similar devices for the same purpose.

How It Sounded.

"How is the board down at your place?" asked the ribbon clerk.

"Oh, we have nothing but health food every meal," responded the lace clerk.

"Then I don't think I'll come."

"Why not?"

"I'm not looking for the board of health."—Chicago News.

A Matter of Ears.

"You should get your ears lopped, O'Brien," said a "smart" tourist to an Irish peasant whom he was quizzing. "They're too large for a man."

"An', bedad," replied the Hibernian, "I was just thinkin' yours would want to be made larger. Sure, they're too small for an ass."—Tit-Bits.

Helping Him Along.

"Do you think your father would offer me personal violence if I were to ask him for you?"

"Hardly, but there's no telling what he will do if you don't say something pretty soon."—New York Times.

VOLCANIC CONDITIONS

Will Have Weight In Consideration of Canal Routes

DISASTER AT MARTINIQUE

Has Revived Discussion of Much-Disputed Question—Hanna Has Data Which Improves Chances of Accepting Offer of the Panama People

Washington, May 15.—Senator Hanna has decided to include in a published volume of testimony accompanying his minority report on the Hepburn canal bill, which has been accepted by a majority of the senate committee, some most interesting data now coming to hand concerning the volcanic conditions on the two routes. It is acknowledged that the dangers of this sort are immeasurably less at Panama and besides, its shorter distance greatly lessens the risk. If the United States should ignore the consideration, in the face of the stupendous disaster at Martinique, its folly would be monumental. Such a canal should be a work of centuries and if the records of the last 400 years show that the Nicaragua route would be in greater danger, or rendered liable thereto, its selection would be most unfortunate. Any work of man, even one costing $300,000,000, as this doubtless would, might obviously be undone in a day.

What effect this argument will have upon Senator Morgan's followers cannot now be stated. There will be some delay in getting up the canal bill on account of a desire to let the Cuban relief measure go in ahead of it. Mr. Morgan, the chief champion of Nicaragua, has become almost a monomaniac in its advocacy and probably would not be influenced by any group of facts, but some of his associates are more reasonable and the prospects of accepting the French offer and building across Panama are thus materially improved by the data to which the West Indian tragedy has given emphasis.

Senator Teller, an influential minority leader, says that he believes the volcanic danger will have a good deal of weight in the coming discussion of canal routes. The senator says that he has always been interested in this question from an engineering point of view, and not because it meant much one way or the other to an inland state like Colorado. As to routes he is still open to conviction and he believes that to be true of the senate itself. The phase of the Panama idea which particularly appeals to him is the possibility which it would have of a sea level waterway, in case earthquakes or other disturbances interfered with a canal having locks.

Whether the senate will get around at this session to canal legislation is still a much-disputed question. When Senator Morgan was asked concerning the report that it would be allowed to go over till the next session, he said: "I have the word of Senator Allison that the canal bill will be taken up at this session. For me to express the opinion now that such will not be the case would be to cast a reflection upon my distinguished colleague. That I have no purpose of doing."

The leaders, Republicans and Democrats, still insist that this question should be disposed of at the present session. These persons who predict that it will not be acted upon, do so on the theory that the session is now far advanced, with a number of complications still unsettled, and that by the time they are all out of the way the warm weather of Washington and the pressure of the congressional campaign will exert an influence toward bringing the session to an end, and that the canal bill will be quietly passed over.

In Congress

Washington, May 15.—During the greater part of the senate session yesterday the fortification appropriation bill was under consideration. Mr. Proctor offered an amendment providing that no part of the appropriation made should be used for procuring disappearing gun carriages. The amendment precipitated a debate which continued for two hours and had not been concluded when the measure was laid aside for the day.

The naval appropriation bill occupied the attention of the house throughout the day. The debate took a wide range at times.

HORSES WITH GLANDERS

Said to Have Been Skinned and Used as Food For Swine

Portland, Me., May 15.—Rumors regarding the disposition of the carcasses of three horses slaughtered by order of the state cattle commissioner have led to the state board of health to take the matter in hand and thorough investigation will be made. About a week ago three out of five horses in a local sales stable were found to be infected with glanders and were ordered slaughtered by the cattle commissioner. The other two were sent away. Soon stories were circulated that the dead animals had been skinned and the flesh fed to swine. When these stories reached the local health authorities an investigation was made and as a result the matter has been placed in the hands of the state board of health for further inquiry.

An amendment to it made by C. B. HOPE ABANDONED

Miners Do Not Look For Any Concessions From Operators

Hazelton, Pa., May 15.—The convention of the anthracite mine workers, called at the instance of the executive boards of the three districts comprising the Pennsylvania hard coal fields, held two sessions yesterday and without taking any action on the question of inaugurating a permanent strike adjourned until today. The convention is meeting behind closed doors, but it is known that the all-important question was not reached.

The day brought forth no definite information bearing on the probable action of the convention and the situation remains unchanged. President Mitchell says that all hope of any concessions from the operators is gone. He has had no recent communication, he says, with the mine owners, Senator Hanna or any other members of the National Civic Federation. Mr. Mitchell admitted that he had some advice to give to the delegates at the proper time, but what it is he will not say.

It's So Easy

To take cold. It's so common to neglect the cold. That is one reason why there are so many people with "deep-seated," stubborn coughs, and so many more with "lung trouble."

The short, quick way to cure a cough is to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The quicker this remedy is used the quicker the cure. But even when neglect has let disease fasten on the lungs, "Golden Medical Discovery" may be relied on to cure in ninety-eight cases out of every hundred.

The only motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little extra profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains. You lose. Therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

"I am feeling quite well," writes Miss Dorcas A. Lewis, of No. 1129 24th St., Washington, D. C. "My cough is very much better, and I owe it all to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I cannot say too much in praise of the medicine. I had been quite a sufferer for a long time, and after reading Doctor Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser thought I would try his 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I commenced taking it in May, 1899. Had not been sleeping well for a long time. Took one teaspoonful of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and slept nearly all night without coughing, so I continued taking it. I am in great sympathy with everybody who suffers with a cough. I had been a sufferer for more than ten years. I tried lots of different medicines and different doctors, but did not feel much better. I coughed until I commenced spitting blood, but now I feel much stronger and am entirely well. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best medicine I have ever taken. My home is in Williamsburg, Virginia."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are a ladies' laxative. No other medicine equals them for gentleness and thoroughness.

CAREFULLY LAID PLANS

Result In the Capture of Gaynor and Green

ARRESTS MADE AT QUEBEC

Hustled on Board a Tug by Detectives Without Being Given Time to Consult Counsel—Special Train In Pursuit Without Avail

Quebec, May 16.—Colonel John F. Gaynor and Captain W. D. Greene, who forfeited their bail at Savannah early in March and fled to Canada, were placed under arrest by officers connected with the United States secret service and Chief Carpenter of the Montreal detective force yesterday. The arrests were made on warrants issued in Montreal, Chief Wilkie's men assisting the Canadian officers to make the arrests.

The men were hurried on board a swift little tug, which had been kept in waiting at the wharf, and 10 minutes after Greene and Gaynor were safely on board, the boat steamed out into the river and started toward Montreal. The officers moved so quickly that neither of the prisoners was given an opportunity to consult with counsel.

When notified of her husband's arrest Mrs. Gaynor at once consulted Mr. Tachereau, her husband's attorney. A tug was chartered and an attempt was made to overtake the boat on which Gaynor and Greene were being carried away. After a short chase it was seen by those on board the pursuing tug that it would be impossible to overtake the detectives' boat, which was the Spray, one of the swiftest tugs on the St. Lawrence, and the pursuit was abandoned. On returning to the city a special train was chartered to attempt to head off the Spray at some point between this city and Montreal.

When the two Americans first arrived in Quebec, they were followed by two men also from the United States, who registered at the Chateau Frontenac. Their movements led the hotel employes to believe that they were detectives sent here to watch Greene and Gaynor. It now developes that one of these men is Detective Burke of Florida.

Yesterday Mr. McAlastor, a prominent lawyer of Montreal who, it is rumored, is engaged by the prosecution, arrived here by boat from Montreal. On the same boat with him were six detectives, including Chief Carpenter of Montreal. They were met at the wharf here on their arrival by Detective Burke.

At 10:30 a well dressed man engaged a cabman by the hour and instructed him to wait near the postoffice. Soon afterwards Burke, with another cab, arrived. Burke, and two other men who came up, walked toward the Chateau Frontenac, which is nearby. In the meantime Greene, who had entered the postoffice as was his daily custom, came out of the main door. Two strangers who had been waiting in a store nearby crossed the street and one of them, placing his hand on Greene's shoulder, pulled a document from his pocket and asked him to enter the first cab. Greene was heard to say: "Wait a minute until I see a friend," but this was denied him and the three detectives and Greene entered the cab and were driven to the wharf.

While the arrest of Greene was being accomplished Burke and the other detectives went to the Chateau Frontenac. Gaynor was standing at the clerk's desk when they entered. The three detectives walked up to Gaynor, one taking hold of his right arm and the other his left, while Burke produced a legal paper. Gaynor asked permission to get his overcoat, but this was denied him and the four hurried out to the cab and started for the wharf at a rapid pace.

All those proceedings occupied about 20 minutes. The hotel people notified Gaynor's counsel of what had occurred. The attorney general's department and Judge Chauveau were notified and they in turn asked the police to investigate the matter.

The tug Spray passed Three Rivers at 7:15 o'clock last evening under a full head of steam. Two Quebec policemen and two detectives who arrived there by special train went to the wharf and remained there in waiting for the Spray. They held the ferryboat Glacial in readiness to go out into midstream when the Spray hove in sight. Suddenly the looked-for tug appeared and the ferryboat hurried out into midstream, but before the Glacial reached the middle of the river the Spray was in the lead and gaining rapidly. The chase was kept up for two miles, but it was hopeless and the ferryboat and officers returned to the city. There is not a remote probability that the Spray will be overtaken.

A GIGANTIC STRIKE.

Fight of Mine Workers for Higher Wages and Shorter Work Days Promises to be World's Greatest Labor Contest.

Hazleton, Pa., May 16.—The anthracite mine workers in convention late yesterday afternoon decided to continue the strike of the 145,000 men against the mine owners and to fight it out to the bitter end. The matter of calling out the engineers, firemen and pump runners will be decided by the delegates today. The vote to continue the suspension will by 111½ majority. President Mitchell, however, in compliance with the rules of the United Mine Workers, announced to the public that the action of the convention was unanimous.

The step taken by the miners after practically considering the matter for two months has wiped out the uncertainty of the situation and it is freely predicted that the most serious labor struggle in the history of the country, if not the world, is about to begin. That is the view taken by nearly every miner. While the leaders are cautious and will not forecast their actions, it is not unlikely that the miners' fight will be carried into the bituminous coal regions and into other fields of industry.

Mine workers for 18 months have been looking forward to the strike that is now upon them. They have saved their money and are considered to be in better shape now for a fight than they were in the great strike of 1900. That struggle ended in the mine owners giving the men a 10 percent advance after a six weeks' suspension.

The operators are on record as being unalterably opposed to granting the men any concessions and they have personally informed the mine workers' leaders of that fact. The workmen fear that the present fight may mean the destruction of their organization, because they believe that the mine owners are bent more on wrecking their union than they are in opposing the demands for higher wages and shorter work days.

President Mitchell's advice to the miners was peace and he gave it to them in the plainest and most forceful of language. He was ably assisted by President Fahy and Secretary Hartlin of the lower district and Secretary Dempsey of the upper territory. Amid considerable suppressed excitement the vote was taken. For a time it looked as though the peace advocates would win, but when delegation after delegation from the lower district, the last to be called, answered "Yes," it was seen that the men who favored a fight had won. The result was received by the convention with applause, which, however, was not very enthusiastic or prolonged. The men appreciated the seriousness of their decision.

The proposition to call out the engineers, firemen and pump runners was separated from the main question. There was an almost equal division in this matter and the debate became so involved that it was decided to consider that phase of the question separately. The men having thrown down the gauntlet to their employers, have taken renewed courage and it would not be surprising if the convention decided to call out the other employes referred to. The miners insist that nearly all the engineers, firemen and pump runners belong to their organization and say they can get them all to quit if they want to. In the event that this is brought about it would do incalculable damage to the mines through flooding unless the companies can succeed in filling the men's places.

BANK WRECK RECALLED

Dickinson's Property Attached In Matter Involving Over $200,000

Boston, May 16.—Complications involving more than $200,000 have developed in the case of John W. Dickinson, who has figured before the public for more than a year as one of the defendants accused of wrecking the South Danvers National bank of Peabody.

George S. Hampton, receiver of the South Danvers bank, yesterday filed a declaration of 42 counts against John W. Dickinson, in a suit brought on $200,000 worth of notes discounted by the latter in that bank.

A bill of complaint also has been filed in the United States court by the Diebold Safe and Lock company against John Dickinson, his wife, Gertrude, the John W. Dickinson company and others.

Judge Lowell has issued an order restraining the persons named from selling, assigning or transferring bonds, stocks, debts or demands due to John W. Dickinson in any capacity, or bonds or stock received by Gertrude Dickinson or the John W. Dickinson company from John W. Dickinson at any time since Feb. 10, 1896, whether in their possession or held by some other persons or corporations in trust for them. Writs have been given to the United States marshal for service.

It is alleged that the safe company filled contracts with Dickinson and that not only was payment not made, but that property at the time of the contract in Dickinson's possession had been transferred to Mrs. Dickinson, when the work was done and payment was due.

Officers Targets For Rioters

New York, May 16.—The rioting in connection with the protest of the Hebrew residents of the east side against the sale of meats in certain Kosher butcher shops whose proprietors persisted in selling meat, which broke out early yesterday, was continued last night. The police authorities were compelled to put out police lines in five streets. Every time a policeman's helmet showed itself, a club, a stone or a piece of refuse of the street was thrown at the officer's head. A number of arrests were made after night sticks had been used freely in dispersing the crowds.

Madrid All Aglow

Madrid, May 16.—The official ceremonies in honor of the majority of King Alfonso opened here yesterday. A cloudless sky and brilliant sun favored the arrival at Madrid of the Duke of Connaught, Prince Albert of Prussia, Princes Vladimir and Christian of Denmark, Prince Nicholas of Greece and the crown princes of Monaco and Siam. The events coincided with the festival of San Isidro, the patron saint of Madrid. Thousands of persons witnessed the procession.

In Congress

Washington, May 16.—The house yesterday was plunged into a debate on Philippine affairs. Thus far the subject of alleged atrocities in the islands has engaged the attention of the senate alone and only occasional echoes have been heard in the house. But yesterday the reports of cruelty and outrage were rehearsed in the house with vehemence and bitterness. The naval bill was the order of the day but it received only scant attention.

An extended speech by Mr. McLaurin (Miss.) in opposition to the pending Philippine government bill was a feature of the session of the senate.

Y M C A For Naval Men

New York, May 16.—The naval branch building of the Young Men's Christian association, Brooklyn, was dedicated yesterday. Miss Helen M. Gould made the formal presentation of the building in behalf of the Women's auxiliary to the international committee of the Y. M. C. A. Miss Gould, Admiral Dewey and Secretary Moody made brief remarks.

Good Afternoon.

Capt. Hobson impressed all who heard him speak Thursday as an upright, determined, earnest man, with a purpose in life, and greatly pleased all. His sentiments were noble and exalted, but he was modest and made no appeal for cheap notoriety or applause. He was greatly interested in historic Quincy, the birthplace and burial place of two Presidents of these United States; in patriotic Quincy, as shown by the work of the Daughters of the Revolution and the Junior Society; in progressive Quincy, as seen at the new shipyard. He was regarded by the young people as a great hero, by the young ladies as a type of ideal manhood. Of course, there was regret among the latter that he now askews public osculation, but they think more of him just the same.

Drift of Opinion.

☞The present era of prosperity should not beget extravagance. It must always be remembered that a change must come. The United States is now prospering at the expense of the world, and it cannot last. Our goods cannot seek a foreign market after that market has exhausted its means to pay, and that stage will be reached sooner or later. Everybody should take advantage of the existing conditions to pay his debts.—St. Paul Dispatch.

☞That health and all other good things are largely dependent upon the arts of cooking and housekeeping is an old truism, but it is only today that we are beginning to put it in practice. Hundreds of colleges exist, and millions of dollars are expended for teaching women a score or more of subjects of little or no vital connection with real life, and the one thing all young woman must later concern themselves with, is left to be haphazard. There are few institutions in this country that seriously grapple with domestic science instruction.—Baltimore Sun.

☞We are familiar with lingering springs, abounding in promise and denial, until the poor patience of our restless desire is worn threadbare with waiting. But this is of a rare type. Everything has put on an original character, from the start out of winter until now that we are on the verge of summer, and yet we linger without remonstrance, for the earth is too beautiful to wish it otherwise. Flowers and leaves, grasses and sedges, the herbs, the shrubs, the vines, the trees,—and with them the birds and bees, butterflies and beetles,—all came swiftly in advance of their customary dates, and it seemed that the glory of the earth was about to rush in upon us like a flood. But then came the conservative delay. We had barely one or two summery days, just enough to give a fillip to the ambitions of the things that grow and bloom and fly and sing, and nature has gone on in her gentle deliberation with merely warm days and constantly cool nights, and thus the exquisite delicacy of spring has been prolonged, its ideal loveliness preserved, through weeks of unsurpassable beauty, as if to intensify all our love for the "soote season" that Surrey wrote of, and that is so often brief as "the posy of a ring."—Springfield Republican.

CAPT. HOBSON HERE.

Guest of Junior Sons and Daughters of the Revolution at Birthplace of John Adams.

United States the Only Complete Liberty Loving Nation He Says---Against Militarism.

Would Enlarge the Navy that We May be a Power for Peace in All Parts of World.

Quincy was honored Thursday by a visit from Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson of Merrimac fame and although his visit was necessarily brief it was long enough to prove to him that the spirit of patriotism of our famous ancestors had been imbued in the generation of today.

Captain Hobson came as the guest of John Adams chapter Junior Sons and Daughters of the Revolution. It was announced in Thursday's Ledger that he would arrive at 3.49 but later telephoned that he should arrive an hour earlier. He was met at the Quincy depot by Miss Mary E. Nightingale, director of the Junior society, Rev. Ellery Channing Butler and Miss Ada M. Nightingale.

A brief visit was made to the historic First church and the tomb of the Presidents, and then to the works of the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. General Manager Wellington and other officials of the company escorted the party through the works. Capt. Hobson enjoyed this visit greatly and was impressed with the magnitude of the plant and the push of the company.

Promptly at 4 o'clock the party reached the birthplace of President John Adams. Those fortunate to hold tickets of admission began to arrive as early as 3.30 and long before the hour of four all of the seats in the east room were occupied. A number of misses were gowned in Colonial costume and they with the other members of the Junior chapter were photographed.

Aside from the many ladies present there were Col. Anderson, Rev. A. A. Ellsworth, Rev. Edwin N. Hardy, Rev. James Todd, D. D., Rev. W. W. Dornan, Rev. Edward Norton, Dr. John A. Gordon, Charles F. Harper of the High school, Frederic W. Plumer of the Woodward Institute, Dr. H. M. Willard of the Quincy Mansion school, John J. Loud of the Weymouth Historical society, Henry H. Fexon and other prominent citizens.

Those in costume were Avah Gibson, Grace Spear, Mildred Rogers, Ethel Sprague, Mariel Rogers, Carlena Walker, Helen Barnes, Amy Wright, Edith Littlefield, Lora Emerson, Mabel Clapp, May Moran and Carlton Beal, the latter impersonating George Washington.

Capt. Hobson was shown through the old house by Maynard Stearns, president of the Juniors Miss Nightingale and Mrs. Titus, and then escorted to the north east room where brief exercises were held. These were opened by Miss Nightingale who welcomed those present in behalf of the Junior society and then introduced Rev. E. C. Butler.

Mr. Butler said he was somewhat at loss how to introduce the guest of the afternoon. He might say one who loved his country. He was not only a citizen of Alabama but of a wide galaxy of states. He might say of Annapolis or the United States Navy, but none of these filled the bill. He knew of nothing better than to say Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson of everywhere.

Applause greeted the introduction of the guest. He spoke low and slowly at first, but as he warmed up to his subject he delivered one of the best patriotic addresses ever given in Quincy.

He said in part that he was glad to be present with this society who are to keep alive the deeds and virtues of our forefathers. Let us give a thought of what deep significance it has. We have inherited such blessings as no nation has. We have riches beyond conception. An example of duty set by our forefathers. They did not hesitate to leave their homes and venture the seas to build a new country among savages.

When the jewels of civil and religious liberty were endangered they did not hesitate to take up arms against the most powerful nations of the world. Think of the example they set us, when with unbounded devotion they carried on the war of the Revolution until the sun arose above the clouds. They endured hardships for three-fourths of a century.

The formal period ended with the Civil war,—the preservation of every state in the union, but at what a price. In the Union army 110,000 men were killed, 248,000 wounded and 278,000 died of disease. Pro rata the losses of the southerners were double.

Captain Hobson also had a tribute for the women at home, who would have preferred to have braved the dangers themselves. The long, ceaseless nights of waiting, and the anguish of the soul when the casualty list was telegraphed home.

We are the only complete liberty nation of the earth, where militarism does not constitute the larger part. These blessings have come to us after a century of devotion at an untold price. He spoke of the duty devolved upon us. Is the time for devotion passed? Is there nothing for us to do? Let us be up and do well what comes to us. Let us cherish the glorious institution of liberty. Let us receive and honor men and women for their usefulness and individual worth. Never let the idea of militarism prevail over country. Let us have the heart of our great country respond to the appeal of every being wherever he may be. Let us create a foreign policy that will have an important bearing on christianizing the world. Let us create a navy, that our influence may go across the seas, that we may control peace.

Every individual should say I will make as fine a man or woman as I am capable of being, that I will seize every opportunity to help every human being. Let it be our purpose to maintain our country's principles, keep our institutions bright and pure, that our country shall play the roll of peace on new principles.

Miss May Moran was then introduced and gave a patriotic reading in a way to captivate all.

She was followed by Col. Anderson who made one of his characteristic speeches. It is unnecessary to say that Col. Anderson was good. That goes without saying. His remarks were cut short as the time for the visitor's stay was nearing the end.

An opportunity was given for those present to meet the guests and they were presented by Miss Nightingale. A few minutes past 5 o'clock Captain Hobson made a hasty exit and was escorted to the Quincy Adams station by President Stearns, Miss Nightingale and Mrs. Nelson V. Titus in season for the 5.10 train to Boston

Light refreshments were served during the reception and little Miss Ethel Thompson sang.

The young lady who extended the invitation to Captain Hobson to visit Quincy was Miss Louise Burleigh of the Junior society and he was therefore their guest.

The Junior society was assisted by Miss Mary E. Nightingale, Miss Belle Nightingale, Miss Hattie Pierce, Mrs. A. H. Gilson, Mrs. A. H. Stearns.

At the punch bowl Miss Grace Spear, Miss Ethel B. Sprague and Miss Avah Gilson presided, and all the members of the society present assisted in serving the refreshments.

The historic house was decorated inside and out with flags and it was all in all a gala day.

Capt. Hobson was a guest in the evening of the Somerville Y. M. C. A.

HOBSON'S FEAT.

The hazardous voyage of Hobson and his crew of seven was made on Friday, June 3, 1898, and was begun at 3 A. M. When Hobson went on the Merrimac Thursday night he had been without sleep since Wednesday morning. His uniform was begrimed, his hands were black, and he looked like a man who had been hard at work in and about an engine room for a long time. The Merrimac under cover of the clouds over the moon, stole in toward the coast and made her way to the eastward followed by a steam launch from the New York, which was soon left behind. Suddenly Morro castle and the Spanish battery opposite opened fire on the Merrimac and for twenty minutes tongues of fire seemed to leap across the harbor entrance. The Merrimac, however, was sunk at the point in the channel planned.

Hobson and crew were not rescued but after clinging for a while to a raft were taken prisoners. Admiral Cervera was so impressed with their courage that he promptly offered an exchange, but it was not brought about until July 6.

AT THE SEASIDE.

A Boulevard with Promenade Would be Appreciated.

Perhaps the greatest improvement that could be made at House Neck at this time would be the widening and rebuilding of Sea street according to the order introduced into the City Council by Councilman Meyer. A boulevard with concrete sidewalks would be appreciated by the summer residents who enjoy a stroll in the early evening, and would be a great thing for the business places abutting. It is said that the financial situation of the city will not permit of a large appropriation this year, but a beginning would be appreciated.

It is probable that through cars will be running by Sunday, and then Houghs Neck will be itself again. There is only one break between City Square and Littlefield's and that is where the sewer leaves Sea street to cross the field to Greenleaf street. Littlefield's has been the terminus of the route for several weeks. It is at this point that the sewer leaves the street and runs across lots on the Bayside to Nut island. The work on Sea street is practically completed and the trench is filled in.

Good progress has been made on the Metropolitan sewer, but it will be two or three years more before it is in operation, and then no nuisance is expected as the sewage will be emptied near Peddock's island.

Probably more cottages have been built at Houghs Neck this season than ever before, and it promises to be a good season.

H. W. Robbins and family of Newton have arrived at their cottage on Great Hill.

Frank W. Turner and family of Roxbury are on Rock Island road.

William Albrecht of Dorchester is at the Pine Tree cottage.

William Norteman has leased the Great Hill House and is enlarging the pavilion.

Mr. Eichorn of Roxbury is at the Roxbury cottage.

James Hogan and Fred Williams are repairing their cottage the Evelyn preparatory to spending it for the summer.

Mr. Billington of Brockton and family are at the Grace cottage.

Arthur W. Leonard is at the Hunnewell cottage.

The Daily Ledger and Patriot are for sale at Dunham's post office store.

CENTRAL LOCATION

Advocated for the New Government Building.

There is a feeling among the business men of the city that the new government building should be located as near the business centre as possible. The Briesler corner if enlarged would be an ideal corner, but appears to be by far too expensive. A portion of the Col. Packard estate is also suggested, and it is said that a large corner lot abutting on Cottage avenue could be secured for the appropriation of $12,000 voted by Congress. Probably this lot is as central as any which can be obtained for the money. While the surroundings are not as desirable at present as might be desired they could by the widening of Cottage avenue be greatly improved. Had Cottage avenue been widened last year as advocated by many the prospects for the selection of this site would now be much brighter.

The Dr. French estate has also been prominently mentioned, but like the Briesler estate is too expensive. Had Maple place been extended through it would be different.

Charles S. Jameson of Rapid City, South Dakota, is the guest of his father, Mr. Alden Jameson of Elm avenue.

An angry horse deliberately kicked out the dashboard of the team to which he was attached, at Wollaston yesterday afternoon.

Capt. Hobson did not kiss the Quincy girls, but one young lady boasted of the honor of drinking after him from the same glass.

There will be an early communion at Christ church Sunday morning, and services throughout the day specially for Whit-Sunday.

The Wollaston Unitarian society extends a cordial invitation to all to be present at the last social of the season tonight at Brasee's hall.

Employes of the street railway worked all night Thursday putting up a trolley wire over the new track on Hancock street. It will probably be in use on Sunday.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary A. Whiting who died Tuesday was held Thursday afternoon from the Bethany church of which she had so long been a member. The services were conducted by Rev. Edwin N. Hardy assisted by Rev. Edward Norton. During the services Mrs. Frank Moore sung two solos. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston.

The complimentary reception and banquet to Miss Mary E. Dearborn takes place tomorrow afternoon at Hotel Vendome, Boston, and commemorates twenty-five years as a Quincy teacher and principal. The reception will be from 5 to 6 and the banquet at 6 with George I. Aldrich as toastmaster.

William Harding, clerk at Gurney's grocery store, was badly hurt Thursday afternoon by the horse running away, throwing him to the ground and stepping on him. His head was badly cut and his body bruised. Dr. Bruce was summoned and took six stitches in his forehead. He was unconscious for some time. The horse was caught before he had gone far.

TODAY'S COURT.

William Anderson, Bernard Anderson and Robert Wood were fined $3 each for riding a bicycle on the sidewalk at Quincy.

The continued case against Edwin Harris, for disorderly conduct on a street car at Quincy, was heard and he was fined $5.

The continued cases against Nicolas and Thomas Karalekas, for peddling without a license at Quincy, was called. Nicolas was discharged and Thomas was fined $3.

☞In New Orleans the people made such a stir in opposition to the proposed painting of the street cars in inartistic colors that the railway managers abandoned their plan and proceeded to satisfy the better taste of their critics. While in general there is not much to complain of with regard to street car colors in our northern cities, the contemplation of how such a protest would be received in these cooler latitudes is amusing.—New Bedford Standard.

—A snail's pace was carefully observed in Florence, Italy. Several of the mollusks were placed between two points 10 feet apart, and started. It was ascertained that the fastest snail in the race traveled at the rate of a mile in 14 days.

—In railway building in the Soudan there are two harp players and a flute player to every gang of 40 or 50 men. As long as the music is brisk the laborers do not seem to feel fatigued.

Flag Presentation.

Mr. Blake was greatly surprised at his home on Willow street, Wednesday night, when he was the recipient of a large flag with halliards, standard and pole. His Sunday school class of the Park and Downs church, who have missed him Sundays, owing to illness, showed their appreciation of his instruction, with this gift. As the little fellows marched down Elm avenue to the drum, it reminded one of election time. Upon arriving at their destination, Mr. Blake was requested to appear upon the spot, and after three cheers, the boys modestly gave their teacher the remembrance. The youngsters were as much pleased over the refreshments which were served them, as they were over the presentation ceremonial.

ILLEGAL REMOVAL.

Driver Faircloth Asks for a Writ of Mandamus.

George Faircloth who was recently dismissed from the Fire department by Chief Engineer Williams, and who was given a hearing by Mayor Bryant on charges preferred against him, does not intend to abide by the latter's finding, but will carry the matter farther.

The next step in the matter has been taken by Edward J. Parker, counsel for Faircloth, who has made application to Judge Hammond of the superior court for a writ of Mandamus, requiring Chief Williams to restore Faircloth as a member of the Quincy fire department, on the ground that his removal was illegal.

It is understood that Judge Hammond has issued a notice to Chief Williams requiring him to appear next Friday, to show cause why the writ should not be issued.

Leavitt—Waite.

The wedding of Mr. George A. Leavitt and Nellie S. Waite took place at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Adelaide Waite, No. 249 Safford street, Wollaston, on Wednesday at 4 o'clock. The Rev. Jesse Wagner pastor of the Wollaston M. E. church officiated.

Mr. Frank Leavitt, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and Miss Addie Waite, sister of the bride, stood by the bride. The wedding was quiet but the reception to the happy couple in the evening from 8 to 10.30 was made joyous and pleasant. Nearly sixty friends assembled during the evening and tendered congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Leavitt. Many handsome presents were given which betokened the high esteem in which they were held. During the evening Miss Katie Bolger sang very sweetly two solos. Mr. C. W. Page and daughter sang two pleasing duets one of their selections (requested) being "Trust her not," much to the amusement of the newly wedded pair. Mr. Page also rendered two comic pieces. Mr. Charles Calahan of Boston amused the company with instrumental music and comic recitations.

The bride was attired in gray nuns veiling, while the bridesmaid wore pink organdie.

The parlor was handsomely decorated with apple blossoms and ferns by Mr. William Patterson of Wollaston.

The real fun came when the couple departed for the 11.15 train for Boston.

Golf Tournament.

An invitation tournament of the Wollaston Golf club was held Thursday in which eight teams of five men each participated.

The Wollaston club entered two teams, one composed of C. B. Cory, F. F. H. Smith, T. A. Burditt, F. J. Robbins and R. R. Freeman. The second,—E. A. Mullikin, R. B. Porter, W. U. Swan, E. C. Tarbell and one default.

The team scores were:

Harvard team,	414
Oakley first team,	422
Wollaston first team,	424
Newton Centre team,	432
Allston team,	447
Wollaston second team,	448
Oakley second team,	450
Hawthorne team,	489

The Harvard team which won first honors was composed of J. M. Richards, P. A. Proal, R. D. Lapham, C. T. Richardson and H. C. Eagan.

Mr. Lapham of the above team, and F. H. Falvey of Newton Centre made the best scores of the day—79 each, while A. G. Lockwood of Allston made the 18 holes in 80, J. F. Curtis, of Oakley in 81, J. G. Thorp of Oakley in 82.

The scores of the Wollaston first team were remarkably even—from 83 to 86, while the second team ranged from 86 to 93 and one default of 100.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

Pilgrimages Almost Daily to the City of Presidents.

Quincy will soon be as famous for pilgrimages as Plymouth and Concord, as parties come now almost daily. Surely there are many historic spots of National interest, and enterprises which are novel to many. A brief list is given below.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN ADAMS.

Franklin street, Quincy Adams, house built in 1681 and restored in 1897 by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution. Open to public. Patriotic societies admitted free, although contributions are welcome to defray expenses of keeping house open and in repair. Small fee asked the general public.

BIRTHPLACE JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Junction of Franklin street, Presidents road and Independence avenue. Built 1716, restored 1896 by the Quincy Historical Society. Open to public afternoons from 2 to 5. Admission charged.

BURIAL PLACE OF PRESIDENTS ADAMS.

First Congregational Church (Unitarian), Quincy centre. In auditorium each side of high pulpit, are mural monuments, to the memory of John Adams, the second president, and John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, and their wives. In cellar is old town hearse, also box in which was brought from Washington the body of John Quincy Adams. At extreme end, under front steps are the vaults of the presidents, a massive stone door closing the entrance. Janitor can be found at Savings Bank building or at his home Maple place. No fee charged, but janitor may be paid for his trouble.

HANCOCK CEMETERY.

Hancock street, across from First Church. Many old stones, among the oldest that of Rev. John Hancock, father of the Patriot, who died May 7, 1744. Was fifth minister of First Church.

PRESIDENTS ADAMS MANSION.

Adams street, corner Newport avenue, Quincy. Residence of President John Adams and contains many family relics. Occupied by descendants. Not open to public.

JOHN HANCOCK BIRTHPLACE.

Adams street, junction of Dimmock and Hancock streets. A bronze tablet has been placed by the City of Quincy on Adams Academy to mark the place where the house stood in which the patriot John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born.

MYLES STANDISH CAIRN.

SQUAW ROCK.

Pile of rock, on which is a perfect head of a squaw, frequently mentioned in early Squantum history. Near by is also Sachem's Knoll.

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN.

Penns hill, erected June 17, 1896, by Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, to the memory of Abigail Adams, who with her son John Quincy, from the spot watched the smoke of battle at Bunker Hill. Cairn composed of many historic stones, the corner stone being part of old sleeper of first railroad in United States which ran from Quincy quarries to tide water, Neponset river.

DOROTHY Q. HOUSE.

Hancock street, corner Butler road, Quincy. Old Quincy homestead in which Dorothy Q was born. Has quaint old paper on parlor put on for wedding of John Hancock and Dorothy Quincy; also secret chamber and other interesting features. Private house, not open to public.

MYLES STANDISH SPRING.

PRESIDENTS LANE.

Now Goffe street, leading from Adams street, near Mansion. Opened by John Adams to drive his cows to pasture.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Senate Refuses to Concur with House on Quincy Gas Measure.

The Senate refused on Thursday to suspend the fifth joint rule, in concurrence with the House, in order to recommit the annual report of the Gas Commissioners to the Committee on Public Lighting. Senator Williams of Middlesex stated that this was for the purpose of reporting a bill to organize a new Gas Company for Quincy. He thought this could be formed under General Laws, without taking the time of the General Court.

The engrossed bills were passed to be enacted to prevent misrepresentation in the sale of merchandise; to authorize the Board of Railroad Commissioners to approve street railway locations.

The Committee on Federal Relations reported "ought to be adopted" on the Fales resolution in favor of reciprocity with Canada. Senator Skinner and Representative Bemis of the committee dissent.

A house bill to provide that city treasurers shall publish a list of employes in their reports was taken from the table and rejected.

The house refused to sanction the division of the town of Foxboro by a vote of 30 to 101, on the yeas and nays. The debate was carried on in the main for the division by Creamer of Peru, while Bemis of Foxboro, fought the division.

Quinn of Boston moved to reconsider the vote passing the Boston district option bill, to be engrossed. Callender of Boston opposed reconsideration. Reconsideration was refused, 42 yeas to 92 nays, with 13 pairs. Neither of the Quincy men were recorded.

The resolve providing for the appointment of a commission to revise the laws in regard to the establishment of trust companies was passed ot be engrossed.

The bill providing a fine for wearing union buttons illegally was ordered to a third reading.

The street railway location bill was under debate at adjournment.

Dowie Prayed In Vain

Chicago, May 16.—Esther Dowie, daughter of "Dr." Alexander Dowie, proprietor of "Zion," died of burns, having suffered for hours without medical attendance while "Elijah II" prayed over her, his supplication lasting all day. Miss Dowie was 23 years old and a student at the University of Chicago. Her hair caught fire from a gas jet, and her head and face were horribly burned.

A Peculiar Case

New York, May 16.—William Barrett died in the city hospital yesterday. An autopsy showed that Barrett died from hemorrhages of the heart caused by punctures from a piece of knife blade, which was found in the heart. There was no puncture of the flesh over or near the heart and the doctors, who say the man was murdered, are at a loss to know how the blade got there.

A CHATELAINE BAG.

Crocheted In White Silk With Fleur-de-lis Design of Gold Beads.

Everybody wears a side bag of some description, and those of the bead order are daintiest of all. The fleur-de-lis design worked in gold beads on a white ground has a very chic and elaborate effect, but The New Idea Woman's Magazine, in sketching it, says it is in reality very easily made.

Several bunches of beads are necessary, and, to avoid the possibility of tangling, it is well to string but one bunch at a time, as the silk can be cut and the joining made without trouble. A very easy way to string beads is as follows: Thread a needle with the purse twist, and run the needle through one end of the thread on which the beads are strung (in the case of metal beads there will be two threads), draw through a little way or sufficient to free the needle from the silk and slip the beads over the joining down on to the silk. This is a great advantage over the old way of stringing beads with a needle or waxed end of the silk or thread and does away with a very tedious part of the work.

Those who are familiar with bead work will find no difficulty in working out this design: Commence the center with four chains and work up to the widest point of the star, having eleven beads. Now leave off beads on each side of each star point, keeping them straight, and widen in between sufficiently to keep the work flat. The fleur-de-lis figures are commenced on the fourth diminishing row of the star points. The back of the bag is crocheted plain with cream white purse twist. The bag is finished with a heavily twisted fringe of gold beads, and the top used for mounting should be gilt also. A white kid lining makes a very dainty finish.

Materials for working are two and one-half ounces of cream white twist and six bunches of No. 7 beads.

To Whiten Wicker Furniture.

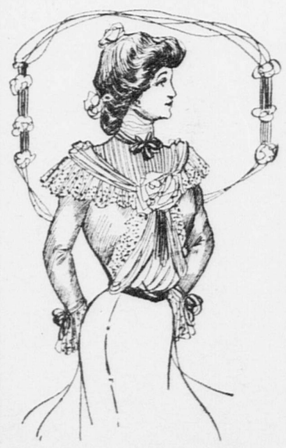

When willow chairs are to be cleaned, they should be washed well with white soap and warm water, then rinsed, wiped well with a soft cloth and dried in the sun. This will usually restore wicker to its original color, but if it has become yellow and stubbornly remains so after the first treatment it can be bleached by means of sulphur fumes. Light a sulphur candle near the chair and cover both with a large dry goods box. This should be done before the chair is dry. Leave it until the fumes have evaporated.

Broiled Shad Roe.

Wipe the roe with a bit of wet cloth and dry it well. Brush over with melted butter or olive oil and broil about five minutes or until brown on each side. It should be well cooked, and when done the little grainlike eggs will be of a light mode color. If pink, it should be cooked longer. For a small family it is better to cook the roe in salted, acidulated water to insure its keeping, and the next day broil it as above or split it and dip in flour and brown it in hot pork fat.

Smart Separate Waists.

Waists in finest white silk muslin, with lace let in and the fronts blended with silk and lace, appertain to the haute mode. Cream crepe de chine with tucked muslin and a transparent neck of valenciennes makes a dainty separate waist. The blue satin bolero over a white slip, here sketched, is a pleasing affair, with garniture of blue silk muslin folds, lace and baby ribbon of black velvet.

MISTAKE SOMEWHERE.

Why the Colonel Stopped His Score of Chinamen at Five.

"I had read," said the colonel as he was relating some of his experiences in China, "that if a person fell into the water no one could pull him out, holding that his falling in was a decree of Providence that must not be interfered with.

"One day on one of the canals I stumbled and went overboard, and, although there were twelve boatmen, not one of them would extend me a hand. After a close shave, as I cannot swim I got aboard again, and as soon as I recovered my breath I yelled at the boss boatman:

"'You infernal scoundrel, but why didn't you help me out?'

"'It was your fate to fall in,' he calmly replied.

"'And it's your fate to take a good licking!' I said as I went for him.

"When I had finished him off, I took another, and I was just polishing off my fifth victim when the sixth man halted me to say:

"'There seems to be a mistake here. We are taught that if a person falls into the water he must save himself or drown, but we are not taught that if he does save himself he is at liberty to lick half of China in revenge.'

"I thought his point well taken," laughed the colonel, "and I stopped my score at five and went down to change into dry clothes."—Boston Globe.

Apple Trees For Beauty and Fruit.

Apple trees are so beautiful, even when bare of bloom and fruit, that they should be grown in pleasure gardens, like lilacs and laburnums. Tennyson speaks of orchard lawns, and there is no reason except bad taste why they should not have a real existence. The gloom of the fir tree, magnificent no doubt in its own northern forest, is mere incongruous dreariness when it is dotted about a suburban lawn. Nothing will thrive under it, and often it will not thrive itself, but the apple, with all the associated beauty of the countryside, gives us fruit and blossom and grateful shade. In the grass under it will grow daffodils, columbines, irises and many other plants, or it may be trained as a hedge to divide one part of the garden from another and with all these uses may still produce great crops of fruit. It would be a pleasant task for the suburban gardener with his half acre of ground to grow three or four choice apple trees with the care that others give to roses.—London Speaker.

The Palate Lock.

A woman who had solved the servant girl question by importing a buxon young colored girl from Virginia went out to give her orders for dinner one day and was astounded to see the negro sitting on the floor with her hair, or wool, standing out around her head in a black and shiny nimbus. Not hearing the approach of the mistress, the servant went on with her occupation, which was pulling first one curly lock and then another in a way that suggested that she had either lost a fortune or "got religion." The madam stared a moment and then exclaimed:

"For goodness' sake, Betty, what are you doing?"

The maid hurriedly scrambled to her feet and answered:

"Oh, nothin', ma'am. I'ze got a sore throat and was just tryin' to find the lock what would pull mah palate up and cure the tickle."—New York Times.

Saxony's Forests.

Saxony possesses one of the best regulated systems of forestry in the world. The forests of Saxony serve not only the purpose of giving the state a substantial annual revenue, but they add a thousandfold to the scenery of the country, thus attracting many tourists into those parts every summer. The most important feature of the forests, however, is the fact that they keep forever alive the fountains of water which spring from the highlands of the Erzgebirge and Saxon Switzerland. The forests furnish the material and the water the motive power to hundreds of pulp, paper and saw mills, which, in turn, give employment to thousands of men, women and children.

Might Have Been Worse.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "that horse you bet on"—

"There's no need of bringing the matter up. I know that my judgment was very bad and all that."

"Oh, I wouldn't take it to heart! The horse might have been beaten worse. You must give him credit for getting around ahead of the horses that were entered for the following race."—Washington Star.

Pay Your Debts.

"No, sir," declared Gazzen as he warmed up to his subject, "you'll never be happy so long as you are in debt. Pay your debts, Swayback, pay your debts."

"But I have no money," said Swayback.

"Then borrow it."—Detroit Free Press.

This suit was won by Legarda, and Editor Valdes was sentenced to six months' banishment.

Filipinos Treated Well

Washington, May 16.—Captain Lee Hall was the witness before the senate Philippine committee yesterday. He was in command of a company of Macabebe scouts. He had heard of instances of the water cure, but saw none. The water cure he thought was no worse in its effect than the native wine. The Filipino prisoners were treated as well as American soldiers except that they were made to work.

CAP OF DARK CLOUDS

Still Hovers Over Deadly Volcano on St Vincent

ANOTHER ERUPTION FEARED

Many Survivors of Disaster Without Homes, Clothing or Food—Martinique's Principal City May Be Abandoned Owing to Multitude of Dead

Kingstown, St. Vincent, B. W. I., May 16.—Scientists who have come here from the British island of Trinidad predict another volcanic eruption on St. Vincent within a short time.

The damage done to St. Vincent by the volcanic eruptions is now known to be considerably greater than was at first estimated. The present uneasiness of the inhabitants of the island is in of the volcanic craters. On May 9 large stones and volcanic dust fell in the neighborhood of Georgetown for two hours. A cloud of hot vapor then passed over that port. Two eruptions of less magnitude than the first occurred on May 10, and since then fire and smoke have been ascending at intervals from the craters.

Interesting discoveries have been made in regard to the physical changes on St. Vincent resulting from the eruptions. Several fissures have been observed on La Soufriere. The estate of Walibou has disappeared and has been replaced by an inlet of the sea. Richmond, an estate formerly adjacent to Walibou, which was flat and upon which there were a number of laborers' cottages, has been completely burned, and out of the estate there now arises a large ridge of ground. It is believed the Rabacci crater in the windward district of the island has also erupted.

From a distance La Soufriere, although less violent, still wears a cap of dark clouds which is illumined every now and then by flashes of red light.

There have been several heavy rain showers which have washed away the dust from the grass and restored the verdure of the fields. The condition of the atmosphere is also apparently improving.

Owing to the destruction of several estates, the sugar and arrow root industries of St. Vincent are seriously injured. Destitution prevails among the laboring classes, who are without homes, without clothes and hungry.

Nearly 2000 deaths on this island have been reported. Bodies have been discovered in houses in lifelike attitudes, presenting a gruesome spectacle. There are decomposed bodies in many houses, and in order to guard against disease, it will probably be necessary for the authorities to burn these dwellings down. Owing to the many difficulties in the way of those who have the matter in hand, hundreds of bodies have not yet been interred.

As wide areas of ground which formerly produced food-stuffs have been devastated, there is an abnormal demand for breadstuffs and a consequent scarcity of food supplies. The prices on food are advancing. The destruction of the livestock of the island has also caused a rise in the price of meat.

A British warship has arrived here from Trinidad. She brings provisions for the relief of the sufferers.

No person has yet been able to approach within eight miles of the new crater of the Soufriere volcano, but judging from what can be seen from a considerable distance the old lake at the summit of the mountain has disappeared. The numerous fissures in the mountain's sides continue to throw out vapor, and the subterranean murmurings and tremblings indicate continued unrest.

PELEE STILL HOT

Futile Attempts to Reach Volcano to Make Investigation

Fort de France, May 16.—Efforts are being made by the officers of the French cruiser Suchet to approach Pelee to report on the probability of another violent outburst. They have been driven back several times by showers of lava. They report that the whole mountain is hot and quivering. Dense vapors prevent a survey of the changes in the configuration of the mountain, but they ascertained that Pelee is no longer the loftiest peak in Martinique. A new ridge seems to confirm the statement of various survivors that the mountain gaped 1000 feet wide to let out the first immense jet of flame that destroyed the city, and then closed again, the subsequent eruptions proceeding from relatively small openings.

Though virtually all the life within the borders of St. Pierre was destroyed, but a single soul of the entire population escaping, the ruins show great variation of the force and fury of the destroying fire currents. In the fort district the dead were utterly consumed, but in Mouillage there are bodies everywhere. All bodies are cast on the funeral pyres as fast as gathered, and yet the speed is far inadequate. There is talk of abandoning St. Pierre for a year and leave to nature the task that is too great for men.

St. Pierre's dead are a multitude. They lie in all manner of attitudes, and it seems they died without much suffering. Most of them were probably smothered by sulphurous gases.

Example of American Hustle

Washington May 16.—The administration anticipated the action of congress in providing for the immediate relief of the situation at Martinique and St. Vincent with the result that the Sterling sailed from San Juan with supplies within five hours from the time the appropriation became available and the Dixie sailed from New York with additional supplies in exactly 29 hours after the president signed the act making the appropriation. These two vessels carry more than 36 days' rations for 50,000 people, together with a proportionate amount of clothing, tentage, etc.

Slow to Aid Her Own

London, May 16.—Much satisfaction is expressed at the opening of the Mansion House West Indian relief fund, while the tardiness of the action taken by the authorities is adversely commented on. Thus, the Westminster Gazette says: "Once again, in the cause of charity, our kinsmen across the Atlantic have gained a substantial start, and have set the old country an example of swift and magnificent generosity from which we might well benefit."

Little Worriment In France

Paris, May 16.—American visitors cannot understand the seeming indifference of the Parisians in regard to the Martinique disaster. No "extras" are issued, but papers containing sporting news are eagerly snatched up. The various relief funds only total $60,000, including the large subscriptions of the foreign potentates and the $4000 from the municipality.

France Feels Grateful

Washington, May 16.—Jules Cambon, the French ambassador, has transmitted to Secretary Hay a long telegram from his government expressing the gratitude of France for the energetic efforts of this country to relieve the suffering at Martinique.

Washington, May 16.—The kidnapping and subsequent arrest of Gaynor and Green at Quebec was the result of a carefully laid plan of Chief Wilkie of the secret service. Inspectors Bennett, Burke, Taylor and three others had been assigned to the case. The capture was planned to come off Wednesday.

Death of Judge Bradley

SNAKE IN SCHOOLROOM

One Method of Pupils to Show Disapprobation of Principal

Clinton, Mass., May 16.—The trouble in the high school, relative to discipline, which has been disturbing the studies for an entire year and which in February resulted in the painting of the schoolhouse red, broke out again yesterday, when, in the large school room in which were 75 boys and girls, someone liberated a black snake, two feet long. Great disorder followed, the scholars climbing upon chairs and desks to escape the reptile. It was pursued and finally killed by the principal.

A few days ago a live turtle was let loose upon the schoolroom floor, and it is said that some of the scholars threaten to bring in live frogs.

There is a spirit of rebellion against the principal, who has occupied his position for 25 years, and some of the pupils seem determined to make school life as unpleasant as possible for him. When the schoolhouse was painted red last February, two boys were brought before the district court as the parties implicated, but were treated very leniently. The school board, however, is determined to deal with the guilty more severely in the present instance, if they can be discovered.

Louis Mettling's Mishap

Boston, May 16.—Louis E. Mettling, the well known amateur bicycle champion, was thrown from his wheel by the collapse of a tire while training behind a motor yesterday and is suffering from concussion of the brain and in a very critical condition. He has frequent hemorrhages from the nose, eyes and ears. Mettling had been rubbing tires with his pace and the accident occurred just after the wheels had parted company. Mettling, who had but recently entered the ranks of the professionals, is a conscientious rider and had been training very hard recently.

Meyer Not a Candidate

Boston, May 16.—George von L. Meyer, United States ambassador to Italy, has sent a cable dispatch to this country giving the news that he is about to undergo a severe surgical operation and will not, therefore, be a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress from the Sixth district. This information definitely leaves the contest in the district to Augustus P. Gardner of Hamilton, Edward P. Shaw of Newburyport and John M. Raymond and John F. Hurley of Salem.

Demand of Union Labor

Providence, May 16.—A general strike of all classes of workmen engaged in construction or completion of buildings in this state is threatened, and will probably have the effect of throwing about 3000 persons out of work on June 1. The principal demand is that no person who is not a member of a union shall be employed on work within a district where there are union men unless such union men cannot be procured.

Black Diphtheria Raging

Lynn, Mass., May 16.—An epidemic of black diphtheria prevails in the East Lynn district, and the board of health has ordered the closing of two schools in consequence. Three children, who died from the disease, were buried yesterday. When the disease first made its appearance it was diagnosed by a physician as measles, and parents took no precautions to keep their children away from the sick ones.

Lewiston, Me., May 16.—The Republican caucus to elect delegates to attend the county convention to be held on June 3 was held yesterday. The ticket favorable to the latter candidate won by a majority of 341

Fined For Opening Wife's Letters

Boston, May 16.—In the United States district court yesterday M. D. Giroux of North Adams was fined $50 for opening letters addressed to his wife. Mrs. Giroux was not living with her husband, but mail addressed to her was sent to her former home. She alleged that Giroux opened the letters after she had directed him not to do so.

Canton to Have Fine Library

Canton, Mass., May 16.—At a special town meeting last night it was voted to accept the gift of a public library building and grounds from Augustus Hemenway, and to raise $1200 for its maintenance. The building will be of stone and brick and will cost about $70,000.

THE MAN IN THE CHAIR

By ZOE ANDERSON NORRIS

Copyright, 1901, by Zoe Anderson Norris

DINNER was over, the table had been cleared away, and mademoiselle's oil lamp, which gave the same sort of light it had given the year before, which was next to no light at all, had been put in the middle of it by Florence of the Velvet Foot, whose mission it was to see to things, when the Story Teller looked across at me and began:

"Do you believe in spirits and ghosts and that?"

"I believe," I asserted sweepingly, "in everything you can't explain because there are so few things you can explain. Unless you do believe in those you can't explain there is very little left to believe in."

And I told her of an experience of my own. It had happened the week before. I was sitting writing to a little girl I love from whom I am indefinitely separated, and I was sad. Often I am sad without her, but as I wrote a feeling of unusually intense sadness came over me. I sighed and said aloud, "Oh, sister, sister!"

In three days I had a letter from her.

"Friday at 4 o'clock"—the hour at which I had written—"a strange thing happened," she wrote. "I was in my room reading when I heard you call me, 'Sister, sister!' You called me twice. I heard you so distinctly that I ran to the door, opened it and looked out. I ran a little way down the stairs, expecting you to come up and meet me." What was it? Say.

"That," said the Story Teller, "was telepathy."

I nodded humbly, acquiescing. It is in the old country that you listen thus while people tell you what you have known all your life. It comes naturally with the meekness of thanking them for correcting your faults in languages.

"I RAN TO THE DOOR, OPENED IT AND LOOKED OUT."

She toyed with a letter in her hand.

"This," tapping it, "is from a friend formerly a nonbeliever in the inexplicable, now converted. His conversion was like this: He laughed to scorn all our tales of superstition, particularly our belief that the spirit at the moment of death returns to the one best loved on earth or to its home. Whether it is that its last thought is of that person or that home, the fact remains. It has been known to happen again and again. And why not? The soul is an intangible thing. It is capable of any flight. Miles are nothing to it once released from this old body—leagues, millions of miles! But I must tell you the story. After that I will tell you the story of the Man in the Chair."

I got up closer. I might have known she knew stories. Though English, she was bright as a dollar and talked French like a native, while I, alas, talked it like a native American.

"The friend of mine who wrote this letter," she proceeded, "had an aunt who had lived in the same house with him for years. A night or two ago he was in the dining room, reading, when the door opened, and this aunt stood on the threshold. He arose and hastened to her. 'Why, aunt!' he cried. 'How are you? I am glad to see you. Come in.' She stood motionless for a moment looking at him, then disappeared. In due time he received a letter announcing her death."

"The thing is mysterious," I said in a low tone, for low tones fit stories like that. "Go on and tell me another."

"Did you ever hear of Bishop Wilberforce's ghost?" she queried.

"Never," said I.

"It was the ghost of a priest," she explained. "One day a friend of the bishop went to his house and was shown into the library. When the door was closed upon him, he saw standing before the bookshelves a priest. He thought it strange that he had been left there without an introduction; but, picking up a magazine, he read until the servant, reappearing, announced lunch. The priest still stood before the bookshelves, taking down book after book, searching among its leaves and putting it back. But not a word was said to him about lunch. Following the servant into the dining room, 'There is a priest in the library,' he said. 'Aren't you going to ask him to lunch?' He stood dumfounded at the effect of his words. 'Oh, hush, hush!' they exclaimed. Then, turning white faces the one to the other, 'The priest again!' they whispered. 'The priest!'

"It seems that years before a priest who had been in the habit of reading in their library had written something immoral on a slip of paper and put it there in a book. Then he had died. In purgatory this, whatever it was he had written, tormented him. His soul could not rest till he had found and destroyed it. So back he came from time to time and stood at the bookshelves, searching, searching."

"This," I averred, "gives me a deliciously creepy feeling all up and down my spinal column, but if all the writers who have written immoral things should come back to find them the libraries would be filled chock full of spirits, searching, searching."

"True enough. But I was going to tell you about the Man in the Chair. That is the story I started out to tell you."

They had left us alone in the dining room. The old lamp shed a duller glow than usual. It left dark corners.

"Wait a minute," I implored, looking tearfully over my shoulder. "Let me turn it up."

Reaching across, I turned it up, sat back again and prepared for delicious shivers.

"I wouldn't believe this story of the Man in the Chair," she commenced, "except that I had it directly from an intimate friend who saw the picture."

"Then you didn't see the picture?"

"No, but, as I say, this friend did. And I would believe her the same as I would my own eyes. She is absolutely incapable of falsehood, I can assure you."

"Remarkable woman! Well?"

"Well, it was a friend of hers who took the pictures. You see, for years her people had owned the manor house where they lived, which had prior to that been owned and very dearly loved by an officer in the army who was somewhere in the East Indies—I don't remember exactly where. At any rate, he was an old officer and distinguished, who had charge of a regiment more or less celebrated, though I have forgotten for what and its name.

I waited patiently while she tried to remember. The principal things about this story, it seemed to me, were the things she had forgotten.

"They were obliged for some reason to sell the house"—

"You hardly ever sell a house except for one reason," I helped her.

"And what's that?" sharply.

"Because you are short of funds."

I had sold a house once. I knew.

"Well, anyway they sold the house. It was a fine old house. Like the officer, they had grown to love it. Upon leaving it the girl took pictures of it. She went around to each room—to the library, the dining room, the drawing room, the bedrooms. She took pictures of every nook and cranny from garret to cellar, she loved it so and regretted so the leaving."

"I seem to recognize in her a comrade," I interrupted—"a camera fiend. She probably took them for the pleasure of taking them partly, all those pictures."

"It may have been. Well, she was busy and hadn't time to develop them; so she took them to a photographer in London. A week later she called for them. He brought them to her in a little roll.

"'They are very good,' he said, unwinding one and holding it to the light. 'Excellent—that is, with the exception of the Man in the Chair. That is a trifle indistinct. There is a kind of haze over it.'

"'The Man in the Chair!' she repeated. 'I don't remember taking any Man in a Chair.'

"'Here it is,' said he, producing it.

"Sure enough, sitting in the library by the table was a man. He sat in a large chair with a tall oaken back. His head was bent on his hand. He was not reading or writing. He appeared to be just resting there awhile. But the most peculiar thing about the picture was the fact that he was without legs. Beneath the table two stumps only were visible.

"Taking the picture home, they wondered over it until finally the news coming that the officer who formerly owned the place had died explained it. Dying, his soul had flown straight back to the home he had loved. At the same time, photographing the room he had gone to, she had photographed with it him."

"But what about the legs?"

"Wounded on the battlefield, he had been carried to the hospital. There it was found necessary to amputate his legs. Immediately after the operation he had died."

I shuddered. The creepy feeling extended now from my head to my heels. I drew a long, deep breath that was akin to a groan.

At the same moment the lamp flickered. It flickered again. With a puff and a dying rush upward, it went out. I screamed wildly. I threw my arms on the table and fell there.

Somebody came flying in with another lamp.

"What's the matter?" I heard voices demand in a frightened chorus. "I say, what on earth's the matter?"

"Nothing," answered the Story Teller. "Only I was telling her the story of the Man in the Chair, and the lamp went out. She's not hurt, I think. She's scared; that's all."

How an M. P. Retires.

The Chilterns are a range of chalk eminences dividing the counties of Hertford and Bedford and extending to Henley. In former days these hills were infested with robbers, and the government was obliged to take steps to suppress these rogues. The task was carried out under an officer appointed by the crown and known as the steward of the Chiltern Hundreds.

The duties of this office have long been obsolete, but the office has been kept in force, and a nominal salary is attached to the post. It is a position of convenience for members of parliament. An M. P. cannot resign his seat, so when he wishes to retire he must obtain a post under the crown, a post with a salary. Any member accepting such an office vacates his seat and has to be re-elected. The M. P. applies for the stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds and receives the appointment without trouble. His seat is now vacant, and he does not seek re-election, and after a few days he resigns his appointment. That is the roundabout way in which an M. P. retires from parliament.—London Standard.

The Dreams of Infancy.

When babies smile in their sleep, some will say angels are whispering to them, yet when they are old enough, though not yet out of the age of innocence, to repeat their dreams it is not always of angels that these are found to have been. Not always are they derived from fleeting, unconscious recollections of the home whence they have so lately come. On the contrary, it is chiefly, as Charles Lamb observes, during the period of sinless infancy that shapes of terror will intrude upon the midnight pillow; that the slumberer will start from dreams "to which the reveries of the cell damned murderer are tranquillity." How vividly does the gentle essayist recall these heipless agonies of his own infancy. We almost fancy we can see him start from slumber on some murky night with a dread foreboding, which was sure to realize itself, of seeing some frightful specter.

Appealed to His Pride.

It was the most obstinate mule in the lot and refused to enter the car of a train held up at a little wayside station.

Threats, cajolery and blows were alike useless. The mule refused to budge, and the slant of his ears told those of the passengers who were familiar with mule ear talk that where he was he intended to stay. Then the aged African who was trying to load him in said in honeyed tones:

"Whuffo' yo' behave dis way befo' all dese strange people? Why, yo' fool mule, doan' yo' know dat dese people will jes' believe dat yo' neber done trabeled befo' in all yo' life?"

The long ears lost their aggressive slant, and the beast went sedately up the inclined plank with the air of a man entering a drawing room car for the first time and determined not to betray the fact.

Famous Famines.

In A. D. 450 famine prevailed all over the south of Europe, raging worst in Italy, where parents ate their children, and in 739 England, Scotland and Wales were ravaged, also in 823, when thousands starved, and in 954, when the crops failed for four successive years. In 1016 an awful famine raged throughout all Europe and again from 1193 to 1195, when crop failures caused terrible suffering. In England and France the people ate the flesh of dogs and cats, and many cases of cannibalism were recorded.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For Week Beginning May 18. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Practical consecration. — Rom. xii, 1-21.

Paul was a theologian. He believed in the great fundamental doctrines of evangelical Christianity, and these doctrines have never had a more lucid expositor or a more courageous defender, yet at the same time Paul believed in applied Christianity. He made faith the foundation of works and theory the foundation of practice. This is strikingly illustrated in the epistle to the Romans. The first eleven chapters of the epistle logically and elaborately develop the doctrine that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to all who believe. Then on the basis of this great truth he appeals to all to consecrate themselves to God, to separate themselves from the world and to faithfully discharge the duties they owe to each other. The consecration demanded in lieu of the previously presented and argued truths is certainly a practical consecration. "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

Practical consecration as set forth here involves a number of characteristics which it is well for us to remember.

1. Consecration should be grateful. "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God." Gratitude to God for His mercies in Jesus Christ should lead us to consecrate ourselves to God and should be a constant element in the performance of our vows of consecration.

2. Consecration should be voluntary. "Present your bodies," says the apostle. This expression suggests voluntariness. It has about it the atmosphere of the voluntary enlistment of the soldier in the service of his country. Voluntariness is a characteristic of true consecration to God. God delights in and desires the service and worship of volunteers, but has no place for the service of hirelings.

3. Consecration should be definite. Presentation is a definite act. The soldier presents himself once, and if accepted he is then enlisted. It is unnecessary for him to keep presenting himself daily. He has given himself once, and he cannot take himself back and do it over again. Consecration to God is a definite act. When rightly done, it is done once for all.

4. Consecration should be active. "Present your bodies a living sacrifice." A living sacrifice suggests an active service for God. We are saved to serve. We enlist for service, and we should be alive an ' active as good soldiers of our great King.

5. Consecration is reasonable. "Which is your reasonable service." When we remember what God's relation to us is, what God in Christ has done for us and what is involved in our own service of Him, it is most reasonable that we should consecrate our lives to Him.

6. Consecration should be sincere. Having consecrated ourselves to God, we should not be conformed to this world, but be transformed. Instead of fashioning our lives by the patterns of the world, they should be fashioned after divine ideals by the gracious influence of the Holy Ghost on our inner lives.

7. Consecration should be humanly directed. We should serve God by faithfully performing the mutual duties that devolve upon us as the people of God.

BIBLE READINGS.

Eccl. ix, 10; Matt. v, 16; xxv, 31-46; John ii, 1-11; xxi, 1-6; Acts xiii, 1-3; I Cor. x, 31; xv, 58; Gal. vi, 1-9; Col. iii, 17.

A Harmonious Union.

Life in its perfect expression is the harmonious union of the physical, mental and spiritual, and man attains his highest attribute when he recognizes himself as an equal trinity of these three parts—master of all below, subject only to God, the all good, "in whom he lives and moves and has his being."

No wrong can result when this knowledge is thoroughly understood and established, for the human has united with the divine, its source, its strength, and, like a mighty stream, it forces it way through every obstacle to the sea of the infinite. "The mortal has donned immortality," "the natural has become the supernatural," the Adam has been subjugated by the Christ, and henceforth love becomes a divine conception, "thinketh no evil," because it can do none.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Salvation.

Salvation is not secured by obedience to a rite, by the observance of a code of rules or even by obedience to a creed pronounced orthodox. A man may be praised in all these and yet be under the wrath of God, and his character be scarred by passion and self indulgence. The only condition of salvation is faith which believes in Him that justifies the ungodly and receives into the heart the very nature of Jesus to become the power of the new life. "He that hath the Son hath life."—F. B. Meyer.

Let Us Always Remember.

Let us always remember that God can modify our severe situations in life, that He can favorably move those who vex, perplex and try us and that He can raise up helpers for our benefit. Prayer offered up in Christ's name by His faithful, loving and trustful servants brings timely and adequate returns.—Presbyterian.

What Is Really Good.

May the Lord give me such an insight into what is really good that I may not rest contented with making Christianity a mere addendum to my pursuits or with tacking it as a fringe to my garments.—George Eliot.

WRIT-SERVERS DODGED

Till After Arraignment of Gaynor and Green

A HEARING ON MONDAY

Continuance Without Bail at Montreal—Their Punishment Much Desired by the Authorities, Who Will Do Utmost to Secure Extradition

Montreal, May 17.—Tug Spray, with Colonel Gaynor and Captain Greene on board, arrived in Montreal at 3:10 a. m. yesterday. The detectives agreed to allow Colonel Gaynor and Captain Greene to stay at the Windsor Hotel until the court proceedings began.

At 7 o'clock the regular Quebec boat arrived bringing the Quebec detectives and lawyers and Mrs. Gaynor, who, when they saw that their chase on the river was fruitless, took the regular Montreal boat at Sorel. Several of the detectives, including Chief Detective Walsh, came to the Windsor to see that the prisoners were not spirited away again, and others, headed by High Constable Gale of Quebec, went in search of Chief Carpenter to serve the writs of habeas corpus upon him.

Later, while Gale was looking for Chief Carpenter to serve him with writs of habeas corpus, the prisoners were taken from the hotel ostensibly for a walk, but were conducted to the residence of Judge La Fontaine, the extradition commissioner, who issued the warrants, and were there arraigned by him and remanded until Monday.

The proceedings in Judge Fontaine's house were formal. Detective Carpenter handed the judge the warrants with the return marked upon the back as usual. The prisoners were asked if they were guilty, and not replying, the judge's clerk accepted their failure to plead as a plea of not guilty. Judge La Fontaine then said: "Prisoners, I remand you for trial until next Monday, the 19th of this month, without bail." The prisoners bowed, and the judge informed Carpenter that he remanded the prisoners to his custody. The officers with the prisoners then returned to their hotel.

After this action Detective Carpenter permitted the Quebec officer to serve the habeas corpus papers on him.

This ends the proceedings until Monday. In the meantime numerous conferences are going on between crown attorneys, detectives and lawyers. The prisoners will remain at the Windsor Hotel.

There was no kidnapping, but merely a case of rivalry between Quebec and Montreal as to where the trial for extradition should take place. Warrants were sworn out for the arrest of Gaynor and Greene, under the extradition act, and on the charge of embezzling money from the United States government, before Judge La Fontaine of this city, at the instance of Marion Erving, supposed to be an official of the United States court at Macon, Ga. The lawyers here—Messrs. MacMaster and Hickson—decided that it would be cheaper in the long run to have the trial for extradition take place here than in Quebec, and therefore the warrants were given to Chief Detective Carpenter of Montreal, with orders to bring the prisoners here. As it was feared that the members of the Quebec bar might object to having the trial go out of their jurisdiction, the idea of the tugboat was taken up. The chase for the boat by the Quebec authorities was presumably on the misunderstanding that Gaynor and Greene were carried off without proper warrants.

Arrests Very Satisfactory

Washington, May 17.—The Washington authorities feel very confident that they have Gaynor and Greene where they want them at last. The resort to the water route, instead of taking them by rail from Quebec to Montreal, was dictated by a desire to avoid embarrassments on the way. It would have been possible for the fugitives' counsel in Quebec to telegraph ahead and have the party intercepted with a habeas corpus writ at one of the stations between the two cities.

It is denied here that the government had any specific proofs of the impossibility of procuring justice in an application to the Quebec courts for the extradition of the fugitives, as intimated in some quarters. It was considered significant, however, that so many absconders should choose Quebec in preference to any other city of Canada as a refuge, and especially that Gaynor and Greene should have fled thither secretly, but as soon as they had arrived, should have come out and flaunted their presence there in the most public manner, defying the government of the United States to come and take them.

Our authorities felt, after that, that they had better move in some other courts than those of Quebec. Little doubt is entertained here that the two men will be brought back to the United States and compelled to stand trial in Savannah. They are accused of stealing $2,000,000 of public money, and our government is prepared to spend all the money it can ever hope to recover, if need be, in dragging them back to justice, as a matter of principle if nothing more.

American Orders Still Operative

Havana, May 17.—Governor General Wood is busily engaged in straightening out complications which might cause a hitch when the reins of government are transferred to the new administration. Governor Wood has issued an order making all orders operative only during the military occupation of the island, binding upon the new Cuban government until they shall be revoked.

Pretoria, May 17.—All the Boer delegates are now assembled at Vereeniging, Transvaal colony, where every facility has been afforded them for private sessions, the first of which begins today. All the voting will be by ballot. During the deliberations at Vereeniging Lord Kitchener has guaranteed immunity from attack to all commandos whose leaders are participating in the conference.

Newburgh, N. Y., May 17.—Mrs. Jennie A. Paul was arrested yesterday on complaint of a postoffice inspector on the charge of illegally using the mails. It is alleged that she advertised herself as a young, handsome woman seeking a husband and collected considerable money from suitors by requesting railroad fare in order to meet them. Mrs. Paul is a middle-aged woman.

Lives Lost In Chicago Fire

Chicago, May 17.—The lard refinery of Armour & Co. was destroyed by fire last night and during the fire a number of accidents occurred by which many people were injured. The number of dead and wounded is a matter of conjecture as yet, the estimates running all the way from 5 to 25. The monetary loss is estimated at from $750,000 to $900,000.

Free Lodgings For Americans

Cruiser Cincinnati and Collier Sterling at Fort de France—Flashes of Light From Mount Pelee Cause Panic In Surrounding Districts

Fort de France, May 17.—Great flashes of very bright light were emitted from Mt. Pelee between 10 and 11 o'clock Thursday night. They were visible from here. Thick, glowing red clouds, interspersed with flashes of light, issued from the volcano yesterday. Showers of cinders, lasting for 20 minutes, accompanied the activity. The people in the districts of Lorrain, Marigot, Sainte Marie and La Trinite are panicstricken.

PORTION OF MARTINIQUE SHOWING SURROUNDINGS OF MONT PELEE.

Washington, May 17.—Although the original appropriation for the aid of the sufferers from volcanic eruptions in the Leeward Isles was made with special reference to Martinique, everything done by the executive branch of the government has kept in view the possibility of further emergencies. The government's action was intended and expected only to set the ball of mercy rolling, till private generosity could come in and take up the work.

All private inquiries concerning intended gifts are answered from Washington with instructions to send articles to Major Brainard, commissary officer in charge at New York, delivering on the wharf at Pier 15. Meanwhile orders have gone from General Weston to Major Brainard to supplement private gifts with judicious additions from the commissary stores. For instance, where a shipment of flour is sent, he is to add yeast powders from his stores, as the flour would be practicafly unavailable to the unfortunate people with these. Wherever certain canned viands go forward hereafter, as a gift from some generous citizen, they will be accompanied with the quantity of salt, pepper and other seasoning necessary for cooking them properly, and so on.

Though the material will be held in readiness for orders at any hour, further shipments will depend on developments. It is hoped to avoid pauperizing the inhabitants of the stricken islands by indiscriminate and over-lavish gratuities; and as soon as it is learned that they are able to get along by themselves nothing more will be forwarded. Thus it is possible that not all the appropriation will be spent.

The navy department has received a cablegram announcing the arrival of the Cincinnati at Fort de France yesterday. A telegram also was received announcing that the collier Sterling, which took a quantity of stores from San Juan, P. R., has arrived at Fort de France.

Lieutenant McCormick, commanding the Potomac, also reported that vessel's departure from St. Lucia for Fort de France.

Access to St Pierre Now Easier

Fort de France, May 17.—Approach to St. Pierre is easier. The fires in the wrecked buildings of the city are extinguished and representatives of the commerical houses from Fort de France are digging in the debris of houses and stores in search of documents and valuables. The town is a mass of indescribable ruins, which bear a striking resemblance to those of Pompeii. Thus far 2000 bodies have been found and distangled from the ruins. Of these 592 have been buried, the rest burned.

An inhabitant of Morne Rouge says that all about him when the explosion came there was a terrible suction of air which seemed to be dragging him irresistibly toward the mountain in spite of all his resistance. The volcano then emitted a sheet of flame which swept down toward St. Pierre. He thinks that the entire outburst did not last more than 30 seconds. Then there was complete darkness for 10 minutes, caused by the dense volumes of sulphurous smoke and clouds of dust and shattered rocks.

Danger Not Yet Over

London, May 17.—A dispatch from Sir Robert Llewelyn, dated from St. Vincent, says: "The total number of bodies buried to date is 1300; in hospital 130. All immediate wants are now supplied. Generous aid received from neighboring colonies. Nine of the best sugar estates damaged seriously. An estate at Wallibu is completely buried in ashes. All vegetation is destroyed. It will probably revive after rain. Three thousand persons on the relief list. At an approximate cost of $250 daily the relief must continue for some time. The eruption seems to be decreasing, but lava is flowing. All danger is not yet over."

French Fund Grows Slowly

Paris, May 17.—Provincial France seems now to have fully grasped the situation in Martinique. Most of the towns and communes throughout the country are actively at work, raising funds and voting resolutions of sympathy with the sufferers. The government is placing collection boxes in all of the postoffices. The total Martinique relief fund thus far is $90,000.

Attributed to Volcanoes

Vienna, May 17.—The hot springs at Teplitz, Bohemia, delivered water of a reddish brown color yesterday. The water was permeated with iron and ochre. Geologists attribute this phenomenon to the shaking of the subterranean sources of the springs and believe it is connected with the volcanic eruptions in the West Indies, inasmuch as a similar phenomenon was recorded at Teplitz Nov. 1, 1755, shortly after the Lisbon earthquake.

Croker Has Forsaken Politics

London, May 17.—Richard Croker makes an emphatic protest that he has ceased to meddle in New York politics. "Thirty-seven years of political fighting is enough for one life," he said, "and I am done with it. There is no conceivable crisis in either national or city politics which will drag me back into the fray. My health won't stand the strain, and I am not going to sacrifice the remainder of my days, even for the sake of Tammany."

War Against New Jersey Pest

New Brunswick, N. J., May 17.—Professor John B. Smith, the state entomologist, has received a letter from Governor Murphy, saying that the governor has assigned to him $1000 from the state emergency fund to enable him to proceed with his campaign against the New Jersey mosquito. Professor Smith has obtained a Harvard graduate and physician to investigate the malarial side of the mosquitos.

New Buildings to Cost $6,000,000

Washington, May 17.—The military academy appropriation bill was reported to the senate yesterday. The aggregate appropriation remains $2,627,324, but there were some important changes. One of these increases the final limit of cost of the proposed new building from $5,000,000 to $6,000,000. Provision also is made for a salaried architect at $5000 a year to supervise this work.

Good Afternoon.

There are but 64 prisoners in Dedham jail—60 men and 4 women. An unusually small number for a county with a population of 160,000; only one to every 2,300.

An ideal lot for a post office building is a whole block, that is a lot of an acre or more surrounded by four streets. We have in mind one at Concord, N. H., which is directly back of the State House, which also occupies an entire block. Probably a third block will soon be occupied by a City Hall, with a large auditorium or opera house.

The Boston papers are criticising Chief Williams and Mayor Bryant at length for recent removal. It is only another example of the weakness of civil service rules. They secure poor timber for appointment, and do not prevent the removal of men who for years have given satisfactory service. Undoubtedly politics is the chief factor, and merits and arguments are useless.

And nothing has been done in Quincy toward an observance of "Old-Home Week." It is long-established cities like Quincy, which was incorporated as a town in 1792, that should celebrate, for thousands of Quincy born people are now scattered all over the United States. Many are only waiting for an invitation to visit old scenes. Perhaps they have no relatives here now, but if they came as guests of the Quincy Old-Home Week Association they would feel at home and enjoy them. Perhaps the business men would enthuse a little more over the Old-Home Week if the Lowell idea was adopted—where one day will be known as "bargain day." If there is to be a celebration, an organization is necessary, and the address of former residents should then be obtained as quickly as possible.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ "A high polish on shoes is no longer considered good form," said a Philadelphia man who follows the fashions closely. "It is going the way of the high gloss on linen. The laundryman has become convinced that the dull finish is what we want, but it is more difficult to penetrate the untutored mind of the bootblack. Because he has always regarded the looking glass shine as the best shine, he still seems to think that you want to use your shoes as mirrors, and you can't get him to think otherwise. I can always spot a man who has his shoes attended to by his valet. There is no confusing him with the man who patronizes the professional bootblack."

☞ If a "boy-struck" girl is tided over she will make a finer woman often than her more phlegmatic sister. She thrills with nerves, she aches with longings, her spirit beats restless wings against the confining bars of youth and inexperience. She must be tamed, as a young eagle is tamed, with infinite love and patience and tact. She must be coaxed and petted and soothed—never coerced. As the young eagle would resent harshness and swoop away to dash out its reckless young strength on the side of the cliff, so will such a girl in the face of compulsion throttle all good impulses for the sake of a freedom she does not comprehend and is not wise enough to use, only waking to her folly when her bruised young soul lies dead at her feet and her last hope of a mistaken happiness has fled.—Medical Talk.

☞ Andrew Carnegie says that he heartily subscribes to President Garfield's doctrine that "the richest heritage a young man can be born to is poverty." Still there is a doubt where Andrew would be perfectly willing to be born again and take his chances—Haverhill Gazette.

☞ The Martinique disaster has shown one thing plainly, which is the fact that President Roosevelt is not the kind of a man who allows the traditions of the past to stand in the way when there is need of prompt and immediate action. Even his political enemies, if they have any red blood in their veins, must admit that his speed and energy in getting under way aid to the stricken people are worthy only of the highest commendation. Were we to undergo such an experience, we know that we should want assistance quickly, and we should want it to be thorough and unhampered by red tape and the musty methods of other days. The president has done as he and we would be done by, and has scored another success by so doing.—Brockton Enterprise.

May Ball at Braintree.

Last evening the Braintree Fife and Drum corps held their annual ball in the Town hall, Braintree.

The hall presented a most attractive appearance. The stage was beautifully trimmed with ferns, palms, and potted plants. Cuff's orchestra was in attendance and furnished most excellent music, giving a delightful concert from 8 to 9.

The matrons were all charmingly gowned. Mrs. C. B. Cummings in blue silk with white trimmings, Mrs. George W. Stevens white organdie and black lace, Mrs. W. A. Torrey, white organdie and white lace, Mrs. N. G. Torrey, black lace and jet, Mrs. W. H. Cuff, gray silk with white trimmings. All carried handsome bouquets of pinks.

The floor was in charge of L. Thurlow Torrey assisted by James Cuff, Elihu Oliver, Bernard Simonds and Alton Newcomb.

The grand march was led by Mr. James Cuff and Miss Alice Foley, followed by Mr. L. Thurlow Torrey and Miss Grace Felker. There were about seventy couples in the march.

The Independence Drum corps of East Weymouth was present also the Orientals from East Braintree and the Columbia Drum corps from South Weymouth.

Randolph, Holbrook Avon, Quincy, Brockton and Weymouth were well represented. All pronounced it a success, socially and financially.

Ode to Mr. Faxon.

Mayor Bryant's paper the Weymouth Gazette says:

H. H. Faxon, Quincy's great temperance worker, has turned his attention to a new field. He is reported as seeking a scavenger's license.

"Go and toil in any vineyard,
Do not fear to do and dare;
If you want a field of labor
You can find it anywhere."

Andrew J. Maguire has resigned the position he has held at the Fore River Engine works for several years to accept a position as engineer of the large steam yacht "Doll" owned by New York parties. Last Saturday evening a large party of his fellow workmen tendered him a surprise at his home on Shaw street and presented him with a gold watch inscribed, "A. J. M., from the crew of the torpedo boat destroyer Lawrence." Andy was taken completely by surprise but responded with a fitting speech.

☞ Wednesday evening, May 21, the Ideal Dramatic club will present the Duchess of Dublin and a Game of Chess at the Universalist vestry. 3t

THE LEGISLATURE.

A Fight to be Made on DeNormandie Gas Bill.

The Massachusetts Senate was not in session yesterday as many committees are travelling.

In the House the Governors grade crossing bill was passed to be engrossed without amendment, after some debate.

The bill to authorize corporations to issue preferred stock was passed to be engrossed without debate.

The bill to repeal the charter of the Boston, Cape Cod and New York Canal Company was taken from the table and assigned for debate on Monday next.

The bill providing that only members of labor unions shall wear the insignia of such unions was taken up and the amendment of Mr. Hayes of Lowell providing that such insignia shall be registered with the Secretary of State, was adopted.

On motion of Mr. Sleeper of Winthrop the rules were suspended and the bill to authorize the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital to hold additional real and personal estate to the amount of $5,000,000 was passed to be engrossed.

Mr. McNary of Boston gave notice that he would move to substitue for the adverse report of the Committee on Public Lighting his bill to prevent the sale of water gas.

By next Monday, when the battle opens on Boston water gas, the House will have whatever evidence the Gas Commissioners have to give laid before its members, printed as a document. The question will turn upon the substitution of the De Normandie bill to improve the quality of illuminating gas and to prevent the sale of water gas, or upon the substitution of the McNary bill to prohibit the sale of water gas, for the adverse reports of the Committee on Public Lighting—leave to withdraw in each case.

Hathaway—Kammler.

There was a quiet but pretty wedding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Hathaway, 12 Walter street, Hyde Park, Wednesday afternoon of this week, the contracting parties being their son, Charles Edward Hathaway, and Miss Clara Francis Kammler of Dorchester. Only the immedite families of the bride and groom were present. The ceremony was performed under a beautiful archway of palms and flowers in the bay window of the parlor, Rev. Henry N. Hoyt officiating, assisted by Rev. George Butler of Northampton, a lifelong friend of the groom. A part of the Episcopal service was used. The happy couple were the recipients of numerous gifts. Following the ceremony a collation was served. The groom is employed in the auditor's department of the Quincy Fore River Ship and Engine Co., now building several large battleships for the U. S. navy. Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway will be at home Wednesdays in October at 166 Highland avenue, Wollaston.—Hyde Park Gazette.

Corporal Punishment.

The superintendents of New England considered corporal punishment yesterday, and two ex-Superintendents of Quincy gave their views:

Supt. H. W. Lull of Newport, R. I., said: "Corporal punishment is permissible in our school, but only in extreme cases, and then under severe limitations. There are six or seven conditions. The teacher must fill out a card giving full details. No blows can be struck in view of the other scholars. A witness must be present. Only a certain number of blows can be struck. The parents must be notified, etc. A rattan is used. I never knew of any objection to its use. I do not think that it splinters—in the hands of a competent person."

Supt. G. I. Aldrich of Brookline: "While corporal punishment is not forbidden by the Brookline school regulations, we consider that the less of it the better. Month after month passes without a single case. When inflicted it is invariably upon the hands, no other part of the body, and with a rattan. Careful limitations restrict the infliction. It must not be in the presence of other pupils, and it must be postponed long enough for cool deliberation."

Largest Paddle Steamer.

At Bath this morning the steamer R. B. Fuller for the Eastern S. S. Co. was launched. The Fuller is 300 ft. over all, 43 ft. beam, 70 ft. over guards, and 14 ft. 6 in. deep. She is braced and strapped as strong as wood and iron can be made, and the hull excited admiration from ship men who saw it under construction.

She is of the same length as the Rockland, but is five feet wider, and will thus be of greater tonnage, being the largest ocean-going paddle steamer in American water.

The christening was floral, by a five year old miss, Anna Morse, daughter of C. W. Morse of New York.

Sheriff Samuel H. Capen of Dedham and a few choice friends sail for Europe on Saturday, May 31, for pleasure and observation, having postponed the trip for two weeks. In the meantime the boarders at the county institution will be in charge of efficient managers, who will ring the gong promptly when the meals are served.—Hyde Park Gazette.

People whose business calls them to the City Treasurer's office at City Hall will miss the familiar face of Miss Belle Smith after next Tuesday, when she retires from the position as clerk to the City Treasurer, which she has held for the past eight years. During her long term of service the many citizens who have business with this department have always found Miss Smith most corteous and obliging. Possessed of an even temperament, nothing seemed to ruffle her and she led people to believe attending to their wants was a matter of pleasure rather than duty.

It is said to be practically settled that free delivery is to be established in Weymouth and the East Braintree patrons of that office are to come in for free delivery.

THE TATTLE OF THE THEATERS.

Where is this craze for the revival of old plays at the close of the season to lead us? Nearly all the stars are going in for it, and, what is more, owing to the "circusy" method of making one night stands of cities which are usually good for several weeks, it seems to be paying handsomely. It isn't considered necessary now even to allege an "all star" cast. "That used to be the caper, but it don't go now."

And the beauty of this revival craze is that its exploitation does not involve the payment of hundreds of dollars a week in royalties to heartless and grasping authors.

Viola Allen is said to have made a small fortune with her post season revival of "The Hunchback," written by one Sheridan Knowles, a gentleman who, while not entirely unknown to fame, is not in a position to exact royalties for the use of his works. An important point is that Miss Allen does not find it necessary to carry a number of important actors. In fact, the best known in her cast are Aubrey Boucicault, Jameson Lee Finney and Eben Plympton.

But the scheme works just the same, and as Miss Allen is reckoned a tiptop Julia the theater going public is the gainer by the venture.

Mrs. Fiske's revival of Lorimer Stoddard's dramatization of Thomas Hardy's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" proved one of the events of the theatrical year and fittingly wound up the season at the Manhattan. It appears to be the general impression that, good as was Mrs. Fiske's original interpretation of the titular role, it was even better during this brief revival. However that may be, it is certain that she demonstrated what the thoughtful critics have long recognized—that as an actress Mrs. Fiske is in a class by herself, at least so far as this country is concerned. A very large circle of admirers are hoping that in her next season's production, "Mary of Magdala," Mrs. Fiske will find a vehicle worthy of her best efforts. This hope is not based on sentimental grounds either, for Mrs. Fiske is not one of those actresses who are given to self advertisement and popularity seeking. It is based upon the conviction that she is a striver after what most players would consider the unattainable and that in success or in failure she is always the conscientious, uncompromising artist.

It will seem like old times along Broadway next season if, as is now rumored, De Wolf Hopper, with Digby Bell as his leading assistant in Charles Klein's musical comedy, "Pickwick;" Jeff De Angelis in the new operetta,

VIOLA ALLEN IN "THE HUNCHBACK."

"The Emerald Isle," and Francis Wilson in a work which has not yet been given a name should be appearing simultaneously at different theaters along the "alley!" This quartet represents the cream of our comic operatic talent, and it only requires the addition of the name of Thomas Q. Seabrooke to make it a quintet of as fine a set of entertainers in a certain line as the world can boast.

It's strange about at least two of this crowd, Bell and Seabrooke. A decade or more ago, when Bell was the star of Adam Itzel, Jr.'s, "The Tar and the Tartar," there were thousands of persons in this city who were convinced that he was destined to take rank as the leading operatic comedian of the country. But it was not to be, and in "Pickwick," in which, by the way, he will attempt to illuminate the characteristics which made Samuel Weller unique and lovable at the same time, Bell will have the first good opportunity that has come his way in many a year.

Seabrooke when he scored such an unusual success in "The Isle of Champagne" was thought to have definitely arrived. And he had, too, though he didn't stay long. His "Tabasco" rather shook the faith of his admirers, and he was compelled to give up the comic opera struggle and betake himself to the musical comedy field. There is a good deal of competition there, and Seabrooke was to a great extent forgotten. Now there is talk of trying him again as a star in comic opera. It cannot be doubted that he is as artistic and at the same time as funny as any man in America in this line of work, but it is a question whether this field is not a trifle overworked.

ONE OF NATURE'S LAWS.

Action and Reaction That Produce a Fit of the Blues.

Probably in two cases out of three the blues are caused by one's physical state. If a man has overworked or has been under any unusual strain of excitement or has worried a great deal or has been for a while in a state of joy and elation—all of which require an expenditure of energy—he is very likely to have the blues and to be in low spirits by way of reaction.

The body is a machine which can do a certain amount of work and no more. If it does a great deal today, it must do less tomorrow and thereby make up for today's extravagance. If a man takes one glass of whisky, the slight stimulus that he feels will be followed as night follows day, by an exactly equivalent sinking of the spirits. If he has been thoroughly and gayly drunk his recovery will be attended by corresponding melancholia and misery.

When a man has the blues, he ought to consider that he is merely an exponent of one of nature's laws and that he has no right to harass others with complaints. Some men are not pleased unless they communicate their unpleasant moods to all about them. They become sulky and cross with their wives and children, and they throw a gloom over their household. Such conduct is very selfish.

A man in the blues ought to take some pills and a good long walk all alone or with some companion of steadfast cheerfulness. Lucky it is for him if he has a wife who will not be down cast and who can restore him to cheerfulness without spoiling him.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Funny Signs of the Times.

Some persons find as much fun in reading signboards as others do in reading the comic papers. Here are a few oddities reported by observing travelers, the first of which evidently was displayed in front of a butcher's shop:

"I kill myself every Tuesday and Friday."

"Take notis when this board is out of site the river is dangerous."

"Widow with large family wants washing by the week."

"Ladies and gents sold and healed."

"This is the old shop just come from above."

"A large stock of ladies' hose, pure cashmere, to be cleared 25 cents the pair. They won't last long at this price."

"Abominable belts made to order."

"Closed for the day owing to funeral of proprietor's wife and who will carry on as usual tomorrow morning."—New York Press.

Saved In Installments.

A couple of Scottish ferrymen rowing a somewhat dandified Englishman out to a steamer at one of the Clyde watering places saw to their consternation the man tumble over the gunwale of the boat into the water.

The foremost ferryman dropped his oar and made a grab at the man as he rose to the surface, catching him by the wig, which came away in his hand.

Throwing this into the boat impatiently, he made a second grab, catching the collar of his shirt, when the collar and front came away in his hands.

Casting these away from him in great disgust, he cried, "Man, Donald, come here quick and help's to save as muckle o' this man as ye can, for he's comin' awa' in bits!"

Chinese Women Menders.

In nearly every city in China women are to be found sitting in the streets busily plying their trade as menders of clothing. Their knowledge of needlecraft is generally limited to what is called "running," and therefore they are not much patronized by English or American travelers. They are, however, never without patrons among Chinese tradesmen, who are often natives of other districts and have no one else in the city to mend a rent for them, their wives and children being left at home. For this class of customers the skill of the itinerant sewing woman is sufficient, and to them it is a great convenience to have the necessary repairs rapidly made while they stand by and wait.

One By Government.

The proposed construction of war vessels in navy yards has been very thoroughly threshed over in the debate on the naval appropriation bill. There is a great deal to be said on both sides of the question. Foreign countries that have tried the experiment find the cost of government built over private contract ships show quite an increase, in some cases as high as 25 per cent. The inclination of congress seems to be to give the experiment another full and fair trial, and from the results determine what our future policy shall be. Accordingly, in the present bill, arrangements to that end are made by placing discretionary power in the hands of Secretary Moody. He must have at least one of the battleships provided in this session's bill constructed in a government yard, and if he deems it best, he can order all vessels authorized so built. The outcome is awaited with much interest on both sides of the controversy.—Washington correspondent of Boston Advertiser.

Golden Wedding.

News comes from Newport, R. I., that Capt. and Mrs. Enoch G. Lathrop, natives of Braintree, where they were married, observed the 50th anniversary of their wedding there yesterday.

Both are in excellent health. Capt. Lathrop is 67 years old and Mrs. Lathrop is 66. With them were their five children, who include Orlando F. of Boston and William T., an engineer on the Old Colony system.

Capt. Lathrop has Indian blood in his veins, and is very proud of it. He is a direct descendant of the Indian tribes of New Hampshire. When 12 years of age he left Braintree and for a long while followed the sea.

For 24 years he has been in the employ of the Old Colony company and their successors, the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad company, as an engineer. He was formerly a wharf builder, and built the Old Colony docks here.

MAN AND MARRIAGE.

Sage Advice About Methods Before and After the Ceremony.

In "Her Royal Highness Woman" Max O'Rell gives some very sage advice to men as to what they should and should not do both before and after marriage. The following extracts will be of interest to readers:

Never marry a woman richer than you, one taller than you or one older than you. Be always gently superior to your wife in fortune, in size and in age, so that in every possible way she may appeal to you for help or protection either through your purse, you strength or your experience in life. Marry her at an age that will always enable you to play with her all the different characteristic parts of a husband—a chum, a lover, an adviser, a protector and just a tiny suspicion of a father.

However ill you may speak or think of women, you will always find a woman able to do it better than you.

Never let your ladylove see you without a collar—no, not even the very wife of your bosom. A man's head without a collar is like a bouquet without a holder.

Never let her see you asleep. Maybe you sleep with your mouth open. If you are married, let your wife sleep first. When you are quite sure she is off, let yourself go, and be careful to wake up first in the morning.

Bismarck on Champagne.

Years ago, when Baron Hengelmuller was assistant secretary of the Austrian embassy at Berlin, Bismarck gave a dinner to which the baron was invited. All the guests except Von Hengervar drank champagne, and Bismarck, noting the young man's abstinence, asked the reason therefor.

"I have not yet earned the right so to indulge," was the reply.

"Ah, that will not do," remarked Bismarck; "it is allotted to every ablebodied man in this world to consume in his lifetime 10,000 bottles of champagne. So you should begin now lest you fail to secure your just portion."

"If 10,000 bottles be the allotment for the ordinary man," responded the young diplomatist, bowing to the Iron Chancellor, "your excellency, being an extraordinary man, should have double allowance, and I therefore take great pleasure in awarding my share to you."

"I thank you," Bismarck replied, "but permit me to inform you that without waiting for your grand renunciation I have already passed the 20,000 mark."—Saturday Evening Post.

She'll Sing Hereafter.

A charming young lady of Kensington who glories in the possession of a wealth of bright auburn colored hair is the teacher of a Sunday school class. On a recent Sabbath the rector made the announcement of a hymn to be sung and, rising, waved his hands, and the organ pealed forth.

"Now," said he, "ready—sing."

A small and precocious youth in the young woman's class said:

"Why don't you sing, Miss Frisbee?"

"Me? Oh, I never sing," replied the teacher, smiling her prettiest.

"But," exclaimed the boy, "the minister says you must. Didn't he just say 'Now, Reddy, sing?'"

Smelling salts and numerous other restoratives had to be used to bring the teacher out of her faint.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Choleric Versus Quiet Natures.

Clarendon, says The Schoolmaster, made careful observation when he wrote: "Angry and choleric men are as ungrateful and unsociable as thunder and lightning, being in themselves all storm and tempests; but quiet and easy natures are like air weather, welcome to all and acceptable to all men; they gather together what the others disperse and reconcile all whom the others incense; as they have the good will and the good wishes of all other men, so they have the full possession of themselves, have all their own thoughts at peace and enjoy quiet and ease in their own fortune, how strait soever it may be."

Honest Praise.

An honest compliment was that paid to M. de Vendome, who, while commanding the French army in Italy, dispatched a young nobleman to announce to his master the victory which he had gained at Suzzara. The latter, while attempting to describe the battle, became several times much confused in his narrative, when, although the king preserved his gravity, the Duchess of Burgundy, who was present, laughed so heartily that at last the young gentleman said, "Sire, it is easier for M. de Vendome to win a battle than for me to describe it."

Our Fears.

It is not what a thing is, but what we think it is, that frightens us. A man walks within an inch of death without knowing it and therefore without trembling, and then his hair stands on end at some empty noise as harmless as the buzzing of a fly.

COUNTRY'S INDUSTRIES

Will Be Paralyzed If Miners Carry Out Their Plans

A SPECIAL CONVENTION

To Be Called to Endeavor to Have Bituminous Workers Strike In Sympathy—Would Directly Affect 449,000 Men and Tie Up Railroads

Hazleton, Pa., May 17.—The anthracite mine workers in convention yesterday in order to win their strike, unanimously decided upon a plan that, if carried into successful operation, will practically tie up the industries of the country, paralyze business and inconvenience the people throughout the United States. It is their desire that a special national convention of the United Mine Workers of America be called as soon as practicable for the purpose of endeavoring to have all the bituminous mine workers, both organized and unorganized, involved in the anthracite miners' struggle. This announcement was officially made by President Mitchell in a statement giving the result of the deliberations of the delegates in convention.

If a special national convention is called and the miners succeed in their object it would directly affect 449,000 men, who are employed in and about the coal mines of the country. Coal would soon become scarce and this would ultimately result in the tying up of railroads and all sorts of industries that use large quantities of the fuel.

It is doubted by some interested persons here who are closely watching developments that such a stupendous movement could be brought about, for the reason that the business interests of the country would not stand idly by and permit such a plan to be put into effect.

The striking miners are enthusiastic over the convention's action and most of them can see only success in the proposition.

An absolutely trustworthy source is authority for the statement that the special convention will be called, probably at Indianapolis. According to the rules of the United Mine Workers a petition signed by five mine workers' districts is necessary to call a special convention. The three anthracite districts are unanimous for such a meeting and it is likely that the West Virginia district and the Michigan district will consent to the issuance of the call. The two latter districts now have small, but stubborn, strikes in progress, and they will doubtless consent to the call so that they too may receive the benefit of whatever may be accomplished.

National Secretary-Treasurer Wilson says that within the next two or three weeks, regardless of the special convention, 30,000 men in Virginia and West Virginia and from 15,000 to 20,000 in the soft coal region of central Pennsylvania will again be on strike.

They will be called out, he says, for the purpose of forcing the mine owners to give them higher wages and incidentally to help the anthracite workers. These men, he says, are partly organized, local unions having been established in all localities in those regions, and he feels confident that the non-union men will respond to the strike call as readily as did the anthracite miners in the fall of 1900.

The correspondent of The Associated Press made an effort to learn what steps if any had been taken in the direction of a sympathy strike of other trades unions. It was learned that some of the labor leaders of the country had informally discussed such a movement some time before the present strike was inaugurated, but that no definite plan presented itself. Such a strike, it was thought, would probably not be inaugurated for several months and only in the event that the union was in danger of going to pieces.

The matter of calling out the engineers, firemen and pump runners from the anthracite mines to allow the workings to become flooded and damaged was left by the convention to the discretion of the national and district officers. What they will do cannot be definitely learned, but it seems probable that they will be permitted to remain at work for the present at least.

Notwithstanding that 145,000 men have been idle for the last five days no disturbances of any kind have been reported here.

The coal companies continue their preparations for a long struggle. Mine mules are being brought to the surface and placed at pasture, clerks and other employes are being laid off and other steps have been taken to keep down expenses. The coal carrying railroad companies are laying off coal train crews every day and the local electric railway company, which has lines to all the surrounding towns, has reduced its service 50 percent and placed its employes on half time.

Business generally is stagnant and coal in this section is becoming scarce.

Gotham's Meat Disturbance

New York, May 17.—The Jewish butchers closed up tightly with the commencement of the Jewish Sabbath last night and this probably prevented serious trouble in the Jewish section of the lower east side. The rioters confined their attention for the most part last night to the restaurants which had been serving meat with meals during the day. Several of these were attacked by mobs. Few arrests were made.

Players and Magnates

Comparison of Past and Present Baseball Conditions

Comiskey and Griffith

BASEBALL by injunction seems to be the ruling feature of the national game these days, and unless magnates and players learn to avoid taking their troubles to the courts the long suffering public will spend its shining shekels on some other sport.

If this state of affairs continues, baseball clubs will begin their seasons

by signing lawyers instead of players, for the former appear to have attained a more prominent position in the game than the men that make the runs.

Public opinion regarding these disputes is gradually shifting over to the players' side. The magnates have heretofore had things very much their own way, and now that their relations to the rank and file are being gradually revealed the "hired man" is justly being awarded the sympathy long due him.

The law of this land never backed a more unequal document than the contracts to which players were bound in the old days before the American league forced an issue and afforded players a chance by which the one sided contracts could be abolished. The National league, when it stood alone as the premier baseball organization and controlled the minor leagues, was a good example of the trust. Count up the players who found employment in the leagues which were banded together under the national agreement and you had a small army of men, not day laborers, but men who were better than the ordinary person in a baseball way. Polite slavery was what these men underwent, for they had practically nothing to say as to where they played or for whom, and salary was a matter that was controlled by the club that employed them.

Former Playing Conditions.

Before the American league began to sap the strength of the National the players were graduated from the minor leagues into one of the big clubs. If one of these clubs wanted a promising player in the minor leagues, it served notice on the other National league clubs, which kept their hands off in accordance. No matter whether that particular player had strong objections to playing for the club which claimed him, he had either to do that or quit playing league ball. He could not even stay in the club from which he was drafted. He couldn't go to other clubs when he was thus claimed, for he couldn't get a position unless his "title" was clear. He couldn't go to any other National league club than the one which drafted him.

Suppose he joined the club. Suppose, further, that he was satisfied with his berth. He could be transferred to another city a thousand miles away whether he wanted to go or not. Such things often occurred, and the player often had to change his place of residence at considerable cost to himself. He had no voice in the matter. And, above all, there was that much hated ten day clause. He might give satisfaction for a number of years with another club, and he might sign with one club for less money than he could get from another; still the key to the handcuffs remained in the hands of the club owner, who could turn him adrift in ten days.

While many players were fortunate, there are many others who claim that their professional careers were practically blasted by the weapons at the hand of the magnates. A player's salary could be cut in two, but he was without resource. If he wasn't released, he was not at liberty to play with other National league clubs. He couldn't even go back to the minors unless he had his release. He was confronted with the alternative of bowing his head to the inevitable or quitting baseball and going to work on the railroad section.

Jimmy McAleer's Grievance.

Instances of indignities suffered by players can be told by every old player. Jimmy McAleer, now commander of the Browns and an old running mate of Burkett in Cleveland, once had $500 taken off his salary in the middle of the season, and his hands were so thoroughly tied that he could not do anything. If he didn't like it, he could quit baseball, for he couldn't go to any other club, not even in the minor leagues. On the other hand, there was the ten day release clause and, worse yet, the perpetual contract, which bound a player to one club as long as that club chose to hold him. The contract read "successive years," and the magnates always saw to it that the reservation notice was promptly served each fall, that the player might have no excuse to break away. Where was the equity in that contract?

The case of the Philadelphia players is proof that these men were only waiting for a chance to get even. The Quakers played good ball and were always up in the race. Everybody supposed they were satisfied, yet the moment the opportunity offered they deserted Colonel Rogers like rats from a sinking ship. Would they have done this if they had been satisfied or had been well treated? It was not done because of a desire to go to other cities, as a number of players remained in Philadelphia with the other team.

Lauds Clark Griffith.

Charles Comiskey, the Chicago American league magnate, has one favorite topic of conversation, and that topic is Clark Griffith. Comiskey praises his pitcher-manager to the limit. It is probable that none of the managers of the American league teams enjoys the confidence of the employers more than does the White Stocking manager.

"I have got a treasure in Griffith," remarks "Commy." "You see, there are many ways of bringing out the good in a man. The best way, according to my notion, is to let him bring it out himself. Just give him a chance. He'll do the rest, usually.

"When Griffith was over on the west side with the Nationals, he was not doing the work he was capable of. I knew it, and he knew it. When I went to get him to come over with my team, I offered to make him captain. I knew him years ago, before he was as old at the game as he is now, and I knew he had it in him. I told him he would have to do good work if he came over.

"Well, he came over with me. I told him what I wanted done, and he did it. You never saw such a change in a man in your life. Look how he worked last year. Now, I know if I don't go with the team they will play as good ball as they would if I were there watching them. I know when they are playing their best, and they know it, and so does Griffith. I never made a trip around the circuit with them last year, but they won out, didn't they? Well, I guess that Grif will know more this year than last, and, except for the usual overseeing that I will do, Grif will bring them around all right."

JOHN A. GARVIN.

[Crack pitcher of Yale university.]

Boston Beef Men Receive a Visit From United States Marshal

Boston, May 17.—Steps taken by United States officers here yesterday are believed to indicate that Boston may have a beef hearing. A United States marshal was sent down into the market section of the city to request representatives of the beef interests to attend a conference at the office of United States District Attorney Moulton. It is said that the beef men at once consulted counsel and that they were advised to decline the invitation. Accordingly many sent word to the district attorney that they would not appear, and only two attended the conference. Mr. Moulton and Assistant District Attorney Casey received them. Each meat man was accompanied by counsel. The result of the conference was not disclosed. It is expected that proceedings ancillary to those instituted in western courts will be begun here. In the meantime the federal officers in Massachusetts wish to get all the information possible for the government's side of the case.

Pathetic Plea For Mercy

Boston, May 17.—Moved by the earnest pleading for mercy for her uncle, Gustave L. Duncan of Worcester, by his niece, Judge Bond yesterday postponed action in the case until after the trial of the man who is jointly charged with a penal offense with Duncan. Duncan is a tailor, a cripple, and claims that he had taken a drink and did not know that he committed the offense for which he was arrested. The young woman said that Duncan had been a father to her since her parents died, had given her every comfort, and that since his arrest she had been compelled to support herself. She knelt before the judge as she implored him to release her uncle, and seemed grateful when the court announced his decision to suspend judgment.

To Teach Practical Technology

Boston, May 17.—Dr. Louis Duncan of New York has been appointed head of the department of electrical engineering and Professor Locke of New Haven assistant professor of analytical chemistry at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Dr. Duncan has lately been connected with the Manhattan Elevated Railway company. The changes are part of the plan to secure instructors who have been identified with large, practical enterprises, thereby bringing the school into close touch with every-day affairs.

To Entertain Frenchmen

Newport, R. I., May 17.—The city council last night made a special appropriation for the entertainment of the French delegation appointed by President Loubet to visit Newport on Memorial day and place a wreath on the grave of Admiral Determay, commander of the French fleet in the Revolutionary war, who died off this port and was buried in Trinity churchyard.

Costly Fire In Church

Somerville, Mass., May 17.—The Perkins Street Baptist church, on Cross street, was damaged to the extent of $8000 by fire yesterday, which is supposed to have started from faulty electric light wiring. The church was one of the most beautiful buildings in the city.

Bowdoin In Second Place

Lewiston, Me., May 17.—The University of Maine won first place in the Maine Intercollegiate athletic meet yesterday, scoring 60 points; Bowdoin, 57 points; Bates, 8; Colby, 1. This is the first time Bowdoin has failed to secure first position in these meets.

Brakeman Killed, Conductor Hurt

Brockton, Mass., May 17.—A derailed shifting engine in the freight yard here struck Herbert Gove, a brakeman, and Henry N. Shepard, a freight conductor. Gove was so badly mangled that he died. Shepard was seriously, but not necessarily fatally hurt.

Second Death From Fire

Dover, N. H., May 17.—James May, who was seriously burned last week when the residence of Albert Guppy was destroyed, died yesterday. He was 63 years of age. Mrs. Sarah Roberts, aged 87, perished in the fire.

Civilians and Soldiers Fight

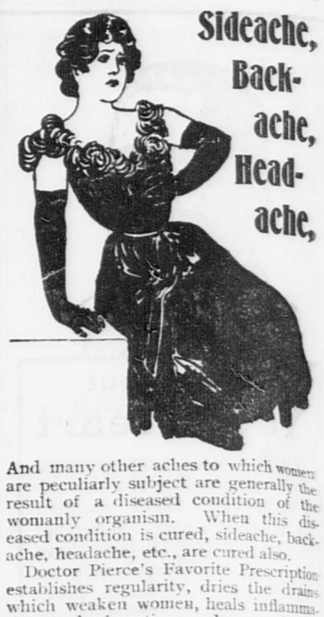

Kingston, Ja., May 17.—A somewhat serious riot occurred here between soldiers and civilians. Parties from the West Indian (colored) regiment made a sortie from the camp and attacked people in the streets with razors lashed to sticks. The civilians used nail-studded clubs. Numbers on both sides were injured. The riot was quelled by military pickets and the police.

Sideache, Backache, Headache,

And many other aches to which women are peculiarly subject are generally the result of a diseased condition of the womanly organism. When this diseased condition is cured, sideache, backache, headache, etc., are cured also.

Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription establishes regularity, dries the drains which weaken women, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. When these diseases are cured the aches they cause are also cured.

"I will drop you a few lines to-day to let you know that I am feeling well now," writes Miss Annie Stephens, of Belleville, Wood Co., West Va. "I feel like a new woman. I took several bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and of the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I have no headache now, no backache, and no pain in my side any more. No bearing-down pain any more. I think that there is no medicine like Dr. Pierce's medicine. I thank you very much for what you have done for me—your medicine has done me much good."

The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a book containing 1008 pages, is given away. Send 21 one-cent stamps for expense of mailing only, for the book in paper covers, or 31 stamps for the volume bound in cloth. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Coal Strike and Unfavorable Weather Handicap Business

New York, May 17.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Weather and wages continue the only seriously disturbing factors in the business situation. Work was suspended in the authracite coal mines on Monday, and, although the interruption may be terminated at any time, it involves a vast army of men, including transporting interests and others closely allied. The loss in wages must soon be felt by storekeepers in that vicinity.

Bank exchanges do not reflect the increased volume of legitimate trade at this city, owing to the fact that last year's clearings were distorted by a stock speculation about three times as large as during the last week.

Footwear manufacturers at the east report an increased volume of orders from western jobbers, but wholesalers in the principal eastern centres are placing few fall contracts. Retailers are only sending moderate duplicate orders for summer goods.

Domestic trade in cotton goods is steady, with supplies in strong hands, but export business is dull. More liberal deliveries of woolen goods are reported, showing that fewer looms are idle.

In Congress

Washington, May 17.—An effort was made by Mr. Lodge in the senate yesterday to induce the minority to fix a time when a vote might be taken on the Philippine government bill, but it was unsuccessful. Mr. McLaurin concluded his speech in opposition to the present Philippine policy of the government, which, he maintained, was responsible for all the ills that had come to the United States in the islands. Mr. Deboe supported the pending measure, maintaining that the policy outlined by McKinley ought to be followed to the end.

The house had another lively day of debate, Philippine atrocities and the Schley case coming in for considerable attention. The naval appropriation bill received little attention.

Not Sanguine of Peace

London, May 17.—Joseph Chamberlain received a rousing reception from the Liberal-Unionist association at Birmingham last night. In his address Mr. Chamberlain said in part: "I wish I could tell you that the great war is coming to an end. I am hopeful that thi is so, but not sanguine. It may be that the proposals from the Boer leaders will not be such as we can accept. One thing is certain, the mistake of Majuba will not be repeated."

Court Trains Eliminated

London, May 17.—Their majesties' third court was held at Buckingham palace at 10 o'clock last night. Owing to the recent order concerning the dresses to be worn at court, only the ladies presented and those who presented them wore court trains. The unique spectacle was witnessed of many ladies making their bows to their majesties clad in dresses only a shade more gorgeous than ball gowns.

Extreme Penalty Hereafter

St. Andrews, N. B., May 17.—The Canadian department of marine and fisheries has ordered the release, on payment of $100 each, of three schooners seized last week for violation of the law against dynamite fishing. For future offenses forfeiture of the vessel will be exacted. The schooners seized were the American schooners Satellite and Nellie Guptill, and the Grand Manan sloop Zelma.

To Adorn Arsenal Grounds

Washington, May 17.—President Roosevelt has decided upon a site for the statue of Frederick the Great which Emperor William proposes to present to the people of the United States. He considers that it would be most appropriate to place the statue adjacent to the new war college to be established in Washington. This college is to be erected in the arsenal grounds.

Stars and Stripes Absent

Madrid, May 17.—Glorious weather prevailed here yesterday. The sun's rays poured down on the decorated streets, giving the city the gayest aspect possible. National colors everywhere predominate. There are a few British union jacks flying, but hardly any Stars and Stripes are visible. There was a brilliant banquet at the palace last night.

Prosperous Season Promised

St. Johns, May 17.—Fishing vessels which have returned here from the Grand Banks report large catches, in which a number of American vessels participated. The fishing season has opened very favorably, and American schooners expect to do well.

New System of Telegraphy

Berlin, May 17.—The German postal authorities are beginning experiments between Berlin and London with Donald Murray's 12-fold system of telegraphy. If these experiments show the system to be successful it will be permanently introduced.

Haytians Cooling Off

Port-au-Prince, Hayti, May 17.—The situation here has improved and is now quiet. The provisional government has arrested a number of men charged with having taken part in the attack on the palace.

Weather Conditions and Forecast

Almanac, Sunday, May 18.
Sun rises—4:21; sets—7:01.
Moon sets—2.17 a. m.
High water—8:30 a. m.; 8:45 p m.

Local showers have continued in the west and south, while from the Ohio valley eastward the weather remains fair. The weather will be generally fair in New England. On the coast winds will be fresh south to southwest.

A BOX OF GATORS.

Story of the Strange Eggs Little Clay Found on the Beach.

Little Clay Reess lived in Florida and he had fine times on the beach near his home. One day he was digging in the sand, when up came a queer little object. It was long and narrow and had a tough shell that bent and dented in Clay's fingers. He could not make out what it was. So he ran to Clinda, his black nurse, and showed it to her. Clinda laughed.

"Lawsy, honey," she said, "that ain't am er gator's aigg. Dig erway, an' yer'll done fin' er heap mo'."

So Clay dug away lustily, and, sure enough, up came more eggs with every shovelful of sand. Five times he filled his little bucket and carried them home to his mother until twenty-five eggs lay in the box she gave him to put them in. That night when Clay was in his white "nightie" and having his "loving time" with his mother he asked, "How came the eggs in the sand?"

"The mother gator hid them there," answered his mother as she rocked and cuddled her little boy.

"Doesn't the mother gator cuddle her eggs like the mother hen?" asked Clay.

"No, dear. She leaves them in the sand for the hot sun to hatch out."

"Well, I fink the mother gator is a very selfish thing," cried Clay, sitting up in his indignation.

"Oh, no," said his mother, smiling. "That is her way of taking care of them, the way God taught her. She can't cuddle her eggs like the mother hen. She has no soft feathers, and her hard skin would break the eggs if she sat on them. The nice warm sand cuddles them, and the sun helps to hatch them out. She takes good care of them. She often comes to look after her babies, and when they hatch out she finds food for them and will not let anything hurt them."

"Will she go to look at her eggs to-morrow day?" asked Clay.

"I think she will," said his mother.

"Then I'll take them all back," murmured the sleepy little fellow.

The box of eggs was put in a closet and neither Clay nor his mother thought of them again. A week later Clay went to the closet for some toys and heard a strange, rustling noise. He looked up and saw a box on a shelf with the cover dancing up and down.

"Oh, mother," cried Clay, dancing up and down himself in excitement, "come here, quick! Here is a box—all alive!"

His mother came running in, and there were a dozen tiny black snouts peeping under the box cover. Before she could even scream out popped a swarm of baby alligators and dropped down to the floor, where they scampered off in every direction. All the eggs had hatched, for the closet was behind a stove and the box in a warm place.

Such a time as there was! Clay jumped up and down, screaming with glee, but his mother climbed on top of a table to get out of the way of the alligators, who went running about as if in a hurry to investigate this new strange world in which they found themselves. Black Clinda came running in to see what was the matter.

Then for a hunt! The baby alligators hid under the furniture and burrowed under the carpets, popping out of every hole and corner. It was nearly a week before the last one was caught. Father Reess shook three out of his boot one morning, and Mother Reess pulled on her stocking and found one in the toe.

Clay thought they were the cunningest playfellows and begged hard to keep them. But when his mother told him that the mother gator would want her babies he consented to have them taken to the beach. His father let him keep six and made a pen for them in the back yard, with a small tank of water in it. Here Clay played with them, and they became very tame and seemed to know their little master. He was often seen with the whole lot swarming all over him. His mother could not bear to touch the creatures, though Clay assured her that their way of running up his arm and poking their black snouts into his face was their way of loving him. He kept his pets for a year. Then sharp white teeth began to come in their big mouths, and his father thought they might become dangerous playfellows, so one night they all disappeared, and Clay never saw them again. If he had been on the beach next day, he might have seen six young alligators scampering about as if they did not know what to make of their strange surroundings. I wonder if their mother knew them.—Congregationalist.

ZIP AND NANCY.

True Story of the Lifelong Friendship of a Cat and a Dog.

Zip was a pug dog, with eyes as green as emeralds. His constant companion was a cat called Nancy. They had been sincere friends for over twelve years. Zip was growing deaf, and his eyesight was beginning to fail him, while Nancy had lost the majority of her teeth, and a few gray hairs were becoming noticeable in her soft black fur.

When a very small kitten, Nancy was carried about by the dog, he gripping her firmly at the back of the neck. In return she would wash him as he lay before the fire, stroking him with her little tongue. They ate from the same dish at mealtime, and whatever Nancy had she willingly surrendered to the dog.

Zip always ran after the cats, and if in mistake he chased Nancy he would run into the house thoroughly ashamed of himself. One day a half starved looking cat appeared on the fence. Mrs. Webster, the lady owning Zip and Nancy, loved animals very much, and she took pity on the starved cat. As the day was Friday she had some fish in the house, which she gave to the cat. He greedily gulped it down and looked for more, which he received. When he was at last satisfied, he realized that he had found a good home and refused to go away. Mrs. Webster felt sorry for the cat and decided to keep him. She had now two cats and a dog. The strange cat was called Tom.

It was an ever to be remembered day when Tom entered that peaceable family. Quarrels followed, and poor Zip generally had a scratch on his nose given by the ever ready claw of Tom. The dog was very much afraid of this new cat and avoided him whenever it was possible. At last Zip died from old age. He went to his cozy little bed one night and never woke again. Tom seemed glad to be rid of the dog, but poor Nancy worried all the time. She would eat nothing and was slowly dying from sorrow. A little grave was dug in the back of the yard, and Zip was laid there to rest. Nancy often stole out and lay down beside the little mound.

One day Mrs. Webster could not find Nancy in the house and went into the back yard to look for her. There, by Zip's resting place, Nancy had stretched herself and died. That day another little grave was dug for Nancy, and there she and Zip rest together. Tom seems very much satisfied and is monarch of the household.—Josephine Church in New York Herald.

BRAINTREE.

Braintree's Old Home Week Committee held their second meeting at the Town house last Saturday evening. They voted to make Wednesday July 30th a holiday for Braintree.

The illustrated bird lecture in Monatiquot school hall Tuesday evening proved a much greater success than anticipated over two hundred being present. The lecture, written by Ralph Hoffman, was read by Miss Emma Keith and illustrated by stereopticon views of the different birds and their nests. Miss Keith supplemented some of the author's descriptions with remarks of her own, adding many good points not found in the lecture proper.

The Daughters of Rebekah held a most successful fair, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings in the Town Hall, which presented a very attractive appearance. The tables were arranged around the hall and prettily trimmed with crepe paper of different colors. The fair was well attended and the large number of useful and ornamental articles were well patronized.

The vespers at the First church last Sunday afternoon was the last in the series to be given for several months, and was the occasion of another crowded house, it being estimated that fully five hundred people were present. The talent was composed of Miss Rose Stewart, soprano, Mr. L. Willard Flint, bass and Mr. Arthur Raymond, organist.

Mrs. Jane M. Gushee celebrated her 80th birthday on Tuesday afternoon and evening, May 13th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Willie Simonds, South Braintree, where she resides.

Invitations are out for the reception to be given by the "Juniors'" of the High school, May 28 at Monatiquot Hall.

A stereoscopic lecture on "China" was given at the Baptist church Thursday evening by Rev. L. A. Gould, who served as a missionary to that country from 1887 to 1893.

In the baseball game between Randolph high and the Braintree high at Braintree Wednesday Randolph won 6—0.

Mr. G. D. Willis of Washington street is making some improvements on his already attractive family residence.

The employes at the tack factory of Stevens & Willis had a vacation of one day, last Saturday, the first in three years.

The new bass drum, snare drums and cymbals have been received at the headquarters of the Braintree Fife and Drum Corps.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Fisher have rented a house in Wollaston and will move there the last of this month. We hope they will return to Braintree in the near future.

Miss Coralyn Lang, contralto, will sing at All Souls' church Sunday morning.

A ping-pong tournament scheduled for May 30th at the Cochato club is now open for entries.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bond of River street are rejoicing over a little daughter who came Wednesday morning.

There will be a base ball game May 30th between the regular Cochato club team and the "Matrimonial Divinities."

Miss Raymond, daughter of Mr. Arthur M. Raymond the organist, is supplying the part of contralto in the First church choir, recently held by Miss Cora Lang.

The Bird club will meet next Monday afternoon at four o'clock with Miss Florence Burnham, corner of West and Tremont streets. All persons interested in birds are invited to be present.

Samuel Barker has bought out an express business in Wollaston and will move to that place next week.

The annual meeting of the J. P. S. A. for the election of officers will be held with Mrs. William Allen Wednesday evening, May 28.

Mrs. J. E. Wiksell, a resident of Bowditch street, a score or more years ago was in town Wednesday renewing former acquaintances.

Bertram Dexheimer graduated from the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy Thursday. Quite a number of his friends from here attended the graduating exercises.

The Union Veterans will take their tub out tonight for practice for the first time this year. The engine has been put in first-class shape by Captain W. F. Maybury.

Mr. C. Herbert Doane of Granite street holds the record as the long distance pedestrian of Rosedale. He recently walked from Braintree to Plymouth and on May 4th from Braintree to Lynn. He intends soon to make the trip to Providence.

Mr. E. Stanwood Hollis and Mr. Henry W. Doane attended a dinner Monday night at the Quincy house, Boston, given by Mr. N. E. Hollis and his associates in honor of F. E. Goddard.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

Colonial Theatre.

"The Strollers," now running with great success at the Colonial theatre, Boston, received exceptionally fine criticisms from the Boston dailies of April 29th. From comments gathered it seems to have made an honest success and a genuine hit. "The Strollers" in consequence will no doubt be booked throughout New England next season. The Herald said: At the Colonial theatre last evening Nixon and Zimmerman's company produced George W. Lederer's "musical drollery," "The Strollers," the first time this piece has been seen in Boston. It enjoyed a 10 weeks' run at the Knickerbocker theatre in New York last summer. Those who saw the play in New York, and who also saw it last night, must have been very agreeably surprised, for the present production is a better one than that which made a hit in the metropolis. There is some plot to the piece, not enough to bother, but more than is generally found in musical comedies and plays of that character, and it is a rather clever plot, too. The lines are bright and there is a liberal supply of good, clean, laughable fun in all of the three acts. The music is charming, tuneful, and catchy, without being too much of a jingle. Taken as a whole, play, music and company, both principals and chorus, the piece can be summed up best by the slang expression, "a corking good show," just the kind that should keep the Colonial filled as it was last night, during its entire engagement.

Boston Museum.

What may be conceded the most important engagement of the fast closing dramatic season in Boston, is that of the famous comedian, Mr. Dan Daily and the George W. Lederer organization in the big musical comedy success entitled "The New Yorkers" now playing at the Boston Museum, where, since the opening night, the performance has been witnessed by enormous audiences and the constant re-echo of laughter and enthusiastic applause. This organization comprises nearly one hundred people among whom are a score of the most prominent comedians, singers and actors ever gathered together in a company for the production of this class of entertainment. Mr. Dan Daly has been the main factor of more musical comedy successes than any comedian of the present day stage during the past decade. In his present play, "The New Yorkers," he is furnished with a character which reveals his best methods and gives him the fullest scope to be more Dalyesque than ever before. This performance will not be seen in any city in New England with the exception of Boston, and the engagement is a limited one. The usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees are in evidence.

DAN DALY

Castle Square Theatre.

The Castle Square theatre management promises an interesting production the coming week in the presentation of the amusing comedy "The Butterflies," by Henry Guy Carleton, always a favorite playwright with the Boston public. The comedy had a most successful New York production a half dozen or more years ago and has been a favorite with stock companies since then. Three love stories are told in the development of the plot and the feminine participants supply the cause for the title chosen by the authors. Many romantic scenes and situations are made incidental to the working out of the story of the play and the characters have been taken from the social life of the present day, the scenes being laid in St. Augustine, Fla., and among the Berkshire Hills of western Massachusetts. The opportunities for effective stage settings will be improved and the cast of leading characters will be as follows: Frederick Ossian, Hallett Thompson; Andrew Strong, Charles Mackay; Hiram Green, John T. Craven; Barrington, James A. Keane; Roscoe Bilser, William J. Hasson; Coddle, Lindsay Morison; Mrs. Ossian, Jennie Kendrick; Mrs. Beverly Stuart-Dodge, Evelyn Carter; Miriam, Lavinia Shannon; Suzanne Elise, Mary Sanders; Annette, Alexia Durant.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Nothing offered at Keith's for a long time has scored a bigger artistic hit than the Oriental dancing specialty entitled "A Scene in the Orient at Evening," and Prince Abbas, Ben Omar and the Princess Lalla Torquia have been unanimously voted the most graceful and unique terpsichorean artist who have ever been seen in the varieties. The act will be continued as the feature of the show for the week of May 26, and the following entertainers will also appear: Will Cressy and Blanche Dayne, in the charming rural play, "A Village Lawyer," Louis E. Granat, the great whistling soloist; Swift and Huber, musical comedians; the Rozinos, in an eccentric acrobatic act, introducing the original bounding billiard table; Fialkowski imitator of animals, and Press Eldridge, blackface humorist and singer. The Fadettes woman's orchestra, the best organization of female musicians in America, begins a summer engagement the week of June 2.

TODAY'S COURT.

The liquors seized from Santino Rizzi at Quincy and Dominico Colletti of Weymouth were forfeited.

Ernest Borden was sent to the State farm at Bridgewater for being a vagrant at Braintree.

GOULD BOYS ARE GREAT POLO PLAYERS.

One of the most interesting of recent polo events was the debut of George J. Gould's young sons, Jay and Kingdon, in a game with the Somerset team at Georgian Court, Lakewood, N. J. At the conclusion of the match H. L. Herbert and Benjamin Nicoll, two veterans at the game, pronounced them two of the most promising polo players in America today and said there was a great future before them.

While Kingdon is but fourteen years of age and his brother Jay only thirteen, they are already rated with a handicap of two by the Polo association, which is a higher rating than that of many men of mature age who have played the game for years.

That this rating is, if anything, too low was shown plainly in the record game between the first Lakewood team, of which the boys, with their father, are members, and the Somerset team, composed of members of the Stevens family of Bernardsville, N. J.

In this game the youngsters did most of the scoring for their side and were so active that Mr. Gould and Ben Nicoll, the other members of the team, were not called upon to extend themselves.

Such veteran players as H. L. Herbert, the secretary of the Polo association, and Mr. Nicoll have expressed the opinion that these youngsters will develop into the greatest players this country has ever seen. They say that the boys are already playing as well as Foxhall Keene did when at the age of sixteen he played on the American team against the English experts, some years ago.

What the veterans particularly admired in the work of the youngsters was their splendid handling of the mallet and the sound judgment at critical times in the contest with Somerset. The boys seemed to possess nerves of iron.

It is little wonder that the Gould boys are prodigies at polo. Since they were in kilts they have been accustomed to riding ponies and toying with the polo mallet on their father's beautiful field at Georgian Court. While only young in years, they are old in horsemanship and polo lore, so it is not strange that they are as much at home in the saddle as one of Buffalo Bill's cowboys.

A SEA CAPTAIN'S STORY

Of Terrible Experience of Sailors at St Pierre

THE VOLCANO'S UPHEAVAL

Came So Quickly That the Roddam Could Not Escape the Awful Rain of Hot Ashes—Sea Fairly Turned Into a Boiling Caldron

New York, May 19.—The Norton line steamer Etna arrived here yesterday from the River Plate via St. Lucia, where she called for coal on May 10.

"At St. Lucia on May 11th," says Captain Cantell, "I went on board of the steamer Roddam, which had escaped from the terrible volcanic eruption at Martinique three days before. The Roddam was covered with a mass of fine bluish gray dust or ashes of cement-like appearance. In some parts it laid two feet deep on the decks. This matter had fallen in a red hot state all over the steamer, setting fire to everything it struck that was burnable, and when it fell on the men on board burned off limbs and large pieces of flesh. The scene of ruin was deplorable.

"I visited the captain of the Roddam in the hospital at St. Lucia, where he gave me an account of his terrible experience. The captain was talking to the vessel's agent, when he saw what appeared to be an enormous black cloud, like a wall with patches of fire in it, approaching the sea from the land. With it came an immense tidal wave of boiling water, accompanied by a loud and terrible noise. He shouted 'Take shelter' to the crew. Immediately the steamer was caught and tossed over on her side, almost capsizing. Darkness fell like a pall and volumes of red hot matter showered down while the air was thick with sulphurous fumes and dust. The sea was a confused mass of boiling mud. Fire broke out in different parts of the ship. Screams, groans and shouts of agony from the injured people mingled with the terrible noise of boiling water and rushing air, and this, with the falling fire, caused a most horrible confusion. This shock lasted for a few minutes. The captain of the Roddam signalled to start the engines at full speed. When the engines started it was found that the steering gear had become disabled and could not be worked. For more than an hour the Roddam's engines were worked with the hope of bringing her head away from the land. Once she got dangerously near the steamer Roraima. Both vessels were in flames. Some of those aboard jumped into the boiling water; some fell dying to the deck. All this time the red hot matter was falling and the water was hissing and steaming dense masses of vapor. Smoke and dust filled the air and poisonous fumes spread about.

"After some time the Roddam's steering gear moved a little and enabled the captain to head her out to sea and he managed to steer her a little distance from the land. As the air cleared the scene on board of the ill-fated Roddam became all the more ghastly. The ship steamed on through thick hot dust. The screams from the injured became more audible. Some rushed frantically about with their clothes on fire and large pieces of flesh burned from their arms, others in their agony laid writhing in the red hot dust.

"In about two hours the air became gradually clear. An investigation of the casualties on board showed that besides the captain, who was frightfully injured, only two engineers, two sailors and the boatswain were able to do duty.

"Fire was still burning about the ship and the rigging was in flames. The captain reached the island of St. Lucia, 45 miles distant, at 6 o'clock in the evening of May 8. In the time occupied on this terrible voyage the experience of the survivors was still worse than that already gone through. The captain, suffering the greatest agony, succeeded in navigating his vessel safely to the port of Castries, St. Lucia, with 18 dead bodies lying on the deck and human limbs scattered about. I do not understand how he kept up; yet when the steamer arrived at St. Lucia and medical assistance was procured, this brave man asked the doctors to attend to the others first and refused to be treated until this was done.

"My interview with the captain brought out this account. I left him in good spirits and receiving every comfort. The sight of his face would frighten anyone not prepared to see it."

Natives Taking Big Chances

Paris, May 19.—A dispatch from Fort de France dated May 17, says that during the previous night 15 violent detonations from Mt. Pelee were heard, and that they were accompanied by lightning which lit up the entire island. The eruption redoubled in violence and for the moment a second catastrophe was feared. New craters are forming in the neighborhood of Le Precheur. In spite of the danger which threatens them, concludes the dispatch, the refugees from the northern part of the island are beginning to return to their homes.

Under Close Guard

Montreal, May 19.—Messrs. Greene and Gaynor spent a quiet Sunday at the Windsor Hotel yesterday. Advantage was taken of the beautiful weather for a drive under escort of their zealous protectors. The prisoners are still in the custody of the extradition court and subject to its decision.

Women Take Part In Riots

New York, May 19.—Kosher rioting was transferred to the borough of the Bronx Saturday night. Women threw into the street meat that had been bought of kosher butchers, the women taking it away from persons who had purchased it. The attacking party denounced the butchers for raising the price of their meat. The trouble did not end until five women were arrested. Another crowd gathered on the lower east side to attack an open shop and was not dispersed until a squad of police drove it away. The officers also dispersed a crowd of 5000 assembled in meeting in Rutgers square. Still another meeting in W. H. Seward Park was broken up by the officers.

Martinique Victims Prayed For

Paris, May 19.—At the close of high mass in all the Roman Catholic churches of Paris yesterday funeral psalms were chanted and prayers for the dead were said in memory of those who perished in the Martinique disaster. Appropriate services for the Martinique victims were held in all churches throughout France yesterday and collections to aid the sufferers were taken up. The performance of Barnum & Bailey's circus at Toulous added $3080 to the Martinique fund.

Easley Visits Mitchell

Hazleton, Pa., May 19.—The visit of Ralph M. Easley to strike headquarters and his conference with President Mitchell late Saturday night is the only incident of any importance that claims the attention of the labor leaders. As neither Mr. Easley nor Mr. Mitchell will say anything regarding their meeting, there is much speculation as to the object of the visit of the secretary of the Civic Federation.

Dattos Are Submitting

Manila, May 19.—General Chaffee returned yesterday from Lake Lanao, Island of Mindanao. He said he saw several Moro dattos while there and had most satisfactory interviews with them. Nearly all of them claim to entertain friendly feelings toward the United States. General Chaffee is not prepared to say that there will be no more fighting in Mindanao.

No More Supplies Needed

Washington, May 19.—In view of Consul Ayme's report to the effect that enough relief stores are either on the scene or bound for the Volcano stricken islands in the West Indies, it is probable that this government will now abate its efforts in behalf of the sufferers and that no more supplies, at least, will be shipped from this country.

Not Ready to Surrender

London, May 19.—A dispatch from Pretoria says that about 160 Boer leaders are assembled at Vereeniging and that their demeanor leads one to suppose that they will vote in favor of hostilities, but the fact that the voting by ballot might turn the balance to the side of peace.

No Respect For Sheriff's Seals

Paris, May 19.—The Chateau des Vives, the property of Mr. and Mrs. Humbert (interested in the great Humbert-Crawford lawsuit) was entered by burglars Saturday night, who broke the seals of the sheriff, which had been affixed to the property, and stole pictures of great value.

CRAZED BY JEALOUSY

Young Woman Takes Life of the Man She Loved

FOUND HE WAS MARRIED

After He Had Been Paying Attention to Her For Some Time—Visited His Home, Called Him to the Door, and Fired Three Shots at Him

South Framingham, Mass., May 19.—Miss Nina Danforth, the deformed girl of West Newton, who, after ringing his door-bell at midnight Saturday night, shot and killed Andrew J. Emery, a fireman on the Boston and Albany railroad, as he opened the door at his home at 32 Hartford street in answer to her summons, passed a restless night and day under guard of the police at the Old Colony house, where she was taken after the shooting.

She was hysterical most of the night and at times yesterday, and has complained of terrible headaches. Although she has shown few signs of weakening yet and has talked but little with the officers, it is feared that she may utterly collapse before she is arraigned for a preliminary hearing.

She has said but little to Officer Coyne, who has been detailed as her guard, except that she has no regrets for her act. She will give no motive for committing the crime, but from disconnected remarks made to the officers it is believed that she and her victim had been on terms of intimacy and that the discovery that Emery had a family led her to commit the fatal deed.

A report is also current that Miss Danforth was desirous of obtaining funds to take her to New York city; that she met Emery on the street early Saturday evening and asked him for money, which he refused, stating, it is said, that he had not the money to give her.

Although small and frail in body Miss Danforth has an attractive face. She says she had known Emery a year and a half, but only recently learned that he had a wife and family. Andrew J. Emery had been in the employ of the Boston and Albany road 11 years, and for a time had a local run to Boston. It was while engaged on this run that he became acquainted with Miss Danforth. He was nearly six feet tall, of slight build and was regarded as industrious and of good habits.

The body of the victim was removed from the house to an undertaking establishment yesterday, where an autopsy was held by Drs. Richards and Morrow. The finding is that the first bullet entered Emery's body at the upper border of the fourth rib above the nipple on the left side; the second ball entered from a backward direction, outward and downward; the third bullet entered the right arm and spent itself in the bones of the elbow. The bullet was flattened like a cent.

Mrs. Emery and her children are prostrated by the shock of the tragedy.

Newton, Mass., May 19.—Insane jealousy of the wife of her victim, and desperate at the manner in which she had been wronged, is believed to have been the motive which led Miss Nina Danforth of this city to shoot and kill Andrew J. Emery, who, up to Saturday afternoon, she thought to have been unmarried. This is the belief of Miss Danforth's many friends in Newton, and it is shared by the members of her family. At the same time they are of the opinion that the girl was temporarily insane at the time she committed the deed.

Miss Danforth, while 22 years old, dresses and appears like a girl of 6 or 7 years. Since she was a year old she has suffered from spinal trouble, which has dwarfed her. She was born in West Newton, and on account of her deformity received the greater part of her education at home. She is of a very quiet and retiring disposition, spending the greater part of her time in the company of her family.

Eight Killed In Atlanta Riot

Atlanta, May 19.—An effort by officers of the law to arrest negro outlaws, who had barricaded themselves in a store, resulted in the most fatal riot in the history of the city. Eight men were killed, including three policemen, a white citizen and four negroes. Six people were wounded. All available policemen, with the military, called out by the governor, had all they could do to keep down a general riot. An entire block of buildings was burned before the conflict was terminated.

Havoc by Texas Tornado

Houston, Tex., May 19.—Reports received here indicate that a portion of the town of Goliad has been swept away by a tornado and that from 50 to 100 people have been killed. Considerable damage has also been done at Beeville by high winds. Both towns are close to the gulf coast and all telegraph wires by two routes are down.

A New Catholic Bishop

St. Augustine, Fla., May 19.—With the impressive ceremony which characterizes important functions in the Roman Catholic church Bishop W. J. Kenny was consecrated in the old cathedral yesterday, Cardinal Gibbons officiating.

CUBA'S INDEPENDENCE.

Cities and Towns of the Island Rejoice over Their Freedom.

Havana, May 19.—The festivities in celebration of the change of government became general all over the island yesterday. In almost every town and village an elaborate program of popular rejoicing had been arranged. Sunday here, as in all Spanish countries, is not given over to religious observances, but is distinctly a holiday devoted to recreation and amusement. In Havana appropriate services were held in the churches in the morning, but after midday the whole city gave itself up to frivolity. Games and amusements of all kinds were provided, the theatres were open, and there were horse races, baseball games, a circus performance and even an alleged bull fight.

But it was not until the hot tropical sun had set that the gaiety reached its climax. Then Havana was turned into a fairy city, with light and animation everywhere. The plazas glowed with myriad colored globes, the streets were illuminated and the air was filled with melody from bands stationed at various points. The cafes and restaurants were alive with people, drinking light wines and smoking cigarettes, and on the pardo, the fashionable driveway to the ocean front, were moving streams of pedestrians and low-wheeled carriages containing dark-eyed senoritas enjoying the cool breeze from the sea. Over all was a flood of moonlight, transforming the fronds of the royal palms into silver and the buildings of the city, nestling under the high walled fortresses, into alabaster. Two big masquerade balls given by the lower class Spanish clubs were in progress, and several thousand persons were present at each, making merry to the rhythm of the old Spanish music. Pyrotechnic displays arose from time to time above the city, and it almost seemed as if the old glory of Havana had returned.

Governor General Wood and the other American officers had a busy day, cleaning up odds and ends.

Railroads and Crops Suffered

St. Joseph, Mo., May 19.—The Chicago Great Western railway was a severe sufferer from a cloudburst Saturday night, much track and grading being destroyed. The train schedule was abandoned and it is expected through trains will not be run from either Chicago or St. Paul before tomorrow. The storm did immense damage to crops.

Dubuque, Ia., May 19.—A cloudburst occurred here, two inches of rain falling in one hour, causing bad railroad washouts.

Sparta, Wis., May 19.—A cloudburst Saturday night did much damage to farmers and railroad companies. Three bridges were carried away.

Hamilton's Big Drive

Vryburg, May 19.—The immunity which Lord Kitchener granted to the delegates to the Vereeniging conference of Boer leaders and their immediate followers from molestation by the British columns has not prevented the consummation of one of the biggest drives of the war, which has just wound up against the Bechuanaland blockhouse line. General Hamilton and other commanders have gathered in 400 prisoners, including 100 rebels and recalcitrant Boers, who have caused much trouble in the past. There were no British casualties.

Hoar Sympathizes With Ireland

Washington, May 19.—Senator Hoar presided and made the opening address at a largely attended and enthusiastic mass meeting here last night when the chief subject of talk was present conditions in Ireland. The senator was given a hearty reception as were also Messrs. Redmond and Devlin, who have been touring this country for some time in behalf of Ireland's cause. The sentiments of Senator Hoar were clearly in favor of Ireland.

Crooked Army Officials

Vienna, May 19.—It is reported from Cracow, Galicia, that $490,000 has been stolen from the headquarters of the general staff there. Two generals and several staff officers have been arrested in connection with the robbery.

Fire at Atlantic.

The alarm at 1.45 this afternoon from Box 62 was for a fire at the residence of W. P. Rolfe on Atlantic street. Mr. Rolfe was overcome by the smoke and had to be carried from the building. The loss did not exceed $50.

Social at Wollaston.

The last of the regular monthly socials of the Wollaston Unitarian society was, perhaps the merriest of them all. It was also the largest attended social of the season, probably because it was held at Brasee's hall and also on a Friday evening. The early part of the evening was given up to the children, and the little ones did enjoy themselves and took advantage of the opportunity to race and romp. From eight until ten dancing was indulged in, as well as a social chat by both young and old. As the evening was very warm, the appetizing refreshments were greatly appreciated.

Patrol Wagon Christened.

The new patrol wagon of the police department which went into service Saturday was called out six times before midnight. The first call came late in the afternoon from the box near the Fore River works, the party to take the first ride being a peddler who did not have a license. Later in the evening the wagon was called to City Square for a drunk. It was also called to Brewer's corner and South Quincy. Sunday it was used in making a liquor raid at Houghs Neck.

United Presbyterians.

Sunday's service of the United Presbyterian church of this city were conducted by the Rev. James A. Gordon of New York, a recent graduate of Princeton. Mr. Gordon is a fluent speaker and his sermons showed much thought and careful preparation. He will preach again in the church next Sunday and perhaps be a candidate for the pastorate, a successor for the Rev. W. W. Dornan not yet having been decided upon, although several names are under consideration. The members are remaining together loyally, and the receipts show no decrease. The Sunday School too has not been allowed to go back, but under the Superintendence of Mr. J. B. Sutherland, has been taught regularly and has at present a large enrollment of pupils.

Bicycle Stolen.

The coal office of J. F. Sheppard & Sons on Granite street was broken into early Saturday night, and Mr. Sheppard's bicycle was stolen. It was shortly before 9 o'clock that Officer Goodhue discovered that the back window and door of the office were open. He notified Mr. Sheppard, who had left the office only a few minutes before the break was discovered. An examination was made but the bicycle was the only thing missed. Just as Office Goodhue was coming away from the office he was notified that another bicycle had been stolen from in front of The Greenleaf. It is thought that that the wheels were taken by two parties who lived out of town and wanted to get home.

HONOR TO THE PROFESSION.

The Profession Took Pleasure in Honoring Miss Mary E. Dearborn.

Twenty-Five Years of Faithful Service as Teacher in the City of Quincy.

Complimentary Reception and Banquet at Hotel Vendome with Post Prandial Exercises.

The Mary E. Dearborn complimentary reception and banquet at Hotel Vendome, Boston, on Saturday was a very happy reunion of graduates of the Coddington school, past and present teachers, past and present superintendents, members and ex-members of Quincy School Committees, parents, friends and educational people, and also a grand testimonial to Miss Dearborn upon the completion of 25 years service as principal of the Coddington school.

The reception was scheduled from 5 to 6 P. M. but so numerous were Miss Dearborn's friends that more time was required.

In the receiving party were Miss Dearborn, Supt. George I. Aldrich of Newton (formerly superintendent at Quincy), Supt. and Mrs. F. E. Parlin.

Miss Dearborn wore a handsome gown of brocaded silk with a satin stripe, the front and sleeves were of white chiffon trimmed with black and white lace, and in the hair was a black and white aigrette. Mrs. Parlin was attired in a gown of gray silk.

The ushers were the principals of the Quincy schools, — Charles Sampson, Charles E. Finch, Jr., Chester H. Wilbar, Thomas B. Pollard, Robert S. Atkins, Austin W. Green, and James M. Nowland, assisted by Edward Southworth, Frederic W. Plummer, Charles Hardwick, Walter M. Packard, Ramon Burke, Elmer Ricker, Edward E. Marsh and others.

While it was a pleasant occasion for Miss Dearborn to greet so many friends, it was pleasant for graduates to meet former teachers and former superintendents, and it was very enjoyable for all.

It required the full capacity of the dining rooms of the hotel to accommodate the large attendance.

At the head table were: Miss Dearborn, Supt. F. E. Parlin, former superintendent George I. Aldrich, former superintendent H. W. Lull, Miss Lizzie E. Morse, Rev. E. N. Hardy, Edward Southworth, Chairman C. H. Porter of the School Committee, Dr. H. C. Hallowell, John O. Hall, Jr., and T. B. Pollard.

Flowers at the table were furnished by the reception committee and teachers of the Coddington school, together with a bunch of twenty-five American Beauty roses from Hon. and Mrs. Russell E. Sears. Other twenty-fives have also been received: Carnations from Mr. and Mrs. George A. Taylor, from Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Dornan; and Catherine Mermet roses from Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Doble; lilies of the valley from Mrs. Addie W. Tupper and Miss Carrie E. Spear.

Many letters of congratulation and regret have been received from educators, former teachers, pupils and other friends.

The menu was as follows, the service being excellent:

Latti Di Polla — Bread Sticks
Broiled Shad, Maitre d'Hotel
Sliced Cucumbers — Potatoe Croquets
Sirloin of Beef, Bordelaise
New String Beans — Roast Potatoes
Sweetbread Patties, Toulouse
Stuffed Tomatoes, Portugaise
Orange Frappe
Lobster Salad — Cheese Crackers
Frozen Sultana Roll, — Claret Sauce
Assorted Cakes
Fruit — Olives — Coffee

The postprandial exercises were to many the most enjoyable feature of the evening. Chairman Parlin said, that during the last 25 years Quincy had enjoyed a wide prominence because of the renaissance in education. In 1900 we met to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the coming of Col. Parker, and posterity will not forget to enroll him among prominent educators. But it was to Col. Parker's able lieutenants that much credit was due, and one of these was Miss Dearborn the heroine this evening. She was educated in a district, elementary and high school, attended a village academy and also a normal school in Ohio. Rich in intelligence and health, strong in character she has made the Coddington what it is. To her teaching was a profession and not a job, and she honored her profession. After 25 years the profession likes to honor her. The Coddington ranks high, and will not lower its standard while the present principal continues.

Ex-Supt. George I. Aldrich was introduced as toastmaster, and spoke of the years 1875-80 as years to remember. In 1875 Quincy had but 36 teachers. There was ozone in the air then, and questions to be settled. He looked back with peculiar pleasure. One has continued to grow young since—our heroine.

A letter was read from C. F. Adams of the School board of 1875 regretting his inability to be present. He made reference to Col. Parker and the new departure, and complimented Miss Dearborn as an efficent teacher.

A letter from Edwin W. Marsh of the same board was also read. It spoke of the writers visit to Miss Dearborn's former school in a New Hampshire town, and of her coming to Quincy. She has rounded out 25 years without a blemish.

Chairman Porter of the School Committee said Supt. Parlin, was given the same hearty support as in 1875-80. Miss Dearborn was at the head of her profession and deserved praise. Her influence was always on the right side and for the best.

Ex-Supt. Lull said that superintendents looked to their principals to give life to their ideals; often to get advice. He had watched carefully Miss Dearborn's methods and profited by them. Her pupils were loyal to the school; their work neat and accurate. Going to school was a business at the Coddington. School was life, junkets were side issues. If a happy life is a strenuous life then Miss Dearborn must be happy. He offered congratulations.

Dr. H. C. Hallowell of the School Committee spoke for the Coddington. He said it was a model grammar school. A show school in spirit and methods. Once when he urged a new school building the remark was made—"Why you have Miss Dearborn; do you want the earth?" Well we would rather be without a new Coddington than to be without Miss Dearborn. In closing he offered the toast—"The Coddington school—Miss Dearborn—God bless her—Late may she return to Heaven."

At this point the program was varied by two beautifully executed violin solos by Miss Ellen Forsaith—Berceuse and Madrigale.

Mr. Thomas B. Pollard, principal of the Washington school since 1887, spoke for the teachers. He paid a high tribute to women, and said Miss Dearborn was one of the noblest representations. It was a privilege to be associated with her as teacher or pupil. No one ever heard of Miss Dearborn's pupils being effeminate; she makes boys more manly and girls more womanly. We have esteem and respect for Miss Dearborn. She is loyal to teachers; a great teacher; a grand and noble woman. Let us thank God for her.

Miss Lizzie E. Morse, a teacher at the Coddington 21 years ago, spoke for the teachers of the school. She said the teachers at the Coddington school were a happy family. That Miss Dearborn mothered them. Every day there were wise sayings by the children which the newspapers would like to print. Because of the training the Coddington was a good place to steal teachers. Why did they not steal the old school buildings. Hoped for new building for Coddington.

John O. Hall, Jr. now a master at Adams academy, spoke for the graduates, whom he said numbered about 700. Coddington graduates are glad to be known as graduates of that school. He had seen the Coddington become famous, but it was infamous because of the building; famous, because of the work of the principal and teachers. Yes it has been a show school, and every graduate may feel that he has contributed as a lay figure to the success of the Coddington. Miss Dearborn has taught thousands of things not in the books, and she has a hold on her pupils out of school. The word "lift" expresses what Miss Dearborn does for her pupils. A broad view of life is taught. We hope she may stay until there is a new building to enjoy it.

Mrs. Weston W. Osborne of Wellesley, who was to speak for the parents, was unable to be present because of the sudden and serious illness of her husband, but sent a letter. She wrote that Miss Dearborn was a teacher with tact and said children could not go astray under her teachings. She has the love of her pupils. Long may she be found winning the esteem and praise of all.

Edward Southworth, a former teacher of the Coddington, but now among the best masters of Boston, spoke for the parents. He asked at the outset—why this banquet? Because of the reforms Col. Parker introduced, because he induced Miss Dearborn to Quincy; because he had installed her as a principal and given her liberty; because Miss Dearborn was born when she was. For years after Col. Parker came, the Coddington was the mecca for teachers from all over the country. Probably no school has had more. All now wished to congratulate Miss Dearborn, a teacher of teachers.

Toastmaster Aldrich said the evidence was all in and he would ask Miss Dearborn to plead guilty or not guilty.

Miss Dearborn thought that most of the speakers must have been looking through rose colored glasses. She felt that if half that had been said were true her efforts would not have been all in vain. Her first impression of Quincy was that the Town House, the old stone church, the old cemetery and surroundings were all in happy accord; that the town was taking an afternoon nap. Her success she said was due largely to able assistants. Incidents during her long service were related. She said Quincy was a pioneer in the use of the Public Library in conjunction with the public schools. She was proud of the fact that the Quincy schools had a prize exhibit at the Worlds Fair at Chicago. She thanked all for the gathering today. She found her friends constant and true. She had kind words for School Committee, Superintendents and teachers, particularly Miss Julia E. Underwood who has been a Coddington teacher since April 1855. My boys and my girls she said, have been my chief business. They have been my exceeding great joy. She also had tributes for the late Col. Parker and Sylvester Brown one of of his successors, and closed by saying it was the proudest moment of her life.

Supt. Parlin was then asked to "impose sentence." He said Miss Dearborn was expected to stay and preside over the new Coddington. If anticipation was greater than realization it might be many years. When this banquet was first suggested Miss Dearborn would give her consent only with the understanding that there should be no presentation, but like the boy I am caught red handed. He thereupon produced a valuable watch with a long chain, and placed the chain over Miss Dearborn's head, while she remarked—"If you were one of my boys you would not dare."

Continuing, Supt. Parlin said, May the watch prove as true as you have, and of as sterling character. Please accept with our sincerest friendship.

Miss Dearborn said—"And this from a man who has said repeatedly that I didn't need watching." She said she had prepared no speech for this occasion, and would simply say "I thank you."

One verse of "Auld Lang Syne" was sung with Prof. Snyder as leader, and at 10.30 the gathering was over.

The committee on the reception and banquet were Frank E. Parlin, chairman, Grace E. Lingham, secretary,

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

But once a year comes the springtime,
But once in our lives comes the May;
So we'll cull all the sweets of the garden
And store the bright sunbeams away.
For a time, when the flowers so lovely
Before us lie senseless and dead,
When the birds fly away to the Southland,
And Maytime, dear Maytime, has fled.

SATURDAY GAMES.

Close Contest Between the Wollaston Teams.

The West Quincys Start with Defeat.

Adams Wins and the Quincy High Loses.

The central interest among Wollastonians was at Merrymount park, Saturday. The game between a nine composed of men married and unmarried selected from what is termed First Hill with a similarly chosen team from Second Hill. The former won by one run. Both teams had a large group of cheerers who helped players greatly at times. The lead which the First Hills had from the first was a very wide one, and could only be overcome by exceptionally fast playing. However, the Second Hills did nobly in coming within one run of tieing. The First Hill had a better battery and a better all round team. Badger of this team played finely. Godfry fielded finely for the Second Hillers while Miller, Burke and Poole took honors at the bat.

Adams Wins.

Adams Academy was exonerated Saturday at Merrymount park, defeating the Lovell base ball club.

From the first Adams took the lead and it looked as if the score would be close, but in the fifth the Lovells scored six runs, making it hot for Adams until in the seventh. Adams then had a lucky streak and batted the ball hard, bringing in eight runs.

Both teams played together remarkably well, making only three errors apiece. Moyle as usual for Adams, put up the best all round game while Weston, although he had fewer chances made a clean record. Thomas did the best stick work. Reardon and Doble also made two safe hits.

For the Lovells their shortstop and second baseman played best, while good batting was done by Sullivan, McLaughlin and Simmons. Adams should be proud of this victory, as the teams were equally matched and only a few errors were made. Both nines fielded well and batted well. With the exception of the fifth inning Adams was unusually cool and well deserved the victory.

HOULTON HAS $490,000 FIRE

Many Families Homeless—Churches and Business Blocks Destroyed

Houlton, Me., May 19.—Fire has destroyed the greater part of the business section, 75 residences and three churches, entailing a loss of $490,000, only one-third of which is covered by insurance. One hundred and twenty-five families are rendered homeless, and the loss to the town is one that will require many years to repair.

The town fire department, which was powerless to cope with the fire, was ably assisted by firemen from Woodstock, Presque Isle and Caribou, while volunteers from this and surrounding towns did excellent service with buckets and other apparatus in saving property that must have been otherwise destroyed by the immense showers of sparks which were blown in all directions by the high wind. The fire started in the rear of Dyer's market and grocery store on the north side of upper Main street, and it was an incredibly short time before it was sweeping through the business section of the town at a pace which led many to believe that the entire town would be wiped out of existence before it could be controlled.

Revolver Made Crowd Scatter

Dedham, Mass., May 19.—Officer Andrew J. Nolan attempted to remove a man who was creating a disturbance on a car in Memorial square last night. The man resisted and four companions aided him, assaulting the officer. Nolan drew his revolver and at the sight of it the gang, as well as 100 or more spectators, took to their heels to escape the expected fusillade of bullets. Later, Officer Nolan, assisted by others, arrested three of the parties.

Death Viewed With Suspicion

Boston, May 19.—An autopsy will be held on the body of Mrs. John J. Riley, who was found dead in bed by her husband yesterday morning, because there are cuts and bruises to be looked into. The husband and a boarder in the house, Charles Gateley, are detained by the police, but both men insist that no trouble had occurred in the house to cause Mrs. Riley's death from violence. Riley works for the city and he has two children.

Deaths In Eastport Harbor

Eastport, Me., May 19.—Three drownings from capsized craft occurred in the waters here yesterday. The victims were: Sebatic Francis, Herbine Porter and Henry Williams. Francis, a Point Pleasant Indian, was returning home in his canoe with a companion, when the canoe went over. The companion was saved. Porter and Williams, each aged 16, were in the harbor in a sailboat when the craft overturned.

Skulls Fractured

Boston, May 19.—Two accidents which will probably terminate fatally occurred here yesterday. Antonio Anidena, 20 years old, was bicycling, when he came in collision with a cyclist going in the opposite direction. He was thrown to the sidewalk, fracturing his skull. Frank I. Leonard, 38 years old, was taken suddenly ill on Brookline street and fell on the sidewalk, sustaining a fractured skull.

Women Overcome by Gas

Fall River, Mass., May 19.—Mrs. Mary Leather, aged 70, and her daughter, Miss Annie Leather, 36, were found unconscious in bed from the effects of inhaling illuminating gas at their home yesterday. Neighbors found a gas jet wide open. After four hours' work physicians restored the women to consciousness, but in the case of the elder woman fatal results are feared.

The Quincy Cooperative bank now has assests of $225,554.34, of which $208,150 is invested in real estate loans.

ASKED INFANTA'S HAND

Great Scare at Madrid Over Act of Madman

HE INTENDED NO HARM

Coronation Ceremonies Carried Out on an Elaborate Scale—Alfonso's First Proclamation Expresses Hope That He Will Receive Support

Madrid, May 19.—The splendid ceremonies in connection with the attaining of his majority by King Alfonso were attended by an incident which, while insignificant in itself, for the moment created considerable excitement among those who witnessed it and in the chamber of deputies, where the story first arrived in a more sensational form than the facts warranted.

It appears that just as the royal coach emerged from the Plaza de Armas into the square in front of the palace, amid the sound of cannon, a young man among the sightseers behind the cordon suddenly pushed through the ranks of soldiers and police and rushed toward the door of the chariot, with his hat in one hand and holding outstretched in the other a paper. Before he reached the door one of the grooms who was walking beside the coach and at the same time other state lackeys and equerries hurried to the scene and quickly overpowered him, though not before the disturber had received a severe mauling.

The prisoner was taken to the guard room of the palace, where he was interrogated. The letter he had in his hand proved to be an address to the king stating that the Infanta Maria Teresa, who was with the king in the royal coach, had promised him her hand, and begging the king, as the brother of the infanta, to accede to the marriage. The prisoner was carefully searched and it was found that he carried no weapons and his crazy remarks regarding the Infanta Maria Teresa left no doubt as to his mental condition.

The royal party reached the chamber of deputies a few minutes later and the king, ascending the throne, was greeted with a tremendous ovation, which he smilingly acknowledged.

King Alfonso at the time of the incident showed no agitation, though his mother and the Infanta Maria Teresa were naturally alarmed for a moment, but were soon reassured. The crowd of thousands of persons gathered in the square gave the king a great reception as the coach moved on. Until the royal party reached the chamber of deputies nothing was known by the spectators along the rest of the route of the incident that had just occurred, and perfect equanimity prevailed.

The delay of the procession, which was due to the arrangements at the palace and not to the madman's attempt to reach the king's carriage, caused uneasiness at the chamber of deputies, where princes, ambassadors, senators and deputies had assembled. A rumor spread that an attempt had been made to assassinate the king. Then the Duke of Bivona arrived at the chamber and whispered in the ear of Senor Armijo, the president of the house, who, deeply agitated, stepped to the front of the platform and made the following announcement: "Be reassured; a madman or a miscreant has attempted an outrage on the king. Happily no injury was done. The criminal was arrested."

The rumor of the attempt upon the king's life spread to the crowds in the street and when the royal party was leaving the chamber the popular greetings were much more enthusiastic than they had been before. The king's mother leaned back in her seat with a pleased expression with the evident intention to allow the king the undivided honor of the demonstration. King Alfonso also was evidently pleased.

Reference to the records shows that Puiz was arrested last December at the gates of the palace, where he manifested a desire to present to the Infanta Maria Teresa, who is the only infanta not married, a letter, a boquet and a box of sweetmeats.

The reception of the royal party at the steps of the church of San Francisco and the procession up the nave, was a great spectacle. The primate of Spain and the Archbishop of Santiago de Compostela, with five archbishops and 20 bishops, received the king in the porch. The procession passed up the central aisle between the close ranks of brilliantly uniformed princes, grandees and diplomats, their breasts flashing with jeweled decorations. The queen regent followed the king and infantas came next, while a detachment of halberdiers closed the rear of the procession, the band playing the royal march.

King Alfonso's first proclamation is addressed to the nation. After saying that lessons of experience are awaiting him, his majesty expresses the hope that he will receive from the people the inspiration which will supply what time has not yet taught him.

The proclamation concludes thus: "If providence aids me and if the Spanish people continue the support they have accorded my august mother during her regency, and I do not doubt they will, I have confidence that I shall succeed in my desire to do all that untiring devotion can accomplish for the good of the fatherland and the peace, grandeur and well-being of the Spanish nation."

King Alfonso requested Premier Sagasta to retain the seals of office.

SMOTHER A COUGH.

Press your hand hard enough over your mouth and you can smother a cough but you can't cure it that way The outside is the wrong end to work on.

Scott's Emulsion thoroughly cures coughs because it strikes at the root of the trouble. The throat and lungs need a regular system of education to cure an old cough.

The point of value about Scott's Emulsion and coughs is that, while Scott's Emulsion does soothe the raw throat and lungs, it also nourishes and heals the inflamed areas.

It replaces inflamed tissue with healthy tissue—the only real cure for an old cough.

SOUGHT ALFONSO'S LIFE

Anarchists Had Planned to Take the Life of Spain's Young King

Madrid, May 19.—An anarchist plot against King Alfonso has been discovered and arrests in the matter, including that of Gabriel Lopez, an employe of an insurance company, have been made. Dynamite cartridges were found on the premises where Lopez was arrested. Lopez says he received a package of cartridges from another anarchist with instructions to throw them at the moment of the passage of the royal carriage in Saturday's procession.

It is said that nine dynamite cartridges were seized. Further arrests have been made and the prisoners include six medical students, a printer, a carpenter and a mason. The captured cartridges are being analyzed by military authorities.

This Week In Congress

Washington, May 19.—The entire time of the senate for the present week will be devoted to the consideration of the Philippine government bill and there is no reason for changing previous predictions that the debate upon that measure will be practically completed before the close of the week.

After finishing the naval bill this week the house will take up the bill reported from the committee on foreign affairs relating to passports. One day will be devoted to claims. Under a special order a bill for the restriction of immigration will be taken up and it is expected will cause quite a lively debate. LIVES LOST BY DISASTERS IN TENNESSEE AND TEXAS.

A TERRIBLE CALAMITY

Between 175 and 225 Men and Boys Perish In a Mine

ONE SURVIVOR OF DISASTER

Even He Will Succumb to Injuries Which He Sustained—Searchers of the Tomb of Death Found Their Path Strewn With Corpses

Coal Creek, Tenn., May 20.—The worst disaster in the history of Tennessee mining occurred yesterday, when between 175 and 225 men and boys met instant death at the Fraterville coal mine, two miles west of this town, as a result of a gas explosion.

Out of the large number of men and boys who went to work yesterday morning, developments show that only one is alive, and he is so badly injured that he cannot live. This man was William Morgan, an aged Englishman, who was a roadman in the mine, and was blown out of the entrance by the force of the explosion. One hundred and seventy-five miners were checked in for work yesterday morning by the mine boss. In addition to these were boys who acted as helpers, and drivers, roadmen and others to the number of perhaps 50.

Fraterville mine is the oldest mine in the Coal Creek district, having been opened in 1870. It is fully three miles from the mine's opening to the point where the men were at work. They had not been at work long before the terrible explosion occurred. There was a fearful roar and then flames shot from the entrance and the air shafts.

News of the disaster spread like wildfire, but as soon as possible two rescuing parties were started in, one at the main entrance, the other through Thistle mine, which adjoins and in which no men were at work. The Thistle party was unable to make any headway, as the gas stifled the workers. The Fraterville party went fully two miles under the earth, until a heavy fall of slate was encountered. At this barrier the men worked like demons, hoping against hope that those beyond might be safe.

The scenes at the mouth of the mine while the workers were within were beyond description. Business had been suspended in Coal Creek and all its mines as soon as the news of the disaster became known, and men, women and children gathered around the Fraterville entrance. Women whose husbands and sons were within were wild with grief. All day long the rescuers toiled at the slate obstruction and not until 5 o'clock last evening did they force an entrance through it. Up to that hour only five dead bodies had been recovered and hope was still high that many within were safe.

The hopes of the living were doomed, however, for when once the rescuers could proceed they walked through a continuous tomb of death. There was not a sign of life. Every man has perished, they believe, although all the rooms have not been entered.

Eight dead bodies were first recovered, and these were sent to Coal Creek. Twenty-six more were soon found. They were not disfigured beyond identification and each corpse, as it was borne from the mouth of the gigantic tomb, was surrounded by eager crowds of relatives of the men who were entombed. The mine was not on fire, except in remote portions, and all bodies may be recovered.

The Fraterville mine is owned by the Coal Creek Coal company. In 1901, after inspecting Fraterville mine, State Commissioner of Labor Shiflett reported that the ventilation was not up to requirements; that the furnace was inadequate to ventilate the mine and that the air ways were choked in places. He found that 164 men were at work on the day of his visit, requiring by statute 15,200 cubic feet of air per minute. The volume of air entering the mine, he said, was only 8000 cubic feet per minute.

DEATH AND WRECKAGE

In the Wake of Tornado In a Texas Town

NINETY-EIGHT ARE DEAD

Hailstorm Preceding Wind Drove People Into Their Houses, Where They Were Caught Like Rats In a Trap—Work of Relief Taken Up

Houston, Tex., May 20.—The latest reports from Goliad state that 98 persons were killed and 103 injured by the tornado which passed over that city Sunday. The property loss in the city and surrounding country will probably reach $200,000. The storm swept the city from end to end and demolished 150 stores and residences, many of which cannot be repaired.

The tornado, which was preceded by a terrific downpour of hail, lasted only a few minutes. The hailstorm drove the people into their houses, where they were caught like rats in a trap and the death-dealing wind came upon them with terrific force, levelling everything in its path.

The tornado swept an area 250 yards wide for a distance of a mile and a half. The work of rescue was carried on all day and the funeral of several of the victims took place yesterday afternoon.

The citizens have perfected a relief organization and everything is conducted in an orderly manner, the work of caring for the dead and injured now being on a systematic basis.

The storm wrought severe havoc to the surrounding country, but no lives are reported lost. Governor Sayers yesterday issued an appeal to the mayors of all cities of 3000 people and over in the state of Texas, asking them to send food to Goliad and to raise funds for the suffering.

The path of devastation is strewn with all kinds of debris and dead and wounded animals. Special trains bearing physicians, nurses and volunteers came from Victoria, and also a train from Cuero.

Emperor's Life Threatened

London, May 20.—The correspondent of The Daily Chronicle at Budapest reports the frustration of a plot against the life of Emperor Francis Joseph. The emperor was going on a night train from Vienna to Budapest. In the final inspection of the imperial train in the terminus of the state railroad at Vienna, made 10 minutes before his majesty's arrival there, a bomb covered with paper was found in the emperor's compartment. It was evidently calculated that this bomb would explode the moment his majesty entered the car. An investigation of the matter led to the dismissal of several railroad employes.

Trust Wants Writ Quashed

Jefferson City, Mo., May 20.—Attorneys representing the Armour Packing company, the Cudahy Packing company, the Hammond Packing company, Armour & Co., and Swift & Co., filed a motion in the Missouri supreme court here last night, to quash the alternative writ issued a few days ago by the court against these companies on the ground that the order was improvidently issued, in that it was returnable to the court in vacation.

Firmin's Intention Not Known

Port-au-Prince, Hayti, May 20.—The report that the northern army is marching on Port-au-Prince seems to be generally accepted as true. The intentions of General Firmin, barring the fact that he is a presidential candidate, are not known. If he arrives here alone he may be able to make some arrangement with the provisional government, but if he approaches this city at the head of a force of troops, fighting is liable to occur.

Mitchell Has No News

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 20.—President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers of America arrived here last night and established strike headquarters. He said that he had no news to give out. He added, however, that as far as the miners' side of the controversy was concerned, the situation had not changed in the least.

Rejected Lover Kills Six

St. Augustine, Fla., May 20.—Crazed by his infatuation for Abitha McCullough, a 13-year-old girl, William Austin, 25 years old, killed the girl and four other persons, and then committed suicide, in the lonely farmhouse of William Wilkinson, near Hastings. The crime was discovered by John Keller, who found six corpses, scarcely cold, and but one living witness to the tragedy, a helpless infant. The McCullough girl had rejected Austin's proposals of marriage.

To Go on With Relief

New York, May 20.—Cornelius N. Bliss, national treasurer of the West Indies relief fund, has received a total of $94,000. The following cablegram has been received from the Chamber of Commerce of Barbadoes:

Good Afternoon.

Considerable news matter in this issue was prepared for yesterday's paper, but we have no apologies to offer for either yesterday's or today's Ledger as newsy papers.

It is surprising what a large number of government matters are of local interest to Quincy people—the building of warships, the raising of the battleship Maine, appropriations for Fore and Town rivers, new government building at Quincy, naval magazine at Squantum, salary of letter carriers and postal clerks, etc., etc. Evidently Quincy is on the map.

The hopes of Quincy Point people are again revived by the advancement one stage of the order appropriating $55,000 for a new schoolhouse, which was introduced January 20. As only $13,050 of the maturing municipal debt has been paid this year, and only $1,000 more will matuie before July 1, the financial condition is not as good as it was the first of January. Certainly over $15,000 has been raised on bonds for the City Hall, patrol wagon house, and other purposes. The chances for the passage of the order this year are not the best.

Newspaper men are so often unjustly criticised, that it has been a pleasure to the editors to hear many favorable compliments on the report in Monday's Ledger on the Mary E. Dearborn reception and banquet. It was a work of pleasure. We hope soon to record testimonials to the long and faithful service of several other teachers. In 1895 the fortieth anniversary of Miss Underwood's teaching was observed, but it will soon be fifty. While not in favor of a pension list for teachers, this is an exceptional case, and we believe it should be recognized before April 1905. The Quincy teachers longest in service are:

Julia E. Underwood since	1855
Emeline A. Newcomb since	1857
Eliza A. Sheahan since	1865
Mary Marden since	1874
Mary E. Dearborn since	1876
Euphrasia Hernan since	1878

Expressman Overhauled.

Mayor Bryant took a hand in police duties Monday afternoon and assisted Chief Hayden and Inspector McKay in making a liquor raid. The raid was made on Richard Gardner's North Abington express. Inspector McKay ran across the express team on Hancock street near Merrymount park. He followed the team to City Square, where he secured the assistance of the Mayor and the Chief, and the express team was overhauled on Independence avenue. The goods seized were 840 bottles of beer and two gallons of whiskey consigned to J. Kelley of Abington. The expressman's book showed that last Wednesday he had delivered 840 bottles of beer, 10 gallons of whiskey and 25 quart bottles of Montrose to the same party.

BIG CAR FLOATS.

Two to be Built by Fore River Company for N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R.

Two steel car-floats, each big enough to carry a more than ordinarily long freight train, have been ordered of the Fore River Ship & Engine Company, for the New Haven & Hartford Railroad. Their construction will be in accordance with the rules of the United States Standard Register of Shipping and they will be practically unsinkable.

Each of the giant floats is to have three tracks, on which 23 fifty-ton cars may be set at one time—eight on each side and seven on the middle rails, which are shortened by the gangway. Each is as long and as broad as are many warships and they are considerably bigger than most merchantmen, but side of the huge battleships or the seven-masted schooner, which are building at Fore River, they would, of course, look like dwarfs, having only 10 feet and four inches depth of hold. Their length over all will be 317 feet and their extreme breadth a little more than 40 feet.

Strength and stability, beyond the mere capacity to carry great loads, is a prime consideration in the construction of these barges. They are to be "joggle-plated"—that is to say, the steel hull-plates will be so shaped that the edges can be lapped so as to give the most perfect joint—and four lines of trusses will run their whole length. Each float will have 16 watertight compartments, built with special care, and will be cement lined. Yellow pine fender strakes and white oak staving are called for by the specifications. The lines of the barges have already been "laid down" on the scrive board and the materials for their construction have been ordered.

Recital.

The pianoforte recital given Friday evening, May 16, by the pupils of Miss Emma Gay Curtin of Atlantic street, Atlantic, was a successful and exceedingly pleasureable affair. It was attended by more than one hundred of friends of Miss Curtin and her pupils.

The various selections were performed with unusually artistic taste and with a finish quite worthy persons of maturer years.

The youthful artists were Misses Hazel Ruggles, Louise Ross, Annie McDonald, Georgiana Priest, Annie Harding, Agnes Ruggles, Louise Wilde, Martha Jenkins, Grace Parker, Carrie Wilkinson, Florence Barker, Ruth Parker, Clara McClure, Catherine Gay, Roxie Oakman, Jessie Warren, Mabel Pratt, Helen Wade, Zilpha Coombs, Ruth Bean and Hazel Kempton and Masters Ralph Read and Thomas Lloyd, Jr.

RESERVOIR PARK.

An Attractive Spot Which is Fast Coming into Favor.

Probably from 1000 to 2000 people visited reservoir park on Third hill on Sunday and enjoyed the grand view. Many people in Quincy do not realize what an attractive spot this summit now is. The reservoir is complete and contains 20 feet of clear water. The stand pipe encased in Quincy granite is also complete and ornamental. When people are allowed to go to the top the view can scarcely be surpassed.

Around the reservoir is an asphalt walk about four feet wide with grass slopes on either side which is a popular promenade. There is a low safety rail about midway between the walk and the water to catch any one who might fall that way. Should anyone get into the reservoir he would find it very difficult to get out, as the bottom is of stone and slopes rather abruptly. As a precaution there should be ropes or ladders on each of the four sides.

The view is grand in all directions. The villages of Wollaston, Atlantic, Norfolk Downs, East Milton and West Quincy are largely hid by trees but present an attractive appearance. Quincy lies hidden behind President hill. To the north is Boston, to the east a beautiful harbor view, to the south the attractive residences on Adams street and President hill, and to the west the Blue Hill range.

All about the reservoir the grounds have been graded and fenced, and have been sowed to grass. At present there are signs to keep off the grass. The park may be reached by a driveway and walk from Adams street near the ice house, or from Beale street near the residence of Mr. Bishop. It is quite a climb either way, but not too much for automobiles. A visit on a clear day will well repay any one.

Faxon Park Road.

Editors Quincy Ledger:

Kindly allow me space for a few lines in regard to Faxon Park and Faxon Park road.

Faxon Park, we all know was given to the town of Quincy about 17 years ago by Mr. Henry H. Faxon. As Mr. Faxon donates enough money every year to religious and other institutions of this city to not only build the proposed Faxon Park road but also fix up the park it is not fair to presume that he gave the park for any other reason than to create a place where people, not only from Wards Two and Three, but from the whole city, may go and get fresh air and recreation as well as the most excellent view not only of Quincy but of Boston and its harbor. Though 17 years have passed since the city (at that time a town) agreed to build a road to this park, nothing has been done and there is no more of a road now than there was 50 years ago.

The people want the said road to be built for a good many reasons: 1st, that they may be able to get to the park; 2d, it will be a short cut over the hills which the people will appreciate, especially merchants who use teams to deliver their goods. It will save them time, and time is money; 3d, that the agreement with Mr. Faxon may be carried out. It is a disgrace to the city that a gift of such value is so little appreciated.

But I believe this year's Council is considering the matter in earnest. They seem to realize that the agreement with Mr. Faxon cannot be put off any longer. The Park Commissioners think the road ought to be built and the park laid out. Of course there will be persons who will say the city is in debt and we cannot afford to do it this year, but the question is, will we be better off financially five or ten years from now? In my opinion we will not, and the money will likely be spent in some other place where it will not do as much good. Any man who knows the conditions of the agreement will admit that the time has come when something must be done.

There is one thing and that is when the Council appropriates money for Faxon Park road it cannot be accused of spending money foolishly or illegally for as representatives of the people it is their duty to see that the obligations of the city be carried out.

Respectfully,
Oscar F. Frisk.

A BIG CONTRACT.

Will John E. Cavanagh Get It to Raise the Maine?

The only plans for raising the ill-fated battleship Maine in the harbor of Havana are those suggested by John E. Cavanagh, formerly commissioner of public works of this city, and a member of the well known family of building movers, therefore there is local interest in the bill introduced into Congress on Saturday by Representative Roberts of Massachusetts to provide for removing the wreck of the battleship Maine and recovering the bodies therefrom.

The bill authorizes the secretary of the navy to recover the bodies of all sailors now in the wreck in Havana harbor, and to furnish suitable burial in the national cemetery at Arlington for all except such as may be claimed by relatives. The expenses of the burials, whether at Arlington or in private cemeteries, are to be met by the government. For the purpose of carrying out these provisions an appropriation of $1,000,000 is asked.

AT NAVY YARDS.

House Would Build Three Warships There.

And All If There is a Combine.

Also Passes Eight-Hour Bill on Government Work.

The action of the National House on Monday was not encouraging to private shipyards at Quincy and elsewhere. A dispatch to the Herald says, Two important amendments were unexpectedly put into the naval appropriation bill before it was passed by the House this afternoon, each by a combination of Democratic and Republican votes.

One of them, carried through by Representative Roberts of Massachusetts, a member of the committee on naval affairs, provided for the construction of three vessels—a battleship, a cruiser and a gunboat—at government yards, instead of only one, and appropriates $175,000 for the purpose of fitting up yards for such work.

Although the amendment was opposed by some of the House leaders, and was ruled out of order by Chairman Sherman of the committee of the whole, on a point of order made by Representative Adams of Philadelphia, the chair was overruled, and the amendment was adopted by a majority of the House, made up of most of the Democrats and some of the Republicans.

The other amendment was that of Representative Ball of Texas, to prevent contractors under the navy department from entering into agreements with the trusts. On its face it would seem to prohibit contracting ship builders from buying materials, for example, from the United States Steel Company, but its scope would have to be determined by interpretation if it should become a law. An attempt will be made to eliminate, or at least to modify, it in the Senate.

Speaking on the amendment, during the discussion, Mr. Foss said that past experience had proved that it costs 30 per cent. more to build ships in government yards than in private yards, and he cited the Texas and the Maine. Admiral Bowles had said that, if he were permitted to make the condition, he would build ships as cheaply in government yards as under private contracts, but he would make the hours of labor the same as in private yards, he would wipe out the leaves of absence, would pay the laborers in the navy yards by the piece, and would wipe out all holidays, for which they are paid.

Mr. Dayton said the amendment would not be in the interests of laboring men, because there was a limit placed on the number of men that navy yards could employ. It would extend the work over many years, and the select few would have labor continuously, which otherwise would go to the workmen in the private yards.

Mr. Roberts referred to what he termed the pathetic plea of Mr. Dayton for the laboring man, and said that when a labor delegation appeared before the committee they made no plea for work in private yards.

War over Right of Way.

There was a lively time at South Braintree Monday when heirs of Henry A. Pierce attempted with a gang of Italians to maintain their right of way diagonally across a lot adjoining the South Methodist church upon which the society has commenced work excavating for a cellar. It will be taken into court.

"But the new minister at that church is so awfully conceited."

"But, really, last Sunday he was quite modest."

"You don't say."

"Yes. In the course of his sermon he said: 'We are all more or less fallible. Even I am.'"—Philadelphia Press.

Home of C. F. Adams.

The Sunday Herald devoted a page to the town of Lincoln with illustrations of its attractive residences. One was the home of Charles Francis Adams formerly of Quincy, of which the article says:

Probably the finest estate in the town is that owned by Mr. Charles Francis Adams. It lies in the southerly part of the town, to the left of the railroad track, as one comes from Boston, and comprises about 500 acres of land. After leaving the street, there is a quarter of a mile drive before Mr. Adams' residence comes into view—a charming drive, by the way, between a growth of low pine trees. The house is located in a dell, and from it there is an unbroken view of a bend in the Concord river, to the shores of which the estate runs. It would be difficult to apply adjectives too demonstrative to describe the beauties of the place. A large terrace garden adjoining the house is given over to the arts of the florist, but the greater portion of the estate is dedicated to nature. The house was built by William Burnham and acquired by Mr. Adams less than a decade ago. He has made large additions to the original estate, and has done much to beautify the property. Mr. Adams lives in Lincoln throughout the year, making daily pilgrimages to Boston.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Senator Sprague Would Extend Bill Relative to Women.

Senator Sprague attempted yesterday to have all women and minors included in the bill to prevent overtime work, which as reported included only those in textile good mills. He moved to strike out the word "textile," saying he would like to vote for the bill if it applied to all women and children.

Senator J. A. Sullivan of Boston raised the point that the amendment was too broad, but President Soule said that the bill was partially founded upon a petition taken from last year's files, which provided that no person or corporation shall employ a woman or minor in any capacity after 6 P. M., and ruled the point not well taken.

Senator Morse of Belchertown said that the way to secure a more perfect womanhood would be to enact a law that no woman shall wear corsets. The bill, he said, made him tired.

Senator Sprague's amendment was rejected, 8 to 17, and the bill was refused a third reading, 13 to 24, Senator Sprague being with the majority.

The "weavers particulars" bill was defeated 11 to 26; also the bill as to evidence of negligence in injuries received on or about railroads or railways, 11 to 22; Senator Sprague voting nay on each.

The district option bill was postponed to Thursday, the Cape Cod Pilgrim memorial tabled, the Boston smoke bill referred to next General Court, and a general bill as to assumption of risks by employes, which came from the House, was rejected without debate, 12 to 20.

Leave to withdraw was reported by the Committee on Election Laws on the petition of Henry J. Stone and others that women qualified to vote for School Committee may vote on the question of granting licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors. Mr. Sutton of Needham dissents.

The House passed to be engrossed the bill to prevent any but members from wearing the insignia of labor unions.

The adverse report of McNary's water gas bill came up for discussion on his move for substitution.

Mr. McNary of Boston, and Mr. Drinkwater of Braintree were prominent in debate in favor of the motion. Mr. Pearce of Fitchburg and Mr. Howard of North Brookfield also favored, while Mr. Callender and Mr. Homan of Boston opposed.

The debate was on at adjournment, but a vote in favor of a roll call today was secured.

With Honors.

WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

Instrumental In the Return of Gaynor and Greene to Quebec

Montreal, May 20.—Colonel Gaynor and Captain Greene have won the first skirmish in the fight against extradition to the United States and the two men are in the old city of Quebec, where they believe proceedings to force them to return to the United States to answer the charge of defrauding the United States government can be successfully fought.

At 10 o'clock last night a special train on the Canadian Pacific arrived from Quebec with High Constable Gale and assistants on board, armed with a writ of habeas corpus. An hour after the arrival of the train it departed with the much-sought fugitives from the American courts on board.

Half an hour later the regular train for Quebec departed, having on board Donald MacMaster and Chief Detective Carpenter. They went to answer the writ of habeas corpus served on Carpenter. Incidentally Mr. MacMaster will use all his efforts to see that Governor Vallee returns his prisoners to the Montreal jail, to which they were remanded yesterday. The question as to whether he shall do so or not depends entirely upon the legality of the arrest. The case will come up in Quebec today.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Miss Danforth Arraigned on Charge of Murdering Andrew Emery

South Framingham, Mass., May 20.—Miss Nina Danforth of Newton, who shot and killed Andrew J. Emery of this place on Saturday, was arraigned before Judge Kingsbury yesterday on a charge of murder. The prisoner entered a plea of not guilty, and was remanded to Cambridge jail for further hearing June 2. Defendant was accompanied by her sister and her counsel. Her appearance indicated no physical weakness, and she was cool throughout the proceedings. The prosecution asked for the continuance.

The motive for the killing still is a mystery. It is claimed that Miss Danforth had received attentions from Emery, not knowing that he was married. Several witnesses agree that Miss Danforth admitted that she did the shooting.

Death Followed Women's Quarrel

Torrington, Conn., May 20.—Mrs. Mary Etre is locked up at police headquarters awaiting the finding of the coroner who is investigating the death of Mrs. Mary Collen. Mrs. Etre went to the Collen house last evening and became involved in a dispute. With the assistance of a visitor Mrs. Collen forcibly ejected her. A moment later a broom-handle was thrust through the glass door. It struck Mrs. Collen in the stomach, throwing her upon a nearby stove. She fell from the stove to the floor lifeless. Two witnesses in the house stated that they saw the broom-handle in the hands of Mrs. Etre.

Portland's Alleged Bribery Cases

Portland, Me., May 20.—Counsel for Michael Callahan and James J. Walsh, who were charged with attempting to bribe Deputy Sheriff Leach, announce that they will not ask for a jury trial in the superior court. It is understood that one of the respondents will enter a plea of nolo contendere and the other respondent will file a demurer, taking the case to the supreme court.

Death of Judge Hopkins

Millbury, Mass., May 20.—Judge John Hopkins of the superior court bench died at his home here last night from cancer of the intestines. Judge Hopkins was born in England 62 years ago, but was brought to this side of the ocean in infancy. He served two terms in the state senate.

NOT FOR MANY YEARS

Will St Vincent Overcome Havoc Wrought by Volcano

THE MARTINIQUE DISASTER

Was Presaged For Five Days Before It Occurred, Giving St Pierre People Ample Time For a General Exodus If They Chose to Do So

Kingstown, St. Vincent, May 20.—The continued heat thrown off by the lava prevents anyone approaching the volcanic mountain.

From the sea the estates of Wallibou and Richmond present a scene of desolation. They are bereft of vegetation and all the buildings on them have been destroyed. No living being is seen and no sound of any kind is heard. Small jets of steam issue at intervals from various spots on the plantations as a warning to visitors, and the few courageous persons who have approached the locality have found the earth there to be too hot to venture onward.

The loss as a result of the volcanic eruption includes not only the present crops of the island, but cultivation will be impeded for some years to come.

Serious fears are entertained that another eruption will occur at the foot of the volcano, where steam is continually issuing from small fissures. This locality is cracked all over.

The strange color and the great depth of the new inlet of the sea on the Wallibou estate imply that an eruption occurred there and that a new crater has been formed, which extends from the land into the sea.

The sufferings of the afflicted demand more consideration than the loss of life. The torture of the victims was indescribable; many of them were literally roasted.

Failed to Profit by Warning

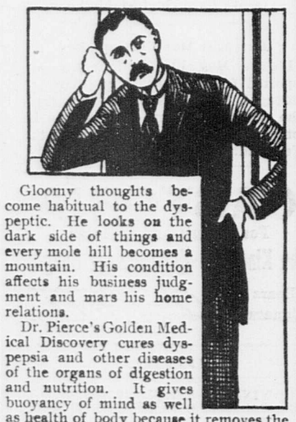

Paris, May 20.—Martinique mails, forwarded just prior to the disaster, arrived here yesterday. The newspapers print a number of private letters from St. Pierre, giving many details of events immediately preceding the catastrophe. The most interesting of these is a letter dated May 3, from a young lady who was among the victims. After describing the aspect of St. Pierre before dawn, the town being lit up with flames from the volcano, everything covered with ashes, and the people greatly excited, yet not panic stricken, she said:

"My calmness astonishes me. I am awaiting the event tranquilly. My only suffering is from the dust which penetrates everywhere, even through closed windows and doors. We are all calm. Mamma is not a bit anxious. Edith alone is frightened. If death awaits us there will be a numerous company to leave the world. Will it be by fire or asphyxia? It will be what God wills. You will have our last thoughts. Tell brother Robert that we are still alive. This will, perhaps, be no longer true when this letter reaches you."

The Edith mentioned was a lady visitor who was among the rescued.

Another letter written during the afternoon of May 3 says: "The population of the neighborhood of the mountain is flocking to the city. Business is suspended, the inhabitants are panic stricken, and the firemen are sprinkling the streets and roofs, to settle the ashes, which are filling the air."

These and other letters seem to indicate that evidences of the impending disaster were numerous five days before it occurred. It is difficult to understand how it was that a general exodus of the population of St. Pierre did not take place before May 8.

Gloomy thoughts become habitual to the dyspeptic. He looks on the dark side of things and every mole hill becomes a mountain. His condition affects his business judgment and mars his home relations.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures dyspepsia and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition. It gives buoyancy of mind as well as health of body because it removes the physicial cause of mental depression.

It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food, and the body is strengthened by nutrition which is the only source of physical strength.

"I was afflicted with what the doctors called nervous indigestion. Took medicine from my family physician to no avail," writes Mr. Thos. G. Lever, of Lever, Richland Co., S. C. "At night would have cold or hot feet and hands, alternately. I was getting very nervous and suffered a great deal mentally, thinking that death would soon claim me. Always expected something unusual to take place; was irritable and impatient, and greatly reduced in flesh. I could scarcely eat any thing that would not produce a bad feeling in my stomach. After some hesitation, I decided to try a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pellets.' After taking several bottles of each, found I was improving. I continued for six months or more, off and on. I have to be careful yet, at times, of what I eat, in order that I may feel good and strong. I fully believe if any one suffering with indigestion or torpid liver or chronic cold would take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets' and observe a few simple hygienic rules, they would soon be greatly benefited, and with a little perseverance would be entirely cured."

Biliousness is cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

To Get Prentis' Remains

Fort de France, May 20.—A party left from here has gone to St. Pierre on the British cruiser Indefatigable, carrying with them coffins, for the purpose of recovering the bodies of the family of Thomas T. Prentis, the late United States consul at that place, who were killed in the disaster. The interment of the remains will take place here and will be conducted with military honors.

The Indefatigable brought 120 tons of supplies.

There was another eruption from Mt. Pelee Sunday. Ashes fell here. The volcano is still violently smoking, and there are no signs of its ceasing its activity.

The United States cruiser Cincinnati and the United States government tug Potomac will be stationed here indefinitely. The Potomac will shortly go to the island of Guadeloupe to bring to this place the furniture, books, etc., of the office of the United States consul there, Louis H. Ayme.

Cargoes "Exempted From Duties"

Paris, May 20.—M. L'Huerre, the governor of Martinique, has sent the following cablegram to the colonial minister, dated Fort de France, May 18:

"I have informed the population that supplies by the United States naval vessel Dixie and the steamers Fontabella and Madiana will arrive here today. The cargoes of these vessels will be exempted from all duties and other charges. This is done on all food supplies reaching us.

"Commander G. W. Mentz and Captain Crabb, of the quartermaster's department, have just arrived here on the United States collier Sterling, with the food presented by the government of Porto Rico."

"GOING BACK TO DIE"

Governor Taft Will Not Forsake What He Considers His Duty

Washington, May 20.—Senator Dolliver, in his speech on the Philippine bill yesterday, made the statement that Governor Taft, in bidding his friends in Washington good-bye, answered an inquiry concerning his health by saying that he knew he was going back to the Philippines to die, but that he could not on that occasion forsake the trust which had been committed to his keeping. Governor Taft's cheerfulness in all his references to the surgical operation he had undergone during his visit to the United States impressed most of his friends here with the idea that he was hopeful of recovery. In view of that fact, Mr. Dolliver's remark fell upon them with startling effect.

In Congress

Washington, May 20.—Only a brief time was devoted by the senate yesterday to consideration of the Philippine government bill. Mr. Dolliver supported the bill. He insisted that the Philippine insurrection, as a military proposition, was a thing of the past and declared that in no circumstance would the United States relinquish the Philippines.

The house passed the naval appropriation bill. The feature of the debate was on the amendment offered by Mr. Roberts (Mass.) providing that three of the ships provided for in the bill, a battleship, cruiser, and a gunboat, shall be built in government yards.

Turned In Deming's Favor

Washington, May 20.—In an opinion delivered by Justice Peckham, the United States supreme court decided the case of Captain Peter C. Deming in that officer's favor. The case involved the right of a court-martial composed entirely of officers of the regular army to pass upon a case involving the rights of a volunteer officer. The effect of the opinion is that such a trial is illegal. Deming had pleaded guilty to the charge of embezzlement and of other conduct unbecoming an officer.

Pensions For Maimed Fighters

Washington, May 20.—The committee on invalid pensions of the house yesterday reported favorably the senate bill to increase the pensions of those who have lost limbs in the military or naval service of the United States or were totally disabled in the same. It is estimated by the committee that nearly 7000 persons are affected by the bill, although the number is rapidly increasing. The lowest rate of increase recommended by the bill is $10 per month.

No Sign of Adjournment

Washington, May 20.—Senator Teller of Colorado says that the session of congress will be likely to continue 60 days from the first of June. Senator Teller estimates that 30 days will be occupied in discussing the canal bill and the same amount of time on the Cuban reciprocity bill when it is taken up.

Never Ordered Water Cure

Washington, May 20.—During the Philippine investigation before the senate committee yesterday a letter was read from General Hughes denying that he had ever given orders for the water cure and saying that if such a charge was made he wanted the fullest investigation of it.

Eight Indicted For Bribery

Toledo, May 20.—The grand jury impanelled several weeks ago and charged by Judge Kinkade to investigate the rumors of bribery and official dereliction made a partial report yesterday. Indictments were found against Moses R. Brailey, city solicitor, and seven others.

Peace at Atlanta

Atlanta, May 20.—The militia doing duty on the scene of Saturday's clash between the police and negroes were withdrawn yesterday. No further trouble is apprehended.

PELEE IS STILL ACTIVE

Volcanic Stones Thrown as Far as Fort de France

AN INUNDATION OF MUD

Sweeps Away Twenty Houses In Town Which Had Been Evacuated—Islands In the Caribbean Sea Experience Earthquake Shocks

Fort de France, May 21.—At 5:30 o'clock yesterday morning a thick, heavy cloud, lit up by flashes of lightning and the rising sun, rose from Mt. Pelee. The people of Fort de France at once became panic stricken and in scant attire rushed excitedly through the streets of the town. Stones from the volcano as big as hazel nuts fell in the streets. Many of the inhabitants hurriedly embarked on the vessels in the harbor, and it was with difficulty that they were eventually reassured. At 7 o'clock, however, the excitement was over and the people became calm.

A cloud which issued from Mt. Pelee yesterday afternoon was composed of cinders. It is estimated 20,000 people rushed into the streets of the town shrieking and praying.

A tidal wave has destroyed a portion of the village of La Carbet.

A number of the inhabitants of Fort de France have embarked on the available vessels of the harbor and intend to seek refuge on the island of Guadeloupe or to the southward.

The phenomenon of yesterday was similar to the eruption of May 8, but not so severe.

Governor L'Huerre will leave here on the French cruiser Suchet to inform himself of the situation at St. Pierre.

Sufficient food supplies are arriving here, but linen clothing, bedding and disinfectants are needed.

The refugees at Fort de France are without work and money is needed for their support.

A severe inundation at Basse Pointe, on the northeast coast of this island, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning, swept away 20 houses. Fifty other buildings were damaged by the flowing mud, which has swept over the Vallee de la Riviere. There was no loss of life, Basse Pointe having been evacuated several days ago.

Access to the ruins of St. Pierre is still impossible. The United States cruiser Cincinnati and the United States special steamer Potomac, which left here for St. Pierre in another attempt to recover the bodies of the United States and British consuls and their families, were not able to land their searching parties owing to the intense clouds of cinders sweeping over the stricken town.

Houses Shaken at St Kitts

St. Thomas, D. W. I., May 21.—It is reported from St. Kitts, in the Leeward islands, that Monday night and yesterday morning noises similar to those heard May 7 were again audible, but louder and with greater distinctness. Some of the houses there were slightly shaken by the concussion.

From the British island of Antigua and the French island of Guadeloupe very loud detonations from the southeast are reported.

Another report from the British island of Dominica is to the effect that at 5:30 o'clock yesterday morning a curious, awe-inspiring fiery cloud, surmounted by a fleecy white cap resembling highly polished silver, was seen from Roseau, on the west coast of Dominica, in the southeast. This phenomenon caused alarm in Dominica, especially as lightning followed in its wake.

Sixty Died In Hospital

London, May 21.—Governor Llewellyn cables from St. Vincent to the colonial office as follows: "All immediate wants now supplied. Have ordered timber for the construction of houses, through his majesty's ambassador at Washington and the governor general of Canada. The question of the re-settlement of the people is under consideration. One of the new townships is already settled. In my estimation £50,000 will enable us to support all the sufferers for six months and re-house them in new localities. The sufferings of the wounded from burns are very terrible. Sixty deaths have occurred in the hospital."

BOER PEACE CONFERENCE

May Result In Split Between Transvaal and Orange Free State

Pretoria, May 21.—While it is hard to sift out the truth from the mass of contradictory reports that are floating in here from Vereeniging, Transvaal, where the Boer delegates are in conference, the best information obtainable leads to the belief that there are a number of obstacles in the way of a peaceful settlement.

In summing up the situation at Vereeniging it is safe to say that a majority of the Transvaalers, including the Transvaal government, are in favor of peace, while the representatives of the Orange Free State, with a few influential exceptions, declare they will not renounce independence. Strangely enough, General DeWet, who was most irreconcilable at the last conference, is now quite a strong advocate of peace.

Lord Kitchener certainly will not exceed the concessions already offered the delegates, so there remains only the question of the reduction of the demands of the Orange Free State representatives or the possibility of a split between the Boer factions. This latter, while it would delay an immediate settlement of the matters before the conference, would certainly hasten the final solution of the situation in the field.

Coal Barons to Raise Prices

Chicago, May 21.—The Chronicle says prices of bituminous coal all through the lake district, from Buffalo to Duluth and perhaps all over the country, may take a sudden jump upward during the coming week or within the next two weeks at the most. Sixty members of the Lake Erie Coal Shippers' association met in secret in this city and reached a unanimous agreement to take advantage of the shortage in anthracite coal caused by the strike of the miners in Pennsylvania and give the prices of bituminous coal a healthy lift.

Ninety-Five Killed by Cyclone

Goliad, Tex., May 21.—Three of the injured in Sunday's tornado died yesterday, making the total number of deaths 95. There has been a generous response to the appeals made by Governor Sayers, but there is much to be done and it will require a large sum to care for the injured and homeless. This city was totally swept from end to end by the rushing winds and 150 houses were razed to the ground by the shock. The city continues under martial law.

THE CUBAN FLAG RAISED.

The United States Retires from the Gem of the Antilles.

Statistics as to Island's Area, Population, Production and Industry.

Havana, May 21.—The natal day of the republic of Cuba found Havana arrayed like a queen to await the coming of her lord. She seemed reinvested for the occasion with the dignity of the prosperous days of her power and wealth. The decorations were universal. There was not a residence, pretentious or humble, that did not bear upon its quaint facade some emblem in honor of the event.

Nature seemed in harmony with the spirit of the festivities. The parks were literally aflame with tropical flowers, and the vaulted sky above might have been chiselled out of turquoise. Above every red tiled roof rose a Cuban flag. The whole city seemed suddenly buried beneath a forest of waving banners.

The actual transfer of the control of the island was scheduled to occur exactly at noon, Havana time, which is 12:30 p. m., Washington time, but those invited to witness the ceremony were required to be at the palace at 11:30 a. m.

The ceremony itself was brief and simple. After formal greetings, General Wood read the documentary transfer prepared by the war department, pledging the new government to immediately proclaim the constitution and the Platt amendment contained in the appendix, and to undertake all obligations assumed by the United States, with respect to Cuba, by the treaty of Paris.

Senor Palma attached his signature to a document as president of the Cuban republic, after an exchange of congratulations. General Gomez ascended to the roof of the palace, where he was accorded an immense reception. Troopers of the Seventh United States cavalry lowered the American colors, which were saluted, and hoisted the Cuban flag.

General Wood and his adjutant general, Colonel Scott, with two aides, after a last exchange of good wishes, were driven to the pier, where they entered a launch and were flicked away to the Brooklyn. Both ships got under way as soon as possible, and steamed out of the harbor. The man at the taffrail of the Brooklyn was kept busy dipping the flag in answer to the salutes of the thousands upon the water front who watched her departure.

While this was occurring at Havana, a similar scene was being enacted at Santiago, where General Whiteside turned over the authority to his Cuban successor, and sailed away with two troops of the Eighth cavalry. Only eight batteries of American artillery remained on Cuban soil. The chapter of American history was ended, and the first chapter of the history of the Cuban republic was begun.

Before the Brooklyn was hull down on the horizon the Cubans resumed festivities. In the afternoon there was a yacht regatta in the harbor, and ashore there was a review of 14,000 school children by President Palma. At noon a solemn high mass in honor of the new republic had been celebrated in all the churches of the island, and at 4 o'clock a te deum was sung at the cathedral. At the same hour the Cuban congress proclaimed the constitution.

The new republic of Cuba has about 47,000 square miles, with a coast line of 2200 miles. Its natural resources, which are great, will undoubtedly be greatly developed by American enterprise. There are uncleared forests of 17,000,000 acres, and the mountains are rich in minerals. General Wood estimated the value of the sugar and tobacco yield of 1900 at $100,000,000.

The latest census of Cuba was taken in 1900 under the direction of the United States military government. The total population was returned as 1,572,797, including 815,205 males and 757,592 females. There are 447,372 white males and 462,926 white females of native birth. The foreign whites number 115,760 males and 26,458 females. There are 111,898 male negroes and 122,740 female negroes. The negroes constitute, therefore, but 32 percent of the population. The mixed races number 125,500 males and 145,505 females. There are 14,694 male and 163 female Chinese. Of the total population of the island 1,108,709 persons are set down as single, 246,351 as married, while 131,787 live together by mutual consent. There are 85,112 widows. Of the total population, according to citizenship, 20,478 are Spaniards, 1,296,367 are Cubans, 175,811 were in suspense, 79,526 are of other citizenship and 616 are unknown. The Spaniards by birth number 129,240. Of the children 10 years old and over, 49,414 have attended school. Of the total population, 443,426 can read and write and 19,158 have a superior education.

From Root to Hay

Washington, May 21.—Secretary Hay took the final step yesterday of acquainting the nations of the globe that the United States government has redeemed its solemn pledge to make a free people in the island of Cuba. This was done by the dispatch by cable to every capital where there is resident either an ambassador or minister for the United States, of an identical note informing our representatives that the "military occupation of the island of Cuba by the United States has this day ceased, and that an independent government, republican in form, has been inaugurated there, under the presidency of Tomas Estrada Palma."

In issuing this notice Secretary Hay also takes upon himself the burden of looking after Cuban affairs, so far as they are yet placed under the observation of the United States, by the terms of the Platt amendment, wrought into the Cuban constitution. Secretary Root lays down his work, having no further official interest in the island save in the maintenance of the small force of United States soldiers who are taking care of the defences of Havana until the Cubans themselves are trained to this work.

Fruitless Conference on Cuba

Washington, May 21.—The Republican members of the senate committee on relations with Cuba were in conference yesterday and discussed the various propositions that have been made in regard to the reciprocity bill. The senators who participated in the conference are extremely reticent as to what occurred, but it is known that they reached no conclusion.

Railroads Will Fight Strikers

New York, May 21.—The Herald says that presidents of the coal carrying railroads, in secret session yesterday, discussed plans to break the strike of the miners in Pennsylvania. "No surrender" was the slogan of the mine operators and when the meeting adjourned, it was said, the railroads were prepared for a protracted struggle.

Waldeck-Rousseau to Retire

Paris, May 21.—The announcement that Premier Waldeck-Rousseau will resign as soon as parliament reassembles June 1 causes much comment in political circles and people are wondering why the premier awaited until after President Loubet's departure for Russia to make his decision in this matter public.

Taylor Losing His Grip

Berlin, May 21.—"Major" Taylor, the colored cyclist, whose bicycle riding last year, when he beat all the German champions, was a source of amazement here, is doing poorly this season. Taylor was beaten Monday by Arend, and yesterday he failed to qualify in the trial heats for the final of a long-distance contest.

Berlinites' Rubbernecked

Berlin, May 21.—The people of this city spent a part of yesterday in staring at the covey of balloons floating above Berlin in which the members of the International Aeronautical commission were sailing as guests of the military balloon batalion. The ascents and descents were made without mishap.

An Education Association.

The attention of people interested in the welfare and development of the city of Quincy is called to a meeting to be held on the evening of Wednesday, May 28 at the Unitarian chapel, Quincy, in the interests of the formation of an Education Association—an organization to whose membership both men and women are eligible, the membership fee is somoderate as to bring it within the reach of all persons whether of large or small means, and its purpose the promotion of the educational interests of Quincy in every possible way.

Special lines and methods of work whether in connection with schools, public libraries, improvement of parks and private grounds, etc., may be considered after the organization is formed.

The general plan is to provide an organization in no way interfering with the work of the churches or existing educational enterprises which shall encourage public spirited and intelligent Quincy people, whatever their religious, social or political affiliations, to come together and work together for the best interests of the community at large—and one upon whose encouragement and cooperation the local authorities may count in any effort to improve municipal conditions.

The value of such an organization has already been tested and proved in various communities in Massachusetts and in other states. What it may accomplish for Quincy will be considered at the meeting in question on the evening of May 28, when a number of well known Quincy gentlemen will speak and there will be an address by the secretary of the Brookline Education Association, describing the work and methods of that very successful organization as well as of Education Associations elsewhere.

Notices for this meeting will be distributed as widely as possible, but as they may fail to reach many whose attendance is especially desirable, a most cordial invitation is freely extended to all interested, by the Home Science Association and Teachers' Association of Quincy, under whose auspices the meeting is to be held.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ The whole incident is most enlightening. We shall not again easily give credence to those who would persuade us that Tammany may rise above its source. Based on a theory of cohesion in plunder, it can know no community of interest except that of despoiling the community. Politics is only applied human nature. Given the character of the men who constitute a politician organization and you can tell what the character of the organization will be. A ruffian is a ruffian still, even if he has enriched himself through Tammany, and poses as a political leader. Mr. Nixon has bitten this truth into the public mind most usefully. The immediate future of Tammany Hall does not deeply concern us. Whether Croker will be compelled to return to fight for his life; whether the anti-Croker revolt will prevail, we do not know, and we do not greatly care. The important thing is to have the mask of decency fall from the sleepless enemy of the city, at this stage of a reform administration. One effect must be to multiply the number of those who will hold up Mayor Low's hands. Another will be to increase the tribe of those who are convinced that Tamammy Hall, as it exists today, is past praying for politically, and that the only part of the liturgy applicable to it is "the compendous forms of the commination service." — New York Evening Post.

☞ The "Is not this the great Babylon which I have builded?" tone that is so common is one of the chiefest dangers which stand in the way of the world-influence which this country ought to have. A very sensible ancient writer once told his friends that it was dangerous to think of themselves more highly than they ought to think. He was careful, be it noted, not to say that a man should not think of himself as highly as was justifiable, but he was particularly emphatic in his condemnation of going beyond that point. And this is what many of our people are likely to do, in their desire to be patriotic and to be jealous for the honor of their country. This is indeed a great country with possibilities of which we can scarcely dream too widely. But it is not the only country in the world, and we are not the only people with brains and with ambition. There are other great nations, made up of men who are awake and alert, whose intellects are highly developed, whose foresight and sagacity are equal to ours, and who have the gift of progression. As a flourish of rhetoric it may do to say that the world is going to be so Americanized in a year or two or a score or two that nothing will be left but to hoist the Stars and Stripes everywhere; but as a matter of cold truth such a statement ought to come under the ban of the proposed law to prevent misleading advertising.—New Bedford Standard.

Strong and were attended by Clan McGregor, O. S. C., and the City band. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery, the remains being escorted by the two organizations. RIVALS MEET.

Adams Academy Finds High School in Easy Mark.

The Score Was 29 Runs to 8.

Thayer Defeats Noble & Greenough School 22 to 11.

Adams Academy won from Quincy High school Tuesday at Merrymount Park, by the overwhelming score of 29 to 8.

High school played a very loose game there being errors galore, while Adams fielded fast and batted harder than in any other game the team has participated in this season.

Adams took the lead from the start and kept it throughout. The game was exciting because High school made repeated spurts and rallies.

An interesting part of the game and perhaps what encouraged the players most, was the school cheering led by Messrs. Kay of Adams and Wright of High. The feminine aggregation contributed in a worthy manner to the cheering.

Adams and High both scored in the first, the former 4 and the latter 2. For three innings Adams held High by sending them down in one, two, three order. This would have been satisfactory to High if they could have done the same but Adams had meanwhile scored 5, and had taken a big lead. Devaney in the third distinguished himself.

Adams increased their score by making five more runs in the fifth but this was equalled by High in their half when they played a rattling inning.

Although the margin was great, the game was not safe until they had put out the last man.

In this inning with two on bases all hit to centre a hard drive. Bennett availed himself of the opportunity to play grandstand, as he could not do otherwise under the circumstances, and pulled down the difficult fly in his left hand.

Adams made their largest run up in the right when they added nine scores on errors. In the remainder of the game except the seventh inning, High went out in one, two, three order. In the seventh inning the run was scored by an excusable error of Thomas at left.

Fallon entered the box in the eighth and was exceedingly wild giving five bases on balls and allowing four hits after two were out. Hayward was reinstated in the ninth, and he too went to pieces but soon recovered.

For Adams, — O'Brien, Bennett and Moyle excelled in both fielding and stick work, while for High,—DeCoste, Drake and Hayward did themselves justice in the same line. Devaney made one good catch.

Victory for Thayer.

Thayer Academy won from Noble & Greenough Tuesday at South Braintree, after losing thre econsecutive games, by a score of 22 to 11.

With the exception of one inning the team work was excellent. With the score 2 and 1 in Thayer's favor at the first of the second inning, Noble & Greenough filled the bases full. Then Hammond forced two men in, and two more scored on a hit, followed by another run, thus making the score 6 to 2 in Noble's favor.

Thayer, however, in the next two innings made 5 and led again, and in the sixth by strong hitting scored ten runs thus clinching the game.

In the ninth the visitors rallied for four runs but by close in fielding they were checked none too soon.

In no game but one has Thayer hit so strongly and fielded so sharply. Hammond while in the box had no control while Winslow certainly did himself justice.

The features of the game were the strong hitting of Wright and Dow, the snappy double play and the all round playing of Russell, including a grand stand stop at third.

Although the team has lost many games through carelessness and has played poorly at times they have surely redeemed themselves when in tight places and have the strongest hitting team, without doubt, in this vicinity, and Friday they hope to even up matters with Brockton High who are a strong aggregation.

The Noon Alarms.

The alarm from Box 37 at 12.03 this noon was for a fire on the roof of the stone sheds at the Mitchell Granite works on Water street. The fire which was probably caused by sparks from a passing locomotive was quickly extinguished with the loss of a few shingles.

The one round from Box 21, at 1.20 this noon, was caused by an accident. Superintendent of the the Fire Alarm Gavin was at work upon the box and in cutting it out of the circuit he accidentally sounded one round of the box.

HUB HEBREWS STRIKE

Against the Purchase of Beef at the Prevailing High Prices

Boston, May 21.—The action of Julius Levin, a Hebrew meat dealer on Morton street, in opening his shop for business while all the other small dealers were closed and on strike against the prevailing high prices, precipitated a small-sized riot yesterday afternoon. The striking meat dealers and their supporters made a descent upon the store as soon as it was opened and free fights by the dozen followed. The street is narrow, and in a few minutes it was completely blocked. One or two came out of the melee badly used up. Women occupying the tenements along the narrow street looked out of their rooms on the throng below and added their shrill screams to the general hubbub.

In five minutes about all the meat that Levin had offered for sale was transferred to the sidewalk or ground into the sawdust on the floor. Levin closed the lively chapter by shutting up the store and the trouble ended for a time. A policeman sent the crowd flying into Salem street, and comparative peace reigned once more. No arrests were made.

The Hebrew retail butchers, who last week went out on strike, as yet have come to no agreement with the wholesalers. All yesterday afternoon the butchers paraded up and down the streets of the north end, urging their case before the public. During the day fights and arguments started up at almost every corner, and many threats were uttered by the excited strikers.

Rather Uncomplimentary

London, May 21.—The Daily Mail says the committee which was appointed to investigate the present system for the education and training of British officers is about to issue a report in which it will condemn, in emphatic and sweeping terms, this system in its entirety. The committee will also declare that as promotion depends upon anything rather than ability, there is no incentive to study.

Lives Lost and $2,000,000 Damage

Cincinnati, May 21.—A terrible wind and rain storm, accompanied by a waterspout, swept over this locality yesterday, causing a loss of six lives and injuring many others. The storm continued only 30 minutes, but the damage wrought in that time will amount to more than $1,000,000 in the business section of Cincinnati and as much more in other parts of the city and suburbs.

The Coal Creek Disaster

Knoxville, May 21.—A Coal Creek special says: The total number of bodies found in Fraterville mine aggregates 70. An effort was again made yesterday to effect an entrance into the Fraterville mine opening, but it proved unsuccessful. The gaseous odors emanating indicate that all the gas has not yet escaped.

McCrea Understands His Business

Washington, May 21.—Secretary Moody has done Commander Henry McCrea the unusual honor of tendering to him the formal thanks of the navy department for his excellent services in command of the U. S. S. Machias at the Isthmus of Panama.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The Quincy Representatives were on opposite sides on the substituting the McNary bill to prohibit water gas for the adverse report of the committee, Mr. Badger being paired in favor, and Mr. McKnight against. In the debate Chairman Moseley, Mr. Cheney of Lowell and Mr. Bemis of Foxboro opposed the substitute, while Mr. McNary, Mr. Drinkwater, Mr. Brigham and Mr. Brandes favored. The vote was 76 to 99, and the substitute was rejected.

The house started the debate on the doomage bill at the close of the gas discussion. This bill provides for 25 per cent. increases yearly upon the valuation of a man's property by the assessors unless he makes full returns. Quinn of Boston demanded that Boston be exempt. He said it was a bad measure for Boston when every effort was being made to build up trade. The bill is in order today.

Bills were reported in the House in favor of Mt. Tom reservation, requiring label on baking powders containing alum, to determine position of lists of delegates on caucus ballots.

In the Senate Senator Sprague was among the speakers in opposition to the bill to prohibit the use of fixed or movable devices for catching fish in the waters off Nantucket sound near Barnstable and Mashpee, believing that with the exception of the lobster no fish was affected by fishing. Senator Morrison also opposed, while Senator Nye favored. The bill was rejected 6 to 17.

The Senate recalled from the Governor the Sunday candy bill, and an amendment was moved, the effect of which was to make it apply only to druggists, innholders and common victuallers not licensed to sell intoxicating liquors. Also certain perfecting amendments as to common victualers not licensed to sell intoxicating liquors, the examination of the bill by the Attorney General having developed the fact that by an error in insertion the revised laws would have been so amended that they should not apply to the letting of horses, yachts or boats, etc., by common victualers. Bill put over until today.

Bills were engrossed to incorporate the Adams Trust Company on petition of Thomas A. Watson and to authorize towns to purchase electricity from street railway companies for lighting purposes.

A bill to compel factories employing women and minors to keep to their time schedule was opposed by Senator Jones of Middlesex and favored by Senator Bliss of Hampden. It was rejected by a single vote, 15 to 16.

Senator M. J. Sullivan favored a House bill to give local Boards of Health unlimited powers in dealing with certain nuisances, explaining that it had particular reference to the garbage plant at Spectacle Island. Rejected 9 to 18.

Assessors' Notice.

TO the inhabitants of the City of Quincy, and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein: You are hereby required to bring in to the Assessors of said City

On or Before June 15, 1902,

True and Perfect Lists of all the Polls, and Schedules and Estimates of all the Personal Estates and Real Estate for which you are liable to pay taxes.

Persons Holding Estates in Trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the Assessors with Statements in relation to such estates.

When the estates of persons deceased have been divided, or have changed hands from other causes during the past year, the Executors, Administrators, or other persons interested, are required to give notice of such changes, and in default of such notice will be held to pay the taxes assessed.

Blank forms for "Return of Property for Taxation" can be procured of the Assessors.

The following may serve as a guide to assist in making up Schedules and Statements:

Number of Polls 20 years and upwards; Money at interest; Amount of Money on hand, including deposits in Banks, etc., other than Savings Banks incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth; Railroad, Town, City, State and other Bonds (except those of the United States); Shares and Stocks of Insurance, Manufacturing and other incorporated companies chartered or organized under the laws of any State other than Massachusetts; Goods, Wares, Merchandise and other stock in trade, within or without the State; Household Furniture, exceeding $1,000 in value; Horses, Mules, Carriages, Oxen, Cows, other neat Cattle not less than one year old, and Swine and Sheep not less than six months old; Income from Profession, Trade or Employment exceeding $2,000; Personal Property held in trust or by wife or minor children.

Attention is hereby called to Section 32 of Chapter 12 of the Revised Laws.

"Whoever, with intent to defeat or evade the provisions of law in relation to assessment or payment of taxes, delivers or discloses to an assessor or an assistant assessor a false or fraudulent list, return, or schedule of property as and for a true list of his estates, not exempted from taxation shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment in jail not exceeding one year."

MORTGAGED PROPERTY—A mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the city or town in which it lies, within the time prescribed by the notice under Sect 41, a statement under oath of the amount secured thereon or on each separate parcel thereof, with the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagor or mortgagee. If such property is situated in two or more places, or if a recorded mortgage includes two or more estates or parts of an estate as security for one sum, such statement shall include an estimate of the interest of the mortgagee in each estate or part of an estate. The assessors shall, from such statement or otherwise, ascertain the proportionate interests of the mortgagor or mortgagee respectively in said estates, and shall assess the same accordingly. If, in any year, such statement is not brought in, the tax for that year on such real estate shall not be invalid merely for the reason that the interest of the mortgagee therein has not been assessed to him.—Sect. 45, Chap. 12, Revised Laws.

When a statement in conformity to the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under Sects. 16, 17 and 18 of Chap. 12 of the Revised Laws. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, no statement or return is required from either the mortgagee or mortgagor unless requested by the assessors in writing.

The Assessors will be in session at their office every Thursday morning from 9 to 11 o'clock. Blanks will be furnished to all applicants.

LITTLE OPPOSITION

To Petition For Injunction Against Beef Trust, Which Is Granted

Chicago, May 21.—The temporary injunction asked for by the government against the members of the so-called packers' combine is now in force. It was issued last evening by Judge Grosscup after the close of arguments in the United States circuit court. The order gives the relief prayed for in the bill filed by District Attorney Bethea on May 10. It is so wide in its scope that if the packers or their agents continue with their present alleged uniform arrangements they will be taken into court on contempt proceedings and the burden of proof will be on them to show that they have not violated the order in any particular.

Little opposition was raised against the government's petition. Attorney Miller, who was the sole representative of the packers present, pointed out some objectionable clauses in the draft of an order presented by Mr. Bethea. These concerned the alleged agreements for credit, blacklisting and cartage. Judge Grosscup thought some of these minor clauses had been made too prominent and he himself drew a form of order that pleased both sides. At the same time the order was entered numerous affidavits and other exhibits were filed for the government.

Unless the defendants decide to make a fight at an early date in an effort to have the order set aside they will have until Aug. 4 to make reply to the complaint. A demurrer is considered the most likely to be the form of the packers' defense.

In Congress

Washington, May 21.—The subject of the concentration of the inhabitants in the Philippines into camps was a leading topic of the discussion of the Philippine bill in the senate yesterday. Mr. Bacon attacked the policy of concentration. Mr. Foraker defended the action of the military authorities in establishing the camps in the Philippines as wise and proper. Mr. Hoar spoke briefly in line with Mr. Bacon, criticising the concentration camps. The day's debate was closed by Mr. Clapp, who urged that the Filipinos ought to be taught to admire and respect the United States.

A resolution felicitating Cuba on her independence was passed unanimously by the house. A bill amending the passport law was passed.

Gaynor and Greene In Jail

Quebec, May 21.—Messrs. Gaynor and Greene are prisoners in the Quebec jail, where they were committed yesterday afternoon. Their counsel will move for a writ of certiorari for the transmission of the record of the arrest of his clients from Montreal to Quebec. The next step to be taken by the attorneys representing the United States has not been disclosed, but it is said they are not disconcerted by the present situation. They are confident that ultimately extradition proceedings will be successful.

Locked Out Men Feel Sore

Augusta, Ga., May 21.—A committee from the locked-out operatives from the cotton mills in South Carolina who came to Augusta to confer with the mill owners and striking operatives announced yesterday that in its opinion the King mill men who struck and brought on the lockout were not justified in their action. The South Carolina men tried to induce the King men to return to work, but the latter refused, saying the interference of the locked-out operatives was an impertinence.

TO MISSIONARY WORK

America Owes Much For Her Present Greatness

CONQUEST OF CONTINENT

Would Have Had Little but an Animal Side Without It—Force of Living Truth Expanded With Nation's Growth—Address by Roosevelt

New York, May 21.—Carnegie hall was crowded last evening when President Roosevelt delivered an address in the interests of Presbyterian home missions, the occasion marking the close of the centennial celebration. When President Roosevelt took his seat on the platform he received a great ovation. A choir of 125 voices sang a hymn and the president sang with them.

"Every true American," said Dr. Dodge in his opening remarks, "is grateful that his country was founded by men and women who feared God; and today this nation is receiving its chief strength and support from God-fearing men and women." In introducing President Roosevelt, Dr. Dodge said that no man knows better than the president the importance to the nation of the good work of the missions. President Roosevelt said:

"It is a pleasure on behalf of the people of the United States to bid you welcome on the 100th anniversary of the beginning of organized home missionary work by the Presbyterian church. In one sense of course all fervent and earnest church work is a part of home missionary work. Every earnest and zealous believer, every man or woman who is a doer of the work and not a hearer only, is a life-long missionary in his or her field of labor; a missionary by precept and, what is a thousand fold more than precept, by practice. Every such believer exerts influence on those within reach, somewhat by word and infinitely through the ceaseless yet well-nigh unseen pressure, all the stronger when its exercise is unconscious, of example, of broad, loving, charitable neighborliness.

"But tonight we celebrate 100 years of missionary work done with set purpose; a hundred years of earnest effort to spread abroad the gospel, to lay deep the moral foundation upon which true national greatness must rest. The century that has closed has seen the conquest of this continent by our people. To conquer a continent is rough work. All really great work is rough in the doing, though it may seem smooth enough to those who look back upon it or who gaze upon it from afar.

"The roughness is an unavoidable part of the doing of the deed. We need display but scant patience with those who, sitting at ease in their own homes, delight to exercise a querulous and censorious spirit of judgment upon their brethren who, whatever their shortcomings, are doing strong men's work as they bring the light of civilization into the world's dark places. The criticism of those who live softly, remote from the strife, is of little value, but it would be difficult to overestimate the value of the missionary work by those who go out to share the hardship, and while sharing it, to wage war against the myriad forms of brutality.

"It is such missionary work which prevents the pioneers from sinking perilously near the level of the savagery against which they contend. Without it the conquest of this continent would had little but an animal side. Without it the pioneers' fierce and rude virtues and sombre faults would have been left unlit by the flame of pure and loving aspirations. Without it the life of this country would have been a life of inconceivably hard and barren materialism. Because of it deep beneath and through the national character there runs that power of firm adherence to a lofty ideal upon which the safety of the nation will ultimately depend.

"Honor, thrice honor to those who for three generations, during the period of this people's great expansion, have seen that the force of the living truth expanded as the nation expanded. They bore the burden and heat of the day, they toiled obscurely and died unknown, that we might come into a glorious heritage. Let us prove the sincerity of our homage to their faith and their works by the way in which we manfully carry toward completion what under them was so well begun."

WHY STAY PALE?

A pity to see pale girls stay pale and dull when it is so easy to get Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion does a few things well. One of them is to give rich red blood to pale girls. There is a reason for it.

But perhaps you are more interested in results than in reasons.

The result of steady daily doses of Scott's Emulsion is an increase not only in the red color of the blood and in the appetite but in the good looks and bright manners which are the real charm of good health.

Scott's Emulsion is blood food.

Big Fire at Worcester

Worcester, Mass., May 21.—A four-story brick building in the rear of 279 Main street, occupied by The Spy as a composing, press and stereotyping room, and a wholesale house for the E. G. Higgins Wall Paper company, was totally destroyed by fire at 1:30 this morning. The flames spread to the Main street building occupied by The Spy as an editorial room and business office, and the retail store of the Higgins company. The flames then spread to the Dickinson & Flagg building, north and south of the burning building, and to a three-story frame dwelling on Eden street, occupied by two families, who got out before the building was badly burned. The loss is heavy.

Shock May Have Caused Death

Torrington, Conn., May 21.—Mrs. Mary Itre, who was arrested on the charge of having caused the death of a neighbor, Mrs Mary Collen, by jabbing her in the stomach with a broomstick, was held yesterday by order of the coronor to await the result of the inquest. The medical examiner gives it as his opinion that the death was due to shock, presumably caused by the suddenness, unexpectedness and peculiar location of the blow.

Gray Retains His Place

Cambridge, Mass., May 21.—The board of aldermen last night voted not to sustain Mayor McNamee in discharging W. H. Gray, superintendent of public buildings. This conclusion was reached after a hearing which had been in progress for 126 hours, during the past 26 days. McNamee removed Gray without a hearing for alleged irregularity in building contracts, but the supreme court ordered the mayor and aldermen to review the case.

Friends' Society's Centennial

Pittsfield, N. H., May 21.—The Friends' society in the South Pittsfield community observed their centennial anniversary of the church yesterday with appropriate exercises. The quaint old edifice of the Friends' society was dedicated on May 20, 1802, and its doors have been open for worship continuously from that date.

Election Commissioner Removed

Boston, May 21.—Mayor Collins yesterday removed John J. Hogan from the board of election commissioners and named as his successor David B. Shaw. Mayor Collins says that two charges against Hogan were sustained, but he declines to discuss the causes which led to his removal. Hogan also declines to talk of the matter.

Heroic Rescue From Drowning

Provincetown, Mass., May 21.—After being in the water 15 minutes, and sinking to the bottom, utterly exhausted, George Rich was rescued yesterday by Joseph R. Holmes, a doryman, who submerged himself to the depth of several feet before he succeeded in grasping the hand of the drowning man.

Sister Left Out of Will

Pawtucket, R. I., May 21.—An appeal has been filed from the probate of the will of the late George L. Littlefield, by Mrs. Ann E. Tennant, sister of the deceased, who was cut off without provision. The estate involves about $600,000.

Tsarskoye Selo, Rus., May 21.—The czar and President Loubet of France arrived here yesterday afternoon. It is considered probable that the French squadron will return home by way of Copenhagen, and that in any case it will avoid passing through the Kiel canal.

No Attempt to Kill Emperor

Vienna, May 21.—Investigation of the statement sent from here to the London Daily Chronicle to the effect that an attempt against the life of Emperor Francis Joseph at Vienna had been frustrated by the authorities, proves the story to be without foundation.

Madrid Continues Entertainment

Madrid, May 21.—The battle of flowers yesterday was a brilliant success. The firing of cannon announced the opening of the battle, and the cannon were fired again at its conclusion. Several hundred profusely beflowered carriages and floats took part.

MARTINIQUE IS DOOMED

Opinion of Refugees From Stricken Island

NORTHERN PART IS GONE

Fort de France Being Depopulated by Panic-Stricken People—Continuous Agitation of Volcano on St Vincent Causes Fearful Feeling of Suspense

Pointe-A-Pitre, Island of Guadeloupe, May 22.—The streams of boiling mud and the fire from the last eruption of Mt. Pelee destroyed all that remained of the northern part of the island, according to the refugees, and Martinique seems destined to complete destruction.

The steamer Horten has arrived here with 200 refugees from Fort de France, Martinique, on board.

It is reported here that the French steamer Salvador, with 1000 people on board, who are unable to remain at Fort de France, is coming here, and that everybody who can do so is leaving that port.

Leaving Fort de France

Castries, Island of St. Lucia, May 22.—The Norwegian steamer Helga arrived here yesterday from Fort de France. She is filled with refugees from that port and reports that, owing to the continuous fall of heavy stones and other volcanic matter there, the inhabitants of Fort de France are fleeing the town.

The Helga was discharging coal at Fort de France, but was compelled by the volcanic disturbance to abandon this work.

St Vincent Terror-Stricken

Kingstown, Island of St. Vincent, May 22.—The continuous agitation of the volcano and the absence of rain has caused the vicinity of the afflicted villages to look like portions of the Sahara desert.

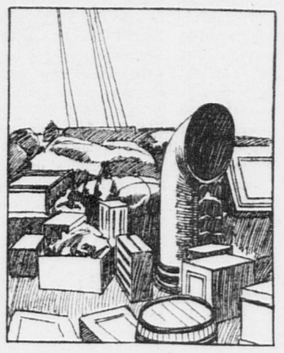

TYPICAL STREET IN ST. VINCENT.

A thick, smoky cloud overspreads the island, all business is suspended here, the streets are empty and everyone is terror-stricken. The feeling of suspense is painful. People pass their time gazing at the northern sky, where the thunder clouds gather, and the mournful roaring of the volcano is heard. Ashes and pumice are falling slowly in the out districts.

Supplies For Eight Weeks

Washington, May 22.—Adjutant General Corbin last night received the following cablegram, dated Fort de France, May 21, from Captain Gallagher, who went to Martinique on the Dixie:

SUPPLIES ABOARD THE DIXIE.

"Effects of eruption confined to north portion of island; St. Pierre and neighboring villages totally destroyed. Thirty thousand a fair estimate of loss of life in zone of destruction. Physical conditions normal, but people panic-stricken. This condition was increased by yesterday's eruption, which was quite severe, but did not materially add to desolation. Supplies of all kinds sufficient for eight weeks. What has been done was just what emergency demanded and nothing further can be suggested; government and people most grateful. Dixie now discharging part of cargo; will proceed with what remains to St. Vincent."

Parisian Estimates of News

Paris, May 22.—Outside the ministry of the colonies, news from Martinique does not produce an apparent ripple on the surface of Parisian life. The Figaro devotes over two pages to President Loubet's visit to the czar, while the Martinique news gets barely a third of a column. This is a fair sample of the estimate of the Parisian press regarding the value of the Martinique stories.

Sixty Percent of Injured Will Die

London, May 22.—The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Kingstown, Island of St. Vincent, describes in a dispatch the conditions on that island. He says that 60 percent of the persons injured cannot recover. Owing to the difficulty of breathing, the correspondent could not get near La Soufriere. Everywhere on the island the rivers have been stopped by the dust or lava, and in one valley the dust lies 60 feet deep. Most of the deaths on St. Vincent were caused by a blast of heated, sulphurous air.

Fears of Eruption In France

Paris, May 22.—The Petit Journal says that uneasiness exists concerning a volcano which up to the present time has been supposed to be extinct, at St. Pierre de Varennes, in the south of France. Rumblings, accompanied by a trembling of the earth, were noticed at St. Pierre de Varennes the early part of the week. Last Sunday, and again at 2 o'clock in the morning of Monday, the people of the town became panic-stricken.

HUB'S KOSHER TROUBLES

Expected to Reach Climax When Hebrews Make Sabbath Purchases

Boston, May 22.—Petty rows, easily quelled by the appearance of the police, and indignation meetings galore, marked the second day of the "kosher" beef troubles in the north and west end ghettos. And yet there is trouble brewing.

Though the sullen discontent of the Hebrew quarter was betrayed mostly during the day and night by angry looks and gestures and by frequent and fruitless appeals to the offending butchers to close their doors, there is every possibility that the popular fury will vent itself tonight, when all orthodox Hebrews usually purchase their Sabbath supplies.

Yesterday morning there were indications that the stormy scenes of the day before would be even more than duplicated. Shortly after 7 o'clock a self-appointed committee of the union butchers and their friends called at the store of Julius Levine and attempted to force him to shut up shop. Levine grabbed his cleaver, his frightened family armed themselves with various keen-edged tools, and the disheartened callers beat a hasty retreat. Thereafter the presence of an officer within the store was enough to keep the mob at a distance. Nevertheless, pickets stationed themselves at the corners of the street and turned away many an intending customer.

"Kosher" or "pure" beef is the flesh of an animal that has been killed by a regularly ordained rabbi and afterwards treated according to the prescribed Hebrew rites.

Clement Makes Good Start

Montpelier, Vt., May 22.—Percival W. Clement, the high license local option candidate for nomination as governor at the Republican convention, carried the caucus in this city last night, and so scored the first important victory in the ante-convention fight. General McCullough had control of the organization, and all the Republicans who were looked upon as leaders worked for him, but he was defeated by six votes.

NO CONCESSIONS

American Woolen Company Will Adhere to the Double-Loom System

Providence, May 22.—The position of the American Woolen company in the strike which has been in progress four months among the weavers in a dozen of its mills, was yesterday shown to be identical with that first taken—that the double-loom system will not be abolished. An official of the company is quoted as saying that the looms would not be singled out if it took five years to fight the issue, and then an entirely new force of weavers would have learned to do the work. This the Textile union officials deem sufficient to show that the strike will be continued to the limit of endurance.

In an interview with Manager Ward of the Riverside mills in Olneyville regarding a report that the looms in his mill were being singled out he said: "There will be no singling out of looms at the Riverside mills, and there are no concessions to be made. This whole matter is a matter of business. It was all gone over when the trouble started, and it was decided that there were no concessions to be made. We have given up this season's business and we would not have work enough for the weavers now if the trouble was settled at this time."

The strike is the largest as well as the most keenly contested labor difficulty which has ever occurred in the woolen industry. Although probably 18,000 people were for a time affected, that number has been reduced. The majority of the strikers are said to be at work in the independent mills.

General Dimon Dead

Lowell, Mass., May 22.—Mayor Dimon died yesterday. He was born in Fairfield, Conn., in 1841, and was employed in the office of his uncle when he enlisted in Salem Mass., April 17, 1861, and was commissioned lieutenant colonel of the First Infantry March 8, 1864; promoted colonel March 12 of the same year; commissioned brevet brigadier general, United States volunteers, March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services throughout the war. He had been connected with the United States Cartridge company for 28 years. He was an expert on firearms and was summoned as such as a witness in many important cases.

Politicians Sent to Prison

Boston, May 22.—Temple A. Winslow was given 18 months, William W. Lowd one year, and Alfred Newmarch nine months in the house of correction by Judge Stevens yesterday for participating in the ward 21 Republican caucus fraud conspiracy of last fall. John Rogers, the fourth man convicted, was absent when his name was called, and was defaulted with $3000 bail. Nothing was done with Averill and Joslin, who pleaded guilty and were used as government witnesses at the time of the trial.

Decision Won't Please Labor

Boston, May 22.—A puzzling question was decided yesterday when the Franklin fund managers voted to purchase the Kelley's ledge property in the Roxbury district as a site for the city's Franklin institute. The price decided upon is $146,000. The property has figured conspicuously in local politics in times past. Labor organizations had demanded that a site be chosen in the congested section of the south end, and it is expected that they will make a protest against the managers' decision.

Child Mysteriously Missing

Barre, Vt. May 22.—As a thorough search by nearly 200 men, aided by bloodhounds, has failed to disclose the slightest trace of the 4-year-old son of J. D. Fordham of Corinth, who disappeared on Sunday afternoon, fears are entertained that the boy has been kidnapped. A pool of blood found near where the boy was last seen strengthens the belief that someone carried him away. The boy has been living with his mother's sister in Corinth, while his father resides in Braintree.

For Drinking Bride's Health

Salem, Mass., May 22.—City Marshal Knight has suspended Patrolmen Day and Lomasney on charges of conduct unbecoming officers. The charge, it is understood, is of drinking while on duty and in full uniform. As the story goes the men were invited into a French wedding party on their route and while there yielded to the importunities of their guests and drank to the health of the bride. It is not charged that they drank to excess or neglected their duties.

Arrested on Murder Charge

Cambridge, Mass., May 22.—Benjamin Creighton, a negro of this city, was arrested yesterday at Newport, R. I., on the charge of the murder of Richard Powell, also a negro. Creighton made no resistance. The assault, which it is charged Creighton committed upon Powell, which resulted Tuesday in the latter's death, occurred on the evening of May 9, in front of the latter's home in this city.

Murder In Second Degree

Worcester, Mass., May 22.—Leon M. Hapgood, indicted by the grand jury for murder of Sampson Seaverns at Rutland Jan. 19, yesterday pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree and was sentenced to imprisonment for life at Charlestown. This disposition of the case was made by agreement of Hapgood's counsel and District Attorney Hoar.

MOST STRICT ECONOMY

Will Be Necessary For Cuba to Live Within Her Income

HER TREASURY MENACED

Reciprocity Treaty With United States Would Furnish Outlet For Island's Sugar and Stimulate Business—Roosevelt Interested In the Matter

Havana, May 22.—President Palma took up his official residence at the palace yesterday and received many visitors, but he transacted no business. Governmental machinery and business will remain at a standstill during the festivities, which will not close until next Friday.

PRESIDENT PALMA.

The immediate financial future of Cuba is a matter of concern, as the customs receipts have fallen off appreciably during the last few weeks. With the small surplus turned over to the republic and the present rate of receipts, against the increase in expenditures on account of congress and the new salaries, the treasury may be in difficulties before next fall.

For this reason Senor Palma insists upon the lowest possible salaries and the most rigid economy. He is determined that the island shall live within its income. The new government will give this matter immediate attention and if it should be absolutely necessary the expenses will be curtailed or some changes may be made in the internal revenue taxes to increase the revenues. The latter step, however, the new government will be loath to take, because of its bad moral effect.

The chief hope lies in the immediate negotiation of a reciprocity treaty with the United States to permit of the marketing of the island's sugar. The sale of this product, it is believed, would stimulate importations by distributing money and increasing consumption.

FIRM FOR RECIPROCITY

President Not Disposed to Accept Rebate Compromise For Cuba

Washington, May 22.—All the talk about the president's backing down in the Cuban reciprocity question and consenting to a rebate arrangement may be dismissed. What may be the outcome of the work his friends in the senate are doing for the reciprocity plan is still problematic. There is no such thing as absolutely forecasting the support which any measure presented by the committee will receive. Not until the roll is called and the tally clerk takes down the responses, will it be known whether the hopes of the administration will be fulfilled.

The extra session question will depend upon what congress does or leaves undone. It may pass a measure wholly inadequate to meet the recommendations of the president, but undoubtedly it must dispose of the matter in some way if it would escape being called together again. The president has said very plainly to one or two senators that it is now congress' turn to act. He has done all he can. Congress knows that the nation stands pledged to do something. The only branch of the government that can act now, and has not acted, is the legislature. He therefore insists that congress shall say "yes" or "no" in simple terms.

It will be a bitter disappointment to him if a poor and insufficient measure is enacted; but something must be passed and the subject finally disposed of. If it is left still "hung up" when the present session adjourns, he will issue a call for an extra session beyond a peradventure.

The nation's pledge may be redeemed in a generous way, or in a stingy way, but in some way it must be, and the world will know where to place the responsibility for the way this demand of honor is met.

Good Afternoon.

Our form of government requires pure politics. The three men convicted in connection with the Ward 21 frauds in Boston deserved all they received, and may congratulate themselves that they got off so easy.

The Congregational denomination of Massachusetts has taken an advanced step in deciding to erect a national memorial church. Plymouth the landing place of the Pilgrims is fortunate in being selected as the location. The edifice will cost about $250,000 and all Congregational churches in the country will be asked to contribute.

The answer filed by the railway merger shows that freight rates have been reduced since the formation of the Northern Securities Company and that the economy in management is necessary to enable American roads to compete with the Canadian railway in its through water route to the Orient. The contest is for world trade rather than for that of this country.

The progress in ocean steamship construction in the past sixty years has increased the length of the typical steamer from 215 to 706 feet; depth from 24 to 49 feet; beam, or width, from 34 to 75 feet; displacement from 1,700 to 37,700 tons; engines from 740 to 37,000 horse-power, and the passenger capacity from 90 to 2,900 persons.

It seems to be the consensus of opinion that Mayor Bryant will get into trouble if he pursues the same tactics against teamsters as he inaugurated this week. His failure to find in a single express wagon any liquor that was being transportated illegally shows there was little ground for such a wholesale move. Under certain conditions liquor may be transported through no-license towns, and it is questionable whether Quincy should attempt to regulate all the express business of the South Shore. If each city and town looks after its local expressmen it will do all that is necessary. A little more attention to liquor selling and malicious mischief in the city would be better business for the police of Quincy.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Congressman Roberts' heart beats warm for the navy yards. Still, it is somewhat doubtful if any of the new warships will be constructed in these yards, owing to the lack of facilities for carrying on such work advantageously. Probably Congressman Roberts knows this as well as the navy department does. Nevertheless, it is necessary for a congressman with a navy yard in his district to make a bluff at it.—Herald.

☞ The street railway companies, under the grade crossing abolition bill passed by the house last week will secure the return of their entire contribution toward the expense of abolishing a grade crossing if at any time thereafter their location is revoked, regardless of what the cause of revocation may be. According to this law it will make no difference how gross a violation of franchise agreement may be committed, it will cost any town or city a pretty penny to revoke a location where such an improvement has been made. The street railway companies, by this legislation drive one more long spike to make their franchises more permanent. They ought to be pretty well satisfied with the legislation of the present session.

OPPOSITION

To Building Warships at the Navy Yards.

Secretary of Navy Moody Is Against It.

Would Cost Half a Million to Equip Boston Yard.

A Washington dispatch to the Herald says strong opposition will be exerted by the navy department against the acceptance of the House provision in the naval appropriation bill providing for the construction of battleships, armored cruisers and gun boats at government navy yards, and a communication will be forwarded to Senate naval committee urging the rejection of that clause.

Secretary Moody has the same views on the question of building ships at navy yards that were held by Secretary Long, and will support the recommendations of the bureau chiefs, who are unanimously against the proposition.

Admiral Bowles estimates that over a half a million dollars would be necessary to equip the Portsmouth, New York and Norfolk navy yards for battleship building, and at Boston even a larger sum would be required. This latter yard, it will be shown, has not yet reached the stage of equipment possessed by the other yards at the seaboard and will not be in a position to build battleships, even with increased appropriations, under two or three years.

Admiral Bowles strongly opposes the idea regardless of the expense incident to improving the yards, on the broad ground that the government can build better and cheaper warships under private contract and in less time. The navy yards he holds, are primarily for the repair work of warships, and as the policy of Congress has been so settled for years against the building of warships at navy yards, the improvement of the plants has been more in the direction of increasing repair facilities than for providing slips and shops for the construction of vessels.

All the more important yards have been incessantly busy since the close of the Spanish war, and to begin the construction of vessels at any of them, it is claimed, would necessitate not only an immense increase of force, but would possibly interfere with speedy work upon ships requiring overhauling.

The advantage of having navy yards thoroughly equipped for building any class of war vessel is conceded by the naval designers and constructors, so that in event of a ship trust being formed the government could build its own vessels, and not be dependent upon the private yards; but the yards are not now in condition to turn out this class of work.

Monday Evening Club.

The Atlantic Monday Evening club held its last meeting for the season on Monday evening. The large audience listened with unwavering interest to an admirable paper on "Literature for children," given by Mr. Frank E. Parlin, Superintendent of the Quincy public schools. His paper was exceedingly interesting, suggestive and instructive, and his personality was pleasing to everyone.

Miss Annie White of Atlantic read a paper on "The strange adventures of Mrs Leeks and Mrs. Aleshine" which renewed very pleasantly our acquaintance with those extremely original characters of Frank Stockton.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Y. Follett of Wollaston sang the duets "Passage bird's farewell" and "I feel thy angel spirit" Mrs. Follett sang the solos "Birds on Wing," "May morning" and the "Hay makers," and Mr. Follet the bass solo "Border Ballad." It was the first appearance of Mr. and Mrs. Follett at the club and the audience were delighted with their entertainment.

Mr. B. H. McCurdy, a tenor from Boston sang "I love thee," "Morning and evening star," "Last night" and "Still as the night."

Mr. Thomas D. Borst announced the program. The committee for the evening were: Mrs. T. D. Borst, Mrs. Elijah Hall and Mrs. Roger Wilde.

The annual meeting occurs May 26.

IN SUMMER ATTIRE.

Daily Arrivals at Houghs Neck by the Sea.

Houghs Neck is beginning to put on its summer appearance. The all-the-year residents, who quarrel among themselves during the winter months have buried the hatchet and peace reigns once more. The summer residents have begun to arrive and every day loads of household goods are unloaded at some cottage. The real estate men report an unusual good demand for houses and nearly everything has been let for the season.

The indications are that there will be plenty of excitement this year with the large gang of men working upon the sewer. Then the new steamer will doubtless bring many excursions. Aside from this the Quincy Yacht club is showing more life than last year and they will liven things up some with their club races, open race and ladies' day.

Silas Gurney and family of Brockton are in the Abbie M. cottage on Rogers street.

There are a surplus of dogs at the beach, many of which are said to be unlicensed.

James Jordan and family of Dorchester are in the Bousang cottage on Darrow street.

The Fensmere bowling alleys, which were damaged by the high tide last winter, are being repaired.

Arthur H. Dunham will run the Mears hotel stables this season.

The repairs on the Quincy Yacht club house are going on apace and the new float is at the foot of Bell street.

C. K. Small and family of Roxbury are in a cottage on Bird street.

The brick for the sewer is being landed at the steamboat wharf. The contract calls for 7,000,000.

Charles L. Shea of the railway mail service is in a cottage on Weymouth street.

Government Built Ships.

We pointed out a few days ago that it was customary in England to have some of the warships built at the various navy yards. Thus, of the score or more of battleships and cruisers that, according to the last official reports, were in process of construction, some four or five are building at the government yards at Portsmouth and Chatham.

We imagine that in England it is found cheaper to build a battleship in a private shipyard than under government auspices, but it is thought that it may be just as well to now and then experiment in what may be termed public construction, so that the government may not be entirely dependent upon contracting builders.

Whether the congressmen who have been instrumental in pushing this matter forward have done so for purposes of national advantage may be open to doubt. What some of them have been obviously aiming at has been to have money expended in their districts so that they could come before their constituents with the credit of having found easy and and profitable employment for a good many hundred of them.

As was pointed out in the debate in the House, government work of this kind is expensive work because of its political character. The hours of a day's labor are restricted, the pay accorded is of the highest grade for manual services, and the men employed are ordinarily put on as the outcome of political favoritism. These conditions are hardly those which make for industrial economy and efficiency, and hence it is not strange to be told that the battleships Maine and Texas, which were built in the goyernment yards, cost to construct 50 per cent. more than would have been the case if they had been built in private yards.

But while prepared to admit that this work is expensive, that it has been urged in Congress for personal ends rather than the public welfare, we are none the less disposed to think that there are, as we pointed out above, compensating advantages if not too much of it is attempted.—Herald.

Barn on Fire.

The alarm from Box 42 at 10.16 this morning called the department to a lively blaze in the shed and barn on William Thompson estate on Granite street. It is reported that the fire started from a bonfire. When discovered the shed was blazing fiercely. The shed was practically consumed and one end of the barn burned before the flames were extinguished. During the early progress of the fire, sparks ignited the roof of Gilbert Miller's stable adjoining but the prompt use of a lawn hose prevented any damage from being done. The loss on Thompson's shed and barn will not be heavy as both were empty. The all-out signal was given at 11.40.

Light refreshments were served, and there were cigars and T. D.'s for all.

The Magazines.

The chief feature of the June Woman's Home Companion is an article by Edgar Fawcett on the coronation of Edward VII., entitled "The Crowning of a King." The Rev. Dr. James L. Barton contributes an interesting "Chapter of Missionary Aventures." Arthur Hoyt gives a graphic description of what will happen "When the Pope Dies." Another feature is "The children of the White House." The fiction is especially strong.

In Success for June, Walter Camp, the well-known authority on athletics, contributes a valuable and interesting article on college games, and Dr. Louisa Smith, the director of physical culture at Bryn Mawr College, tells of the importance of this branch of work in women's universities. In this number, Mrs. Rebecca Harding Davis commences a startling serial story entitled "A Boy's Fight," which promises to be one of the most spirited narratives of the day.

CHARACTER SKETCH.

Henry H. Faxon as Seen by Boston Newspaper Man.

Thousands who have never seen Henry H. Faxon look for some grim-visaged, sad-eyed, bald-headed and shrill-voiced old crank, with no other occupation than protesting aloud ever and forever against rum and rumsellers. Delightful disappointment awaits them, says Practical Politics, which prints this sketch: Henry Faxon is not an unattractive personality, and he is a man withal of busy characteristics. At times he wears a smile of sweet, rustic simplicity that ever attracts the vender of goldbricks. But Henry, although he might examine the articles and discuss feelingly on the merits of the gold standard, would never buy the brick. Instead of the depressing front of the crank, Henry Faxon presents an open, frank, genial countenance.

By a never absent merry twinkle of the eye the legislators recognize and know Henry Faxon. His voice is pleasant and his humor contagious. Year after year he has appeared before legislative committees and with cogent argument, brightened by genuine wit he has discussed the problems at issue. Day after day he has kept the table in a roar, appealing to the good sense of the Massachusetts legislature rather as a worldly wise philosopher than a lean and biased crank. It was his manner of presentation of his subject that first gained for Faxon the standing he secured and which he enjoys today.

Of course Faxon is and has been in reality "a crank." He would be the last to deny it. A crank has been aptly defined as one "who always turns the same way." With this definition in mind, he is a crank of the most confirmed sort. It is so refreshing, however, on Beacn hill, to strike a crank devoid of the usual characteristics that one almost feels like asking Henry to step out and take something when he concludes an argument.

With all his earnestness and intensity, however, Mr. Faxon has never attempted to force his gospel down the throat of the unbeliever with a ramrod. For the honest opinions of others he has ever manifested respect, while, in the gentlest and most direct way possible, he told them they were all wrong. The news that Faxon was to appear before the commitee on liquor law was enough to crowd the chamber a few years ago. There was nothing Henry liked better than an attentive committee and a good audience. He usually got both and then he was at his best.

The life of Henry Hardwick Faxon presents many interesting chapters. It is almost four-score years now since the day of his birth. Sept. 28, 1823, was the day that ushered into being the man who has caused so much trouble to the liquor sellers of the old Bay State. If Henry's probable term of existence is to be measured by that enjoyed by his distinguished father Job Faxon, however, he has many years ahead yet. His father was almost 93 when he died, and history narrates that up to 10 days before that event the old gentleman was haying in the field.

In his early life Henry Faxon engaged in the boot and shoe business and afterwards went into the grocery business, first in Quincy his native town and afterwards in Boston. History does not say that he mixed sand with the sugar or watered the milk, but certain it is that about 1861 he retired from the grocery business "with a modest fortune." Whatever innate shrewdness Faxon possessed came to the front in the few years that followed. By happy investment in the necessities of life he made another fortune. It was about this time that he invested in several hundreds of barrels of rum and whiskey also which he disposed of at a handsome profit. This is one of the inconsistencies of life. His opponents have never ceased to hurl the accusation at the head of the apostle of temperance, and the accused never attempted to deny it.

With a fortune behind him, he entered on his great life-work, the combat against the rum interests. His active temperance crusading dates from his second term in the house of representatives in 1872. He girded his loins for the battle and has never had time to take the girdles off since.

He started out and has nominally remained, a Republican. To bolt a nomination made by his party, however, never has worried Faxon in the least. His heart was in the prohibitory movement, and he brought into the movement the first semblance of "method" and "system." He devoted weeks and months to sizing up the members elected to the general court. The result of his studies in this direction were the so-called "ratings" of members. This was a clever piece of work. The men who could be trusted implicity to stand by prohibitive legislation were accorded three stars, placed against their names; one star indicated a fluctuation of the market, in that the member could not be relied upon with child-like confidence, in other words, he "wobbled;" the dread dash against a name indicated the enemy of temperance. Of course men changed as the years went on. Certain members under this system, several of them in the state senate at present, have worn the three badges in as many successive years. On the whole, however, the rating system, the Faxon code, it might be called, did much for the prohibition people and worked the political defeat of many an aspiring statesman who could not get by on election day because his name had been "dashed."

Another institution of Faxon's was the temperanbe republican headquarters on Bromfield street. This was established about twenty-five years ago. Anything of worth ever written against the saloon may be found there. It is a pleasant place to visit. There are no impliments of war or torture. The "water cure" is on file, but it is a process entirely different from that in vogue in the Philippines. There are no pictures of Carrie Nation, no nicked and dented hatchets for "effective work." In fact, there is nothing more formidable in the spacious chamber than a little box of pen-knives with which Mr. Faxon yearly carves his way to the affections of the press contingent at the state house. It is here that Miss Eva M. Brown, his secretary, in the absence of her chief, receives the temperance folk and others seeking light, and helps to plan temperance campaigns.

While Mr. Faxon has been thus engrossed for years at the state house, he has not neglected in the least the moral welfare of his own city of Quincy. His real estate holdings are large there and this gives him more of a handle than he would otherwise have. Henry Faxon has given freely of his fortune, and all churches in Quincy, Catholic and Protestant, have received monetary contributions annually to aid in the common crusade.

While many may differ with the gallant old fighter, there are few who would deny his absolute sincerity and entire honesty in the campaigns he has waged, and his bitterest opponent would concede his fairness, no matter how hot the fight. It will probably be many years before he ceases all active work, and many more before his influence ceases to be a factor in Massachusetts.

☞ The attractive estate of Mr. Nathan Ames on Cross street, West Quincy, will be sold at auction on Saturday next, by F. F. Crane. This is one of the best residences in West Quincy, and is near schools, steam and electric cars. Nine rooms with modern conveniences. See notice in another column.

LIQUOR SCARCE.

Teamsters Overhauled But with Little Success.

There were great times in City Square Wednesday afternoon and evening when Mayor Bryant backed up by Chief Hayden and his squad of blue coats made it unpleasant for the numerous teamsters who pass through Quincy.

Mayor Bryant arrived at his office at City Hall early in the afternoon and giving the hook on the police call in his office a vigorous pull was soon in communication with Chief Hayden. The substance of their talk was that he wanted war made on the express teams for illegal liquor transportation, and he wanted it made quickly.

The Chief with Inspector McKay, Officers Barry and Murray were soon with the Mayor and the work of the evening was commenced.

The first team tackled was that of a Italian apparently loaded with bananas. The driver was Bova Casimo and buried beneath his load of fruit where the sun's rays could not reach them were four cases of beer.

The police did not inquire whether it was union or non-union beer but seized it. Bova said one case was his and the other belonged to two friends whom he met in Boston and who had asked him to bring it out for them. He received no pay for his teaming.

Word of what was going on soon became noised about and quite a crowd collected to see the fun. Every team was overhauled and their books examined. Some of the drivers did not like the idea of being stopped and their language was more forcible than elegant.

Officer Goodhue came on duty at 7 o'clock and the work was continued up to 9 o'clock. Twenty-five teams were overhauled but strange to say no more liquor was found. It later developed that most of the drivers had received a tip at Neponset of what was going on. Some left their alcoholic goods while others drove around through Milton and thus kept clear of the officers who were stationed on Hancock street.

Late in the evening a teamster whipped up his horses and attempted to drive by the police when ordered to stop. Officer McCarthy who has been in training and is quite a sprinter made a record breaking dash and caught the horses. The driver was very wrathy and told the Mayor in plain language just what he thought of him.

The game was called off shortly after 9 o'clock. Whether the same plan will be put in operation again no one knows but the Mayor and he did not say.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Several Amendments to a Wide Tire Bill Offered.

Senator Sprague supported on Wednesday the Fitzgerald substitute for a second State sanatarium at a cost of $150,000 which prevailed 18 to 3.

After striking out newsdealers from the privileged list, the Sunday candy bill was enacted, and again goes to the House.

Without debate, a motion to reconsider the rejection of the bill that women and minors in manufacturing and mechanical establishments shall only work during regular time schedules, prevailed by a vote of 18 to 8.

On motion of Jones of Melrose, a bill to regulate the hours of labor of nurses and attendants in hospitals and asylums was referred to the committee on ways and means, Jones stating that it might cost the commonwealth $25,000 for additional salaries.

The Labor committee reported a bill to provide for the annual appointment by the president and speaker of a joint committee to confer with similar committees of other legislatures so as to furthur 8-hour legislation; also a bill to provide that employes who leave their positions or are discharged shall be paid in full by employers on the next regular pay day.

Mr. Nary was unable to secure in the House the substitution of his bill for a reorganization of the Boston police force.

The House refused also to repeal the legislation of last year amending the libel law in favor of publishers.

A bill to allow the city of Pittsfield to pave its streets and assess betterments, met with some opposition but was ordered to a third reading.

The wide tire bill is again before the Legislature. Three amendments were offered on Wednesday—to exempt Fall River, to require rubber tires, to exempt farmers.

Among the reports was a bill to define the rights of a husband or wife in the real estate of a deceased wife or husband. Ought to pass on the bill to regulate taxes upon collateral legacies and successions.

FASHION HINTS.

New Features in Tailor-Mades—Gown of Fancy Suiting.

The material for this handsome street costume is a fancy suiting, but it will also be quite chic if developed of smooth finished cloth. Some of the newest features in tailor-mades, the basque or skirt as well as the broad shoulder effect are combined in this smart gown. The long rolling collar and the straps over the shoulder and around the bottom of the skirt are of moire. The revers and the extension vest are of white moire stitched with several rows of Corticelli silk; small buttons are set down the centre of the vest as well as on the fronts, and clusters of buttons are placed on the shoulder straps and sleeves. The latter are quite novel, the fitted undersleeves of moire being completed with cloth over sleeves flaring at the bottom. The skirt is laid in wide tucks and spreads out into a very full flare at the hem.

As the season advances the preference for mixed and fancy suitings becomes more and more distinct and it seems almost as if the latter would in a very short time be used entirely instead of the smooth finished clothes although the cloth is by far the most dressy in appearance, it is of more compact and closer weave than the mixed suitings and homespuns, which, together with Scotch tweed and covert cloth are in the lead at present.

The Warmest Yet.

The temperature at noon today was 82 degrees, the highest point the mercury has reached this year. A fact worthy of note is that a year ago today the temperature at noon was 85 degrees. The warmest day this year previous to today was April 29 when it was 79 degrees at noon.

Girl May Have Been Deceived

Boston, May 22.—The Journal says that police investigation into the killing of Andrew J. Emery of South Framingham by Nina Danforth, the deformed girl, shows that Emery had so far deceived the girl in having her believe he was single as to go through a marriage form with her. No record of the marriage appears at city hall in this city.

Fight Preliminaries Arranged

San Francisco, May 22.—The San Francisco Athletic club of San Francisco gets the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons fight. The terms are 70 percent of the gross receipts. The date of the fight is to be mutually agreed upon later by the fighters and the club. The articles of agreement will probably be signed, tomorrow.

Trooper Knocked Out Professional

Halifax, May 22.—Fred Wyatt, a trooper of the Canadian mounted rifles now in this city, knocked out Tom Foley, champion lightweight boxer of Nova Scotia, in the second round of a 10-round bout here last night. The fight was for $200 a side and a side bet of $200. There is some doubt here as to Wyatt's identity.

Smelters' Fight Will Continue

Helena, Mont., May 22.—The executive board of the American Smelting and Refining company has rejected the offer of settlement of the strikers employed in its East Helena smelter. This settles all attempts to adjust the trouble.

Exciting Fire at Brooklyn

New York, May 22.—The Bradbury piano factory in Brooklyn was destroyed by fire last night. The loss will reach $500,000. The features of the fire were the callin out of many fire engines from Manhattan; the danger of the burning of tenements occupied by 75 to 100 families, the placing in safety of 196 horses and 150 wagons, and a panic among the prisoners in a jail directly opposite the burning building.

Intimation of Peace Arrangement

London, May 22.—Bennet Burleigh, correspondent at Pretoria of The Daily Telegraph, has cabled that he is about to return home. The Telegraph interprets this action on the part of its correspondent as a circuitous intimation that peace has been arranged in South Africa and that owing to the censorship Mr. Burleigh was unable to communicate this fact to his paper.

DEPUTY SHERIFF'S FALL

Parson Pearson's Trusted Man Accepted Bribes

TO PROTECT LIQUOR SELLERS

Yielded to Temptation and Kept Money Which He Claims Was Forced Upon Him—Was Greatly Worried, but Not Sufficiently So to Confess

Portland, Me., May 22.—Deputy Sheriff Arthur B. Leach was arrested yesterday, charged with accepting bribes from Michael J. Callahan, for protection of various parties in the liquor business. Leach confessed.

Rev. Samuel F. Pearson, the high sheriff, gave out the following statement:

"Mr. Leach was one of my most trusted men. For six months prior to my taking the office of sheriff he had charge of my books and accounts, as pastor of the Gospel Mission, and I believed him as honest a man as God ever made."

Leach says: "The accusation is true, that I have accepted money from Callahan at two different times. I shall put the county to no expense to convict me. In the municipal court I shall waive a hearing. When the matter comes before the superior court I shall also waive a hearing and plead guilty.

"This affair was not of my making. I have never been guilty of concocting any scheme to obtain money through my office and I have never encouraged any one to offer me money. No one can realize the amount of temptation that confronts a deputy sheriff who is trying to enforce the prohibitory law. As I kept the books and was considered close to the sheriff, the liquor dealers have made a special mark of me, and I have been repeatedly confronted by opportunities to accept bribes.

"I meant to be honest and do right, but the temptation finally overpowered me. One day Callahan came to me and told me he had fixed up a deal; that he did not expect me to give him or his friends any protection, but that he had some money which had been sent to me and I was a fool not to take it. I refused. He tucked the bills into my pocket and I was weak enough to let it stay there. At another time he repeated the same scheme. It worried me a great deal and I repeatedly made up my mind to go to the sheriff and confess, but did not carry out the resolution."

Leach gave bail in $1000 for his appearance in the municipal court.

Tammany Makes Changes

New York, May 22.—After a secret session last night, the members of the executive committee of Tammany Hall, allied as the Croker forces, voted in favor of naming a triumvirate to manage the affairs of the organization in place of a single headed leader. The men selected were Charles F. Murphy, chairman; Daniel F. McMahon and Louis F. Haffen. The chairman of this triumvirate becomes practically the leader of the organization in the place of Lewis Nixon. It was voted to abolish the finance committee.

Concerning Mine Protectors

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 22.—The three anthracite executive committees of the United Mine Workers of America, at their joint meeting yesterday, decided to permit the engineers, firemen and pump men to remain at work, provided the coal companies grant them an eight-hour day at present wages. If these demands are not granted by June 2, the men shall then suspend work. At present the engineers, firemen and pump men work 10 hours a day. Some of the firemen work 12.

Perfect Health
BY THE USE OF
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Mrs. H. A. Alsbrook, of Austin, Lonoke Co., Ark., writes: "After five months of great suffering with female weakness I write this for the benefit of other sufferers from the same affliction. I doctored with our family physician without any good result, so my husband urged me to try Dr. Pierce's medicines—which I did, with wonderful results. I am completely cured. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, four of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets.'"

ENTIRE POPULATION ARMED

Citizens of Haytian Capital Will Resist Entrance of Firmin's Army

Port-au-Prince, Hayti, May 22.—The army of the north, commanded by General Firmin (the most powerful candidate for the presidency of Hayti) and numbering about 4000 men, arrived yesterday at Arcahaie, two days' march from here. The provisional government (committee of public safety) has summoned all the citizens to defend the capital, and as a result the entire population of Port-au-Prince is now under arms.

The people are very excited and appear determined to make a vigorous resistance to the entrance of the army of the north into this city. The general belief is that if Firmin persists in his intention to attempt to force an entry into Port-au-Prince a severe engagement will take place.

As this dispatch is sent the beating of drums can be heard on all sides and armed men are gathering for the battle. The members of the diplomatic corps assembled here yesterday and decided to protest against the entrance of the northern army into the capital. Unfortunately this protest is not likely to have much effect, as there are no foreign men of war in the harbor. Regret is especially expressed at the absence of a United States warship from Port-au-Prince.

(The United States cruiser Topeka sailed from Port Royal, S. C., for Port-au-Prince May 16. She is now due to arrive at her destination.)

Americans as Protectors

Manila, May 22.—Captain Crawford, chief of the constabulary of Batangas province, reports that the conditions there are better than ever before. He attributes this improvement principally to experience in American ways, gained by the natives in the concentration camps. The American soldiers are now looked upon as protectors, rather than as enemies.

In Congress

Washington, May 22.—Before the senate resumed consideration of the Philippine bill yesterday it adopted a resolution congratulating the republic of Cuba on its entry into the family of independent nations. The senate also ordered The Associated Press account of the ceremonies of the transfer from the United States to the Cuban authorities printed in the congressional record and as a public document.

Mr. Wellington opposed the pending Philippine measure and Mr. Bacon again denounced the concentration policy pursued in the Philippines.

The house began consideration of the immigration bill. The principal speech was made by Mr. Shattuc of Ohio, who was especially severe in his condemnation of the manner in which immigrants are introduced through Canada and by Canadian railway and steamship companis.

A Royal Bull Fight

Madrid, May 22.—The royal bull fight, which is the most typically Spanish feature of the festivities in connection with the coming of age of King Alfonso, occurred yesterday in the presence of the royal family, the Spanish nobles and the special envoys. More than 200,000 people had made applications for seats to witness the occurrence. Scions of noble families fought the bulls with lances from horseback. Three bulls were killed in this manner, while six others were despatched with swords. The most renowned bull fighters in Spain took part in the fight.

Reception on French Warships

Annapolis, May 22.—The initial reception of the representatives of the French republic who are here to participate in the ceremonies attendant upon the unveiling of the Rochambeau monument in Washington took place on board the French battleship Gaulois in Annapolis Roads yesterday afternoon.

Assaulted and Robbed

Springfield, Mass., May 22.—Patrick J. McCarthy, while fishing near Becket Station yesterday, was assaulted by two unknown men and robbed of his watch and all his money. The robbers escaped in the woods.

Assassination of Russian Official

London, May 22.—A dispatch from Vienna says that a high Russian official named Czernoy has been assassinated at Warsaw, Russian Poland, and that the assassin escaped.

Population Reduced by Cholera

Manila, May 22.—The cholera record to date is as follows: Manila, 1108 cases and 886 deaths; provinces, 3592 cases and 2604 deaths.

AN UPRISING OF JEWS

Leads to Serious Disturbances In Boston Streets

FIGHTING MEAT TRUST

Accompanied by Window Smashing, Stone Throwing and a General Onslaught on Police and Butchers—Court Proceedings Begun

Boston, May 23.—Additional outbreaks which have resulted in a riot at the corner of Chambers and Brighton streets, took place last night, growing out of the troubles that had occurred during the day in various parts of the city, and for the first time since the disorders commenced the crowds defied the police. They stoned them, smashing windows and creating general disorder until the police, in addition to handling the crowd roughly, made 12 arrests.

Five thousand people yelled and hooted at the officers as they went about their work and escorted their prisoners to the station house on Joy street. The latter were all bailed out within an hour.

The trouble did not assume a threatening aspect till after 9 o'clock, when the 30 officers who had been detailed for duty realized that vigorous measures must be adopted against the steadily increasing crowds about the corner and reinforcements were sent them.

All through the evening the police were subjected to insults and many of them were made targets for decayed vegetables, brickbats and stones, though none was seriously hurt.

The first outbreak occurred on Spring street, in front of No. 6, where Mendel Eyges, who keeps a kosher shop, had suffered from an attack on Wednesday. A brick went through his new plate-glass window and when the police rushed the crowd a shower of missiles sailed over their heads, through the glass windows. Those who threw them could not be identified and no arrests were made then.

Eyges shut up shop and the crowd, which was being rapidly augmented, followed the advice of a woman who constituted herself a leader and drifted to the corner of Wall and Minot streets, where one of Solomont & Sons' three retail meat shops was reported to be doing business.

Here a fusillade of brickbats was directed against Solomont's shop, windows were smashed and a volley of epithets hurled at young Solomont, who was in charge. The police again charged the crowds and drove them into the side streets.

Two places in the west end, both opened for business yesterday morning by S. Solomont & Son, were selected for bombardment. An angry mob filled the streets from curb to curb, blocked passage on the sidewalk, damaged property and fought the police. Women did the fighting while the striking butchers stood in the rear looking at them, evidently encouraging them with Yiddish words.

Three sergeants and 50 patrolmen were sent from the Joy street and the La Grange street stations to take charge of the "strike" districts. Some of them were on hand shortly after 8 o'clock and after they had made their arrests and cleared the premises the real strikers went to other parts of the city. They planned for similar attacks on a store in Harrison avenue, also opened by Solomont. Plenty of literature was being distributed among the people. Groups of women gathered on the corners and on doorsteps, reading and talking. One of these circulars makes damaging charges against the beef trust and promises that the striking butchers will be in a position to sell meat cheaply within a few days. It also announces a big mass meeting for Saturday night.

A bill was brought in the superior court by Solomont & Son against Hyman Pike et al., with a view to have the defendants enjoined from patrolling in proximity to the premises of customers of the plaintiffs, from threatening or intimidating customers, from offering pecuniary inducements to customers to refrain from buying goods of the plaintiffs.

Judge Braley granted a temporary injunction restraining the defendants from doing any of the acts alleged in the bill until the case can be heard. "That means," he explained, "that all acts of violence or disorder must stop. The rights of this plaintiff, as long as he does not interfere with the rights of others, must be recognized."

Butcher Disobeyed Edict

New York, May 23.—Seven hundred men, women and children attacked the shop of a Norfolk street butcher last night. The butcher had opened his store for the sale of meat, disregarding the edict of the east side people that no meat should be sold. Before the police reserves could be summoned his place was a wreck, and he in much the same condition. Four arrests were made.

POLICE SUSPECT MURDER

Saco River Gives Up the Body of Man Missing Since January

Biddeford, Me., May 23.—The badly decomposed body of a man was found in the Saco river yesterday afternoon, and the police believe it is a partial solution of the mysterious disappearance of John Glenn on Jan. 17 last, and that he was a victim of foul play. Glenn was employed as a moulder in a local foundry. At the time of his disappearance it was supposed he had about $200 and a gold watch and chain in his possession.

Although it is the general opinion the body found yesterday it that of Glenn, there was nothing found in his pockets with the exception of a briar pipe and a string of rosary beads. It is known that he secured a correspondent through a matrimonial paper just previous to his disappearance, and he had told his friends of his purchase of a watch and chain for the woman he proposed to marry. He failed, however, to make the presentation, and he had the articles in his possession when last seen in Saco, where he boarded.

The police advance the theory that Glynn was fouly dealt with, and after the money and other articles had been taken from the clothing his body was thrown into the Saco river.

Knockout May Prove Fatal

Boston, May 23.—Thomas Noonan of Chelsea is at the hospital suffering, it is said, from concussion of the brain as a result of a blow received in a boxing contest with Edward Dixon of Chicago, at the Lenox Athletic club last night, and it is believed he cannot recover. Dixon gave himself up to the police and has not secured bail. The men met at catch weights for a six-round go and had nearly completed four rounds when the knockout blow was given.

Disaster to Electric Car

Boston, May 23.—While on the way from Lynn to Boston an electric car became unmanageable by the bursting of the controller, and six passengers jumped from the car in their fright, receiving more or less severe injuries, none, however, sufficiently severe to necessitate their removal to the hospital. They were sent to their homes, after receiving medical attention. The car caught fire and was badly burned.

Sleep Ended In Death

Concord, N. H., May 23.—Moses B. Shepard was killed by the cars at West Hopkinton yesterday by falling from one train and being struck by another going in the opposite direction. Noose of Corset Strings

Fall River, Mass., May 23.—The body of an unknown man was found hanging from a tree by the roadside in Little Compton, R. I., yesterday. The suicide was suspended from a limb by a rope made of corset strings and others were found in his pockets. The body was that of a man 50 years old.

CABINET IS SUMMONED

LONDON IN HOPEFUL MOOD

Under the Impression That Peace Is Practically Assured—Contents of Messages From Milner and Kitchener Are Not Made Public

London, May 23.—The Daily Chronicle this morning claims authority to say that peace in South Africa is practically assured. This is also the general impression which prevails with the other newspapers and the public, although the former do not go so far as the assertion published by The Chronicle. At a late hour last night, however, the government departments declined to give any information on the matter.

It is understood that important dispatches were received yesterday from Lord Milner, the British high commissioner in South Africa, and from Lord Kitchener, but nothing can be ascertained as to the nature of the contents of these messages.

The fact that the cabinet was summoned so quickly yesterday after the arrival of the delegates at Pretoria is regarded as a good augury, as the discussions at Pretoria could only have commenced Monday. The cabinet will meet late this afternoon in order to enable the ministers who are at a distance to reach London in time for the meeting.

A dispatch to The Daily Telegraph from Pretoria says that the Boers are seeking permission to retain their horses.

The Case of Miss Wackerman

London, May 23.—The officials of the United States consulate here are taking steps to arrange for the return to the United States of Miss Vanderbilt Wackerman of New York, the young American model, who gave way to the nervous strain arising from certain statements made by Professor Herkomer, for whom she sat when he was painting one his academy pictures, and who was later taken to an infirmary as a wandering lunatic. She shows no signs of improvement mentally.

Among the noted men who whose protraits she painted were Martin Van Buren, Stephen A. Douglas, Generals Grant, McClellan and Sherman, Robert G. Ingersoll and William Cullen Bryant. One of the principal works produced by Mrs. Spencer was an allegorical painting representing "truth unveiling falsehood."

Hay Wants to Hold On

Washington, May 23.—Secretary Hay has requested the Danish government to enter into a protocol, extending for one year the period of time allowed for the ratification of the treaty of cession of the Danish West Indian islands. ROASTED ALIVE

Texas Mob Wreaks Horrible Vengeance Upon a Negro

St. Louis, May 23.—A special to The Post Dispatch gives these details of the burning of a negro at Lansing, Tex., yesterday:

The mob at Lansing had elected a leader and all armed men were drawn upon one side of the track and those unarmed on the other and every arrangement perfected before the train arrived at 11:50 a. m. When the sheriff and prisoner stepped off the train they were taken into custody by armed men. The officers were taken away and the negro was marched to his victim's house, where he was identified by Mrs. McKay, whom he had assaulted, and several section hands.

He confessed and was chained to a railroad iron post already set into the bround, around which had been piled some old, dry cross-ties, split up. At 12 o'clock the husband set fire to the fire which consumed the victim. The negro gritted his teeth and tried to be composed, struggling and groaning only after becoming insensible. Mrs. McKay was driven nearby in a carriage, and witnessed the torture to the last. The negro's body was almost entirely consumed in 30 minutes.

Avenged Friend's Injury

Halifax, May 23.—Nearly 400 men of the Canadian mounted rifles, armed with stones, ran riot through the streets late last night. They bombarded a house on Albermarle street, kept by a negress, and after demolishing all the glass, they ripped the lower portion of the front out of the building. Several days ago one of their number was sandbagged in this house and he is now critically ill. It was to avenge the injury done him that they attacked the house. The soldiers left on the steamer Corinthian for South Africa today.

Over Two Hundred Bodies Recovered

Coal Creek, Tenn., May 23.—Twenty-two bodies of victims of the Fraterville mine horror are still missing. Searching parties have brought out 204 dead bodies. An awful stench pervades the mine, due to the numerous dead bodies that have been found therein and also the dead carcasses of 19 mine mules, none of which has been brought out.

Wound Up With Banquet

Havana, May 23.—A grand civic procession occurred here yesterday afternoon and the three days' festivities attendant upon the inauguration of the Cuban republic ended last night with a banquet to President Palma, given by the municipal council of Havana.

Good Afternoon.

It is reassuring to learn that the Presbyterians do not believe in infant damnation and fatalism.

Frank C. Carpenter, the well-known correspondent, says "the majority of statements of cruelty by our troops is false, and under the provocation which the men have suffered it is a wonder they are so temperate.

Lord Kelvin, who recently looked on Niagara Falls, said: "Beautiful as that wonderful work of nature is, it would be more beautiful still if those waters fell upon turbin wheels every one of which was turning the wheels of industry."

Secretary Shaw has issued regulations for the inspection of baggage in response to a petition protesting against the way the law was enforced. All who desire private examination of their effects may have it whenever the steamship companies provide a suitable place. Several of the companies have promised to make this provision.

The Committee having the Mary E. Dearborn complimentary reception and banquet in charge had its final meeting Thursday afternoon at which they found they had received over $430 and after paying all bills had a balance of $7.28, which they voted to hand over to Miss Dearborn. Thus closes a very pleasant and successful affair a high tribute to Miss Dearborn's remarkable record during the last twenty-five years, and her present popularity. She certainly has received a great honor, but only what she richly deserves.

The "Munroe doctrine" and President John Quincy Adams were conspicuous parts of Senator Hoar's speech in the National Senate Thursday on the Philippine policy. No less than sixteen times the name of Mr. Adams appears in full and there are extracts from the Adams Memoirs, so that the work of the Quincy statesmen nearly one hundred years ago is still having its influence.

Mr. Hoar says, "John Quincy Adams, as everybody knows, was the father of what we call the Monroe doctrine. He secured its adoption through the weight of his great influence, by a hesitating President and a raluctant Cabinet. It is not so well known that he placed the Monroe doctrine solely upon the doctrine that just Governments must rest upon the consent of the governed. That, he declared to be its only foundation, and that so founded it rested upon the eternal principle of righteousness and justice."

"I suppose, according to this modern doctrine," said Mr. Hoar, "that if, when the Holy Alliance threatened to reduce the colonies which had thrown off the yoke of Spain in South America, not a whit more completely than the Philippine people had thrown off the yoke of Spain in Asia, if they had undertaken to subdue them all at once, John Quincy Adams and James Monroe would have held their peace and would at least have said it was not wise to say what we would do in the future."

"If we had the right to protect nascent republics from the tyranny of other people and to declare that we would do it in the future, and if need be would encounter the whole continent of Europe single-handed in that case, is it any less fitting to avow that we will protect such peoples from ourselves?"

LONG OPPOSED

To the Building of Warships at Navy Yards.

Says It Would Bring In Politics.

Gives Several Other Reasons Against the Measure.

"I think Mr. Roberts's amendment is unfortunate and not well considered," said former Secretary of the Navy John D. Long to a Boston Journal reporter yesterday, referring to the amendment which Congressman Roberts of Massachusetts has succeeded in attaching to the Naval Appropriation bill, that three of the six vessels authorzied by the measure shall be builtin Government yards.

"I carefully considered the matter, when in the department," continued Mr. Long, "and it seemed clear to me that it is to nobody's interest that our warships should be built in our navy yards. It is no advantage to labor, because labor will get the building of them wherever they are built.

"The precedents of the Maine, Texas and Cincinnati show that the cost of Government building is some 50 per cent. more. Our navy yards now have the repairing, which is pretty steady, and a growing employment of labor.

"If the construction of warships is added, three in number, there will be bad feeling on the part of those yards which do not get a ship.

"To construct warships there must be thousands of men taken from private ship yards. When at last the ship approaches completion there will be a tendency to delay its finish just as there is about repairs, only much more.

"When finished, either thousands of men must be discharged, or new ships ordered. It will be, of course, a setback to the private yards which have started and the success of which has done so much for labor and for general business.

"But to my mind the financial question is not the most important. It is the political question. Our navy yards today are not a political factor. There is in them no political favoritism. The labor civil service rules are enforced.

"With the new system there is great risk that the navy yard with its sudden influx of thousands will become more than now subject to partisan organization. Its influence will be felt in elections, especially of members of Congress.

"For these reasons and because I have always been inclined to leave our industries to their own natural development and working, rather than to tie them up with government poilities, I have not favored the new plan.

"It has seemed to me better to leave well enough alone. The new step may be one which will result in unforseen difficulties and be a matter of regret even to those who now favor it."

THE LEGISLATURE.

Sunday Candy Bill, Political Jobs, and the Luce Bill.

The Senate reconsiderd the adoption of the rule providing that no member of the Legislature shall seek employment for himself or others from public service corporations but reaffirmed it 17 to 9. Senator Fales of Norfolk was one of those in opposition.

Bill were engrossed for three-year terms for Overseers of the Poor in cities; reimbursing towns for expenses incurred in furnishing High School instruction; to protect insignia of labor unions; resolves in favor of Walter H. Gilman; for commission to revise the laws relating to trust companies.

The "Luce" bill for direct nomination of local officers and Representatives to the General Court was explained by Senator Apsey of Middlesex and was ordered to a third reading.

The last 25 minutes of the afternoon was taken up in filibustering over the adverse report of the committee on cities on the petition of Benjamin A. Ham for legislation to regulate blasting in cities and to provide for the protection of owners of land on which ledges and quarries are located.

The Sunday bill reached Gov. Crane and was promptly signed. As amended it permits licensed innholders, licensed common victuallers and druggists, but not dealers in newspapers not so licensed, to sell the tabooed commodities.

The resolve to direct the harbor and land commissioners to improve the entrance of Herring river in the town of Harwich, was placed in the orders of the day.

The Donahue bill relative to objections of owners of real estate to the granting of licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors was rejected by a vote of 44 to 31.

There were two roll calls during the first hour. Reconsideration of the vote whereby the house rejected the Merritt taxation bill was moved by Mr. Merritt of Otis, and was granted almost unanimously. A roll call was then requested on the question of ordering the bill to a third reading. By a vote of 50 to 90 the bill was rejected.

Mr. Sleeper of Natick then moved reconsideration of the vote whereby the house accepted the adverse report on anti-vivisection bill. By a roll call of 70 to 82 reconsideration was refused.

THE LATEST REPUBLIC

Trials and Tribulations of the Island of Cuba.

STORY OF ITS INVASION BY SPAIN

History of the Gem of the Antilles From Its Discovery by Columbus Up to the Present Time—What Americans Have Done For the Good of the Island.

The island of Cuba, which has just started out under Uncle Sam's auspices as the youngest American republic, is associated with the very beginning of American history, says the Philadelphia Times. Cuba was the second island reached by Columbus on his first transatlantic voyage in 1492, and it was named Fernandina in honor of its discoverer's royal patron. Not until after the death of Columbus, who died with the belief that it was a part of a great continent, was there an invasion of the island from the neighboring Spanish colony of Hispanola, where it was believed that there were rich mines in Cuba. The natives offered little resistance to the armed force sent to subdue them, and Don Diego Velasquez was appointed governor in 1511. During his rule Velasquez founded many towns, introduced the systematic cultivation of sugar cane and firmly established the slavery of the aborigines, a system that was not abolished until 1538, when the efforts of Padre Las Casas secured the almost universal release of the natives.

From 1511 to 1607 the island was intermittently racked by violent dissensions among the Spanish officials and overrun by pirates of all nations. The most memorable event of this period was the departure from Havana of Hernando de Soto with a fleet brought from Spain to accomplish the conquest of Florida.

From 1607 to 1762 the island lay in a state of lethargy, but on June 6, 1762, an event occurred which awoke Spain to some realization of the worth of Cuba. A large English squadron, with 20,000 men, under the Duke of Albemarle, suddenly appeared off Havana and laid siege to the town, which was taken after stout resistance by the outnumbered and surprised garrison. From this time until July, 1763, the English held the north of Cuba, imported negro labor, shipped in much European merchandise and gave the first impetus which pushed Cuba from her old lethargy toward the development of her latent wealth. In 1763, by the treaty of Paris, which ended the seven years' war, Spain received back the English seizures in Cuba. By 1801 there was established a steady increase of population.

About this time there began a series of insurrections on the part of the native inhabitants, which showed their desire for greater privileges and freedom. In 1823 there was a society called "Soles," headed by one Lemus. It made plans for an uprising which was never accomplished. In 1829 a revolutionary conspiracy of the "Black Eagles," involving many Mexicans, was discovered and crushed. In 1844 the insurrection of the blacks, who had the intention of killing all whites on the island, was remarkable for its completeness of plan. The rising in 1851 of Narciso Lopez, with 300 men, was a daring but short lived stroke for freedom, and it was not until 1868, when the ten years' war for independence, instigated by the outbreak of the revolution in Spain, began, that the cortes felt the full force of an expensive, draining struggle with a stubborn people fighting on from year to year. This revolt closed in 1878, when promises, such as representation in the Spanish cortes, which were never kept, were made by Spain.

In 1895 the Cubans, tired of the broken promises of their governors and their ministers in Spain, revolted again, as President Palma, the then insurgent representative, wrote to Washington, "for the same reasons as those which had forced them into their former struggle." The history of that war is fresh in the memory. The slow struggle, carried along on the guerrilla lines of past years, stretched on to the blowing up of the Maine in Havana harbor in 1898, the Spanish-American war, the final treaty of peace and the military governorship conducted by the United States just ended.

Since the evacuation of Cuba by Spain the administration of the island by American army officers has attained in a comparatively short time unusual results. The entire municipal government of the cities and towns held by the Americans for three years has been remodeled. Efficient police and harbor forces have been trained and established. Sanitation, which was formerly in a most primitive state, has been modernized, and economic conditions, which were desperate at the end of the war, have been relieved. Crime has been checked, the death rate has been reduced, employment on public works has aided the poor, and by the mustering out of the Cuban army agriculture has received an impetus which it had not had for a decade. The church and the state have been quietly severed, laws have been reformed to meet the exigencies of the present, the school system has been modernized and railroads have been put into working order.

A New Name For It.

The new French name for typewriting is dactylographic, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. It's quite a mouthful and might be considered a little irritating if attempted at 2 a. m. It is possible, too, that the pretty typewriter might not like to be called a dactylographer, but she could readily be shortened to "dacky dear."

WON IN THE FIRST.

Quincy High Has a Picnic With West Roxbury High.

West Roxbury High school succumbed to Quincy, Thursday at Merrymount Park in a decidedly one-sided game by a score of 21 to 7.

The visitors were unable to hit Fallon safety, and their fielding was abominable. The High school boys hit the ball hard and safely throughout the game, but they made two or three inexcusable errors.

High started well by whitewashing Roxbury in the first three innings and won her game in the first by making a score up of 8. Fallon, Oswald, Miller, Drake, Brown, Taber, Saunders and Deaney at the first time up made clean singles and were sent to first on balls eight runs being quickly scored.

In both the third and fifth innings, High made four runs by timely hitting. In the fourth and eighth the visitors made brave attempts hit by sharp fielding, they were soon retired.

Rouleau, the smallest player in the game put up a clean game at backstop. Taber, Fallon and Drake batted best for High, while fast base running was done by Miller and Brown, the latter stealing home when the pitcher had the ball in his box.

High played a faster game than the previous one, although they were handicapped in losing such a valuable man as Hunt.

TWO OUT OF THREE.

Merrymounts Win from Cochato at Candle Pins.

The candle pin team from the Merrymount club went to Braintree Thursday night and succeeded in taking the Cochatos into camp, two games in three.

The rolling of both teams was of an unusually high order while the exceptional work of Coe was the feature.

A small but enthusiastic coterie of followers went down with the Merrymounts, and the force and persistancy of their cheering would have done credit to a regiment at San Juan.

The ladies served a dainty lunch during the match, sustaining well the proverbial hospitality of the Cochato club.

No Change In Coal Strike

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 23.—The 10th day of the anthracite coal miners' strike passed off very quietly. Not a single incident developed which would in any way tend to change the present situation.

BREMER WAS FIRST

With the Best Gross Score in Country Club Tournament.

C. L. Bremer of the Wollaston club made the best gross score against 130 competitors at the spring meet of the Country club on Thursday, with 81, going out in 40 and returning in 41. It was the best score that has been made on the links in an open tournament. The Globe says: An examination of Bremer's figures shows that he did not have a really bad hole. There were four sixes, but they were all five holes, and he had nothing in his round above a six. The seventh he did in two and the boggy in 3 1-2; the ninth he did in three and the boggy is five; then he made four fours in succession, twice beating boggy and once tieing him; the 14th hole he made in three, beating boggy by one stroke.

C. B. Cory (84), F. F. H. Smith (86), and T. A. Burditt (86) of Wollaston, also qualified for the match play and the drawings for today were:

W. E. Egan vs. C. L. Bremer.
C. B. Cory vs. R. E. Daniels.
F. F. H. Smith vs. H. C. Egan.
T. A. Burditt vs. J. G. Thorp.
G. F. Willett vs. C. T. Richardson.
Blank No. 3 vs. blank No. 1.
Blank No. 2 vs. P. Dewey.
C. I. Travelli vs. J. T. Mauran.

The New Timetable.

By the new timetable the 1.12 and 7.12 trains to Boston no longer make stops at Neponset. The first outward train leaves Boston at 5.50 A. M. instead of 5.58. It would be well to note that there are outward trains at 2.45, 3.45 and 4.45 instead of the regular time, two minutes before the hour. On Sundays the 1.27 P. M. inward has been changed to 1.12, and the 12.43 and 2.28 outward start earlier.

Quincy's only express is a new train which leaves Boston at 8.43 P. M. Sundays and arrives at 9, and is the only outward train that does not stop at Quincy Adams.

How They Do In Russia

London, May 23.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Daily Mail says that in the course of a performance in a theatre at Vilna revolutionary proclamations were thrown from the gallery to the stalls. General VonWahl, governor of Vilna, thereupon ordered all the occupants of the gallery to be arrested and flogged. Among the persons thus treated was a man who subsequently shot at and wounded Governor VonWahl in revenge. The would-be assassin was arrested.

French Estimate of Cuba

Paris, May 23.—The Temps, commenting on the establishment of the republic of Cuba, says: "The United States has kept its promise. The American flag no longer floats over Morro castle, but Cuba will never enjoy real independence under the shadow of her gigantic neighbor. Will she have the good fortune to become incorporated into the union with the high rank of a state, or must she undergo the painful fate of becoming a perpetual territory or a colony?"

Well Known Actress Dead

Boston, May 23.—Annie M. Clarke of Julia Marlowe's company, and well known in Boston as the accomplished leading lady of the Boston Museum stock company for many years, died in Chicago yesterday. She was taken ill at Cleveland about a week ago. Miss Clarke was born in Boston in 1845, and it was by the advice and through the influence of Miss Adelaide Phillipps that she began her professional career when a child.

Steamer and Wharves Burned

New Orleans, May 23.—Steamer John K. Speed, lying at her wharf here, was burned to the water's edge yesterday. The boat and cargo are a total loss. The wharves took fire and a very large section burned away. A fire engine which was backed near the water's edge slipped into the water and now lies at the bottom of the river. The loss will be $75,000.

In the Interest of Science

Berlin, May 23.—The international aeronautical commission yesterday passed a resolution approving the plan of Abbott L. Rotch of Boston for the organization of a sea expedition to study atmospheres. CARRYING OUT HIS OWN IDEAS.

In Truly Pitiable Plight

Paris, May 23.—A dispatch from Fort de France published this morning in Le Journal says the sole idea of the inhabitants is flight, that many of them have become insane, and some of the people threw themselves into the sea. The population of the Grand Riviere district is isolated and assistance cannot reach them. Le Journal's correspondent says there are vague rumors at Fort de France of further disasters.

Explosion and Loss of Life

Redding, Cal., May 23.—The plant of the Delta powder works was blown up yesterday, killing Mrs. George Miller and her child, who lived 100 yards from the plant, and fatally injuring another child. George Miller, husband of the dead woman, and George Barber, who was working in the factory, were seriously injured. Barber may not survive. The cause of the explosion has not been ascertained.

Head of Police Resigns

St. Petersburg, May 23.—The chief of the state police, Svoliansky, has resigned in consequence of a suggestion on the part of minister of the interior that the recent assassinations of ministers clearly indicated Svoliansky's unfitness for his position.

The Andrews' Held For Trial

Detroit, May 23.—Frank C. Andrews and H. R. Andrews, vice president and cashier, respectively, of the wrecked City Savings bank, who are charged with the collapse of that institution, were yesterday held for trial on July 2. They were admitted to bail in the sum of $30,000 each.

Attorney General Disappointed

Another Landis For Congress

NOTABLE CONTRIBUTION

To the Discussion of the Philippine Question

ATTITUDE OF GOVERNMENT

Denounced as One of the Most Wicked and Foolish Chapters In American History—Mr Hoar Hopes That We Will Withdraw From the Islands

Washington, May 23.—In the senate yesterday Mr. Hoar delivered his long-expected speech on the Philippines. Spite of its length it was listened to with great interest both by other senators and a large crowd in the visitors' gallery. At the beginning of his address the senator maintained that this country is not at war. "You are fighting for sovereignty," he said. "You are fighting for the principle of eternal dominion over that people and that is the only question in issue in the conflict."

When it had been determined to resort to force in the Philippines, he said, the government took upon itself the natural consequences of that decision. The result of the conflict of arms of such a character inevitably was that there would be cruelty on one side and retaliation by cruelty on the other, and the responsibility rested upon those who made the policy.

Mr. Hoar said he was to discuss and denounce what seemed to him one of the most wicked and foolish chapters in history; yet he was compelled to admit, he said, that the men who were responsible for it were neither wicked nor foolish.

Mr. Hoar maintained that his conscience would not permit him to follow these men, and his conscience was the only authority he felt bound to obey in this matter. He said that the share which it was proposed to give the Filipinos in the proposed scheme of government was an admission that many of them were fit for self-government. The United States was fighting to secure a dependency, not a republic; a government of our making and not a government of the Filipinos' making.

Discussing the testimony taken by the Philippine committee, Mr. Hoar said it had contained some pregnant admissions. What vindicates that which has been done so far is the saving the islands from anarchy and the material benefit conferred upon the Philippine people.

What the fathers of the republic said and our century of glorious history were appealed to in vain. "Their lessons fell upon the ears of men dazzled by military glory and delirious with the lust of conquest." He compared the situation in Cuba with that in the Philippines, and demanded to know which was the better.

Mr. Hoar recited a chapter of the history of this country which, he said, showed that the present policy of the government was in contradiction of the Monroe doctrine, as it was a contradiction of the Declaration of Independence. He said that if the present way was followed the Declaration of Independence would be repealed and nothing would be left of the Monroe doctrine except the principle of brutal selfishness.

This government had erected a republic in Cuba and a despotism in the Philippines. Six hundred millions of treasure and 10,000 American lives had been sacrificed in that endeavor. In the Philippines the American flag had been made the emblem of sacrilege and of the burning of homes and of the horror of the water torture. He believed that our officers in general were humane. "But in some cases they have carried on your warfare with a mixture of American ingenuity and Castilian cruelty."

"What have your ideals cost you?" inquired Mr Hoar. "For the Philippine islands you have had to repeal the Declaration of Independence. For Cuba you have had to reaffirm and give it new lustre. For the Philippine islands you have had to convert the Monroe doctrine into a doctrine of mere selfishness. For Cuba you have acted on it and vindicated it. In Cuba you have the eternal gratitude of a free people. In the Philippine islands you have the hatred and sullen submission of a subjugated people. From Cuba you have brought home nothing but glory. From the Philippines you have brought home nothing of glory."

Referring to the cruelties committed in the Philippines, Mr. Hoar said he believed the American soldiers were as brave and humane as ever lived. They had done simply what always would be done in like conditions. The chief guilt was upon the heads of those who created the conditions.

"I hope and believe," Mr. Hoar said, "they were unknown to the war department. I know they were unknown to President Roosevelt, and I know they were unknown to President McKinley." He did not believe, however, that the statement that the war had been conducted with unexampled humanity on our part would be accepted by the people. He denounced the order alleged to have been given by General Smith, and laid particular stress upon the horrors of the reconcentration camps, which he likened to the dreadful scenes in Andersonville prison during the Civil war. He sharply arraigned General Funston for the methods he pursued in the capture of Aguinaldo, and intimated strongly that, had the senate been aware of the facts, Funston might not have been confirmed in his recent promotion.

He demanded that these things cease, and that the administration declare on what eternal principles it would act in the Philippines. He believed that it would be impossible absolutely to pacify the Philippines.

In conclusion, Mr. Hoar believed that better counsel would yet prevail than now seemed to exist. The irrevocable step had not yet been taken.

"Let us at least have this to say: We, too, have kept the faith of the fathers. We took Cuba by her hand. We delivered her from her age-long bondage. We welcomed her to the family of nations. We set mankind an example never beheld before of moderation in victory. We led hesitating and halting Europe to the deliverance of their beleaguered ambassadors in China. We marched through a hostile country—a country cruel and barbarous—without anger or revenge. We returned benefit for injury, and pity for cruelty. We made the name of America beloved in the east, as in the west. We kept faith with the Philippine people. We kept faith with our own history. We kept our national honor unsullied. The flag which we received without a rent we handed down without a stain."

Spontaneous applause swept over the senate and the galleries at the conclusion of the speech. Such a demonstration is very unusual on the floor of the senate. So pronounced was it that the presiding officer called the attention of senators to the rule prohibiting any expression of approval or disapproval.

Distinguished Guests at Washington

Washington, May 23.—Surrounded by members of his cabinet and by officials high in all the branches of the government, President Roosevelt yesterday received as guests of the nation the Frenchmen sent by President Loubet to take part in the Rochambeau exercises. In the afternoon the visitors journeyed to Mount Vernon, where General Brugere placed a laurel wreath on the tomb of Washington, and Count de Rochambeau planted a tree taken from the battle ground of Yorktown. Last night President Roosevelt had the French party as his guests at dinner at the White House.

King Cotton Mills Start

Augusta, Ga., May 23.—The King cotton mill, which was closed several weeks ago, when its employes struck for an increase in wages, started in part yesterday, 160 hands out of 500 reporting for work. It is claimed that this showing practically breaks the backbone of the strike, in which 10,000 people were involved. The mill will be filled up with non-union help from other mills and it is claimed by the owners that it will be running on full time tomorrow.

Sixty Hurt In Village Squabble

Madrid, May 23.—Sixty persons have been seriously wounded, some of them fatally, in a fight which has taken place between inhabitants of the neighboring villages of Cleiros and Sada. The encounter was due to local squabbles.

ADD UP THE GAINS.

The virtue of one dose is so small you can't see any change. But add together all the little virtues from all the little doses and the effect is very marked.

In consumption, as in other cases, the results secured from continued treatment with Scott's Emulsion come from the accumulation of many small gains. A little gain in strength each day—a little gain in weight each day—if continued for weeks, amounts to something.

The fact that Scott's Emulsion can be taken for so long a time without the slightest inconvenience is greatly in its favor as a medicine for consumptives. Such a medicine gives itself time to do good.

It makes new flesh and strengthens the lungs.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Representative Lewis, a Colored Man, Speaker Pro Tem.

Representative McKnight voted against the referendum resolve which was substituted in the House yesterday for the adverse report. Mr. Badger was not recorded, while Mr. Drinkwater of Braintree was with the majority.

Mr. Adams of Boston moved to postpone to the end of the calendar the adverse report of the Committee on Cities on the petition of Benjamin A. Ham that cities shall not have authority to refuse permits for blasting. This motion was lost by a vote of 39 to 52, and the report was then accepted.

A bill providing Somerville may take certain quarries for a park was ordered to a third reading.

Representative W. H. Lewis of Cambridge, colored, presided in the House, yesterday, during a temporary absence of Speaker Myer.

The bill was engrossed providing that positions of lists on caucus ballots shall be determined by lot.

Mr. Collins of Boston moved to substitute for the adverse report of the Committee on Military Affairs the bill accompanying his petition that men more than 18 years of age may parade with imitation firearms. The bill was substituted by a voice vote.

In the Senate Senator Sprague was paired against the resolution to Congress in favor of reciprocity with Canada.

A resolution to Congress in favor of a reduction of the duty on iron and steel products was defeated.

The Senate favored the bill to authorize corporations to issue preferred stock.

Cory in Semi Finals.

C. L. Bremer who lead in the preliminary round at the Country Club tournament, lost by default yesterday to W. E. Egan, but C. B. Cory of the Wollaston won in the same way, and F. H. H. Smith of Wollaston defeated H. E. Egan 5 up and 4 to play. Other winners in the first round were J. G. Thorp, C. T. Richardson, A. G. Lockwood, W. A. Dahlgren and C. I. Travelli.

Mr. Smith fell before Thorp in the second round, while Cory, Lockwood and Dahlgren were winners.

This leaves Cory, the only Wollaston man to play in the semi finals with Thorp, and Lockwood vs. Dahlgren.

In the bogey competition R. Kinnicutt of Tatunk won, Cory the leading Wollaston man being sixth.

Shipyards Will Lobby.

Atherton, the Washington correspondent of the Boston Advertiser says: Rumor has it that the private shipbuilding concerns of the country have sent a big lobby to Washington for the purpose of defeating the house amendment to the naval bill wherein provision is made for the construction of three warships in the navy yards. Already talk is heard that the senate is sure to defeat the plan and perhaps refuse to sanction the construction of any ships outside of private yards. A fight is evidently coming between the two branches on this proposition, as the house certainly took as determined a stand in favor of government work as it is reported the senate intends to take against it.

QUINCY'S PRIDE.

Mt. Wollaston Cemetery More Beautiful Each Year.

Many Large Memorials Recently Erected.

The Lawn System Being Extended Year by Year.

If there is any one place in the city that is receiving more visitors than any other at this time of the year it is the Mt. Wollaston cemetery. This is particularly so this year. This is truly a beautiful spot and is becoming more and more so every year. Today it compares well with such cemeteries as Mt. Auburn, Woodlawn and Forest Hills. One thing that adds greatly to the beauty of the cemetery is the carrying out of the lawn plan, which is becoming recognized as the only desirable method of laying out a cemetery.

All lots in the new section are laid out on this plan and many of the old lots are also being regraded and placed on the same plan. This in some cases is quite expensive, and the managers of Public Burial Places say they have more orders for this work every year than can be done with the limited appropriation. However the whole cemetery is gradually being laid out in this method, and no one who looks at the long rolling velvety green of a series of lots, with only a sunken boundary post to give the boundary lines, will question the wisdom of furthering this work.

The several ornamental plots are filled with tulips, geraniums and other flowering plants, which also add attraction to the sacred spot.

Many memorials are erected every year and the number this year is fully as large if not larger than last year. Up to the present time eighteen or twenty monuments have been erected aside from the headstones and markers. The largest new monument is on the lot of the late John Thompson. It is a sarcophagus and has a base 8 by 4.

Another large monument is on the P. F. Jones lot. This is also a sarcophagus and has a 6 by 3 base.

On the Horace Eaton lot is a beautiful memorial with a 5 by 3 base and another large stone on the Mrs. C. S. Tuck lot.

An odd shaped memorial of two different kinds of granite has been erected on the lot of John Chamberlin and it was but short time before his death that he was present in person and superintended its erection.

Other memorials of handsome designs have been erected on the lots of Mrs. John Westland, William N. Smith, Thomas Collins, A. Malnati, Mrs. M. Nelson, Thaddeus H. Newcomb, Albert Thayer, Mrs. Mary Alden, Herbert Pratt, James T. Penniman and Alzamond Maxwell.

There are several other memorials to be erected before the season is over but it is doubtful if they are set before Memorial Day.

Memorial Sunday.

On Sunday morning, May 25, the Grand Army and allied organizations will worship with the Washington street Congregational church. The following music will then be given:

Double trio,—"To thee, O country."
Trio,—"Lift thine eyes," from Elijah.
Solo,—Kipling's "Recessional,"
Miss Mary Souther.

The regular choir will be assisted by Miss Souther, Mrs. Geo. K. Carter and Miss Bessie Drew. All cordially invited.

At the memorial service at Bethany Congregational church tomorrow evening, Mrs. Moore will sing "The Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," which was sung at the burial of President McKinley. All the military organizations of the city will be present and a most interesting order of services has been arranged. The public is invited.

Next Wednesday evening there will be a mass meeting of Universalists at Tremont Temple, speakers are Rev. Dr. Blanchard, Rev. F. O. Hall, D. D., Rev. Marian D. Shutter, D. D. Thursday evening Universalists banquet at Fanuiel hall.

FRILLS OF FASHION.

Lace stocks are much more chic than stiff ribbons and collars.

A dainty black and white boa has pink silk rose petals scattered among its frills.

Painted stockings have not only flowers and scroll designs upon the instep, but some of them small cherubs.

Marie Antoinette fichus and Corday berthas as well as sashes are a distinctive feature of elegant summer gowns.

Bright green aigrets, long, beading toward the front of the hat and laid almost flat, are seen in the trimming of some hats.

Gros de tours is one of the fashionable silks this summer. It has a soft, finished, slightly repped surface and is a little heavier in quality than taffeta, but less glossy.

The popularity of skirts distinct in color and material from the waists they accompany is still largely maintained, and the fashion will last all summer and during the autumn season.

TALES OF CITIES.

San Francisco has one saloon for every twenty-two adult male inhabitants.

Chicago's shipping has more than quadrupled in the last thirty years, and today Chicago ranks fourth among the ports of the world, London, New York and Hamburg being alone ahead of it.

Citizens of Charleston, S. C., are urging that the name of Meeting street, one of the widest and most important streets in their city, be changed to Hampton avenue, in memory of the late General Wade Hampton.

Warrensburg, Mo., has three licensed saloons, each of which pays $2,200 annually into the treasury. They comply with all of the law's requirements and aid in its enforcements, keeping out jointists and bootleggers of all kinds.

MERE MEN.

The Marquis of Anglesey intends to take a London theater next season and give performances by his own company for the benefit of charity.

Ishak Khan, the claimant to the throne of Afghanistan, is suffering from asthma, which prevents him leaving his house at Samarkand.

C. E. Borchgrevink, who has gone nearer the south pole than any man, living or dead, has made application at Washington to become an American citizen, thereby renouncing his allegiance to Norway.

Senator Vest of Missouri, who ended his eulogy of the late Wade Hampton in the senate by quoting from Tennyson, is said to outrank even Senator Hoar in his familiarity with the poetry of England and America.

Senator Clark of Montana, who writes bigger checks than any other man in Washington, is fond of singing. He has a sweet, clear tenor voice which is not strong, but very pleasing to a small company. After he had piled millions on millions he employed a vocal teacher.

When the late J. Sterling Morton's wife died, he erected over her grave a tombstone which bore the names of their four sons. He told them he did this with the view that if any one of them did anything she would be ashamed of if she were alive he would chisel his name from her tombstone.

Senator Millard of Nebraska has very bushy and very black eyebrows. When he sits in a certain light, the eyebrows shade his eyes to such an extent that it looks as if he had a pair of artistically blackened eyes. The other day the peculiarity was especially noticeable, and half a dozen senators started toward him to ask him whether he had been fighting.

KID M'COY is not the brilliant fighter that he used to be. In his recent fight in Philadelphia with Fred Russell of Milwaukee he demonstrated clearly to the spectators that he has "gone back" considerably. Although McCoy had no difficulty in defeating Russell, who, by the way, never was, is not and never will be a good fighter, he was far below the condition he showed when appearing against Corbett, Creedon, Ryan, etc., in days gone by.

McCoy's decline is undoubtedly due to irresponsible modes of living. He was never particularly disposed to be dissipated, but he has not been careful in small things, which, in the long run, prove injurious.

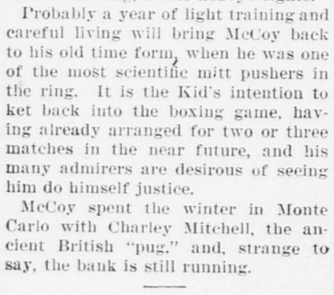

In his fight with Russell, McCoy's showing was far from championship form. He was slow, and his blows lacked steam. There was an absence of that shiftiness which made him one of the best men in the business. His footwork lacked the springiness for which he became famous, and on the form he displayed he would be an easy mark for Corbett, Fitzsimmons or any other of the big, clever heavyweights.

Probably a year of light training and careful living will bring McCoy back to his old time form, when he was one of the most scientific mitt pushers in the ring. It is the Kid's intention to ket back into the boxing game, having already arranged for two or three matches in the near future, and his many admirers are desirous of seeing him do himself justice.

McCoy spent the winter in Monte Carlo with Charley Mitchell, the ancient British "pug," and, strange to say, the bank is still running.

With another year of preparation at Brookline (Mass.) high school, one of the best all around athletes ever known in interscholastic circles will enter the Lawrence Scientific school at Harvard. This is Harry Le Moyne, the eighteen-year-old boy who is the most prominent swimmer in the east.

He is a national leader among short distance swimmers and has repeatedly lowered world's, American and Boston records. Le Moyne also has a widely known reputation as a football player. He was on the interscholastic team last fall and was the best punter and drop kicker in the Boston school league. He puts the sixteen pound shot 43 feet 7 inches and is strong in the hammer throw.

It is in swimming, however, that he has earned the highest honor. From his early youth he has been a junior member of the B. A. A., and with Malcolm Williams there was foremost in all the club junior contests. A year and a half ago he began to show unusual speed at the Brookline swimming club, of which he now is the fastest short distance man.

Le Moyne is large for his age, being 6 feet 1½ inches in height and weighing 180 pounds. He is very strong, his arms and shoulders especially being well developed.

When Le Moyne first began his swimming at the Brookline club, the fastest short distance man there was Rad McCormick. Last fall, however, in the trials for the relay team that went to Chicago, Le Moyne defeated McCormick and also was put on the last relay because of his speed. At Chicago also he played on the water polo team.

At the Boston sportsman's show Le Moyne broke two world's records—the eighty and sixty yard dashes—and repeatedly has set aside American marks. In almost every race he has made an exceptional performance.

Feb. 24 in the eighty yard New England amateur championship Le Moyne swam in 49 2-5s., which was 1 2-5 seconds faster than the best pace ever set by the champion Schaefer. The next evening Le Moyne cut two seconds from the record for 120 yards, winning a handicap race from scratch in 1m. 21s. In the 300 yard race he defeated Fred Wenck of Yale by a lap and in the fast time of 4m. 7 4-5s.

March 3 he broke the world's record for sixty yards by a fifth of a second, the best previous time being 35 2-5s. Later he won another eighty yard race in his own record time of 49 2-5s.

In the 100 yard dash Le Moyne finished first in 1m. 4 1-5s., which may be accepted as the record. About a year ago Schaefer did it in 1m. 5 2-5s., which is the mark Le Moyne essayed to lower. Leary, the Californian, however, swam 100 yards last winter at San Francisco in 1m. 3s. flat, but had a ten foot plunge to start.

Le Moyne broke the one hundred and twenty yard record of the Amateur Athletic union by covering the distance in 1m. 20 4-5s. and since has swum 200 yards within one-fifth second of record time. Le Moyne's time being 2m. 30 3-5s.

Court Edwards is probably the best known trick cyclist on the Pacific coast. He has long been prominent for his interesting feats awheel, and recently he completed a trip of 210 miles on a unicycle. Edwards has perfected the art of riding on a single wheel to a wonderful degree, and his exploit was the most remarkable ever performed in that particular line.

Edwards started from Fresno, reaching San Francisco in four days, and his feat is all the more praiseworthy when it is considered that he encountered several miles of unusually "heavy" roads. Edwards carried a letter which the mayor of Fresno asked him to deliver to the mayor of San Francisco. He says unicycle riding is easy to learn, but that when persevered in the back becomes severely strained.

Madden's 1903 Stable.

John E. Madden has begun to pick up material for his stable in 1903. He has purchased two high class yearlings from J. D. Neet at a long price, two colts by Handsome, son of Hanover; a chestnut out of Ado by Himyar and a bay out of Guile, half sister to Badge, by Deceiver. Dr. Neet has purchased for his stud after racing her the well thought of filly Redown II., by Requital—Hull Down, from Ben Fields at private terms.

Tannehill's "Wing."

"I hope my wing will last three more years, and then I'll have pitched ten years," says Jesse Tannehill of the Pittsburgs. "That's a good trip for a south paw, for few of them travel more than seven years in fast company."

POLITICAL CLEVERNESS

In Cuban Compromise Plan Devised by Spooner

LEFT TO THE PRESIDENT

To Shoulder the Responsibility For Execution of the Concession Policy —Congress Relieved of Burden of Looking After the Matter In Detail

Washington, May 24.—The utmost secrecy is still maintained on the subject of the Spooner compromise on Cuban reciprocity, but enough has leaked out to make certain things probable:

First, that it leaves the limit of concession where the house bill placed it, at 20 percent.

Second, that it limits the benefit of this 20 percent to those owners who are not directly interested in the sugar refining industry in the United States.

Third, that it empowers the President of the United States to ascertain who these parties are and to order the remission of duty accordingly. The remissions may take the form of rebates to the individual shippers or owners.

The advocates of the Spooner plan seem to be perfectly assured that their project will be acceptable to the administration.

In some quarters there is talk of a proviso for a sliding scale of percentages of concession, the percentage being diminished each year for a term of years till it disappears altogether. In the particular of making the president responsible and granting him a large latitude of discretion, the plan as outlined here bears a strong resemblance to the other plans devised by Mr. Spooner as means for getting away from difficulties which have beset congress in dealing with the Philippine and interoceanic canal problems. It will be recalled that it was he who suggested and carried through the act placing the entire control of Philippine affairs in the hands of the president till congress should enact legislation for the government of the islands. It was he also who introduced the bill pending before the senate and which is likely to come to a vote as a substitute for the Hepburn bill, empowering the president, under certain conditions, to purchase the French rights in the incomplete Panama canal, and under certain other conditions to go ahead with the Nicaragua enterprise.

The same idea inspires the proposal that the president shall direct the dispensation of the benefits of the tariff concessions contemplated in Cuba's case. There is, moreover, a certain political cleverness in thus referring the whole of this troublesome subject to the president. Mr. Roosevelt is committed to the concession policy; he would be the proper person to shoulder the responsibility for its execution. The members of congress who come from dangerous districts could thus roll their burdens off on him, with a reasonable certainty that their constituents would not find fault with their doing so. Whatever blame might attach to his manner of performing the task, the law committed to his charge would react upon him and the congressmen would not suffer directly, as would be the case if congress itself took care of the whole matter in detail.

More on the Philippines

Washington, May 24.—A temperate and carefully prepared speech was delivered in the senate yesterday on the Philippine bill by Mr. Dubois. He confined himself almost entirely to a discussion of the commercial and industrial aspects of the Philippine question. Whatever of profit there might be in them, he said, would accrue to a few capitalists who, by their development of the resources of the archipelago through cheap labor, would come into competition with the agriculturalists and manufacturers of the United States in the markets of the world.

This government activity in the Philippines also would serve to arouse China from her lethargy and, once aroused, the dragon would devour the trade of the world.

An earnest and forcible reply to Mr. Dubois was made by Mr. Beveridge, who contended that the development of China's resources would be of advantage in trade and commerce to the United States.

President Makes a Change

Washington, May 24.—The president has revoked the old executive order of Aug. 29, 1901, by which the lieutenant general commanding the army (Miles) and the adjutant general (Corbin) in turn, are to assume the duties of secretary of war in the absence of the secretary and the assistant secretary. This leaves the department without a head in the event of the absence of the secretary and the assistant secretary, unless such head is specifically designated on each occasion.

Probably From Mont Pelee

San Juan, P. R., May 24.—The coasting steamer Porto Rico reports that a few days ago she found the sea in the Mona Passage (between Porto Rico and Hayti) to be dark in color and evidently charged with volcanic matter, supposedly from the eruption of Mt. Pelee.

A Hard-Hearted Villain

Whatcom, Wash., May 24.—Alfred Hamilton was hanged yesterday for the murder of D. M. Woodbury. His neck was broken by the fall. He cursed the sheriff when he read the death warrant to him and rushed up the scaffold stairs two steps at a time.

MASTER BREWERS' SIDE

Insist Upon Right to Discharge Employes After a Fair Hearing

Boston, May 24.—The strike of brewery employes in this city is now in its seventh week without any indications of settlement of the trouble. Yesterday the Master Brewers' association issued a reply to the resolutions adopted by the Central Labor union endorsing the strike, claiming that the statement of issues contained in the resolution is incorrect. The master brewers say that the point of difference is the right of discharge of an employe by the employer. The master brewers offer to give the discharged men a hearing at which an agent of the union may be present. The master brewers claim that the right of discharge is conceded in every line of business. As to the claims of the union that the brewers have given out statements outside of Boston to the effect that the strike is ended the master brewers say that they have issued nothing of the sort.

Kosher Rioters Fined

Boston, May 24.—All the 16 persons who were arrested for participation in the west end kosher meat riots were before Judge Sullivan yesterday. Fouteen were charged with loitering or obstructing travel, and most of them pleaded guilty. All were fined $2 each, and they paid. Sarah Goldstein, for hitting an unknown man and a police officer with a piece of meat, was fined $5, which she paid, and Harry W. Cotton, for maliciously breaking glass in a meat store, was fined $10, and paid. There were no disturbances yesterday.

Boxing Bout Resulted Fatally

Boston, May 24.—As the result of a so-called boxing match at the Lenox Athletic club, one of the contestants, John Cassidy, 20 years old, of Chelsea, died at the city hospital relief station yesterday, and his opponent, a negro named Dixon, hailing from Chicago, is locked up. In court Dixon was arraigned on a charge of manslaughter, and was held in $300 to June 6. Four other men were held as accessories in the same amount to the same date. All of the defendants secured bail.

Fatal Tenement House Fire

Worcester, Mass., May 24.—In a tenement house fire at 6 and 8 King street yesterday Miss Mary E. McLeoughlin was burned to death and Mrs. W. P. Kinnevan, taken out of the burning house on a ladder by Fireman Avery, badly burned. Mrs. Delia Earle was caught on the top floor and had a narrow escape from suffocation. The building was occupied by Miss McLeoughlin as a boarding house.

Work Will Begin at Once

Fall River, Mass., May 24.—The contract for erecting the new Davis mill was awarded yesterday to Chauncey H. Sears, and the work of excavating will be begun immediately. The mill will contain 50,000 spindles in a three-story granite building, 316 by 156 feet, and will be equipped to manufacture all kinds of fine and fancy cotton goods from yarns numbering 100 S and under.

Provides For Referendum

Boston, May 24.—James F. Carey, a Socialist member from Haverhill, won enthusiastic applause and secured the substitution of his bill providing for a referendum on measures before the general court on petition of 50,000 voters, by his eloquent speech in the legislature yesterday. The bill had been adversely reported on by the committee on constitutional amendments.

Bryan Accepts Invitation

Boston, May 24.—The executive committee of the newly formed New England Democratic league has been informed by W. J. Bryan that he will speak here at the dinner next month to be held for the purpose of establishing, on a firm basis the new organization. Edward M. Shepard of New York has accepted an invitation to speak.

Says He Swallowed Glass

Lowell, Mass., May 24.—Fred Wiggins of this city is in a critical condition. He says that he swallowed 12 pieces of glass because God told him to. He is demented. A slip of paper was found in his pocket bearing the following words: "Fred Wiggins departed this life May 30." The doctors say he will recover.

Employers Grant Demands

Providence, May 24.—All carpenters employed by the master jobbers and the cabinet makers in this city have been granted their demands for an 8-hour day and a half-holiday Saturday, to take effect during June, July and August. It is estimated that about 1500 men are affected by the association's action.

Others May Be Implicated

Portland, Me., May 24.—County Attorney Whitehouse is continuing the investigation in the bribery charges which resulted in the arrest of Deputy Sheriff Leach, and there are many rumors that other arrests will follow on the same general charge.

Much Woodland Burned

Mashpee, Mass., May 24.—A fire that started mysteriously in the woods here yesterday burned over an area of about 100 acres before it was stopped. The woodland is bounded by Falmouth and Waquoit roads, Mashpee river and Asher pond.

McCullough Has Good Lead

Montpelier, Vt., May 24.—With the town caucuses held thus far the strength of the Republican candidates for the gubernatorial nomination is as follows: McCullough, 50; Clement, 26; Proctor, 10.

Roast Chicken Galore

Salem, Mass., May 24.—The hennery operated by E. R. Perkins was destroyed by fire yesterday, resulting in a loss of $4500. One thousand chickens kept in the building were burned to death by the fire.

HOME LIFE IN ST. PIERRE

Martinique Girl's Story of Her Former Home.

SOCIAL LINES RIGIDLY DRAWN.

Interesting Habits and Incidents of Life on the West Indian Island Recalled by a European Girl—Wealth of Fruit and Vegetables—Women Fine Embroiderers.

The eyes of a pretty Martinique girl were heavy with tears while she talked with a New York Tribune reporter the other day of her former home in St. Pierre and of her many friends who were there at the time of the disaster.

The young woman and her sisters, like most white girls at Martinique, received their education in Europe. The convent school, the girl explained, admitted all applicants, negro as well as white children, and as the social lines are rigidly drawn in Martinique white people in rare instances patronized the school. The speaker recalled many interesting habits and incidents of Martinique home life.

"We were never apprehensive of danger from the mountain," she said. "Indeed, we never even thought of it as a volcano. To us it was always 'the mountain,' on the side of which grew such luxuriant verdure as no one can realize until he has seen it. The lake in the crater was the favorite resort for the young men who bathed in it and camped around it. Women and girls seldom visited the crater because of the steep and difficult climb as one neared the summit.

"The drive from St. Pierre to our summer home at Morne Rouge was a delightful one. Along parts of the way big sugar cane plantations waved their silky arms in the breeze. At Trois Ponts, a village on the way, barefooted women wearing big hats, which they wove from palm leaves, were always to be seen washing their clothes in the river. The river bed was covered with huge bowlders, which the washers use in place of washboards, standing in the river and slapping the garments on the stones with a vigor that would have insured destruction to the fabric had the process been applied by uninitiated hands. Out of the palm leaves the women also made kitchen fans, which served them in place of bellows to encourage their fires.

"The Jardin des Plantes was a beautiful place, but it was infested with snakes, as are the forests of the island. Visitors had to look out for them. There were beautiful ferns in Martinique, but I always noticed that where they were most luxuriant snakes were the most numerous. No one thinks of exploring the woods for flowers, as they do here, because of the serpents. Beautiful orchids and other lovely wild flowers grow in the forests. The orchids are usually found in inaccessible places, difficult even for the natives to reach. The country surrounding Trois Ponts is especially wild and picturesque.

"Among the attractive sights of St. Pierre was the early morning market, to which country women brought their produce in big wooden trays on their heads and from which women buyers took home their purchases in the same fashion. The wooden head tray was, too, the laundress' only vehicle when she called for and delivered her customers' wash. The women dressed in the most brilliant hues obtainable.

"At Fonds Core, outside of the city, it was a picturesque sight to see the fishermen bringing in their big nets in the early morning. A great variety of excellent fish was plentiful in Martinique, and it was sure to be fresh, for it could not be kept from one day to another on account of the climate. Ice was expensive, but was used by the white people. An icemaking plant was one of the enterprises of St. Pierre.

"People of Martinique are early risers. The colored population starts for market by 4 o'clock, and the white people are awake and ready for their first coffee by 6 o'clock. Many people drink cocoanut water, which is said to have the virtues of vichy, the first thing in the morning. The cocoanuts are procured by the little negroes, who climb the trees for the fruit and deliver it fresh to their patrons when the water is cool and sparkling. The jelly-like pulp of the young cocoanut is a great delicacy. The dry nut, in the condition it is received here, is grated and made into a delicious ice cream.

"Breakfast is, as a rule, served between 7 and 8 o'clock and usually consists of a cocoa or chocolate, with bread or biscuit and butter. The midday repast at noon is the hearty meal of the day, and there are always a fish course, a meat course, vegetables and a dessert of fruit in one form or another. A lighter meal is served at 7 p. m., at which there are always a meat soup, a vegetable or two and a dessert. Pastries in the shape of pies and puddings are little used. There is a wealth of fruit. Some of the vegetables common in the north, such as asparagus and artichokes, are much smaller when grown in Martinique, but others are larger. The cucumber, for instance, which attains a giant size in the islands, would hardly be recognized here. Concombres farcis sausages is a favorite dish. The big cucumbers are peeled, the seeds are removed and the cavities left are filled with sausages; then the cucumber is cooked in butter much in the fashion of a pot roast. It is sliced when served at the table. Cucumbers are also used for salads. Apricots are a different fruit from those common here. A story is told of a man in Martinique, a stranger to the country, who amazed his servant by sending for a half dozen apricots. He was surprised to receive six unfamiliar fruits, each about the size of a melon. A frequent method of serving the apricot is to slice it and serve it with wine and sugar. Liquors are made from the seeds of the sapote and from the vanilla bean. The chadock is much like the grape fruit, but bigger. There are two varieties; one with a white pulp is sour, and the other with a pink pulp is sweet. The skin is crystallized and used as a conserve. There are many sorts of oranges, figs and bananas. The latter are an important factor in the diet of the negroes.

"Palmiste is sure to be a favorite with foreigners. It is the pulp of the stem of a tree and is used with French dressing as a salad or is boiled and served with a white sauce.

"The avocato pear is rather a vegetable than a fruit. It has a marrowlike pulp, which is eaten uncooked with salt. Farine manioc is very much used. It is manufactured from the grated tubers of Manihot utilissima, which sometimes weigh forty pounds apiece. By submitting the grated product to great pressure a deleterious juice peculiar to the plant is removed. Breadfruit is common and is boiled and served whole or mashed. The Caribbean cabbage, which does not resemble the northern cabbage, but which is more like a turnip, is very good. The natives are particularly fond of red pepper. A savory dish of vegetables and onions highly seasoned with it is known as piment confit. Sweet potatoes and bananas are the favorite products of the negroes, who subsist chiefly on beans, salt codfish and breadfruit.

"There is little social life in Martinique, and unless there is a dancing party the population is pretty sure to be in bed between 9 and 10 o'clock in the evening. Dancing is the principal pastime, and the young people can never get enough of it. The climate does not encourage games. We introduced tennis, but no one played it after we left. There are no teas and few dinners. A festivity or celebration occasionally takes the form of a very formal luncheon, which is in reality a heavy dinner and about which there is little gayety.

"The women, both black and white, who have been educated in the convent do exquisite embroidery and lacework. The white women also make wax fruits and vegetables which are remarkable for their lifelike appearance. I have seen pineapples, apples of various sorts, sugar cane and the like which it was hard to recognize from the real. I have never seen anything to equal this waxwork in France, Germany, Holland or England.

"A profusion of roses, honeysuckles and other flowers grow about the houses. Few wild birds are seen, and none is heard."

WHO BUILDS THE STATE?

Richard Watson Gilder's Poem on National Constructors.

The annual meeting of the Society of the Colonial Wars of New Jersey was held at Princeton, N. J., recently. At the dinner given in the evening Richard Watson Gilder, editor of The Century Magazine, read the following poem:

Who builds the state? Not he whose power,
Rooted in wrong, in gold intrenched,
Makes him the regent of the hour;
The eternal light cannot be quenched.

This shall outlive his little span,
Shine fierce upon each tainted scheme;
Shall show where shame blots all the plan,
The treachery in the dazzling dream.

He builds the state who builds on truth,
Not he who, crushing toward his aim,
Strikes conscience from the throne and ruth
To win a dark, unpiteous fame;

Not he, though master among men—
Empire and ages all his thought—
Though like an eagle be his ken,
Down to the ground shall all be brought.

For this I hold and shall for aye,
Till heaven sends death—that they who sow
Hate, and the blood of brothers, they Shall harvest hate and want and woe,

The curse of earth's dread agonies
Whereto they added in their hour,
And all the unheeded tears and cries
They caused in lust of lawless power.

He builds the state who to that task
Brings strong, clean hands and purpose pure;
Who wears not virtue as a mask,
He builds the state that shall endure—

The state wherein each loyal son
Holds as a birthright from true sires
Treasures of honor, nobly won,
And freedom's never dying fires.

A Skyscraper Warehouse.

Skyscrapers as warehouses is the idea of a Chicago firm which has taken steps for the erection of the largest composite structure of that sort in Chicago. The new building is thirteen stories in height and will stretch from West Lake street to almost West Washington street, being connected by a twelve foot tunnel under West Randolph street. With the ground it will represent an investment of about $3,000,000, and it is to be ready for occupancy on Jan. 15, says the New York Times. The structure's length will be 623 feet and width 88 feet. The thirteen floors will contain 700,000 square feet of space.

No British Banners Wave In Battle.

Some people may not know that the colors are not now taken into action, says the London Navy and Army. Before a corps proceeds on service they are placed in safe custody as suits such honorable insignia, and "when Johnny comes marching home again" they will be all the fresher for not being carried through dusty lands and trying rivers. The men whose duty it would have been to carry them and stand by them to the last are nowadays employed in less sentimental if more useful duties.

A Rubber Substitute.

A German chemist has discovered a perfect substitute for rubber that is resilient and self closing and practically unwearable.

A Strong Man

Is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from indigestion or some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs of digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man doesn't feel just right, when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous and irritable, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man needs to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, stimulates the liver, nourishes the nerves, and so gives health and strength to the whole body.

Mr. Thomas A. Swarts, of Sub. Station C, Columbus, Ohio, Box 103, writes: "I was taken very sick with severe headache, then cramps in the stomach and my food would not digest, then kidney and liver trouble and my back got weak so I could scarcely get around. The more I doctored the worse I got until six years passed. I could only walk in the house by the aid of a chair, and I had given up to die. Then one of my neighbors said, 'Take my advice and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and make a new man out of yourself.' The first bottle helped me and after I had taken eight bottles in about six weeks I was weighed and found I had gained twenty-seven (27) pounds, and I am as stout and healthy to-day, I think, as I ever was."

Memorial Day.

In accordance with Grand Army law and the beautiful and appropriate custom established soon after the War of Rebellion closed, the thirtieth day of May next will be observed as Memorial Day. Let the nearly eighteen thousand veterans still living in Massachusetts and active in our organization, "Close up," and with sincere pride pay their tribute of respect to the dear old comrades who with them offered and gave their lives on land and sea to save our country from disgraceful dismemberment and ruin.

In memory of our gallant soldier and sailor dead, let us strew upon their graves and upon the waters the fairest flowers, emblems of love and purity; remember their unselfish devotion to duty; their sacrifice of comfort, health and life itself amid the terrible experiences incident to war.

When you have done every honor in your power to this mighty army of our comrades, who have crossed the dark river a day's march in advance of us, then thank God that so many of us have been spared to see and enjoy the growth and glory of this mighty republic, the corner-stones of which our revolutionary sires laid firm and deep and which our comrades and ourselves saved when the hands of our misguided countrymen trailed her flag in the dust and would have torn her in pieces.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Most American women abroad work hard. They travel in all sorts of discomfort, rising "while it is yet night," walking through miles of picture-galleries, visiting ancient churches and cathedrals, and "doing" all kinds of places in which they take no interest. They go to so many cities and see them so superficially that they know nothing about any of them, really. How can any one know anything of a country, its people, institutions, language, art, architecture, morals, schools or anything else, just by racing through it with a party of nervous, hurried strangers, each member of it tired and worn to a frazzle? — June Women's Home Companion.

☞ But in general volcanoes must be counter beneficent devices of nature for the mimization of the destructive effects of telluric forces on the earth's crust; and in general they accomplish their purpose admirably. A volcanic eruption is certainly much less formidable in itself than is an earthquake in its possibilities. The latter may occur in most unexpected places and carry destruction over wide areas; the former occur only at well known places and the area of their destruction is limited . . . . . Accidents will happen now and then, no doubt, but there are enough volcanoes in the world to take care of the most and the worst of the seismic disturbances; and as for the volcanoes themselves, if we only get acquainted with them and properly study their habits, they need not greatly affright us.—Providence Journal.

TONS OF GRANITE.

Teamed to Bracketts Wharf and Shipped to Nut Island.

For the past ten days there has been an almost constant stream of heavily loaded stone teams passing through City Square toward Brackett's wharf. There the granite is loaded onto sloops and taken to Nut Island, where the sewer breakwater is being built. That now being teamed is from the John Cashman quarry who has a contract for 6,000 tons.

There is still another contract for 40,000 to 50,000 tons which it is understood John Fallon & Sons have. This contract will be shipped to its destination by the same method so that the stream of loaded stone teams through city square will continue all summer.

The method by which the weight of the stone is obtained is unique. When the vessels that transport the granite were brought to Brackett's wharf they were weighed. This means that the granite for the first load was weighed by standard scales. It was then put on to the vessel, every pound made the vessel sink just so much and when a ton had been loaded the water line was marked on the bow and stern. This was continued until the vessel had its full load. After that it is only necessary to dump on the granite and the marks show how many tons she has on.

Mere Guesswork.

Harry—I wonder who said that money is the root of all evil?

Harriet—Oh, some unhappy man who tried to marry for money and couldn't.

Not That Kind

"Well, did you have a heart to heart talk with your uncle about your future?"

"Oh, no; there was nothing in the least disagreeable about it."

Precaution.

"That's a funny hole in your hat."

"It may look funny, but I want some ventilation. I don't want to be bald before I'm nine years old."—New York Journal.

MONT PELEE ERUPTION

Graphic Description by Owner of Estate Near St. Pierre.

SUN OBSCURED BY VOLCANIC DUST

M. Albert, Who Escaped Though Only a Mile Away From the Crater, Tells How He Rescued His Family and Later Saw His Property Overrun With Lava.

M. Albert, the owner and manager of the Lagarrane estate, which lies about a mile northeast of the crater of Mont Pelee, recently arrived at Port of Spain, Trinidad, with his family on the steamship Canada from Martinique. He tells a story of a marvelous escape from the death that swept St. Pierre out of existence, says the New York Herald's special correspondent. He says:

"Mont Pelee had given warning of the destruction that was to come, but we, who had looked upon the volcano as harmless, did not believe that it would do more than spout fire and steam, as it had done on other occasions. It was a little before 8 o'clock on the morning of May 8 that the end came. I was in one of the fields of my estate when the ground trembled under my feet, not as it does when the earth quakes, but as though a terrible struggle was going on within the mountain. A terror came upon me, but I could not explain my fear.

"As I stood still Mont Pelee seemed to shudder, and a moaning sound issued from its crater. It was quite dark, the sun being obscured by ashes and fine volcanic dust. The air was dead about me, so dead that the floating dust seemingly was not disturbed. Then there was a rending, crashing, grinding noise, which I can only describe as sounding as though every bit of machinery in the world had suddenly broken down. It was deafening, and the flash of light that accompanied it was blinding, more so than any lightning I have ever seen.

"It was like a terrible hurricane, and where a fraction of a second before there had been a perfect calm I felt myself drawn into a vortex, and I had to brace myself firmly. It was like a great express train rushing by, and I was drawn by its force. The mysterious force leveled a row of strong trees, tearing them up by the roots and leaving bare a space of ground 15 yards wide and more than 100 yards long.

"Transfixed, I stood, not knowing in what direction to flee. I looked toward Mont Pelee, and above its apex formed a great black cloud which reached high in the air. It literally fell upon the city of St. Pierre. It moved with a rapidity that made it impossible for anything to escape it. From the cloud came explosions that sounded as though all the navies of the world were in titanic combat. Lightning played in and out in broad forks, the result being that intense darkness was followed by light that seemed to be of magnifying power. That St. Pierre was doomed I knew, but I was prevented from seeing the destruction by a spur of the hill that shut off the view of the city. It is impossible for me to tell how long I stood there inert. Probably it was only a few seconds, but so vivid were my impressions that it now seems as though I stood as a spectator for many minutes. When I recovered possession of my senses, I ran to my house and collected the members of the family, all of whom were panic stricken. I hurried them to the seashore, where we boarded a small steamship, in which we made the trip in safety to Fort-de-France.

"I know that there was no flame in the first wave that was sent down upon St. Pierre. It was a heavy gas, like firedamp, and it must have asphyxiated the inhabitants before they were touched by the fire, which quickly followed. As we drew out to sea in the small steamship Mont Pelee was in the throes of a terrible convulsion. New craters seemed to be opening all about the summit, and lava was flowing in broad streams in every direction. My estate was ruined while we were still in sight of it.

"Many women who have lived in St. Pierre have escaped only to know that they are left widowed and childless. This is because many of the wealthier men sent their wives away while they remained in St. Pierre to attend to their business affairs."

TELEPHONES FOR ARMIES.

Instrument Invented by French Officer Said to Be Successful.

At the forthcoming French army maneuvers the new field telephone system Charollois will have a thorough trial, says the Washington Post. The inventor, Captain Charollois, claims that moving bodies of troops not more than six to seven miles apart can be connected by telephone by his simple, strong wire laid on the ground. Whether the wire is walked on or tramped on doesn't make the least difference; it will operate as long as the ground is dry.

In wet weather the wire is to be placed on trees, fences or sticks. The wire is so thin that a distance of half a mile can be covered with wire weighing less than six pounds.

Trimmings For the Coronation.

Lace studded with gems is one of the trimmings that will be worn extensively at the coronation ceremonies. In addition to amethysts, garnets and other semiprecious stones, sapphires, emeralds and even diamonds will be used, the stones costing from $4 to $200. The lace need not be very heavily studded to make it extremely costly.

CITY BREVITIES.

Observations in Daily Walks of Ledger Reporters.

The Wollaston Glee club will give another concert next Tuesday evening.

Rev. L. H. Austin of Quincy Point and Dr. Todd will exchange pulpits Sunday evening.

Miss Julia M. Little of Spear street was called to Vermont this week by the illness of her brother.

Miss Bertha Ryer of East Boston will sing at the Atlantic Methodist church next Sunday night at the 7 o'clock service.

The Epworth League will hold its semi-annual meeting for the election of officers next Tuesday night at the Atlantic Methodist church.

Mr. William H. Griggs after an absence of two years is to be the soloists at the Memorial Congregational church Sunday morning.

Thayer Academy was defeated by Brockton High at Brockton yesterday 14 to 12, although the score was 12 to 8 in their favor at the end of the fifth innings.

The monthly meeting of the Hospital Aid association will be held on Thursday, May 29, in chapel of First church at 3 o'clock. Director's meeting at 2.30.

Rev. E. N. Hardy of this city was elected a member of the Executive committee of the State association of Congregational churches at its annual meeting at Plymouth last week.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the East Milton Congregational church is to give that laughable entertainment an "Old Maids' Convention" at Ellsworth hall next Wednesday evening.

All the Quincy week day trains stop at Quincy Adams both ways, but on Sunday Quincy has an inward at 9.33 A. M. and an outward leaving Boston at 8.43 P. M., which do not stop at Quincy Adams.

By the new timetable there is no change in West Quincy week day trains, but on Sunday the noon train for Boston leaves at 1.16, or fifteen minutes earlier, and the outward leaves Boston at 12.16 also fifteen minutes earlier.

Yesterday the resolve that wars should be abolished was debated in the affirmative by John Hancock pupils while Lincoln pulpils took the negative. Stacy Southworth one of the High school teachers was judge and decided in favor of John Hancock.

The funeral of Mrs. Elias A. Perkins was held Friday afternoon from her late residence on Elm street, and was very largely attended. The services were conducted by Rev. Ellery C. Butler. Music was furnished by the Apollo Male quartett. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston.

The approach to Mount Wollaston cemetery from Sea street, is a disgrace to the city. Ladies getting off the cars have to travel through deep gravel, stones and dust before reaching the gate. It was the same all last summer and an improvement was looked for before Memorial day this year.

The business meeting of the Junior Friday club was held on Monday at the home of Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield, Brook street, Wollston. Miss Edith Randall was reelected president and Miss Alice Keith Prescott, secretary. The third member elected on the executive board beside the officers was Miss Clara Leavitt Baxter. Among the names proposed for membership were: Miss Jane Reed, Miss Patty Faxon, Mrs. Charles A. Frice, Mrs. Charles F. Harper and Miss Harriet Johnson of Alleyne terrace.

Strengthen Your Nerves

And Improve Your Digestion, Appetite and Color by Taking

Pept-iron

It abounds in just what the nerves and the brain need for strength—it is food for them, as well as medicine. It cures all degrees of nervous weakness or debility; tones the stomach and other digestive organs, creates appetite, perfects nutrition, cures paleness, reddens the lips, cheeks and ears, and permanently benefits the whole system.

Men, Women and Children

Are alike deriving great and permanent good from this new iron tonic, combining (and so as to secure the best effects of which they are capable) the best digestives, nervines and nutrients, including pepsin, celery and the phosphates. It is neutral, organic, non-astringent—that is, it is neither acid nor alkaline in reaction, is readily assimilated, and does not cause constipation, however long taken; neither does it injure the teeth nor leave any inky or metallic flavor in the mouth. Peptiron is especially recommended for the cure and prevention of neurasthenia and anemia, nervous weakness and paleness; for overcoming the effects of mental and physical overwork, too much care, responsibility, anxiety or worry, and all excesses; and for creating appetite and promoting natural sleep.

Doing Good "I am taking Pept-iron—have used about half a bottle up to the present time. I find it is doing me good, as I am much better. I can recommend it highly to others, as I have to my neighbors, and they are inquiring how to get it. Being a new medicine they have not seen it advertised." CHARLES I. KNIGHT, Saxonville, Mass.

Peptiron Is made in two forms: In a liquid—an aromatic cordial elixir—at $1 per bottle, also in chocolate-coated pills at 50 cents or $1 per box. By

DE BECK ON COAL STRIKE.

Noted English Editor Holds Trusts and Mine Owners Responsible.

A. M. De Beck, the famous English editor, known in London as the workingman's friend, has written for the New York Evening Journal his views on the strike of the coal miners and its cause and effect. He says:

This glorious country today faces the perils of domestic strife, the most shameful as well as the most sinister perils that can menace the United States, because they hit at liberty and disturb the peace and happiness of the majority of her people. A few men of great wealth own the telegraph system, the railroads and the coal mines of this great country. They have formed "trusts" and called them "a community of interests." In reality they are a "conspiracy of interests," of course, of their own.

These "trusts" are a horror of commercial and industrial Cæsarism, a hideous leprosy which is slowly but surely poisoning the very sources of national life.

Any strike is perilous to commerce and industry, but the strike which is now imminent is not only dangerous to commerce and industry; it is dangerous to the nation because it hits at the foundation and primary principle of the constitution, because it defies the existing laws, stops the livelihood of nearly half a million of honest workingmen and menaces the lives of the people adjacent the coal mines.

It is grave when, in a republic like the United States, a handful of men are in a position to create such a perilous situation; graver yet if the government is deaf to the warning of the press, the cries of the people and blind to the terrible facts daily placed before it. From a careful study of the present situation I boldly say that the mine owners are responsible for the strike.

Mark ye, millionaire owners, these poor miners cannot even provide for their old age, though they think of it with awe and heartache. Does your charity mean only the foundation of libraries, a worthy object; the donation of millions to universities, another worthy object; the erection of hospitals, yet another worthy object? But does not your common sense, if your hearts speak not, dictate to you that your first duty is to do justice to those who work for you, who help you to acquire the millions by which you dictate to legislators, defy the laws of the country and besmirch the good fame of the republic?

It is easier to be charitable than to be just, but you can be both with a little effort and good will. There must be a coalition of the capitalist and the toiler. This coalition must be made with a broadness of spirit and sincerity of heart without distrust and prejudice.

If the capitalist is too obstinate and avaricious, too much law defying, the head of the state, President Roosevelt, whose integrity and courage every American citizen and foreigner admires, must in and say:

"Halt! Go no further, for democracy is still sovereign mistress of the United States."

SCORNED BY MORGAN.

American Financier Refused to Be Interviewed by French Immortal.

J. Pierpont Morgan has proved too much for the French and English interviewers, says the Paris correspondent of the New York World. His rude dismissal of any newspaper man who succeeds in gaining access to him has been editorially commented upon recently in six different Paris newspapers, and the Paris correspondents of the English newspapers now ignore all assignments to see the Yankee terror.

The Figaro tried to compel Morgan to talk, especially engaging Jules Lemaitre, a member of the academy and one of the foremost literary and political personalities of France, to see him, evidently calculating that Morgan would not dare to turn down such a celebrity.

Under the title "What Money Cannot Buy" M. Lemaitre describes the encounter, incidentally making a most unflattering portrayal of Mr. Morgan's appearance and manners. M. Lemaitre says the talk lasted thirty seconds. A Paris banker who was acquainted with Mr. Morgan introduced him.

"This is M. Lemaitre," he said. "You must have heard of him, as everybody has."

"Well, I've not," grunted Mr. Morgan.

"He would like to talk with you on behalf of the Figaro," said the Parisian banker.

"I've nothing to say," grunted Mr. Morgan.

"But," pursued the banker, "the Figaro is the greatest paper in Europe."

"I don't care if it is the greatest in the world," said Mr. Morgan; "I have nothing to say."

"M. Lemaitre is one of the forty immortals," pleaded the banker.

"What's that to me?" queried Mr. Morgan. "I've nothing to say. Good morning." Whereupon he turned upon his heel and left the room, leaving them both standing agape.

Vesuvius Near Collapse.

The Italian government has stationed dispatch boats along the coast fronting on Mount Vesuvius, warning vessels to keep at a safe distance, as the main precipice looking toward Pompeii is about to fall in. All roads leading to the summit are closed.

Cuba Libre.

[Tune, "Maryland, My Maryland!"]
The work is wrought; the cannon's roar
On sea or land is heard no more;
The battle's rage and tumult cease
In songs of victory and peace.
The heaven appointed task is done,
The cause for which we fought is won,
And Cuba libre, fairest gem,
Is set in freedom's diadem!

Havana's waters, blue and broad,
Reflect the righteousness of God,
And Santiago's wreck strewn shore
Resounds his praise forevermore.
The islands of the sea rejoice;
The floods lift up their mighty voice;
From shore to shore the anthems rise,
A nation's grateful sacrifice.

Long as the stars shall shine o'erhead
In deathless fame shall live the dead,
Their country's glory and renown,
Their fadeless, everlasting crown.
The morning breaks; the shadows flee;
Christ's kingdom comes on land and sea;
The rule of love, the reign of good,
The whole round world one brotherhood!
—Rev. Benjamin Copeland in New York Times.

RAILWAY TIES.

After five and a half years of labor in construction the Berlin elevated and underground electric railway is open for traffic.

At a recent exposition in Berlin trains of ten or twelve cars were drawn on a circular railroad by alcohol locomotives.

An estimate is made that the railroads of the country this year will expend $400,000,000 in betterment, cut-offs, rolling stock, etc.

All the new trains on the Central London railway are to be of fireproof construction, steel and asbestus being largely used. Other precautions for the safety of passengers are being taken.

The Philergians of Braintree.

The annual meeting of the Philergians was held at the house of the President, Mrs. T. R. Newell, on Friday afternoon. A large number of members and a few guests were present and it proved a most enjoyable afternoon to all.

The plans for the outing of the club were discussed; Concord was decided upon, and the committee previously appointed was asked to make plans and arrangements to go to that place.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President,—Mrs. T. R. Newell.
First Vice President,—Mrs. Aubrey Hilliard.
Second Vice President,—Mrs. O. W. Allen.
Secretary,—Mrs. W. H. Reynolds.
Treasurer,—Mrs. F. Eugene Dyer.

The entertainment of the afternoon was given by Miss Fannie Dyke and Miss Mildred Dizer.

Miss Dyke a pupil of Mrs. Erving Winslow of Boston was most pleasing in manner, and in the rendering of her selections. In giving the monologue she displayed special charm and talent.

Miss Dizer a pupil of the well-known teacher, John Orth, played Godard's 2d Mazurka with excellent style and expression and with a finish worthy of a much older performer.

After the entertainment, refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed. This meeting closed the season of 1901 and '02. The first meeting of next season will be held in September with Mrs. A. S. Morrison.

Mark's Substitute

A Memorial Day Sketch

"I'M drafted, Kit."

"Oh, Mark!"

And with the exclamation pretty Mrs. Weidman fell into her husband's arms shivering with terror.

"There, I've blurted it out in the worst way after all this last hour spent in thinking how I could break it the easiest."

"But it will kill me, Mark. What shall I do? What can I do? I can't stand it, and I won't let you go. They may shoot you here first."

"There, there, Kittie, dear! You do not know what you are saying. You must try to be patient and submissive. There'll be some way provided, though I don't see how I can save you just now in the beginning of winter."

Poor Kit wept until completely exhausted, entirely deaf to her husband's weak attempts at consolation.

It was a sad home, but not the only one in the land that dread November of 1863.

The fatal "draft" put out the light forever on many a hearthstone.

* * * * * * *

"So yer drafted, be ye, Neil?" remarked the postmaster at The Forks, eying the stalwart young man addressed with a look which plainly said, "And I'm glad of it."

"I s'pose I am."

"Goin'?"

"No, sir! When Neil Weidman gets ready to work for Uncle Sam, he'll let him know by enlistin'. Until then he'd have his majesty know he ain't a-goin'."

"Not very patriotic!" sneered a bystander. "Now, I'd 'a' been thar long ago if it hadn't 'a' been fer this here game leg o' mine."

"Small loss to the country," growled Neil.

"S'pose Mark'll not go neither?" interposed the postmaster.

"Mark!"

Neil turned a face suddenly grown eager and white.

"He ain't on the draft?"

"But he be."

"Yes, and told me he'd have to go," added the bystander.

Without another word the young man turned on his heel, involuntarily loosening the scarf about his neck that he might breathe more easily. Swiftly he passed out into the dull November day, looking neither to right nor left.

On, on he walked, like a man in a terrible hurry, until three miles lay between himself and the garrulous little group at The Forks. He was turning in at his own gateway, but, changing his mind, he passed on, still at the high rate of speed.

Two more miles were paced off in this mad fashion; then he wheeled about and faced toward home again.

When once more he found himself there, he felt weak and spent. Slowly then he passed in and up the rude stairs into the little loft denominated "Neil's room."

"What's up now?" his sister remarked. "Ain't that draft business all settled?"

"I s'pose it's all right; he sent on the money," returned her husband, who had vainly tried to enlist, but had been rejected on account of deafness.

"I bet if I was him I'd enlist first chance now and get my money back," he continued.

"Everybody ain't so fond of a dollar nor so itchen fer a fight as you be," responded his wife in the shrill treble she always used in addressing him.

"I ain't no coward; none of the Moselys be," he retorted.

"Neither be the Weidmans, Dick Mosely, but they've got sense enough to look out fer number one. They ain't dirt poor."

Neil, lying at full length on his couch in the loft, smiled grimly at their altercation.

"Dick ain't fit to manage here, but I don't care," he muttered; then, turning his face to the wall, he slept through sheer mental and physical fatigue.

When he awoke, it was growing dusk, and Mollie was calling to know if he were sick or why he did not go out to attend to his part of the chores, as usual.

No sooner was breakfast over the following morning than he buttoned his coat about him and started off.

"Some way Neil acts awful queer," shrieked Mollie to her husband.

"Does he?"

"Does he?" she muttered, turning away in disgust. "How stupid men are, anyway. Mark ain't, though, and Neil didn't use to be."

It had been a terrible night at Mark Weidman's.

Kit's mother had been summoned, but vainly she tried to think of something comforting to say. The outlook was dark.

Kit might—in fact would have to—stay there in their little cabin home with her little ones. There was no room for her at her father's, for already a widowed daughter had come back there with four children.

A younger brother would have to come and stay with her. It was the only way.

She might go and stay at Mollie's—only, there was Neil.

It was about 10 o'clock when Neil Weidman rapped at his brother's door.

Mark's face showed something of what he was suffering when he opened it.

"Neil! Come in."

"Can't. I'm in a hurry. I was on the draft, but had the cash all ready, so sent it in yesterday. I hear you are on too."

"I am, and heaven knows how I can be spared, but I could not raise $50, much less $300." His voice broke a little.

"Well, I came to tell you I will go in your place. Goodby!"

"Neil!"

Mark sprang forward, grasping his brother by the arm and fairly dragging him inside.

"There, don't make any fuss about it," muttered the young man. "You can't be spared—I can. It will make no difference to any one whether I live or die."

Mark had bowed his head on his hands and was shaking with emotion. Kit's voice from the other room called feebly to know what the matter was. Mrs. Bell, her mother, had gone home for a few hours, taking the little boys with her.

Springing up again, Mark opened wide the middle door, saying: "It is Neil, Kittie, and he offers to be my substitute. Come in here, brother; do."

"Haven't time this mornin', Mark. Give my respects to Mrs. Weidman. I may be in again before leavin'." His hand was on the latch.

"Please, Neil, come here."

It was Kit's pleading tone, and before he realized what he was doing the young man stood by the bedside looking down into the face of the one woman he had loved. It was five years since she had told him she was going to marry Mark, and in all that time they had never spoken, had rarely met.

IT WAS A MOMENT OF SUPREME BITTERNESS.

"Oh, Neil, you are too good—you cannot mean it!"

"I mean it," he said coldly.

Through it all he had never suffered as he did now to see how willing she was to have him sacrifice himself for Mark.

It was a moment of supreme bitterness, yet in spite of himself he lingered to gaze for perhaps the last time into the sweet face.

Her eyes were full of tears, and, catching his hand, she passed it to her lips, sobbing:

"You are so good, so noble! If it were not for the children, we could not consent to your going.

"If only we could raise the money—but we have little to sell, and there is no one to buy what we have."

"I have made up my mind and should go anyway now. There is nothin' to keep me."

"But, Neil, this is too much," said Mark, who had now sufficiently recovered himself to comprehend the situation. "I cannot let you go, but if you could look after things here some and see that Kit did not suffer I could go easier. There is only Joe to do anything."

"No use talkin', Mark; I am goin'. And now goodby all!"

* * * * * * *

"Mollie, I am goin' to the war."

"Goin' to the war, Neil? Why, I thought you'd sent on the money."

"Yes, so I did; but Mark was on the draft, too, and we couldn't nohow raise another three hundred, and he can't be spared from home at this time of year; so I'm goin' in"—

"In his place?" interrupted Mollie excitedly.

Neil nodded.

"Well, if I ever s'posed I'd live to see you give your life fer Mark after he cut you with"—

"There, there, Mollie! Now, about things here on the place."

"Why, I'm sure I don't know; I s'pose Dick and me can manage, though I shall have the most of it to do. If Dick is my husband, I must say, as I've said before, the Moselys are mighty poor managers. But, Neil, I hate awfully to have you go."

They talked a long while, but Mollie never dreamed of the terrible battle her brother fought out with himself that dull November day.

She never knew how tempted he had been to let his brother—the man who had robbed him of his life's happiness—look out for himself.

The tempter whispered, "Let him go, and if anything happens you are not to blame; then Kit will be a"— But of course he turned his back at this juncture each time, but the struggle had been a desperate one.

He was with Grant in the Wilderness and all through the disastrous overland campaign. He was with him until sent under Sheridan to Five Forks, where he was severely wounded, but to him there was never such another battle as the one fought with himself during that mad walk under the gray November skies.

"Neil is wounded, and I must go to him!" Mark exclaimed in deepest anguish as he read the name. "Oh, Kittie, what if he dies! I never can stand it!"

Before the sun went down that day he had kissed his wife, boys and infant daughter Nellie goodby and was on his way to his brother's side.

The meeting between them was affecting in the extreme, but Neil was by far the more composed of the two.

"I've got to go, Mark, but it is no matter. I am so glad that it is not you."

Toward the last the wounded soldier became delirious, and it was from his ravings that his brother learned of his great temptation and the mastery gained over self that eventful day. He talked, too, of Kit until tears bathed the face of the agonized watcher.

When all was over, Mark Weidman went back home with the remains of his "substitute," and last Memorial day, sitting by the flower decked mound with Kit, now an elderly woman, and Nellie, a lovely young matron, I heard this little story.

On the marble slab at the head is the inscription:

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."—Chicago Ledger.

DECISIVE BATTLES.

History Making Combats From Marathon, B. C. 490, to Sedan, 1870.

According to Lord Creasy, the fifteen decisive battles were those at Marathon, September, 490 B. C., when Miltiades, with 10,000 Greeks, defeated 100,000 Persians under Datis and Artaphernes; at Syracuse, September, 413 B. C., a great naval battle took place, the Athenians under Nicias and Demosthenes being defeated, with a loss of 40,000 killed and wounded of their entire fleet; at Arbela, October, 331 B. C., Alexander the Great overthrew Darius Codomanus for the third time; at Metaurus, 207 B. C., the Consuls Livius and Nero cut to pieces Hasdrubal's army sent to re-enforce Hannibal; Arminius in 9 A. D. and the Gauls overthrew the Romans under Varus and established the independence of Gaul; at Chalons, 451 A. D., Actius and Theodoric utterly defeated Attila and prevented Europe from devastation; at Tours, October, 732, Charles Martel overthrew the Saracens under Abdurrahman and broke the Moslem yoke from Europe; at Hastings, October, 1066, William of Normandy slew Harold II. and obtained England's throne; at Orleans, 1429, Joan of Arc secured the independence of France; the defeat of the Spanish armada, 1588, destroyed the hopes of the pope in England; the battle of Blenheim, Aug. 13, 1704, when Marlborough and Prince Eugene defeated Tallard, leading the French and the Bavarians and thus preventing Louis XIV. from carrying out his schemes; at Pultowa, July, 1709, Czar Peter utterly defeated Charles XII. of Sweden and established the Muscovite power; at Saratoga, October, 1777, General Gates defeated the British and General Burgoyne and thus secured for the United States the alliance of France; at Valmy, September, 1792, the French marshal, Kellerman, gained the upper hand for the French revolutionists over the Duke of Brunswick and the allied armies; at Waterloo, June 18, 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte commanded the French and the Duke of Wellington the British and their allies, and the victory broke up Napoleon's revolutionary plans; two recent battles, not here included, are those at Gettysburg, July, 1863, and at Sedan, preparing respectively for the downfall of the Confederacy and the capture of Napoleon III. and his army.

The Old Forage Cap.

A regulation dress hat was brought into the army under Floyd while he was secretary of war, but the best known article of headwear was the forage cap of dark blue cloth with rounded visor, the crown of the cap pulled well to the front to display the insignia of the arm of the service (crossed sabers for the cavalry, crossed cannon for the artillery and a hunting bugle for the infantry, for which has since been substituted the crossed muskets), the regimental number and the company letter. Practically speaking, the whole war was fought through on the Union side by men clad in this cap, the dark blue blouse, the sky blue pantaloons, with, in winter time, the sky blue overcoat added thereto. This was emphatically Uncle Sam's uniform, all that he ever served out, and the uniform that was universally worn during the greater part of the struggle for national existence.

A Peace Hymn of the Republic.

There's a voice across the nation like a mighty ocean hail,
Borne up from out the southward as the seas before the gale;
Its breath is in the streaming flag and in the flying sail
As we go sailing on.

'Tis a voice that we remember, ere its summons soothed as now,
When it rang in battle challenge and we answered vow with vow,
With roar of gun and hiss of sword and crash of prow and prow
As we went sailing on.

Our hope sank, even as we saw the sun sink faint and far;
The ship of state went groping through the blinding smoke of war—
Through blackest midnight lurching, all uncheered of moon and star,
Yet sailing, sailing on.

As one who spake the dead awake, with lifeblood leaping warm,
Who walked the troubled waters, all unscathed, in mortal form,
We felt our Pilot's presence with his hand upon the storm
As we went sailing on.

O voice of passion lulled to peace, this dawning of today!
O voices twain now blent as one, ye sing all fears away
Since foe and foe are friends, and, lo, the Lord as glad as they—
He sends us sailing on.
—James Whitcomb Riley.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For Week Beginning May 25. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Missions; our missionary boards. "A work for me and a work for you."—I Cor. xii, 1-10.

Denominational loyalty has ever been a characteristic of Christian Endeavor. Interdenominational fellowship has been emphasized and practiced, but not at the expense of loyalty to one's own denomination. The Endeavorer who proves disloyal to his own church is disloyal to Christian Endeavor, and, while he may have a name to live, he is dead.

The spirit of denominational loyalty taught and cultivated in the Christian Endeavor society should arouse the deepest kind of interest in the great benevolent boards of our church, especially the boards of home and foreign mission, by whatever name they may be known. The ignorance of the average church member concerning the great missionary agencies and enterprises of his own church is pathetic and inexcusable. And ignorance is never inspiring. It may sometimes be bliss, but it is never a provoker of good works. Ignorance begets indifference and apathy. How can we be interested unless we know? Yet how few do know! How few Endeavorers could name the benevolent agencies of their church, describe their character, functions and fields of operation! Thousands of church members never saw a report of one of their church boards. Is it any wonder, then, that we are sometimes careless and indifferent in our support of the boards? Go to your pastor, obtain from him literature and reports of the missionary agencies of your church and make a special study of them. If you will do so, your interest in their work and support of it will at once increase.

The missionary boards of our churches should enlist the prayers, interest and hearty support of every one of us. Through them our church's work is done, and as the members of a church we should loyally support all its work. The boards are not private concerns for the committees that direct them or the chosen officials who administer their affairs. They belong to the whole church and in part to us as members of the church. We should therefore most heartily support them. They are wisely directed and economically administered. Many people have the impression that the church boards are most expensively operated, but this is a false impression. All money is wisely spent. The least possible expense is incurred in applying all gifts to the purposes for which they are given. It is a positive misrepresentation and usually simply a miserable excuse for miserliness for people to say that the bulk of mission money is used in its distribution. Such is far from being the case, as a little investigation on the part of any one will show. Let us inform ourselves on the work of the boards and be loyal to them.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. xlii, 6, 7; lii, 7; Mal. iii, 8-12; Matt. xxviii, 19, 20; Luke xv, 1-10; Rom. i, 14-16; x, 12-15; I Cor. xv, 58; Gal. vi, 1-10; Rev. xxii, 17.

Not For Self.

There are many whose sole idea and one motive and principle in life is not to serve their generation, but their generation must serve them. They have no design and no desire for anything but self. The object to which everything else must bend is their own gratification and advancement and enrichment. The world is none the better, but the worse, for their having lived in it and is all the better off when the grave covers them. We are none of us free from the obligations of serving our own generation. The responsibility rests on us in all its weight, and selfish worldliness is a curse to any community, to any generation. A nation, a state, a community, a church, a family, an individual, soon tells the story whether it is serving its own generation according to the will of God or not.—William B. Smith.

An Unfailing Fountain.

Rarely does storm or sickness keep one of us from his daily work, but a very slight indisposition or a threatening cloud is often sufficient to prevent attendance where the only reward will be not dollars, but help to ourselves and others in the Christian life. If we will but gather all our flocks about the well, center all our affections about this glorious gospel of an opened word, revealing in every line the glorified Saviour and our duty to Him, the stone will be rolled away, so that our own hearts may be strengthened and nourished; so that the whole world may see in the opened word an unfailing fountain of the pure water of life.—Helper.

A Striking Summary.

Joseph Cook not long before his death wrote, at the request of the editor of The Christian Endeavor World, this characteristic message for Christian Endeavorers:

Man's life means
Tender 'teens,
Teachable twenties,
Tireless thirties,
Fiery forties,
Forcible fifties,
Serious sixties,
Sacred seventies,
Aching eighties,
Shortening breath,
Death,
The sod,
God.

TIPS FOR THE KAISER

To Aid Him In Effort to "Win the United States"

HAS MISJUDGED AMERICANS

Who Will Not Allow Visit of Prince Henry and Statue of Frederick the Great to Interfere When It Comes Down to Driving Treaty Bargains

London, May 24.—The Spectator, in a lengthy article on "How the German emperor might win the United States," begins with paying tribute to Emperor William's capabilities as a statesman, but declares that he has never yet arrived at a clear understanding of the American people.

"Probably, in his heart of hearts," says The Spectator, "he believes that the future of the world belongs in equal parts to the United States and German world power. Yet, while he has striven to carry out a community of interest, he completely misjudges the American people. The visit of Prince Henry and the statue of Frederick the Great are merely taken in America as signs of ordinary courtesy. The American republic would be pleased to see the statues of the kings of Europe ranged round the Capitol, respectfully listening to the strains of 'Hail Columbia.' But it will never occur to them that the emperor laid them under any sort of obligation.

"If the emperor would only first learn to understand the American people and then would make the sacrifices required, he would be able to win their confidence and respect. What will win that is the carrying out and doing homage to certain ideals of which the Americans believe themselves to be the special guardians. These are the ideals of civil and religious liberty, equality of all before the law, and the abolition of special and personal privileges. We do not doubt the American people would then be carried away by a flood of enthusiasm for the emperor. He would seem to them to be the exponent of true, honest American ideals."

The Spectator declares an anology between Emperor William and the late Queen Victoria, "who gained the confidence of America without conscious or deliberate effort, but by respect for human rights" and concludes with expressing the belief that when Emperor William asks the United States to forego any special points of its policy, like those connected with Monroeism, "he may as well try to negotiate with the wind and waves. When it comes to treaties it will be business and nothing but business."

To Raise Memorial Tablet

Plymouth, Mass., May 24.—This town was visited by a party of 150 members of the Society of Colonial Wars yesterday, and the points of historic note were inspected. Later, dinner was served in the Standish Guard armory, with speeches to fill in an hour afterwards. One of the speakers having noted that Eastham, at which point the Pilgrims landed, was without a monument of that event, $1000 was raised at the table for a tablet to be placed in that town.

Big Fight Arranged

San Francisco, May 24.—Jeffries and Fitzsimmons have agreed upon the final details for their battle here on July 25. The amended articles of agreement were signed yesterday. The club's forfeit was increased from $2000 to $5000. The contest is to be under straight Marquis of Queensbery rules. The winner is to receive 60 percent and the loser 40 percent of the purse. Edward M. Geaney is to be referee.

Startling Kidnapping Case

New Glasgow, N. S., May 24.—With a wild gleam in his eye and with one hand brandishing a long knife, an unknown man snatched the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Frazer from its cradle yesterday, backed stealthily out of the house, and with the babe in his arms he ran swiftly to the woods. Scores of men and boys have searched the woods, but found no trace of the kidnapper or the child.

Credit Balance of Ten Cents

New York, May 24.—At the clearing house yesterday the Chatham National bank had a credit balance of 10 cents on exchanges aggregating $661,000. This was the smallest credit balance reported at the clearing house since 1873. In 1863 a clearing house bank had a debit balance of 1 cent.

STEELE'S DEFEAT

May Lead to Adjournment of Congress to Look After Fences

Washington, May 24.—The choice of Frederick Landis as the Republican candidate for congress in the Eleventh Indiana district to succeed Representative Steele, is much more significant than it appears on the surface. Steele has served eight terms; he is one of the most experienced members in certain lines, and has risen to a place on the ways and means committee. He has spent the larger part of his time, for three months or so, away from Washington, in anticipation of a combination against him and for the purpose of preparing to meet it. The news of his defeat has carried consternation into the camps of several of the other old members, who reason that if a comparatively unknown young man like Landis can compass the overthrow of a veteran like Steele, there is no safety for any of them.

The talk about early adjournment has received a decided impulse on the House side of the Capitol, and Landis' victory may bear more practical fruits in other than merely political lines than he or any of his friends had counted upon. Although this revolt was wholly within the dominant party, it clearly indicates a condition of unrest among the people. Landis is a clever fellow, but during his stay here as private secretary to his brother, the representative from the Ninth district of Indiana, he did not impress anyone as having the timber in him to defeat a well-weathered politician like Steele. It seems as if something more than the play of local causes must be cited to account for the demand of Steele's constituents for a change.

A Patrolman's Lively Encounter

Melrose, Mass., May 24.—While attempting to overpower Henry A. Omer, Patrolman Hanley had an experience which he will not forget for some time. Patrolman Hanley found Omer with a flat-iron in his hand, attempting to drive the family out. Omer hurled the iron at Hanley, striking him on the head and cutting a deep gash. He picked up another iron and struck the patrolman again on the head. Hanley caught him and a lively tussle followed. Omer broke away and struck Hanley another blow on the head with the iron, which dazed him. At that point two citizens arrived and overpowered Omer after a hard struggle. He was placed in a padded cell and later committed to the Danvers insane hospital.

Defendants Were Absent

Montreal, May 24.—The case of Gaynor and Greene was called before Extradition Commissioner Lafontaine yesterday. Jailer Vallee of the Montreal jail stated that he was unable to produce the prisoners, as he had been ordered through a writ of habeas corpus to produce them before Judge Andrews of Quebec. Donald McMaster, on behalf of the prosecution, took exception to Judge Andrews issuing such a writ. Judge Lafontaine adjourned the case until Tuesday next, ordering the jailer to endeavor to produce the prisoners then.

Firman's Force Withdrawn

Washington, May 24.—The following cablegram from Commander Nickels of the Topeka has been received at the navy department, dated Port au Prince: "Everything is quiet here. The Haytian government in charge of a committee of safety. Firman, with 5000 men and a Haytian man-of-war, is at St. Marie. It is reported that the force under his command has been withdrawn while he sends forward various representatives to confer. Establishing provisional government."

Mayor Named For Governor

Wichita, Kas., May 24.—The Democratic state convention nominated six of the 14 places to be filled at the November election. W. H. Craddock, mayor of Kansas City, was named for governor. A committee of this convention will meet with the Populists at Topeka with power to ratify the balance of the ticket expected to be filled out at that time.

Guatemalan Town Destroyed

Hamburg, May 24.—A special dispatch to The Hamburg Doersenhalle from Guatemala says that the town of Quezaltenango has been wholly destroyed by an earthquake, which lasted three quarters of a minute. Business is entirely suspended in Guatemala and a great part of the coffee crop there has been destroyed.

Rioters Sent to Prison

New York, May 24.—Six men convicted of rioting during the recent strike of dyers' helpers at Paterson, N. J., were yesterday sentenced to various terms of hard labor, varying from one year to two years.

END OF WAR HAS COME

Belief In Best Informed Quarters at London

NO OFFICIAL STATEMENT

Owing to Effort to Prevent Premature Reports Which Might Adversely Influence Burghers—Cabinet Officers Have Nothing to Say of Matter

London, May 24.—The Associated Press has every reason to believe that peace in South Africa is practically secured. How soon it will be announced depends, apparently, more upon the convenience of the Boer leaders than upon the inclination of the British government. The private and official advices received in London from South Africa all point to the same conclusion. The delay is technical, and to end the long war seems to be the desire of both British and Boer leaders. The latter, however, are unable to convince all their followers of the wisdom of acquiescing to the terms of peace.

Information as to what transpired at yesterday's meeting of the cabinet is closely guarded, but it is not likely that the cabinet transactions were of vital importance. The surmise of one well-informed person places the sum total of the deliberations of the cabinet ministers at a decision regarding points of the peace agreement of entirely minor importance. Another surmise is that the cabinet has merely sent a rather mock ultimatum to South Africa which can be used by the Boer leaders in explanation to their forces.

Both these surmises probably contain an element of truth but neither can in any way affect the widespread belief in the best informed quarters that the end of the war has come. In fact, those persons who are best acquainted with the actual details of the present negotiations only qualify this optimistic expression of opinion by guarded reservations concerning the extent of the personal control of the Boer leaders over their commands. Were the Boers a thoroughly disciplined force, dependent upon the action of their general officers, peace would probably be proclaimed today, but Botha, DeWet and the other generals seem themselves unable positively to guarantee the degree to which their example will be followed.

The delegates at Vereeniging, according to information in possession of the war office, are fairly evenly divided. Consequently extreme precautions are exercised both in London and Pretoria to prevent any premature action or report which might adversely influence the burghers.

The most pessimistic forecast heard only admits that a few isolated bands of irreconciliables may be left in the field.

A member of the house of commons who is in close touch with the government said to a representative of The Associated Press that he believed everything was settled and that the British terms would be found unexpectedly liberal.

The appearance of War Secretary Brodrick at the volunteer service dinner last night was watched eagerly in the hope of gaining an inkling of the government's private frame of mind. But Mr. Brodrick's listeners had to be contented with one brief and adroitly turned reference to the present situation. Responding to the toast "The Imperial Forces," the war secretary said: "I would go beyond my duty should I enter into details of the communications which are now passing and which prelude, as we all hope, the surrender of the Boers."

Mr. Brodrick then proceeded to reiterate the oft-declared intention of the government not to be drawn into any compromise which would jeopardize further peace in South Africa.

BRITISH WAR BLUNDERS

Denounced In Vigorous Language Under Auspices of the Thunderer

London, May 24.—The second volume of The London Times' "History of the War" has appeared and is attracting unusual attention on account of its scathing denunciation of British generals and the war office. The criticism is given additional weight by the fact of its appearing under the auspices of "The Thunderer."

Starting with General White's last fight before he withdrew to Ladysmith, the author says it was in reality a serious defeat of infantry, badly handled by the officer in command, who "proved quite unfit to grapple with the difficult situation, in which, largely by the mistakes of others, he was placed." The cavalry was as bad as the infantry, and the situation was only saved by the heroism of the artillery.

The surrender of troops at Nickolsons Nek is described as premature, though "no more humiliating than many surrenders which occurred after it."

Passing to Stormberg, the writer describes the succession of blunders which led to the reverse as "sheer mismanagement on the part of General Gatacre, or his staff."

Touching the crowning misfortune at Colenso, the author says: "Just as in the hour of battle General Buller had failed the men whom he led, so now, in the hour of trial, he was to fail his country, which had entrusted the fortune of war to his hands. He utterly lost heart. Not only did he despair of doing anything himself, but he despaired for others."

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Strike of Anthracite Coal Miners Is the Most Disturbing Factor

New York, May 24.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Many miner labor controversies have been settled, but the situation in the anthracite coal region has assumed a more serious aspect. Far from making overtures toward an agreement, both sides are preparing for a stubborn struggle. Not only the miners, but most railway and mercantile employes in the vicinity of the mines are idle, and manufacturing plants at other points using hard coal for fuel must soon suspend operations.

In bright contrast is the progress made in agricultural regions, where bad news is the exception.

Slight concessions are now obtainable in some lines of footwear, although the market as a rule is fairly steady but dull. New England factories are not running full time, except on special lines, and buyers look for concessions from manufacturers, who may reduce prices rather than close shops. Shipments from Boston continue light when compared with the movement a year ago.

In the markets for textile goods quiet conditions prevail, buyers apparently being well supplied for the present season and sellers carrying only moderate stocks.

Exporters have exhibited more interest in cotton goods, but their bids are generally below views of holders. Print cloths are quiet at last week's decline. Deliveries of woolen improve as the idle weavers resume. Wool is more active in the eastern markets, but quotations do not harden in sympathy with either London or the strong position of western holders.

Quiet conditions have prevailed in the cereal markets, with only a moderate volume of option transactions and fractional changes in quotations.

Frenchmen Entertain President

Annapolis, May 24.—A luncheon was given yesterday on board the French battleship Gaulois in honor of President Roosevelt by the French soldiers and sailors who are here to join in the celebration of the unveiling of the monument to the memory of General Rochambeau. The banquet hall had been improvised upon the ample afterdeck of the Gaulois. This was accomplished by stretching overhead and at the sides a copious supply of French and American bunting. The interior was illuminated by electric lights, while a plentiful supply of wax candles cast a mellow radiance over the tables. The decorations were American beauty and Jacquemot roses.

Honors to the Dead

Lowell, Mass., May 24.—Simple and impressive were the funeral services of Mayor Dimon yesterday. After lying in state for 24 hours at the city hall, and after the Grand Army service, the casket was borne to St. Anne's Episcopal church, where the Episcopal service was read. The body of Mayor Dimon rested in the vestibule of St. Anne's church until this morning, when it was escorted to Fairfield, Conn. The old Thirtieth accompanied the body to its final resting place.

More Than a Hundred Killed

Fernie, B. C., May 24.—In the terrible explosion Thursday evening in a shaft of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal company's mine only 24 out of the 133 men working in the mine at the time are known to have escaped. Of the men entombed it is feared the majority are dead. The scenes at the mines and in the village of Fernie are heartrending. Hardly a house has escaped affliction. The work of rescuing is being hurried and perfect order prevails.

Greatly Improved Conditions

Manila, May 24.—A civil government will be inaugurated in Batangas province July 4. The industrial conditions are improving rapidly. Crops have been planted throughout Batangas, which will mature in August. Other provinces report a marked diminution of Ladronism. The United States commission has made English the official language of the courts, customs service and court of appeals.

Strike Status Unchanged

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 24.—The three mining district presidents, Messrs. Nichols, Duffy and Fahy, held a long conference with President Mitchell yesterday, after which they departed for their homes. The nature of the discussion was not divluged. President Mitchell has no information to impart upon any phase of the situation.

Indicates Good Progress

New York, May 24.—Notices have been sent out calling for the payment of the second instalment of 25 percent by the syndicate which underwrites the Morgan shipping combine. The issue of the call is construed as evidence that the deal is going smoothly. The underwriting syndicate agreed to furnish $50,000,000.

Situation More Reassuring

Paris, May 24.—M. Secrais, the minister of the colonies, has received a dispatch from Fort de France saying that the course of the eruption of Mt. Pelee is about stationary and that the situation there is somewhat more reassuring.

CUBA AND ITS FUTURE

Palma to Model His Country on the United States.

SANITATION TO BE CONTINUED.

New President Knows American History and Admires Washington and Lincoln—Says "Florida Keys Opened Door to Cuban Liberty" and Wants Islanders to Be Interested In Spain.

"I shall endeavor to have Cuba follow in the footsteps of the United States," said President Tomas Palma the other day in a long conference with Governor Jennings of Florida and Colonel W. J. Bryan, says the Havana correspondent of the New York World.

"I am familiar with American history and a great admirer of Washington and Lincoln. One made the Union; the other preserved it. Both dignified it by gaining the respect of other nations.

"I feel grateful to the people of the United States, to whose sentiments regarding Cuba the house and senate promptly responded. President McKinley's delay and deliberation were due to his great individual responsibility. Congress had a collective responsibility.

"I have come to Cuba reluctantly, preferring my home at Central Valley, N. Y., and a quiet life with my family rather than public life. But I have come because I felt it to be my duty.

"I want Cubans and Spaniards to turn their backs on the past and unitedly face the future, jointly combating difficulties and problems.

"I want opposition for the betterment of the government, but not personal or prejudicial opposition. I should be ready and willing to heed criticism. I think liberty of the press a great national benefactor in pointing out the errors and improving the morals of the government."

President Palma spoke kindly of the clemency of the United States courts and judges that tried the filibusters and particularly thanked the commonwealth of Florida for great help, saying:

"The history of Cuba's success was written on the Florida sands, and the Florida keys opened the door to Cuban liberty. Key West is a ward of Havana, being nearer to Cuba in point of time than it is to the mainland of Florida.

"Sanitation and education will continue as they have been improved by the military government. Last year all South America was exceptionally free from yellow fever. There may be an increase this year, but the Cuban government will employ the utmost vigilance to maintain health and uninterrupted commercial relations. I believe in the theory of the transmission of the fever by mosquitoes, but I agree with Governor Jennings in the necessity of keeping this city clean."

Governor Jennings interrupted to say that it would be impossible to maintain open commerce with Florida ports unless the sanitation in Havana was good. President Palma assured him that there would be no cause for fear, the interests being mutual.

President Palma says he shall be glad to show his respect for the government of Spain and thinks the Cubans should take an interest in the "mother country."

HOW TO EMPLOY INDIANS.

Novel Suggestion Made by Ella H. Cooper.

The problem of finding occupations for our American Indians that would be at once congenial and lucrative has never been successfully solved, says Ella H. Cooper in "How to Educate the Indians" in Gunton's Magazine for May. They have been placed at tasks for which they have no natural aptitude and forced into competition with the skilled labor of alien races, while the arts in which they excelled were neglected. In basketry, the most ancient of arts, their work cannot be surpassed, yet we are told that it is fast taking its place among the lost and forgotten handicrafts. Had this industry been favored by protective legislation it would have furnished remunerative employment for the Indian men and women when not otherwise occupied. A tariff that would have checked the influx of Japanese work competing in the same line would have reserved this home market for our own aborigines.

The sweet grasses, the quills and feathers, the birch bark and beads, all the materials which the Indian has appropriated and used with peculiar and fascinating effect, should be left in his skilful hands, and encouragement and guidance in the marketing of his wares should not be lacking. The hands that weave the baskets can braid hats as well. The sweet grasses that blend in the dainty fan would be no less effective in rustic outing hats. Bead portieres could be strung by Indians as well as by Asiatics, and our homes could be beautified by the labors and genius of those we have supplanted in this land.

Harding Davis' Rival.

David Graham Phillips, author of "Her Serene Highness," is the most dangerous rival Richard Harding Davis has ever had in the esteem of the delightful kind of young girl known as the matinee type, says Harper's Literary Gossip. Mr. Phillips is young and good looking, and his novels have that combination of vim and romance which promptly captures the fancy of young women. Mr. Phillips' friends say that he looks like a college athlete, but that really he preserves his perfect health—and his other perfections—by never taking any exercise. He is a bachelor and lives in New York.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

Another interesting announcement is made by the Castle Square Theatre management regarding the coming week's attraction at this popular playhouse, Jerome K. Jerome's comedy "The Maister of Woodbarrow" being the selection made. This play had its original production as the opening attraction of the season of 1890-'91 at the New York Lyceum Theatre where it held the stage for an extended period. It has only been seen in this city at the Hollis Street Theatre, soon after its New York run, and it has all the elements to ensure success in its revival at Castle Square Theatre. The plot is delightfully unconventional with a young man, country bred, who after rather a gay fling at city life has returned to his early home, as its central figure. The principal characters have been assigned as follows for the Castle Square production: Allen Rolliett, Hallett Thompson; Richard Hanniford, Charles Mackay; Colonel Jack Dexter James L. Seeley; Mr. Putwell, John T. Craven; The Hon. Tom Gussett, James A. Keane; Baron Von Schorr, Louis Thiel; Mr. Piffin, Lindsay Morrison; Mrs. Rollitt, Kate Ryan; Deborah Deacon, Mary Saunders. The usual distribution of chocolate bonbons to all Monday matinee patrons will be continued until further notice.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

"A theatre of perpetual sunshine" is the editorial comment of a noted critic after spending an evening at Keith's, and the many thousands of amusement seekers who find pleasurable entertainment here each week will gladly re-echo his sentiment. For the week commencing May 26 the following noted entertainers are to appear: The Four Otts, in an eccentric comedy, singing and dancing sketch; Will Cressy and Blanche Dayne, in "Grasping an opportunity"; Hughey Dougherty, favorite blackface humorist and stump orator; Van Brothers, comedy instrumentalists; Radford and Winchester, comedy jugglers; Joe Reichen's acrobatic dogs, the most marvelous canines ever brought to this country, and Rio Brothers, a trio of expert ring performers. An entire new list of motion pictures in the biograph, and a splendid new lot of scenic views made in Newfoundland will also be shown. The Fadettes woman's orchestra begins its summer engagement the week of June 2.

Assessors' Notice.

TO the inhabitants of the City of Quincy and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein: You are hereby required to bring in to the Assessors of said City

On or Before June 15, 1902,

True and Perfect Lists of all the Polls, and Schedules and Estimates of all the Personal Estates and Real Estate for which you are liable to pay taxes.

Persons Holding Estates in Trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the Assessors with Statements in relation to such estates.

When the estates of persons deceased have been divided, or have changed hands from other causes during the past year, the Executors, Administrators, or other persons interested, are required to give notice of such changes, and in default of such notice will be held to pay the taxes assessed.

Blank forms for "Return of Property for Taxation" can be procured of the Assessors.

The following may serve as a guide to assist in making up Schedules and Statements:

Number of Polls 20 years and upwards; Money at interest; Amount of Money on hand, including deposits in Banks, etc., other than Savings Banks incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth; Railroad, Town, City, State and other Bonds (except those of the United States); Shares and Stocks of Insurance, Manufacturing and other incorporated companies chartered or organized under the laws of any State other than Massachusetts; Goods, Wares, Merchandise and other stock in trade, within or without the State; Household Furniture, exceeding $1,000 in value; Horses, Mules, Carriages, Oxen, Cows, other neat Cattle not less than one year old, and Swine and Sheep not less than six months old; Income from Profession, Trade or Employment exceeding $2,000; Personal Property held in trust or by wife or minor children.

Attention is hereby called to Section 32 of Chapter 12 of the Revised Laws.

"Whoever, with intent to defeat or evade the provisions of law in relation to assessment or payment of taxes, delivers or discloses to an assessor or an assistant assessor a false or fraudulent list, return, or schedule of property as and for a true list of his estates, not exempted from taxation shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment in jail not exceeding one year."

MORTGAGED PROPERTY—A mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the city or town in which it lies within the time prescribed by the notice under Sect. 41, a statement under oath of the amount secured thereon or on each separate parcel thereof, with the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagor or mortgagee. If such property is situated in two or more places, or if a recorded mortgage includes two or more estates or parts of an estate as security for one sum, such statement shall include an estimate of the interest of the mortgagee in each estate or part of an estate. The assessors shall, from such statement or otherwise, ascertain the proportionate interests of the mortgagor or mortgagee respectively in said estates, and shall assess the same accordingly. If, in any year, such statement is not brought in, the tax for that year on such real estate shall not be invalid merely for the reason that the interest of the mortgagee therein has not been assessed to him.—Sect. 45, Chap. 12, Revised Laws.

When a statement in conformity to the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under Sects. 16, 17 and 18 of Chap. 12 of the Revised Laws. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, no statement or return is required from either the mortgagee or mortgagor unless requested by the assessors in writing.

A SOLDIER'S MEMORY

Perpetuated by a Superb Statue In Bronze

FRANCO-AMERICAN AMITY

Manifested In Many Ways on the Occasion of Rochambeau Unveiling Ceremonies—Representatives of Two Nations Took Part

Washington, May 26.—Amid the enthusiastic demonstrations of a great concourse of people the superb bronze statue of General Count de Rochambeau, who brought the forces of France across the sea at the hour of greatest peril in the American revolution, was unveiled Saturday. Seldom has an event presented so brilliant features of military pagentry and at the same time given occasion for the manifestation of the strong bonds of friendship existing between the French republic and the United States.

For the first time in its history, the national capital witnessed the sight of rank on rank of French seamen swinging through Pennsylvania avenue and mingling their cheers with those of the American bluejackets and soldiers, while at the same time the French tri-colors were entwined with the Stars and Stripes and the sound of the Marseilleise was heard along with the Star Spangled Banner.

The ceremony of unveiling occurred at the southwest corner of Lafayette square, almost directly opposite the White House, where the massive figure of the French general has been erected. Surrounding the figure of the French general were great stands to accommodate the many officials and guests invited to take part in the exercises.

On every hand the colors of France and America were blended, one stand being hung with great folds of red, another with white and still another with blue. Within this amphitheatre were gathered representatives of every branch of the government, including the President of the United States and members of his cabinet, the chief justice and associate justices of the United States supreme court, the lieutenant general of the army and the admiral of the navy, senators and representatives.

The representation of France included General Brugere, the highest field officer in the French army; Vice Admiral Fournier, inspector general of the French navy; the venerable General Count Chalendar, the descendants of Rochambeau and Lafeyette, and others distinguished in French military, official, literary and artistic life. With them were the French ambassador, M. Cambon, and the entire staff of the French embassy, all in brilliant diplomatic uniform, while the diplomatic corps was represented by the German, Russian, Italian and Mexican ambassadors and the ministers from many foreign countries.

President Roosevelt and the members of the cabinet were escorted from the White House by a file of minutemen, dressed in the uniform of the Continental days. When the president arrived at the presidential stand the entire assemblage arose and greeted him with lusty cheers. After an impressive invocation by Rev. Dr. Stafford, who took the place of Cardinal Gibbons, President Roosevelt delivered the address of welcome. As the president concluded his address, the Countess de Rochambeau caught up the cords to the flags enveloping the statue and the massive bronze figure emerged through the folds of red, white and blue. At the same instant an artillery salute came from a battery of heavy guns nearby, and the strains of the French national hymn, the Marseillaise, came from the Marine band. It was an inspiring moment, and, led by President Roosevelt, the entire assemblage joined in cheering. Another demonstration occurred at the close of General Brugere's address when, with characteristic French vehemence, he gave this pledge of undying Franco-American friendship: "Between you, between us, in life, in death."

The ceremonies were the culmination of the efforts of Jules Boeufve of the French embassy, extending over the last two years. He has sought to strengthen the bonds of friendship between the two countries and to this end has urged to a successful conclusion the legislation by which the statue was made possible.

The members of the French mission finished their visit last night and left the city for Niagara Falls on the weeks' tour of the east before sailing for home. There were no formal functions on the program for the day, but the visitors found every minute of their time occupied in attending divine service, returning numerous calls, official and otherwise, and in drives about the city and suburbs.

A PEACE ULTIMATUM

Still Looked For as a Result of Boer Leaders' Conference

Pretoria, May 26.—The Boer deputation is still here and the conferences at Vereeniging continue. Nothing definite of the result is known, but it is believed that the negotiations are proceeding favorably. At the celebration of Victoria day Saturday a large crowd gathered in the square here, expecting to hear a proclamation of peace. There were no disturbances.

As confirming the probability that peace is not distant, Premier Seddon of New Zealand, who is now visting here, has sent a cablegram home in which he said: "I have had a satisfactory interview with Lord Kitchener and Lord Milner. I do not think another New Zealand contingent is necessary."

London, May 26.—The Daily Mail says the announcement of peace may be expected at any moment and that it will be found that the government has remained inflexible on all vital points at issue.

Pauncefote Funeral Arrangements

Accomplished In Quick Order

New Brunswick, N. J., May 26.—Pennsylvania railroad officials came here yesterday in a special car to witness the engineering feat of moving the steel bridge which spans the Raritan river and the Delaware and Hudson canal. The structure was moved a distance of 15 feet. The bridge has six spans, is double-tracked, 900 feet long and weighs 8000 tons. The last train to pass over the bridge in its old position crossed at 12:09. It was in its new position at 12:15. The connection was complete at 12:21. At 12:30 a freight train crossed and six minutes later a passenger train was sent across.

Naples, May 26.—The court of inquiry being held on board the United States cruiser Chicago to investigate the arrests of certain officers of that cruiser at Venice continues its sessions, but the strictest secrecy regarding the proceedings of the court is maintained. The findings of the court will not be divulged until they are passed upon by the United States government.

An Anarchist Conference

Berlin, May 26.—It transpired yesterday that an anarchist conference, attended by 29 delegates, was held at Mannheim last week. The police got wind of the meeting before it occurred and sent two officials to attend the sittings. As the proceedings of the conference were quite tame, the anarchists were not molested.

Order of Doaconesses Created

Dallas, May 26.—The Methodist Episcopal church south has created the order of deaconesses. The legislation necessary to establish the order was passed by the decisive vote of 13 to 38. EXCITED ZIONISTS

Have a Lively Session at Boston and Almost Engage In Battle

Boston, May 26.—The session of the American Federation of Zionists in Faneuil Hall yesterday was marked by wild scenes of disorder and in trying to quiet the assemblage President Gottheil was forced to use his ivory gavel with such vigor that it was broken to pieces. He was accused of suppressing legitimate debate, and he in turn dramatically declared that unless certain delegates adopted quieter methods he would be forced to have them ejected from the hall. At that time a score or more of delegates were clamoring for recognition, and in many instances addressing the convention without it. The president was forced to call Vice President Seff to order, and it was in doing this that his gavel was broken.

Sensational charges of dishonesty were made by Honorary Secretary Morrison against certain New York affiliated societies and he produced documents and waved them in the face of the convention in alleged proof of his assertions.

After four hours of incessant wrangling the session broke up and several delegates had to be restrained by their friends from engaging in even hotter arguments on the floor of the hall. Finally the room was cleared and several of the New York delegations withdrew to another hall with threats of leaving the American Federation.

The chief cause of the trouble was a resolution submitted by the committee on reports of officers, "That it be made obligatory on all societies affiliated with the American Federation of Zionists to apply for sub-charters."

The significance of the resolve was that it empowered the federation to have control of the finances of all the constituent societies. The resolve was finally carried by a vote of 74 to 18.

Whether or not these injuries were caused by the blow administered to Cassidy by Tommy Dixon the report does not state.

BIG SCHOONERS ASHORE.

The Five-Master Arthur Seitz and Four-Master Frank A. Palmer May be Total Wrecks.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., May 26.—Two of the finest vessels of the coastwise fleet, the five-master Arthur Seitz of Portland, Me., and the four-master Frank A. Palmer, also of Portland, while bound up the coast with heavy cargoes of coal, missed the entrance of Vineyard Sound during thick weather Saturday night and brought up hard and fast on Sunday morning on Wasque shoal, about five miles southwest of Muskegat channel.

The crew of the Seitz, including Captain Nickerson, came ashore at noon, but Captain Rawding of the Palmer and all but three of the crew of that vessel remained on board. The three men left the ship shortly before the crew of the Seitz came ashore. They may have landed on Muskegat Island, toward which the wind was blowing.

Captain Nickerson, who came here for assistance, reports that both vessels are likely to go to pieces, as a heavy sea is making in for the southwest, and they are in a very exposed position.

The Seitz is practically a new vessel, and had on board 3800 tons of coal. She was bound from Baltimore for Portsmouth, N. H. The Palmer had nearly the same amount of coal and was on her way from Newport News for some eastern port.

Captain Nickerson stated that both vessels passed out by the Capes of Chesapeake on Wednesday, and made a remarkably quick run up the coast. The Seitz was in the lead most of the way, and was making for Gay Head light, at the southwestern entrance of Vineyard Sound. Saturday night, however, the weather became thick, and Gay Head was missed altogether. Thinking himself well inside of the sound, Captain Nickerson kept right on, and Captain Rawding on the Palmer followed on.

Both vessels must have passed some distance south of Gay Head, for neither sighted No Man's Land, but kept on for 15 miles along the south side of Martha's Vineyard, when they should have been on the north side.

Their career, however, was checked about 8 o'clock yesterday morning, when without warning the Seitz struck on Wasque shoal, a long shoal that makes out half a dozen miles from Katama beach at the southeast end of the island.

The Palmer was following along so closely after the Seitz that her crew had no time to wear ship and she, too, went hard onto the shoal not half a mile away.

Captain Nickerson soon found that his vessel was rapidly filling and as he was making preparations to abandon her, a large piece of the keel floated up. Captain Rawding of the Palmer also signalled that his vessel was filling, and soon three men put off from her in a boat. Captain Nickerson then ordered his crew into the boat and all pulled ashore.

Unfortunately the large fleet of tugs which has been engaged in pulling the steamer Indian off the rocks at Cuttyhunk, left with that vessel on Saturday for Boston, so that when Captain Nickerson arrived here he found that there were no wrecking tugs available.

The Arthur Seitz was built in Camden, Me., and launched about a year ago. She is 273 feet long, 44 feet wide and 22 feet deep. She has a registered tonnage of 2000.

The Frank A. Palmer is 274 feet long, 43 feet wide and 21 feet deep, with a registered tonnage of 2014, the two vessels being practically the same in size, only the Seitz is a five-master while the Palmer has only four masts.

New Telephone Office.

The central telephone office in Quincy is now located in the rear room of the upper floor of the Savings Bank building. For the past month workmen have been busy getting the room ready and Saturday night and Sunday was the time selected for its removal. Early Saturday evening the physicians, newspaper men and others, who use the telephone to a large extent, were called up and notified that beginning at 11 o'clock telephone service would be discontinued for eighteen hours. At that hour the switch board in the Durgin & Merrill block was disconnected and carried to the new room. Work connecting this up was then rushed and at 2.30 Sunday afternoon many subscribers were notified that their instrument was again in working order. By 6 o'clock all of the lines were working.

Rival Academies.

The managers of the Thayer and Adams Academy base ball nines have for some time been negotiating to fix a convenient date for a game between the two equally matched teams. As Thayer has beaten Mechanics Art and Plymouth High who have defeated Adams, and as the latter won from Milton who easily beat Thayer, both teams feel confident of a close contest. Athletics, between the two schools have been discontinued for three years and it is hoped that the schools will revive their former interest in this line. As both teams are picked out as winners and since there has been much talk as to the stronger of the teams in past years, everyone should turn out to see who will be the winner of this year's contest.

Lost Children.

Early Sunday evening Officer Ferguson found two young children wandering on Hancock street, near Norfolk Downs. From conversation with them he learned that their names were George Nevins, aged 6 years, and Robert F. Reil, aged 4 years. That they lived on Bolton street, South Boston, and had followed some soldiers and lost their way. The children were sent to the police station and their parents notified through station 6 at South Boston. They came out later in the evening and took the children home.

Nip and Tuck.

The North Quincy club of Norfolk Downs not satisfied with the result in in the recent Norfolk County league in which the Merrymount club took first prize, recently challenged a team from the Merrymounts to roll a series of twelve games at candle pins.

The series ended on Friday evening at Wollaston and resulted in Merrymounts winning six strings, North Quincy five strings, one game resulting in a tie. Merrymount won four out of the last six strings rolled.

MEMORIAL SUNDAY

The Grand Army Attend Two Services.

Morning Address by Rev. L. H. Austin.

Evening Address by Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy.

Twice on Sunday Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., and auxiliary societies attended by request special services at Quincy churches. In the morning upwards of 40 veterans and nearly as many members of the Woman's Relief Corps and Ladies' Aid Society enjoyed a patrioitc address by Rev. Leon H. Austin at the Washington Street Congregational church, and listened to good singing, the regular choir being assisted by Miss Souther, Miss Bessie Drew and Mrs. George K. Carter.

The pews in the centre aisle were reserved for the guests, and at each there was a small flag. Larger flags were on the walls, and the colors and flowers were on the platform.

The pastor said he could not lay claims to being a soldier, but he was a soldier's son, and loved his country. He said there was little of the milk and honey in this country when the Pilgrims landed less than three centuries ago. New England men had molded this nation in its earlier days and were a power today.

The Civil War was inevitable and it did more than free the slaves. Grant, Sheridan and Sherman were eulogized, and most of the other generals and heroes were mentioned by name.

The speaker would have all think of the great sacrifice the men made. Men with love for God, for home and for native land. Fully 200,000 were sleeping in southern cemeteries, another 100,000 in unknown graves and thousands in cemeteries all over the country. They are our honored dead.

At the outbreak of the Spanish war it was found that the blood of the fathers was in the sons of today. Their victories added lustre. We will not excuse the cruelty of a few in the Philippines. Let us not defame our army because a few have disgraced their uniforms. We have no sympathy with critics and fault finders, who merely tear down and never build.

Cuba had been freed, and that will probably be the outcome in the far east. Men like Lawton and Lieut. Bumpus will have an influence in the Philippines and will make our flag revered—a flag for righteousness and freedom ever.

The pastor also had a tribute for the women at home during the Civil war, the soldiers' wives, mothers and sweethearts.

What mean we by Decoration Day? We observe it because we are glad to acknowledge the sacrifices of the heroes of the 60's; because they gave us a free country to enjoy. It is a sacred day, and reminds us to be true to the principles for which the G. A. R. fought. The heritage is exceedingly fair. May we never prove false. Liberty should never be defiled. Remember Washington, Lincoln and McKinley and swear to be true to principles of government. Let the young men care for the veteran and his widow They gave us a country the most hospitable, the most unselfish, the fairest and the freest.

The music included:

Double trio,—"To thee, O country."
Trio,—"Lift thine eyes," from Elijah.
Solo,—Kipling's "Recessional,"
Miss Mary Souther.

Also "America" and other hymns sung by all.

EVENING SERVICE.

There was another large audience in Bethany Congregational church Sunday evening attended by Post 88, Camp Boyd the W. R. C., and the L. A. S. Large flags and potted plants were used for decoration, and a picture of our lamented President William McKinley was conspicuous.

Music was an attractive part of the service and included:

Anthem, "E'er fadeless be their glory,"
Mendelssohn
Solo, "Tenting on the old camp ground,"
Mrs. R. B. Worster.
Solo, "The Star Spangled Banner,"
Miss Ethel F. Abbott.
Hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee."
Solo, "The beautiful isle of Somewhere,"
Mrs. Emma F. Moore.
Hymn, "America."

Rev. E. N. Hardy the pastor gave the address, subject—"The mantle of patriotism." It is well be said to pause in business activity and deck the graves of our soldier dead.

It was said by some that patriotism was merely sentiment. We should be glad of sentiment. It was sentiment which has built our country and our institutions. Several illustrations of sentiment were given by the speaker.

There has always been great humanitarism in our wards. The civil war not only freed the slaves of the 60's, but was influential today for liberty.

The veterans of the Spanish war are worthy of praise upholding the principles of liberty. Shame on the officers in the Philippines who have caused oppression there. Our flag stands for civic and public liberty. No question is settled until it is settled right. We glory in the independence of Cuba which is a vindication of the promise given by this country.

We of today pledge ourselves to the Grand Army to be true to the flag which they successfully defended; true to patriotism such as they displayed, and if possible to add new strength and glory of God. This was possible only by a better manhood.

A part of the service known as the "post of sorrow" was in charge of the officers of Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., the program being:

Preparing the Altar, Officer of the Day
Preparing the Colors, Officer of the Guard
Response, "Heart be Still," Church Quartette
Memorial Service,
Commander John W. Hersey and Staff
Tributes to the deceased,
Post Adjutant I. M. Holt

A LIVELY BLAZE.

But the Fire Department Made Quick Work of It.

The alarm from Box 26 at 8.08 this morning called the fire department to a lively blaze in the L of the residence of George A. Brackett on Chestnut street. Early arrivals on the scene saw a sheet of flame coming from the door and leaping upward, and it looked at first as though the whole side of the building was on fire.

The central station Hook and Ladder combination was the first to arrive and following closely came the Hose combination. Before a stream of water could be put on Driver Brown of the Hook and Lader ran the chemical hose single handed and turned on a stream. The effect was immediately apparent. The flames died down and the hydrant stream did the balance.

The fire did not get beyond the L, but the thick stifling smoke penetrated every part of the house.

As soon as the fire was out Chief Williams sent his men through the house and opened up the windows and the broom brigade cleared out the debris.

The fire probably started in some way from an oil stove and $200 should cover the loss.

Quincy Men Petitioners.

A Milford despatch of Saturday to the Herald says: Dr. George P. Cooke, last night, presented to the selectmen a petition of Herman J. Hahn and Eugene F. DeNormandie of Boston, asking for a street railway location from a point west of the Consolidated railroad over the direct route to the Upton town line. Similar petitions have been presented in Upton and Grafton, for a continuation of the proposed line through those towns.

The petition differs from any previously acted upon by the Milford selectmen, in that it does not name the streets asked for, and is signed only by two individuals, instead of a board of directors. The petition concludes: "Any right, franchise or location which your petitioners may receive from said town of Milford are to be by them assigned to a street railway company to be by them and others hereafter incorporated."

For Spring Cup.

The first round for the spring cup of the Merrymount golf club was played off Saturday, two men being disqualified for non-appearance. The matches were close and interesting. The following are the results:

W. L. George beat J. E. McLaughlin 4 up.
A. S. Johnson beat S. F. Shibley 2 up.
R. F. Foster beat S. W. Noyes 1 up.
W. G. Fish beat S. S. Noyes 3 up 2 to play.
W. G. Clark beat T. F. Galvin by default.
C. S. Irswell beat H. W. Porter by default.
F. A. Cummings beat S. G. Warren 2 up.
G. A. Noyes beat George L. Cole 2 up.

The first two winners will play together in the second round and so on.

Cup for Lockwood.

In the semi-finals of the Country Club golf tournament, Lockwood won from Dahlgren, and Cory of Wollaston fell before Thorp. Then Lockwood won the cup.

Will Not Contest.

A Newport letter to the Herald under date of Saturday says: The Rev. Charles H. Porter, Jr., formerly pastor of Channing Memorial church, who is being sued here for divorce, is here to spend Sunday. The divorce docket will be called at the supreme court Monday. The young clergyman, it is said, will not contest his wife's petition. It is said that the lawyers on both sides will request that the case be referred to a master, and that sealed copies of the evidence will be handed to the judges.

SNAPPED MONT PELEE

How a Woman Photographed the West Indian Tragedy.

HOT ASHES WERE STILL FALLING

Mrs. H. Merrill of New York Believes Her Camera Was the First Focused on the Burning Ruins and Mont Pelee—Snapped Her Camera Six Times.

This is the personal narrative of Mrs. H. Merrill of 100 East Seventy-third street, New York city, who saw St. Pierre under its shroud of ashes the day after Mont Pelee destroyed it, says the New York World. She took photographs of the ruins and the mountain, still in eruption, from the deck of the Korona, sister ship of the Roraima, which latter was burned by hot lava in the harbor. The buildings of St. Pierre, the warehouses and the docks were still aflame when the photographs were taken. Lava was flowing in steady streams down the slope into the sea. Mrs. Merrill, notwithstanding her difficulties, for the hot ashes were still falling from Mont Pelee, snapped her camera six times. Mrs. Merrill left New York in the early spring to visit friends at Barbados.

"I took passage on the Korona, which was to have touched at St. Pierre on May 8, the day of the explosion of Mont Pelee," she said. "We escaped with our lives by a lucky chance. The ship remained at Barbados instead of proceeding according to schedule to St. Pierre, to take on an extra cargo of sugar. When I learned this, I decided to spend another pleasant day at Barbados. On the morning of May 8 we heard sounds as if of terrific cannonading.

"In the afternoon I was out with a coaching party. The sky was suddenly overcast, and it grew darker and darker until by 5 o'clock we were in total darkness. It was darker than any night—absolute darkness, if you can comprehend it. During the night a fine volcanic dust was sifted from the clouds and fell in blinding and choking quantities. It is a fine, gray, flourlike powder of heavy weight. It is really good for brushing the teeth and looks like tooth powder with charcoal mixed with it. It covered Barbados and was thick upon the deck of the ship when we sailed the next morning.

"The sky had cleared, and, although Captain Carey of the Korona knew there had been a volcanic eruption, he did not know it was Mont Pelee. We headed for St. Pierre, which lay on our regular route, to pick up the mails and take on passengers.

"Fifty miles away the dust from Mont Pelee continued to descend, but in lighter quantities. Soon we caught sight of the great cloud of steam and smoke hanging above the crater of the volcano. We arrived in front of St. Pierre in the morning of May 9, the day after the eruption. A thick pall of smoke still hung over the place, and the ruins were still burning. We entered the harbor for a closer view and got, I believe, within a half mile of the Roraima and the other shipping that had been destroyed.

"The Roraima was lying in shallow water and was still smoldering. Not a living soul was seen about the harbor, but bodies were floating everywhere in the water. When the first officer of the Korona saw that a ship of his own line had been destroyed and that most of his brother officers had perished, he burst into tears. The crew of our ship had many friends among the dead of the Roraima.

"Lava was still pouring from the side of the mountain, and I saw a little valley in which hundreds of people had lived completely filled with a river of the burning matter. The aspect of the scene was whitish, and the mountain and the town were covered with a cloak of ashes that looked like snow in the sunshine.

"A great cloud of white vapor stood over the active mouth of the volcano. The desolation was complete, and there was not a sign of a living thing as far as the eye could reach. I had been in Martinique before. St. Pierre was a beautiful little city, and when I remembered how cheerful and bright it had all been the day before I could not help weeping.

"Captain Carey soon discovered that he could do nothing, and we made our way to Fort-de-France, where we arrived early in the afternoon. Between St. Pierre and Fort-de-France we picked up six negroes in a dugout. They had been inland and had escaped to the shore and taken to the canoe. When we got within hailing distance of them, we heard their cries for help in their French patois. They had been burned and had endured much suffering. We landed them at Fort-de-France, and they were taken to the hospital there. At Fort-de-France we took aboard First Officer Scott and Assistant Purser Thompson of the Roraima and brought them to New York.

"The pictures that I took were obtained in the harbor of St. Pierre, and I believe that mine was the first camera that was focused on the scene."

Chains For the Smart Girl.

Long chains, especially of baroque pearls, continue to be in fashion, says June Woman's Home Companion. A pretty fancy for the summer girl is to have her chain match in design the fan attached to it. For the daisy fan there is a long chain made of small white enameled daisies. The daisies look as if strung on green stems. Other attractive flower chains are made of little blue forgetmenots, tiny pink button roses in delicately tinted enamel and wee pansies exquisitely shaded.

SCHWAB'S CHARITY PLANS.

Real Purpose of Steel King's Purchase of Richmond Beach, S. I.

So many guesses were made regarding the plans of Charles M. Schwab, president of the United States Steel corporation, for the disposition of the property known as Richmond beach, Staten Island, which he recently purchased, that Mr. Schwab the other day decided to settle the question.

"I have purchased it," said Mr. Schwab to a reporter of the New York Times, "for the benefit of poor and sick children of New York. The land comprises about a quarter of a mile of fine beach; also a fine fresh water lake, a grove and high land reaching back to the Richmond road.

"The improvements on the property at present consist of a farmhouse, pavilions on the ocean shore, pagodas and a large steamboat pier. These buildings will be altered to suit the purposes of the purchase after consultation with charitable institutions of New York. It is expected that from 1,500 to 2,000 children daily can be provided for at the beach, and a good time will be given to them by means of bathing, boating on the lake, rides on donkeys and games.

"The children will be conveyed to the beach probably on a large steamer. Every child will receive a good dinner. Mrs. Schwab is interested with me in this undertaking. We shall proceed carefully, availing ourselves of the experience of charitable organizations. There are no marshes near this beach, and I regard it as one of the finest properties for the purpose that could be purchased anywhere. It gets the full sweep of the ocean breezes across the lower bay, and to get there the children will have the benefit of a fine sail of an hour or more."

THE CORONATION BAG.

Latest Idea In Fashionable Wrist Bags For Women.

Among the fashionable accessories of the feminine costume which have been named in honor of the coming royal ceremonies in England is the "coronation wrist bag," which in its newest and smartest form is of walrus handsomely mounted in gilded silver, says the Philadelphia Times. The bag is somewhat narrower at the clasp than at the bottom, where it has a pointed effect. An artistic coronation bag in beige covered walrus has a clasp of gilded silver which also forms the chain and the graceful scroll ornamentation applied along the bottom of the front of the bag.

The bag closes with two acorns formed of turquoise nuts set in cups of the gilded silver. The front of the bag is arranged with a flap which opens with a turquoise cabochon button, revealing a pocket to receive the handkerchief. The lining is of moire silk, the delicate beige tint of which harmonizes with the ivory hue of the leather.

Equally artistic is a coronation bag of black walrus similarly adorned with silver edged mountings and scroll ornamentation and acorn cups holding amethyst nuts, the deep luminous purple of which is repeated in the color of the moire lining. A bag of tan walrus is still another variation of these artistically designed and created requisites of the fashionable woman's costume, and in this the nuts reposing in the gilded cups are of polished coral.

SPAIN'S YOUNG KING.

Interesting Anecdote Related of Don Alfonso XIII.

Great interest is at present being concentrated on the young King Alfonso of Spain, says the Madrid correspondent of the New York Herald. He was born under exceptional circumstances, and his father, Alfonso XII., was very delicate, but with the strict regimen that Don Alfonso has been obliged to observe he has grown well, is tall and has a very good figure.

Don Alfonso inherits all the vivacity of spirit and repartee for which his father was famous. The bon mots of the young king denote a very keen sense of humor. The professor of history, Senor Brieva Salvatierra, was once calling Don Alfonso's attention to the titles that former kings of Spain who bore the same name had been awarded by history. He cited that one Alfonso was called "The Wise," another "The Warlike," and so on, when suddenly the young king interrupted his professor, saying, "Well, I think they will nickname me 'Alfonso the Rabbit.'" This is because Don Alfonso went nearly every day to the Casa del Campo (country house), which he cordially detests and which is full of these animals.

Difficulties of Teaching Filipinos.

"Don't go to the Philippines if you are unmarried," Melitza M. Hull, an American girl who is teaching in those islands, writes home, "and, above all things, don't go out there expecting to marry." She thinks that teachers should be men and their wives, says the New York Press. Aside from the moral and social difficulties besetting the path of the unmarried teacher she will run up against great obstacles in the way of geographies that tell almost nothing of the Philippines, histories that are beyond the capacity of the pupils and textbooks on nature that tell nothing about bamboo, mango and palm trees and much about oaks, chestnuts and other trees that the young Filipino knows nothing of. The educational problem is yet to be worked out, and the working out of the problem entails difficulties over which the youthful teacher hardly can avoid stumbling.

WAS NOT JUSTIFIABLE

Waller's Action In Samar Was Unlawful Retaliation

NOT GUILTY OF MURDER

Only Finding of the Court Martial Agreed to by General Chaffee—Lieutenant Day Should Have Positively Disobeyed Waller's Order

Manila, May 26.—The official findings of the court martial which tried Major Waller and Lieutenant Day of the marine corps for executing natives of the island of Samar without trial, have been made public. The reviewing authority of the court, Major General Chaffee, commander-in-chief of the American forces in the Philippines, has expressed disapproval of the court's finding in both cases.

Referring to the case of Major Waller, the reviewing authority says: "The sending of the natives in question to their death partook more of unlawful retaliation than a justifiable act of war. In justice to the American military service, the findings of acquittal demand that they shall not meet with unqualified approval. The marines in Samar underwent great suffering before their rescue, and their officers, from their sick beds, voiced the revengeful anger of the men, who telephoned to Major Waller advising that the stevedores be killed. Major Waller received this message while he was sick, prostrate from a fever, suffering acute pain of body due to exposure and his exertions in behalf of his men and mental anguish concerning their fate, which had long been in doubt. Major Waller was at the time in telephonic communication with General Smith, who commanded the American forces in Samar, but he deliberately chose not to consult General Smith regarding his contemplated action, and rather than forego the execution of his unrestrained will, he assumed the power the laws of war and the customs of the service confer upon commanding officers only in time of war.

"Giving heed to the mental attitude of Major Waller, as much of the findings of the court as are to the effect that Major Waller is not guilty of murder are approved. But the reviewing authority is at a loss to understand why the court did not find against Major Waller in the minor offense. With the exception noted, the acquittal, as it appears in the record of the proceedings, is disapproved."

Referring to the case of Lieutenant Day, the reviewing authority says: "The accused knew that for three weeks Major Waller had undergone a test of his mental and physical endurance such as few men are called upon to suffer. While fully conceding the grave responsibility assumed by a subordinate officer in wilfully disobeying an order of his commanding officer, still the weighty reasons related, with which Lieutenant Day was acquainted, so tainted Major Waller's order that Lieutenant Day should have been prompted to positive disobedience. An officer must be conscientiously regardful of the unquestioned legality of his agency in taking the lives of his fellow men. Above and beyond all personal considerations, officers must guard the name and honor of the country. Had Lieutenant Day been actuated by such considerations he would probably have prevented one of the most regrettable incidents in the annals of the military service of the United States."

Won't Control Sale of Opium

Pekin, May 26.—The failure of the efforts of a German firm to secure exclusive rights of selling opium through the Chinese empire, for which privilege the firm in question offered to pay the Chinese government $15,000,000 a year, appears to be assured on account of the opposition to the proposal of the better class of the ministers and the palace officials.

Pawtucket, R. I., May 26.—The strike of operatives at the mills of the J. & P. Coats company (limited) will develop into a proponged struggle. The strikers have been definitely refused their demands. Pointe A Pitre, Guadeloupe, May 26.—Steamer Lifjeld arrived here yesterday from Martininque and reports the conditions on that island to be unchanged. The people at Fort de France were somewhat quieter when the Lifjeld left there.

THAT CHAPTER.

A chapter on Scott's Emulsion often holds a prominent position in the histories of weak children.

The gist of that chapter usually reads like this—"child weak, pale, thin, no appetite, fretful, weakness left over from grippe or other disease. Began small doses Scott's Emulsion three times a day after meals. No apparent change first week. Then appetite improved, then strength increased, then child more lively, slept better, a decided gain in weight, better color in the face."

And so it goes till the child is reported well and strong.

Sounds simple enough and it is simple—Scott's Emulsion is just what the weak child needs.

Russian Peasants Are Making Things Lively For the Government

St. Petersburg, May 26.—An attempt has been made to assassinate Prince Obolensky, governor of the government of Kharkoff, who was commended by the czar for suppressing the rioting among the peasants of that district.

Lieutenant General VonWahl, governor of Vilna, whose assassination was recently attempted on account of his wholesale flogging of political prisoners, many of whom were educated and who, according to custom, were, therefore, exempt from flogging, justifies these punishments on the ground that he was ordered to inflict them by M. VonPlehwe, the minister of the interior.

Peasant political prisoners have also been whipped in Polish towns.

Eighty persons who were arrested for taking part in revolutionary disturbances at Saratoff were confined in a private building there. A number of rioters concentrated in the vicinity of this building, contemplating a release. The rioters were charged several times by the troops before they dispersed and the liberation of the prisoners was thus prevented.

Armed with daggers and sticks, the townspeople of Ghirzel, in the Caucuses, have liberated a score of prisoners who claimed they were innocent.

Loubet Visits Christian

Copenhagen, May 26.—President Loubet, who, after his visit to the Czar of Russia, left Kronstadt May 23 for France on the French cruiser Montcalm, landed here yesterday after a favorable and rapid voyage through the Baltic. King Christian, the Danish crown prince and other members of the royal family embarked on a launch and were taken to the vessel, where the king was greeted by President Loubet. The king and the president then came ashore and were driven to the Amalienborg castle, where luncheon was served. Complimentary toasts were exchanged between the king and the president. Later King Christian and President Loubet together drove about Copenhagen and then returned to the vessel, where the farewells were said.

This Week In Congress

Washington, May 26.—From present indications the senate will devote another full week, if not a longer time, to consideration of the Philippine bill. The prediction is freely made that a vote will not be reached before the middle of next week. There are still a number to consideration of the Philippine bill, and some other senators have not yet indicated whether they will speak or not.

Under the special order adopted last week, the bill to regulate immigration will have the right of way over all measures in the house except appropriation bills, revenue bills, and conference reports.

Protected by Stars and Stripes

Port au Prince, Hayti, May 26.—Tancrede Auguste, the former minister of the interior and of police, has left here for Jamaica. When on the point of leaving the United States legation, where he sought refuge at the time of the disturbances which followed the resignation of President Sam, a crowd made a hostile demonstration against M. Auguste. Auguste finally left the legation with United States Minister Powell in a carriage, over which an American flag was held. M. Auguste was very much disliked.

Settled by Slaughter of "Heir"

London, May 26.—A wealthy woman named Silva recently died at Lisbon. She was a fervid Spiritualist, a believer in the transmigration of souls, and imagined that the soul of her dead husband had entered a rooster. She caused a special fowl house to be built and ordered her servants to pay extra attention to their "master's" wants. A lawsuit might have followed had not one of the heirs adopted the simple expedient of having the wealthy rooster killed, thus becoming, himself, the next of kin.

Cure as Bad as Disease

Pekin, May 26.—The rebellion in Chi-Li province has been practically subdued, but the inhabitants of the province are complaining loudly of the forces under Yuan Shia Kai, the governor of Chi-Li, and allege that his soldiers in inflicting punishments do not distinguish between the guilty and innocent.

Annapolis, May 26.—In one of the closest and most beautiful contests ever seen on the Severn, the eight-oared crew of Harvard university defeated the naval cadets in their two-mile race. Neither crew was ever at any time more than a few feet in advance of the other. Time: Harvard, 10:01; Navy, 10:02.

NO VICTIMS IN SIGHT

All Within Pelee's Range Dead or In Flight

FORT DE FRANCE IS SAFE

But Inhabitants Are Leaving as Speedily as Possible—Free Supplies Ruin Business—Island Grateful to America For Her Generous Aid

Fort de France, May 27.—St. Pierre is no longer of interest, except to the scientists. Mt Pelee is still erupting, but all within its range are dead or have fled.

The new crater is active, and the volcano belched forth a torrent of lava and mud on Saturday which rushed down the north slope of the mountain and swept away what was left of the town of Basse Pointe. New fissures have opened in the side of the mountain. The scientists are divided in opinion as to whether or not new and more violent outbursts are to be expected. A majority of them think volcanic energy will be displayed for a long time, but that no further loss of life will occur, as there are no places left to be destroyed. Fort de France, they say, is absolutely safe from any possible outburst of Mt. Pelee.

Fort de France looks deserted. Nearly 2000 persons have gone to the islands of Guadeloupe, Dominica and St. Lucia, and as many more are trying to get away. The simple object of all minds is to escape from the island. Most of the refugees who have come into Fort de France have deserted the town for points farther south, as terror still possesses all souls, and Fort de France is believed to be doomed.

Admiral Servan yesterday called upon United States Consul Ayme to express to him his high appreciation of what the United States has done for the victims of the disaster. The French delegates, Admiral Servan and the citizens are unanimous in expressions of gratitude for the genuine friendship of the American people, which has been manifested by the swiftness with which great quantities of supplies have been furnished and forwarded and the character of the delegates in charge of them.

It is expected official notifications will be issued that sufficient supplies have been received. All business is suspended, as the amount of supplies received has killed sales. Owing to the excessive relief distributed the laborers of Fort de France are refusing to work.

Professor Robert T. Hill, the eminent geologist, with his party, has chartered a steamer and is carefully studying the volcano from the sea. George Kennan, with a large party, is examining the northern part of the island.

The St. Vincent volcano (the Soufriere) is less active. The total loss of life as a result of its eruption is finally placed at 1700, about the original estimate; the wounded and burned number 600. Many of those in hospital cannot recover. Over 4000 persons are destitute. They are receiving adequate relief. The material damage done in St. Vincent is principally to the plantations. Many of the sugar works may be restored. Sugar hogsheads are being dug out of the lava and ash heaps.

Aiding the Needy

Washington, May 27.—The navy department has added one more and perhaps the last, to the good offices which it has been called on to perform in behalf of the West Indian volcanic sufferers, by undertaking to transport to the homeless people of St. Vincent a large quantity of building lumber which the Canadian government has donated.

Lightning Struck Balloon

Berlin, May 27.—A military balloon was struck by lightning near Augsburg, Bavaria, last night at an altitude of 500 metres. The only occupant of the basket was Lieutenant Von Hiller, who was telephoning his observations to soldiers on the ground below him. When the balloon was struck it burst into flames and fell rapidly to the earth. Von Hiller had the bones in both feet broken, but escaped further injury.

Harry New Takes Latonia Derby

Cincinnati, May 27.—Harry New won the Latonia derby yesterday in easy fashion. South Trimble, who was favorite in the betting, coupled with Martin Burke as an entry, finished second, with his stable companion third. Abe Frank, the only other starter, finished a poor last.

Tornado Killed Eight People

Charleston, May 27.—Specials from Union show that the reports of the tornado which passed over that section of the state Sunday were not exaggerated. So far as known, eight persons were killed. The section between Jonesville and Santuc suffered most, 50 houses and cabins being wrecked.

EVERY SHOT TOLD

Enraged Longshoreman Shoots Three Men on a Boston Dock

Boston, May 27.—Acting under the impression that his fellow workmen had deprived him of his place, Mortimer O'Brien, formerly a longshoreman employed by the Metropolitan Steamship company, yesterday shot three of his comrades at the wharf of the company, wounding all of them seriously. It is thought that one of them is even fatally injured. The victims are Patrick Grennan, (foreman), shot through neck, may not recover; Robert Gorden, shot in the right arm; William Hennessy, shot between thumb and forefinger; lockjaw is feared.

After the shooting, O'Brien disappeared, but later he returned to the wharf and was arrested.

O'Brien was discharged as longshoreman last Saturday, and it is said that he blamed Brennan and the other men. He appeared at the wharf at noon yesterday and wanted to talk over matters with Brennan. After a short argument, O'Brien pulled out a revolver and shot at Brennan at close range. Gordon and Hennessey ran to Brennan's assistance, and O'Brien fired at them, hitting both. After the shooting O'Brien ran away, while the stevedores and dock officials hastened to care for the wounded men. An officer was called and immediately set off in the ambulance with the victims for the hospital relief station.

Hardly was the ambulance out of sight when O'Brien again made his appearance on the wharf. The stevedores sprang on him in a body and overpowered and disarmed him. He was taken to a nearby police station. The workmen at the wharf said that O'Brien blamed Brennan and the others for his discharge.

The Palmer Floated

Vineyard Haven, Mass., May 27.—The schooner Arthur Seitz, ashore on Wasque shoal, is in a bad position. The hope for her safety lies in the fact that she is not pounding badly. Schooner Frank A. Palmer, which also went ashore on Wasque shoal, is anchored to the eastward, in Muskeget channel. She came off one shoal and was proceeding under sail when she took ground on another bad spot, from which she was worked off. With good weather she will be all right until her cargo of coal can be lightered.

Legal Battle Over Corpse

Ansonia, Conn., May 27.—Recourse has been had to injunction proceedings by the authorities of St. Mary's cemetery (Catholic) to prevent the removal of the body of Patrick Mowher, who committed suicide, from potter's field to a lot in the consecrated ground of the cemetery. The cemetery authorities say they heard that attempts to bury the body in the cemetery secretly having failed, a plan to effect the removal forcibly had been formed.

Said Husband Assaulted Her

Boston, May 26.—A middle-aged woman, who said her name was Margaret Maguire, came to the city hospital the first of the month suffering from bruises, which she said she received during a quarrel with her husband. Yesterday she died, but the police have failed to find anyone who knew her at the place which she gave as her home. An autopsy will be held to ascertain if she died from the effects of blows.

Smuggled Goods at Auction

Boston, May 27.—A lot of Canadian sealskins seized by United States treasury agents while being smuggled into this country were sold by auction at the Boston custom house yesterday. The sale brought about $1300. The collection consisted of muffs, boas, overcoats, jackets, opera bags, fur hats, blankets, hoods, sacks, rugs, capes, collarettes, robes and gloves.

Barroom Fight Results Fatally

Lowell, Mass., May 27.—As the result of a drunken row Saturday night in a barroom John W. Cahill died at the Emergency hospital at an early hour this morning and almost at the same moment of his death, Joseph F. McAleer, a machinist, was arrested and locked up at police headquarters, where he was booked on the charge of manslaughter.

Plummer's Case Goes Over

Portland, Me., May 27.—A continuance until next Wednesday was granted by Recorder Whelden yesterday, in the case of Deputy Sheriff Plummer, who was arrested last Saturday on a charge of accepting a bribe from a local liquor dealer. Bail in the sum of $1000 was furnished, and the deputy returned to his duties with the liquor squad.

Was Oldest King's Daughter

Boston, May 27.—Funeral services for Boston's oldest resident, Mrs. Nancy Washington, who died at the age of 107, were held yesterday at the Home for Aged Colored Women, where she had been an inmate for 16 years. There were many beautiful floral offerings. Mrs. Washington was the oldest King's Daughter in the United States.

Providence Feels Coal Shortage

Providence, May 27.—There will be no more arrivals at this port of barges laden with hard coal until the strike now prevailing in the anthracite mines is over. The shortage of hard coal has begun to make itself felt very forcibly.

McCullough Holds the Lead

Montpelier, Vt., May 27.—The third week of caucuses for delegates to the Republican gubernatorial convention shows the strength of the three candidates to be: McCullough, 103; Clement, 55; Proctor, 29.

POINTS OF DIFFERENCE

May Result In a Break In Peace Negotiations

A QUESTION OF FINANCE

The Chief Stumbling Block, According to a London Paper, Which Predicts a Definite Announcement by Friday—Kitchener a Diplomat

Pretoria, May 27.—The prevalence throughout South Africa of the optimistic feeling in regard to the peace negotiations is hardly based upon solid facts. The protraction of the conference at Vereeniging is not necessarily a hopeful sign. The delegates to the conference, although they have abandoned their hopes of securing independence, still have many points of difference with the government, while an obstinate minority continues to regard the resumption of hostilities as the best outcome of the present situation, and at any moment these points of difference may be accentuated into a refusal to continue the negotiations.

It is most unlikely that those who are in favor of peace will throw up the sponge so long as a decent minority is desirous of continuing the struggle, and all these dissonant elements must be taken into account before it is possible to give any sort of prediction as to the issue of the present negotiations.

Hitch on Financial Matters

London, May 27.—The Daily Mail this morning says the cabinet council to be held today will decide upon points of detail, mostly of a financial nature, which have been raised by the Boers in the peace negotiations. Great Britain's decision in the matter will then be communicated to the Vereeniging conference by the delegates at Pretoria, says the paper, and, being the best obtainable terms, they will almost certainly be accepted. The results should be announced officially either Thursday or Friday of this week, probably on Friday, the day upon which King Edward's birthday is celebrated. Peace is quite certain, says The Daily Mail, and the delegates at Pretoria are only engaged in endeavoring to gild the pill for the Vereeniging conference to swallow.

The Daily Mail says further: Our dispatches from Pretoria assert that numerous communications are passing between Lords Kitchener and Milner, in South Africa and London. Lord Kitchener, although he is still full of energy, is much aged in appearance as a result of the severe and continuous strain which he has undergone. The consensus of opinion is that the recent negotiations have proved Lord Kitchener to be a great diplomatist as well as a great soldier. It is difficult to appreciate the magnitude of the difficulties Lord Kitchener has had to contend with. The Boer leaders are all deeply impressed with his personality, and trust him implicitly. It is understood that Lord Milner (the British high commissioner in South Africa) has gracefully admitted that the ultimate credit for the accomplishment of the great task is due to Lord Kitchener.

Just before parliament rose after midnight last night a rumor reached the lobbies that a hitch had occurred in the peace negotiations. Nothing official concerning this rumor could be ascertained, but the dispatch from Pretoria, in which it was said that the prevalence throughout South Africa of the optimistic feeling in regard to the peace negotiations was hardly based upon solid facts, may be regarded as an indication that such a hitch has occurred.

Little information from Pretoria has been able recently to pass the censor there. That the government yesterday fully anticipated a speedy conclusion of peace is believed to be shown by the postponement from yesterday until Friday or later of the budget bill in the committee stage, with the view, as was frankly admitted on the government side of the house, of enabling the budget to be recast in the event that peace is secured. The tax on grain has proved so unpopular throughout the country, and has had such an unexpected effect in reuniting the Liberal party with a most effective election cry, that there is little doubt the government will welcome an excuse to drop it.

The belief that the government intends to drop the tax on grain is so strong that all members of the house of commons who have leanings toward protection met informally last night and sent an appeal to the ministers to dispense with this tax. Another strong reason for the desire to do away with this tax is the effect it has had in the colonies, where it has been regarded as an opportunity to demand preferential treatment—a demand which will be strongly pressed at the coming conference of colonial premiers in London—and which is likely to cause the government considerable difficulty by emphasizing a sharply defined divergence of opinion in the cabinet.

A TRAGIC SEQUEL

To Feeling Existing Between Students at University of Vermont

Plattsburg, N. Y., May 27.—The feeling which has existed between the freshman and sophomore classes of the University of Vermont culminated here yesterday in the drowning of Nelson P. Bond, treasurer of the freshman class.

The freshmen had arranged to have their annual banquet at the Cumberland house, and Bond, with four others of the freshmen, came over yesterday to make the final arrangements. Five sophs sailed to Port Kent on the sloop Alert and took a train there for Plattsburg. The main body of freshmen, 40 in number, arrived on the steamer Vermont at 7 in the evening, after having a fight on the Burlington dock.

Bond left his companions at 5 o'clock in the afternoon for a stroll and, it is alleged, was set upon by two sophs, presumably for the purpose of kidnaping him and keeping him from the banquet. He fled before his pursuers until he reached Wilcox's dock, on the north lake front. The pursuers claim that he jumped into the lake in an effort to escape by swimming. They endeavored to rescue him by a boat, but could find no oars and he sank before they could reach him.

Coroner McMasters will hold an inquest and the matter will be probed to the bottom. Bond was 19 years of age and a resident of Burlington. He was one of the most popular members of the class.

Good Afternoon.

The fact that Quincy has a street railway which can transport a party requiring twenty cars, is evidence that the shipyard is not the only big thing in the city.

Anent the discussion of the "Adam and Eve myth" there is considerable difference between saying the story of Genesis is a "myth" and that it is "false." Some of the most mythological statements contain the deepest of human truths.

That is a dangerous bill in the Legislature which proposes to give the city of Pittsfield authority to levy betterments for street paving, etc. Two to one abutters in small cities are against having their streets paved. There are enough burdens now upon real estate without the liability of another tax.

One of the speakers in the Senate debate Monday, on the District Option bill, facetiously remarked that Quincy and other places should help support the Boston houses of correction on account of drunks whose residence is in these places. The speaker unconsciously admitted several good arguments that temperance people have often used, viz: That the revenue which a city derives from liquor licenses is not adequate to support such institutions, the extra police force necessary, the courts, the charitable homes, the insane asylums, etc., whose business comes largely from rum. The revenue of Boston from licenses is but $1,077,772 75. The figurers are not at hand telling the annual cost of the above institutions. We maintain Quincy is much better off financially without any revenue from licenses than it would be with.

Drift of Opinion.

☞ There is a host of people who would like to take over the "losing business" which the meat packers claim they are doing.—Lynn Item.

☞ Secretary Moody has the same views of building ships in government navy yards that were held by Secretary Long, and he supports the bureau chiefs in an effort to defeat the Roberts amendment that was made to the naval appropriation bill. They claim that the navy yards are primarily for the repair work of warships, and that to equip for constructive work would require an expenditure of millions. But why have navy yards for repairs when there are private yards where the work can be done? If it is unwise to construct why is it wise reconstruct? The policy of the government has been to place itself above the control of private parties, and navy yards have been established in order that government work may be done under the supervision of its own agents. Any other policy would place the public work in the control of private parties, something that a nation should discountenance. With navy yards properly equipped warships can be constructed independent of the ship builders, and while it is a good policy to encourage this class to establish plants and compete for government work the whole business should not be placed in their hands. The Robert amendment has a hard prospect before it with such a powerful opposition, but that need not discourage those who, like the author of it, believe that it is the proper thing for government to do.—Lynn Item.

CITY HALL BIDS.

The Figures Take a Very Wide Range.

Nearly $4,000 on the Entire Job.

The Lowest Bids Aggregate over $11,000.

Bids were opened by Commissioner Knowlton on Monday for remodelling City Hall, also for plumbing, painting and wiring the building.

The bids for remodelling were four in number and were opened at 4 o'clock. They were as follows:

Marr & Waterman,	$ 9,680.00
W. R. Lofgren,	10,250.00
Dugan & Hallowell	10,973.00
Julius Johnson	12,500.00

One of the builders said he had misunderstood certain matters, and asked for an opportunity to revise his figures As it is the desire to get as low a figure as possible the request was granted and the other three builders were informed that they could have the same privilege.

The time when the bidders agreed to have the job completed ranged from August 1 to September 1.

The other bids were opened at 4.30 and were as follows: For plumbing—

J. E. Kenily & Co.,	$590.00
J. E. McCurdy,	594.28
Ames & Bradford,	725.00

Bids were taken under advisement.

For painting—

American Painting & Decorating Co,	$649.00
Arthur Jones,	650.00
E. S. Thomas,	673.00
F. Favorite,	725.00
Albert A. Murphy,	888 00

Bids taken under advisement.

For wireing:—There was quite a difference in the bids for this work. They were as follows:

E. S. Beckford,	$163.00
I. L. Mattson,	395.00
Ralph W. Coleman,	630.00
Oakman & Millett,	875.00

This was awarded to E. S. Beckford. Taking the lowest bidders, the aggregate for the job would be $11,082. This, however, does not include the heating, the bids for which will be opened Thursday.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Greater Boston Called "the Dry and Thirsty Belt."

The district option bill relative to license was taken up in the Senate on Monday. At the outset Senator Berry's amendment that the act be submitted at the State election rather than the Municipal election, was adopted 25 to 10, Senator Sprague voting yes.

An amendment offered by Senator H. S. Fitzgerald, to provide that the revenue received from liquor licenses shall not be used in determining the tax rate in districts voting no license, was rejected 11 to 21.

Argument on the main question was opened by Senator Sprague, chairman of the committee on Liquor Laws who opposed the bill.

Senator John A. Sullivan attacked the bill at length with statistics as to revenue, licensed places, population to license. He asked: "Have the advocates of this bill considered the results that will flow from it? Those who desire liquor, finding their local supply cut off, will come into the licensed districts, where great crowds of the middle and poorer clasess are huddled together. More drinking will be indulged in within those districts. More drunken men will be found in the streets. More scandals will ensue, and disorder will be more frequent. Is it fair to thrust into the over-crowded districts the drinking population from Brighton, Watertown, Cambridge, Somerville, Chelsea, Quincy, Milton, Hyde Park, Dedham, Brookline, Newton and Dorchester? It may be said in answer to this query, that there will be fewer saloons under this law in the licensed districts that is true, but it is only a part of the truth, and the fact remains that a vastly greater number of persons will be compelled to purchase in the licensed districts than at present. Is it fair to the poor who are compelled to live in the tenement houses of the city, to thrust upon them greater burdens than they bear at present? The inhumanity of the proposition is monstrous!"

Senator Berry admitted that as much liquor would be purchased under the new law, though not to be drunk on the premises. He remarked that Senator Sprague belonged in the dry and thirsty belt known as "Greater Boston." He had always felt that "the people of these places should help contribute to support the Boston houses of correction on account of the drunks and strays who fail to get out of the city and are pinched and sent to them. The liquor dealer, he continued, is always spoken of as a friend of the poor, but he had always noticed that where the saloon was located there the poor people congregated. He said this bill simply provided that this question should be submitted to the people of Boston.

Senator M. J. Sullivan and W. T. A. Fitzgerald also opposed, but adjournment was reached before a vote was taken.

The Senate accepted the adverse report of the committee on McNary's bill to prohibit the manufacture of water gas.

A bill providing $5,000,000 for abolition of grade crossings was engrossed, also a bill granting annuities to widows and children of police officers fatally injured in performance of duty.

The rejection of the resolution to Congress in favor of reciprocity with Canada, was reconsidered, and the resolution adopted, Senator Sprague being paired against.

The House postponed the referendum resolve to Thursday.

The adverse report was accepted on the bill providing that advertisements for employes must state facts if there is a strike pending.

Although said to be unconstitutional, the House by a vote of 78 to 73 passed to be engrossed the bill allowing the city of Pittsfield to assess betterments for grading and paving streets.

An order was adopted calling for an investigation by the Harbor and Land Commission as to the possibility of opening the Merrimac river to navigation as far as Lowell.

Scrofula

It is commonly inherited.

Few are entirely free from it.

Pale, weak, puny children are afflicted with it in nine cases out of ten, and many adults suffer from it.

Common indications are bunches in the neck, abscesses, cutaneous eruptions, inflamed eyelids, sore ears, rickets, catarrh, wasting, and general debility.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Eradicate it, positively and absolutely. This statement is based on the thousands of permanent cures these medicines have wrought.

"My daughter had scrofula, with eleven sores on her neck and about her ears. Hood's Sarsaparilla was highly recommended and she took it and was cured. She is now in good health." MRS. J. H. JONES, Parker City, Ind.

Hood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise.

A police officer was on duty at Mt. Wollaston cemetery all day Sunday to preserve order and to keep people from riding bicycles. There have been frequent complaints of young people racing through the avenues on bicycles, and people who out of curiosity crowd about the mourners at funerals to such an extent that often the mourners are crowded out. Therefore an officer will be on duty Sundays during the summer.

IT HAS BEEN SAID

That it takes a rich man to draw a check, a horse to draw a cart a pretty girl to draw attention, a toper to draw a cork, a free lunch to draw a crowd, and an advertisement in the home paper to draw trade.

BIG TROLLEY PARTY.

Twenty Electrics Necessary for Visitors on Thursday.

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers who are holding their annual meeting in Boston this week are to make an excursion to Quincy on Thursday, to visit the works of the Fore River Ship & Engine Co. It is expected the party will number from 700 to 1000 men. They will leave Rowe's wharf on a special steamer for Crow Point, Hingham, at 1.30 and will arrive an hour later. Here they will be met by cars of the Old Colony street railway which will take the party to the corner of Washington and South streets where they are due to arrive at 3 o'clock. After a two hours' visit to the Fore River plant, the cars will again be taken for Crow Point and the boat taken to Boston where they will arrive at 6.30.

Superintendent Reynolds of the street railway says that twenty cars will be required to transport the party to and from Crow Point.

Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

There is nothing more worthy of a pause and a sentiment of appreciation of what can be given exquisite expression than the monument to Mr. Harry Luce. This is to be found by turning to the left as one enters the Mount Wollaston cemetery. Apart from its proportions, and the species of stone or granite from which it is wrought, is the large delicate frond which is carved at one side, drapping the stone as it were, in a tracery of great beauty.

The noble epitaph to Charles Francis Adams upon a large monolith or memorial stone near the entrance, about opposite the centre, or to the right, tells in the best possible way the story of this, which the Rev. D. M. Wilson classed, as one who illustrated the "simplicity of a noble life."

The few well worded lines upon a simple, low headstone way round to the right upon a side path tells that "the mortal remains" of John C. Randall, to whom it was raised, "lie among the eternal snow of Mont Blanc where he perished in 1870."

Two white marble memorials one to a matron, the other to a young girl are the beautiful pieces of a cross within a circle of perfect proportions and workmanship. One is in white marble with flowers wrought to wreathe it, the other has a severely simple maltese cross open within the circle.

The monolith erected to the memory of I. W. Munroe is of peculiar finish and beauty; while the chaste piece near the entrance to John O. Holden's lot compels one's study.

A large granite piece over the grave of Joseph W. Robertson is a fine testimonial.

A walk through this beautiful resting place of our dead when sunset illuminates our granite western barriers, and our city is being slowly lulled to rest, can awaken only tender happy feelings to the rightly constituted soul.

Ladies' Night.

John Adams Council Royal Arcanum Wollaston, celebrated its Ladies' Night Monday evening. About 175 members, ladies and friends were present. Prof. LeRoy of Boston delighted the audience by his tricks of magic. Grand Regent J. B. Robsen spoke of the purposes of the Royal Arcanum—what it has done in its 25 years of its existence, the protection benefits to its members and indescribable relief to widows. Great enthusiasm was shown during the evening. After the entertainment the guests were treated to ice cream and cake while the orchestra played several fine selections. This council is showing great enthusiasm and the committee wish to thank all who helped to make the evening such a grand success.

Miss Belle Smith of the City Treasurer's office at City Hall, who completes her eight years of service tonight, to enter more important duties, was given a farewell reception Monday afternoon by the other employes at City Hall. The reception was entirely informal and in the nature of a surprise. Miss Smith was showered with well wishes and with gifts that all housekeepers find useful.

New Ball Team.

The much talked of "new ball team" at Quincy Point, is now ready for its first game, which will be on Memorial day at 10 o'clock A. M. at Quincy Point. Owing to the resignation of Manager Patterson and the disbanding of the Fore River Ship & Engine Co.'s base ball association, it was deemed advisable by certain business men at Quincy Point to form a new team. This has been done and the new team will be called the Fore Rivers. The management wish to have the people notified that the new team does not represent the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. nor is it controlled by their employes. As the new team bought up the outfit of the association it was deemed advisable to leave the name unchanged on the jerseys with the exception of removing the letter S. & E. Co.

GALLANT ROCHAMBEAU.

Description of Statue In Memory of His Services.

HERO OF MANY BATTLEFIELDS.

Career of the Celebrated French Soldier Who Enabled the Revolutionary Forces to Turn the Tide In Our War of Independence—How He Trapped Lord Cornwallis.

The Rochambeau statue has its place in Lafayette square in the national capital, the place of all others most fitting for it, says a special dispatch from Washington to the Chicago Record-Herald. It flanks the bronze effigy of the young Marquis de Lafayette, who owned the Comte de Rochambeau as his "father in war." The statue is of heroic size. It represents the marshal at the siege of Yorktown ordering the French wing of the besieging army to attack the works of the English general, Lord Cornwallis, on the morning of Oct. 10, 1781.

Against the pedestal rises a splendid female figure of France holding aloft two flagstaffs with the left hand—the flags of France and America—and grasping a threatening sword with the right. The war eagle with extended wings is at her feet, so typifying the defensive alliance, the only one ever consecrated by a treaty which has been signed on behalf of the United States.

The statue is a replica of one that stands in the town of Vendome, close to the ancestral chateau of the Rochambeau family. Fernand Hamar, the sculptor, gave to its execution long study and much love, and when it was unveiled June 4, 1900, he received the highest praise for his skill and his artistic conception.

Few months had passed before it occurred to M. Jules Boeufve, chancellor of the French embassy at Washington, that a duplicate of the statue should be erected in the United States. Then General Horace Porter, American embassador at Paris, wrote to Chairman Cannon of the house committee on appropriations recommending the project and expressing his appreciation of the high artistic worth of the monument.

It was found that a replica could be purchased for $7,500, and this amount was appropriated March 3, 1901, as an amendment to the sundry civil bill. On March 7 a joint resolution set aside $10,000 as a fund for entertaining the representatives of the French government, and invited the families of Rochambeau and Lafayette to attend the unveiling ceremonies. Within the month an additional sum of the same amount has been authorized.

Marshal de Rochambeau was a seasoned warrior of fifty-five when he brought 6,000 French troops to America in 1780. He held the high grade of lieutenant general in the French army and many and great were the debts his king and his people owed him for his services in battle. He was given his early education for the priesthood, but when he was seventeen years old, his elder brother died, and he was summoned from the college halls to prepare for the active life that would be his as his father's successor.

The war of the Austrian succession was being fought, and young Rochambeau was soon in the field as a cornet in St. Simon's cavalry regiment. He did dashing work in many campaigns, and finally at Namur, in the Low Countries, came his great opportunity. He took it into his head to climb a height considered impregnable, and there he found two sentinels lazily smoking in the sun. Not disturbing them, he slipped away and was soon back at the head of a strong force. He took the height, and with it the battle was won. For this he was made a colonel at the age of twenty-two.

From this his story runs on with ever increasing honor. Name the battles of Europe in which the French army took part during the middle of the eighteenth century, and you name the scenes of Rochambeau's exploits. In the expedition against the island of Minorca he became brigadier general. At Creveldt he held the whole Austrian army at bay for hours. At Minden his own part was glorious, despite his country's defeat.

When Louis XV. determined to send money and men to help the American colonies, he chose Rochambeau for the leadership. The army of 6,000 men disembarked at Newport, while the supporting army under Admiral de Ternay occupied the bay. There perforce he had to remain with his command, playing his part in the game of chess to which the war had reduced itself. Washington he first met in September of 1780 at Hartford. It was decided that the two armies should join forces, Washington's troops being then along the highlands of the Hudson.

It was not till June, 1781, after Rochambeau's son had come from France with re-enforcements, that the armies united. After reconnoissances it was decided that General Clinton and the British at New York were still too strong to attack. Then it was that the advance on Cornwallis was determined. Skillfully deceiving General Clinton, the united armies were soon on the route for Virginia. They closed in on the British general, fought him gallantly at the outposts and trapped him so completely that he surrendered, and the war of the Revolution was won.

Rochambeau was loaded with honors by the Continental congress, and he did not return to France till the next spring. He rose to be marshal of France, survived the revolution, though suffering imprisonment and narrowly escaping execution, and died in 1807 at the age of eighty-two.

A Miraculous Feat.
"It seemed that nothing short of a miracle could save my little daughter from an untimely death," says City Marshall A. H. Malcolm, of Cherokee, Kan. "When two years old she was taken with stomach and bowel trouble and despite the efforts of the best physicians we could procure, she grew gradually worse and was pronounced incurable. A friend advised and after giving it a few days she began to improve and finally fully recovered. She is now past five years of age and the very picture of health."
Dr. Miles' Nervine

POSITION OF ENGINEERS

Not Known In Miners' Contest With Operators

ARE IN A BAD PREDICAMENT

If They Quit Work They May Not Be Reinstated, While If They Remain It Will Be Unpleasant For Them If Miners Win Their Strike

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 27.—It is still a matter of conjecture whether the mines in the anthracite region will be completely shut down next Monday, when the order issued by the executive boards of the United Mine Workers, governing the hours of labor and wages to be paid engineers, firemen and pump runners, goes into effect. The operators claim they will have all the help necessary to keep the pumps and engines in running order.

The United Mine Workers and the officers of the Stationary Firemen's association, on the other hand, claim that unless the coal companies grant the demands made upon them the great bulk of the engineers, firemen and pumpmen will quit work. There seems to be no question but that both sides are straining every nerve to make the best showing possible.

The operators are bringing all the influence they possibly can to hold the men now at work, while the striking miners are also doing missionary work. Many of the engineers do not like the predicament they are placed in. If they quit work, they will displease the company officials and may never be reinstated, while if they remain at their posts and the miners should win their strike they would probably find that things would not be so pleasant for them at the collieries in the future.

In order to reach those who are wavering a call was issued last night for a mass meeting of all engineers, pumpmen and firemen in the Wyoming region in this city next Friday evening. At a largely attended meeting in this city last night the members of a committee reported they had called upon many engineers during the day and that nearly all had given their word that they would join the other strikers next Monday unless the demand for a shorter work-day was granted. While the position that will be taken by a great many of the engineers and pumpmen is not known, it is known for a certainty where the firemen stand. They will strike almost to a man and the operators will be compelled to secure green hands to take their places.

Within a year past a great many firemen who formerly belonged to the Stationary Firemen's association have joined the United Mine Workers.

The engineers, firemen and pumpmen who were discharged at the Boston colliery of the Delaware and Hudson company because they refused to do the work which was formerly done by the strikers were reinstated yesterday.

A mysterious fire occurred at the old Empire breaker yesterday. The breaker has been abandoned for some time, but there is a watchman on duty. The striking miners say the fire was of incendiary origin and that some enemy of the strikers was guilty of applying the match.

A Disappointed Lover's Deed

Kansas City, May 27.—Frank Robinson, 20, yesterday shot and killed his sweetheart, Gertie Rawlins, 16, fatally wounded his rival, Albert H. Ferguson, and fatally injured himself. Robinson wrote a note to his mother in which he said that as Ferguson had supplanted him in the affections of the girl he purposed to kill them both and then kill himself. He went to the room where Ferguson and the girl were, and being admitted, drew his revolver and opened fire on the couple.

Australia's Terrible Drought

London, May 27.—Cabling from Sydney, N. S. W., the correspondent there of The Daily Mail gives an account of the terrible drought from which, as a climax to seven dry years, Australia is now suffering. The correspondent says that the losses in stock in Australia since 1899 amounted to $75,000,000. Unemployed men are drifting into the cities by the thousands and there the state governments are providing them with relief.

WORN TO A SHADOW.

When there is a falling off in flesh in woman or man there is "something wrong." And that something wrong is generally a loss of nutrition due to disease of the stomach and the other organs of digestion and nutrition. Sometimes this loss of flesh is accompanied by variable appetite, but in many cases the appetite does not fail and there may be a constant desire to eat. Languor, nervousness, irritability, sleeplessness, are symptoms often associated with this loss of nutrition and falling off in flesh.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures disease of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food so that lost flesh is regained and the physical health re-established.

"I had suffered from indigestion and only those who have suffered from it know what it really is," writes Mrs. M. J. Fagan, of 163 East Genesee St., Syracuse, N. Y. "I had had severe attacks of headache and dizziness, with cold hands and feet; everything I ate distressed me, bowels were constipated and I was growing very thin and nervous. I cannot half express the bad feelings I had when I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took nine bottles of the 'Discovery' and have taken several bottles of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. I commenced feeling better with the first bottle and kept on improving. Now I am so greatly improved in health my friends often speak of it. I most heartily recommend these medicines to all suffering as I was."

Broad Loomfixer's Union Takes Action In American Woolen Strike

Providence, May 27.—The Broad Loomfixers' union of New England has issued a statement ordering out the members at work in the mills of the American Woolen company. The loomfixers at the beginning of the strike 18 weeks ago came out in sympathy with the weavers Now their unions are organized and it becomes the duty of every member to remain out in conformity with the order issued yesterday.

The strike against the double-loom weaving of fancy worsteds appears to have developed into a deadlock. The American Woolen company has insistently refused to make any concessions, and an attempt to introduce an entirely new body of weavers is being made. Eleven of their mills are either partially or wholly inactive.

The strikers have held together with remarkable tenacity and the feeling is strong among them that the double-loom system must be abolished before they will return to work. A great number of them have been given employment in the independent mills, many of which are running day and night in order to supply the increased demand for fabrics due to the withdrawal from the market of the American Woolen company's product.

IS AGAIN IN CONVULSION

Pelee Throws Fort de France Into a Panic

FEAR OF A TIDAL WAVE

Or a Night Stampede of Terror Stricken People—Fear For Safety of Professor Hill, Who Started on a Perilous Journey to the Craters

Castries, St. Lucia, May 28.—Mt. Pelee broke out in serious eruption Monday evening. Fort de France was thrown into a panic, and though the town was not thought to be in danger from the volcano, a night stampede of terror-stricken people was apprehended. Even more fear was felt that a tidal wave might sweep the town. Heavy surf indicated sub-oceanic disturbances, and a rise of only eight feet would engulf the low-lying town.

For the space of one hour flames rose from the crater to a height of 150 metres. The crater seemed to be about 300 metres in diameter.

There is no word from Fort de France later than 9 o'clock Monday evening, but anxiety is increased by the fact that Dominica, next-door neighbor of Martinique to the north, was showered with volcanic ashes more heavily than at either of the two previous explosive eruptions.

Anxiety is also felt for the safety of Professor Robert T. Hill of Washington, who, after cabling the results of his earlier study of the volcano, left Fort de France to try to reach the Pelee craters.

Professor Hill chartered a steamer and carefully examined the coast as far north as Port de Macouba, at the extreme end of the island, making frequent landings. After landing at Le Precheur, five miles north of St. Pierre, he walked through an area of active vulcanism to the latter place and made a minute examination of the various phenomena disclosed.

Professor Hill is the first and only man who has set foot in the area of craters, fissures and fumaroles, and because of his high position as a scientist, his story is valuable. He reports as follows:

"The zone of the catastrophe in Martinique forms an elongated oval, containing on land about eight square miles of destruction. This oval is partly over the sea. The land part is bounded by lines running from Le Precheur to the peak of Mt. Pelee, thence curving around to Carbet. There were three well marked zones: First, a centre of annihilation, in which all life, vegetable and animal, was utterly destroyed; the greater northern part of St. Pierre was in this zone. Second, a zone of singeing, blistering flame, which also was fatal to all life, killing all men and animals, burning the leaves on the trees and scorching, but not utterly destroying the trees themselves. Third, a large, outer, non-destructive zone of ashes wherein some vegetation was injured.

"The focus of annihilation was the new crater midway between the sea and the peak of Mt. Pelee, where now exists a new area of active vulcanism, with hundreds of fumaroles or miniature volcanoes. The new crater is now vomiting black, hot mud, which is falling into the sea. Both craters, the old and new, are active. Mushroom-shaped steam explosions constantly ascend from the old crater, while heavy, ash-laden clouds float horizontally from the new crater. The old crater ejects steam, smoke, mud, pumice, and lapilli, no molten lava.

"The salient topography of the region is unaltered. The destruction of St. Pierre was due to the new crater. The explosion had great superficial force, acting in radial directions, as is evidenced by the dismounting and carrying for yards of the guns in the battery on the hill south of St. Pierre and the colonial statue of the virgin in the same locality, and also by the condition of the ruined houses in St. Pierre. According to the testimony of some persons there was an accompanying flame. Others think the incandescent cinders and the force of their ejection were sufficient to cause the destruction. This must be investigated. I am now following the nature of this hill."

Jamaicans' Proposition

Kingston, Ja., May 28.—The planters here are warmly supporting the proposal to bring sufferers from the volcanic outbreak on the island of St. Vincent to work on the estates here and also to settle them on the crown lands. The government of Jamaica is being asked to make an offer to transport people from St. Vincent to Jamaica.

ASKED TO BE IDENTIFIED

Buzzell but Two Weeks Old, as Far as His Memory Is Concerned

Brunswick, Me., May 28.—A strange man who on Monday appealed to the police of this town to establish his identity, stating that he had no recollection of anything further back than two weeks ago, when he found himself in Rockland, has been identified as Charles E. Buzzell, a well-to-do dairyman of Barrington, N. H. The identification was completed last night by his aunt, Miss A. T. Chase of Boston, who came here in response to a message sent by the local police.

Buzzell's mind is still a blank with the exception of the happenings of the past two weeks, and he says he remembers nothing of his aunt or his wife and family and friends at Barrington. He will return to his home with Miss Chase.

The case of Buzzell is one of the most remarkable that ever came to the attention of the physicians of this state. He left his home May 9 with a load of produce for market. When he reached his destination he left his horse at a livery stable and disappeared. He has no recollection of that day or the days that preceded it. The only thing he remembers is that one day about two weeks ago he felt a severe pain in his head and found himself in a strange city. He did not know his own name nor anything about himself. He learned he was in Rockland and supposes he came there on the Boston boat. From Rockland he went to Bath, remaining a few days in a farm house near that place, and then came to this town. Here he told his story to the police and asked them to aid him in identifying himself. Through a picture and description of a missing man printed in a Boston paper, the identification was completed last night.

Surrendered by Bondsmen

Boston, May 28.—John Rogers, convicted in connection with the ward 21 caucus frauds and defaulted when the other three men were sentenced last week, has been surrendered by his bondsmen and sent to jail to await sentence. He had been out on $3000 bail. It seems that Rogers, like Winsloe, Newmarch and Lord, appeared last Wednesday afternoon to hear his fate, but a few minutes before Judge Stevens ascended the bench his courage failed him and he slipped away. Not being present to answer when his name was called, a default was entered against him. Rogers is about 65 years old.

Looking Toward a Settlement

Gloucester, Mass., May 28.—Negotiations looking to a settlement of the quarrymen's strike on Cape Ann by arbitration were begun yesterday at a conference between committees representing the Quarrymen's unions and the manufacturers with the state board of arbitration, but no direct result was reached from the fact that the committee representing the unions was not empowered to make final terms of settlement. The meeting was therefore adjourned until tomorrow, when an agreement may be reached. The discussions yesterday were carried on in a most friendly spirit.

Cassidy Was a Weakling

Boston, May 28.—"Over-exertion" is the cause assigned by Medical Examiner Harris for the death of John Cassidy, who died after a boxing bout with Tommy Dixon last week. Dr. Harris declares that there was no fracture of the skull and that the boxer had what is known in the medical science as a paper skull. Dr. Harris also says that Cassidy was in no condition to spar or exercise violently.

War In Philippines Condemned

Boston, May 28.—The 77th annual meeting of the American Unitarian association was held yesterday. The audience was large and enthusiastic, especially over the memorial to the president and congress condemning the war in the Philippines, and asking that there may be secured to the people of the islands "self-government after the fashion of really free people."

Schooners In Bad Plight

Vineyard Haven, Mass., May 28.—Schooner Arthur Seitz, stranded on Wasque shoal, is in very bad shape. Her hold is full of water. To all appearance she is hogged on the port side about amidships. Schooner Frank A. Palmer is at anchor near the end of Hawes shoal. This is a safe place while she remains there, but sand shoals lie in every direction.

Majority Opposed to Strike

Hartford, May 28.—The 200 men who went on strike from the Underwood Typewriter Manufacturing company declared the product of the factory to be unfair last night, when the company refused to surrender to their demands. The factory employs 600 men and the large majority are not in sympathy with the strike and will continue at work.

Cars Must Be Vestibuled

Boston, May 28.—The railroad commissioners yesterday notified the Boston Elevated Railroad company that all cars must be vestibuled by Jan. 1, 1905. The company's chief contention that vestibules would increase the liability to accidents has been disproved by nearly two years' experiments.

Compromise Satisfactory to Strikers

Hartford, May 28.—Six hundred striking carpenters met last night and unanimously refused to accept the compromise terms offered by the master builders, providing for $2.75 a day.

WEAKLY CONSTRUCTED

Collapse of Sidewalk Kills One Man and Injures a Hundred Persons

New York, May 28.—Elvin L. Coolidge, circulation manager of the New York Commercial, was almost instantly killed and about 100 other people injured last evening by the breaking down of a temporary sidewalk at Fifth avenue and Eighteenth street. Some of those hurt may die. Those who fell were part of the crowd gathered to watch the parade of militia in honor of the visit of the French Rochambeau commission to this city.

Two hundred people were on the sidewalk when it gave way and they were precipitated 20 feet into an excavation for a new building and fell on piles of building material.

The authorities are busy endeavoring to discover who was to blame for the accident. Coroner Scholer says the sidewalk had not been built of material strong enough to stand such a great weight as burdened it last evening. He said the real cause of the accident was the giving way of an upright timber that extended from the bottom of the excavation up to the cross-beams on which the sidewalk rested. About 10 feet of the timber, he said, was rotten and weak.

The Beef Combine Inquiry

Albany, May 28.—Albany and Troy managers of branch offices of the various western beef packing concerns were examined relative to the workings of their offices before Referee Landon yesterday. Their evidence tended to show that an agreement had existed between the various concerns whereby retail dealers who did not pay promptly for meat delivered were listed and no firm was permitted to furnish them with meat unless they paid for it immediately upon delivery. The firms subscribed to a fund which was to be forfeited if they failed to live up to the terms of the credit agreement.

The Drowning of Bond

Plattsburg, N. Y., May 28.—At the coroner's inquiry into the death of Nelson P. Bond, the University of Vermont freshman, who was drowned here Monday night, three unimportant witnesses were sworn and the inquest adjourned until today. Jacob Ross and Harry Percival, the sophomores, who were with Bond when he jumped into the lake in his attempt to get away, were released from custody by the coroner, who holds the opinion that the drowning was an accident.

STRICTER IMMIGRATION LAWS.

Those Over Fifteen Years of Age Must Be Able to Read in Some Language.

Washington, May 28.—The house yesterday passed the Shattuc immigration bill. The feature of the day was a lively debate on an amendment prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors at immigrant stations, which was carried, 83 to 18. An amendment to prohibit the sale of intoxicants in the capitol also prevailed by a still larger majority, 108 to 19.

Among the more important changes are those increasing the head tax on aliens coming into the United States by land transportation from $1 to $1.50; adding to the excluded classes epileptics, persons who have been insane within five years, anarchists, or persons who advocate the overthrow of government by force; prostitutes and procurers (whose importation is now a felony, but whose entry is not prohibited); broadening the word "contract" in the contract labor law to include "offer, solicitation or promise;" providing for the fine of steamship companies which receive at the port of departure aliens afflicted with loathsome or contagious disease, instead of providing as now for their deportation on arrival here; extending the time within which an alien who becomes a public charge may be deported from one to two years, and providing that immigrants over 15 years of age should be able to read in some language.

A fruitless effort was made just before the adjournment of the senate yesterday to secure an agreement on a time for a vote on the Philippine bill. For several hours Mr. Patterson discussed the Philippine question. He attacked the pending bill, particularly its provisions regarding the holding of lands. He declared that it was monstrous and never should be enacted into law. He urged that the Filipinos be granted their independence and drew an eloquent word picture of the turning over to the Filipinos by the United States of the islands upon which they had established a government.

Another Statue For Washington

Washington, May 28.—The house committee on library yesterday directed a favorable report on the bill for a statue to General Count Casimir Pulaski, the Polish patriot of the Revolutionary war, to cost $50,000. It is expected that the committee will also favorably report the bill for a statue to General Stuben and that both statues will find place with those of Rochambeau and Lafayette on Lafayette Square, thus making this beautiful reservation a centre for the statues of distinguished foreigners who have drawn swords in the cause of America.

Navy's Bill In Philippines

Washington, May 28.—In response to a resolution of inquiry the secretary of the navy yesterday forwarded to the senate a statement showing the expenditures of the government on account of the naval operations in the Philippines from May 1, 1898, to date. The statement places the amount in round numbers at $20,000,000. The expenditure to November, 1899, was $6,545,634; for 1900, $5,512,000 and for 1901, $6,325,000. The remainder of the $20,000,000 is estimated for 1902, the exact figures for the present year being unavailable.

Against Gathmann Inventions

Washington, May 28.—Secretary Root sent a letter to congress yesterday transmitting without comment additional papers in regard to the recent comparative test by a joint board of army and naval officers of the Gathmann torpedo gun and the 12-inch army service rifle. In the opinion of the board "there is nothing in the Gathmann system to recommend its adoption to the public service of the United States, or to warrant further experiments."

Hobson's Retirement Favored

Washington, May 28.—The senate committee on naval affairs has agreed to report favorably the bill providing for the retirement of Naval Constructor Hobson.

Good Afternoon.

An education society has frequently been suggested for Quincy, and the School Committee in annual reports have endorsed them. It now remains to be seen whether the people will show their interest and attend the meeting which has been called for this evening. The Brookline association alluded to in the report of the School Committee of 1897 is still flourishing, doing a good work. The report said:

"The community as a whole, knows too little of the schools and their problems. People who have not spent one full school day under the roof of a school-house since their own graduation, and whose knowledge of school affairs is obtained solely from intercourse with a few pupils, often indulge in wholesale condemnation of schools, teachers and methods because individual results fail to gain their approval. The schools are supported by the public; interest, suggestions and criticism from the public are entirely proper; but, in order to be valuable, such interest, suggestions and criticism, should be intelligent, and only familiarity with the aims and methods of the schools can render them intelligent.

"Lately an effort has been made in some towns and cities, notably in Brookline, to bring the community into closer relations with the schools. "Education Societies" have been formed with the purpose of studying educational problems from a lay standpoint, and bringing to bear upon the schools the culture, the experience and the common-sense of the people for whose benefit they exist. Regular meetings are held, at which educational topics of generel interest are discussed.

"The actual work is accomplished by committees which report from time to time at the meetings. School-room decoration, school-libraries, lectures, concerts and art exhibitions for pupils, High School extension, and all matters which tend to elevate the social life of the community, are regarded as proper undertakings for the committees. It is hoped that Quincy will feel the need of such a society, which might become a powerful factor in the moulding of public opinion and the establishing of right educational standards."

Drift of Opinion.

☞ Governor Crane has signed the Sunday soda water bill and it is now law. It is not in nearly as bad shape as when it was proposed. It recognizes what has become custom. It would be better if the custom did not exist. It if evident that there is a lowering of the tone of the state when this furthur infringement upon Sunday law is found necessary so soon after the passage of the law in 1895 relaxing still further the general letting down which was made in 1887. It is to be noticed that several religious bodies have recently been talking for a stricter Sabbath, but it is not likely that their resolutions will have any practical effect. The Sunday soda bill is now law and it is likely to remain so as long as the present generation is on the stage.—Fitchburg Sentinel.

TEN INNINGS.

A Grand Rally by Adams Academy.

Quincy High Defeated by Everett.

The West Quincys to Play at Home Memorial Day.

Adams Academy won from Abington High school Tuesday at Merrymount Park in a ten inning game 13 to 12.

Once during the game the downpour of rain caused a delay at which time, Abington, in the lead by 9 to 1, wished to call the game but the shower was of short duration and the game continued. The game was full of close decisions and the umpire had to use tact as well as his own discretion in many stages of the game.

The winning run was made in the tenth inning when two men were out. Hoxie went to first on balls, stole second and was caught off second too far and wisely enough dashed toward third making a pretty slide. The third baseman caught the ball in his left hand and failed to tag the man with the ball but nervously touched the runner with his glove. While Abington resorted to a dispute, Hoxie reached home safely, thus winning the game amidst excitement as well as a shower.

Up to the ninth inning Abington had the lead by a good margin, making their score from the start. The rest, during the shower, seemed to have aided Adams, for they started out with five runs and added one or more in every successive inning.

Abington batted well but fielded poorly after the fifth inning, and the bases on balls which the visitors' pitcher gave greatly handicapped them from playing steady.

Weston fielded and ran bases well for Adams, while Bennett was the only one who could repeatedly find Wight.

High Defeated.

High school succumbed to Everett High, Tuesday, on the upper field at Merrymount Park for the second time this season, score 11 to 2.

The number of runs were about the same as in previous game. High hit Everett's pitcher well but not always safely and especially at inopportune moments. Taber for Quincy hit well but was put out on high flies twice. The only inning that High crossed the rubber was the fourth, when by clean hitting and slick base running, High made two tallies. Fallon pitched exceptionally well allowing only four safe hits to the visitors. Brown and Saunders fielded cleanly for High, while Brown took honors in batting.

DIVORCE GRANTED.

Mrs. Porter and Rev. C. H. Porter, Jr., will be Free.

At Newport, Tuesday, the court directed that a decree for divorce be drawn up in case of Lily Blunt Porter against the Rev. Charles H. Porter, Jr., recently pastor at the Channing Memorial church.

Under the laws it will not become operative for either for six months, when both are free.

The evidence as submitted against Mr. Porter was apparently damaging, but evidently was for a purpose, which is in part explained by a statement of Mr. Porter to the Herald. He says:

"This is a thoroughly disgusting business for a man of my position and of my associations to be in. The evidence which comes before the public is damaging. I have to say simply that I made up my mind long ago that I was perfectly willing to stand all the censure which the public saw fit to give in order that I might be released from an alliance, which my welfare demanded should be brought to an end. What I have said shows that I, myself, have taken the initiative in the thing in giving my wife the privilege of petitioner, at severe cost to myself. This is also shown by the fact that I did not, and never intended to, contest the case.

"All my friends know that such charges as these are entirely apart from my habitual manner of life and the case itself shows that it had nothing whatever to do with my life and conduct in Newport."

Harrison--Edgecomb.

A Dorchester wedding of local interest took place Tuesday evening when Miss Grace A. Edgecomb daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Edgecomb of Dorchester and William Carter Harrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Harrison of Braintree were married at the home of the bride's parents, Hamilton street, Meeting House Hill, Dorchester. Rev. Eugene Rodman Shippen pastor of the First church, Dorchester, performed the ceremony.

Miss Jennie Edgecomb, the bride's sister, was maid of honor, and T. P. Harrison, a brother of the groom, acted as best man. The ushers were Messrs. Richard C. Harrison, Walter T. Harrison, brothers of the groom, and John G. Sullivan of Boston and Theodore Hay of Lynn.

The ceremony was witnessed only by the members of the families and intimate friends. Following it a reception was held.

The bride wore a costume of white crepe de chine and carried lilies of the valley. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison will reside in Dorchester until fall, when they will occupy a new residence in Braintree.

Glee Club Concert.

The Wollaston Glee club closed a most successful season Tuesday evening at the Congregational church by giving a pleasing concert. In all the selections of the Glee Club, the chorus displayed quality as well as volume. What added to the attractiveness of the program was the assistance which the club received from Mrs. Jeannie Crocker Follett, soprano, Mr. Horace Edmund Farrington, violinist, Mr. Frederick Newell Shackley, organist, Mrs. A. R. Moulton accompanist. Mrs. Follett's voice was in the best of tune and her pleasing rendering delighted all.

Six selections were given by the Glee club directed by Mr. William Lester Bates.

The solo singing of Mr. Howard and Mr. Shaffer, two young members of this club must not be forgotten. Their voices were unusually clear, strong and pleasing and they sang to the best advantage.

Presentation.

At the close of business at City Hall at 5 o'clock, Tuesday, Miss Smith of the City Treasurer's office was called into the Water office and presented by the employes of that department with a sterling silver mounted toilet set of seven pieces. The presentation speech was made by Inspector William H. Warner.

The Meaning of Memorial Day

DO you know what it means, you boys and girls
Who hail from the north and the south?
Do you know what it means,
This twining of greens
Round the silent cannon's mouth,
This strewing with flowers the grass grown grave,
This decking with garlands the statues brave,

This planting of flags
All in tatters and rags,
This marching and singing,
These bells all a-ringing,
These faces grave and these faces gay,
This talk of the blue and this talk of the gray
In the north and the south, Memorial day?

Not simply a show time, boys and girls,
Is this day of falling flowers,
Not a pageant or play
Nor a holiday
Of flags and floral bowers;
It is something more than the day that starts
War memories a-throb in veteran hearts;

STREWING WITH FLOWERS THE GRASS GROWN GRAVE.

For across the years
To the hopes and the fears,
To the days of battle,
Of roar and rattle,
To the past that now seems so far away,
Do the sons of the blue and the sons of the gray
Gaze, hand clasping hand, Memorial day.

For the wreck and the wrong of it, boys and girls,
For the terror and loss as well,
Our hearts must hold
A regret unsold
As we think of those who fell,
But their blood, on whichever side they fought,
Remade the nation and progress wrought.

We forget the woe,
For we live and know
That the fighting and sighing,
The failing and dying,
Were but steps toward the future, the martyr's way,
Adown which the sons of the blue and the gray
Look, with love and with pride, Memorial day.

—Boston Transcript.

A Medley of Color In 1861.

When the Seventy-ninth New York highlanders paraded on June 1, 1861, to depart for Washington, all the officers and many of the men wore the kilts, while the rest of the men were dressed in handsome state jackets with red facings, blue fatigue caps and Cameron tartan pants. These with the kilted officers and men made their appearance quite picturesque, as may be readily imagined. But by the time the regiment marched to the battlefield "our knapsacks containing our uniform jackets and tartan pants were packed up and left at camp," says the regimental historian. "If any of our men wore other than the regulation dark blue blouses and light blue pants during the campaign, it was the exception, and they were few." The costume of Duryee's corps was that of the Second regiment of the French zouaves, composed of a blue jacket trimmed with red and blue shirt trimmed with the same, full scarlet trousers with leather leggings and scarlet cap with blue tassel, partly arranged in turban form. The famous Seventh New York marched to Washington dressed in gray. The celebrated Sixth Massachusetts was also dressed in gray when it marched through Baltimore, while there were some few corps dressed in green.

One Armed Kearny.

Any one who saw Philip Kearny recognized in him the typical soldier. As early as 1849 the young and brilliant cavalry officer had lost his left arm before one of the gates of Mexico at the battle of Churubusco. His infirmity did not prevent him from always mounting the most vigorous looking horses, which he controlled on the march with rare elegance, holding in his only hand his reins and his naked sword. A head the picture of energy, framed by the cape which almost invariably hung about his shoulders, a strongly marked nose and a piercing eye gave him the look of an eagle.

The Army Nurse.

If the brave lads, now grown gray and grim, who braved the battle's perils and lived through months of hospital experience could have their way about it, every woman who ever set foot inside the hospital doors with a view to comforting and administering to the sick would be canonized today. There isn't a saint in the list who would stand a ghost of a show beside an "army nurse."

Superintendent and Principal Re-elected—Commencement Plans.

The Trustees of the Woodward Institute held their regular monthly meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Frank Parlin, superintendent of the public schools, was elected as superintendent of the Institute for another year. The board expressed themselves as very much pleased with Mr. Parlin's work and spoke of the commendable manner in which the work of the school had been carried on under his supervision.

Frederic W. Plumer was reelected as principal of the school at an increased salary.

The election of other teachers will come at the next meeting.

The commencement exercises will be held Wednesday evening, June 18. The address on this occasion will be by Dr. Samuel M. Crothers of Cambridge.

City Hall Contract.

The contract for remodelling City Hall has been awarded to Marr & Waterman of Wollaston, who agree to complete the job Aug. 15. Their revised bid was $9,395.

The contracts for plumbing and painting have not been awarded as yet, as the Commissioner has asked the bidders for the plumbing work how much they will allow for the plumbing material now in use in City Hall, and the painters how much less their figures would be to have the ceilings tinted instead of painted.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Equal Rights for Mothers---District Option Advanced.

Senator Sprague spoke against and voted against the Boston district option bill on Tuesday, which however, received a majority of three. Mr. Sprague of Quincy wondered where his fellow-citizen, Miss Brown, was, and gave it as his opinion that she was absent because she had doubts of the wisdom of the bill, notwithstanding the fact that Henry H. Faxon had sent $25 to help the cause along since she had expressed these doubts to him.

Senator Sullivan opposed and Senator Howland favored. The vote on ordering the bill to a third reading was 17 to 14.

The Senate rejected the bill to provide for the abolition of the death penalty, by a vote of 8 to 25, after arguments in favor by Senators Howland, Bliss and both Sullivans, and in opposition by Senator Apsey. Senator Sprague was one of the eight yeas.

The Senate engrossed the bill to authorize towns to purchase electricity from street railways, also the bill as to payment of wages.

The Luce bill was under discussion at adjournment.

The House ordered the Pittsfield betterment bill to a third reading.

The House refused to reject the bill to give mothers equal rights with fathers in the care and custody of minor children, a bill which is endorsed by 34,000 women petitioners.

The MacCartney bill relative to matters pending before city councils, was rejected.

The T. A. A. A. of Wollaston and the North Quincys will play ball at Merrymount Park on the afternoon of Memorial day. Both are strong teams and a great game may be expected.

The West Quincys play the strong St. Alphonsus club of Rockland, May 30, in afternoon, at West Quincy, on the Ward Four playgrounds. True and Perfect Lists of all the Polls, and Schedules and Estimates of all the Personal Estates and Real Estate for which you are liable to pay taxes.

Persons Holding Estates in Trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the Assessors with Statements in relation to such estates.

When the estates of persons deceased have been divided, or have changed hands from other causes during the past year, the Executors, Administrators, or other persons interested, are required to give notice of such changes, and in default of such notice will be held to pay the taxes assessed.

Blank forms for "Return of Property for Taxation" can be procured of the Assessors.

The following may serve as a guide to assist in making up Schedules and Statements:

Number of Polls 20 years and upwards; Money at interest; Amount of Money on hand, including deposits in Banks, etc., other than Savings Banks incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth; Railroad, Town, City, State and other Bonds (except those of the United States); Shares and Stocks of Insurance, Manufacturing and other incorporated companies chartered or organized under the laws of any State other than Massachusetts; Goods, Wares, Merchandise and other stock in trade, within or without the State; Household Furniture, exceeding $1,000 in value; Horses, Mules, Carriages, Oxen, Cows, other neat Cattle not less than one year old, and Swine and Sheep not less than six months old; Income from Profession, Trade or Employment exceeding $2,000; Personal Property held in trust or by wife or minor children.

Attention is hereby called to Section 32 of Chapter 12 of the Revised Laws.

"Whoever, with intent to defeat or evade the provisions of law in relation to assessment or payment of taxes, delivers or discloses to an assessor or an assistant assessor a false or fraudulent list, return, or schedule of property as and for a true list of his estates, not exempted from taxation shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment in jail not exceeding one year."

MORTGAGED PROPERTY—A mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the city or town in which it lies, within the time prescribed by the notice under Sect. 41, a statement under oath of the amount secured thereon or on each separate parcel thereof, with the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagor or mortgagee. If such property is situated in two or more places, or if a recorded mortgage includes two or more estates or parts of an estate as security for one sum, such statement shall include an estimate of the interest of the mortgagee in each estate or part of an estate. The assessors shall, from such statement or otherwise, ascertain the proportionate interests of the mortgagor or mortgagee respectively in said estates, and shall assess the same accordingly. If, in any year, such statement is not brought in, the tax for that year on such real estate shall not be invalid merely for the reason that the interest of the mortgagee therein has not been assessed to him.—Sect. 45, Chap. 12, Revised Laws.

When a statement in conformity to the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under Sects. 16, 17 and 18 of Chap. 12 of the Revised Laws. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, no statement or return is required from either the mortgagee or mortgagor unless requested by the assessors in writing.

The Assessors will be in session at their office every Thursday morning from 9 to 11 o'clock. Blanks will be furnished to all applicants.

ALL FRIENDS OF HANNA

In Control of Convention of Ohio Republicans

THE PHILIPPINE PROGRAM

Is Strongly Endorsed and Atrocities Condemned—Concessions to Cuba Must Be Carefully Guarded—Merchant Marine Left to Congress

Cleveland, May 28.—The feature of the Republican state convention here yesterday was the unanimity of sentiment in favor of Senator Hanna. He has been the centre of interest since his arrival from Washington last Sunday. The conferences of leaders with him continued yesterday, but when it came to the meeting of the delegates in the afternoon by congressional districts, the sentiment for him was demonstrated in an unprecedented degree. His friends had claimed 18 out of the 21 districts and more than realized their expectations.

The drift of sentiment in all the preliminary meetings was most enthusiastic for the senator and in the convention the delegates would not rest till he got up and showed himself, although he insisted that he would not discuss the issues in advance of the keynote speech of General Grosvenor, who is to be the permanent presiding officer.

With the platform completed and only three nominations for minor places to be made, the convention may conclude early, though General Grosvenor will speak at length and the time of Senator Hanna's speech is something of which he is himself unable to give any information. There is some talk about calling out the candidates for governor for trial heats on the platform if the work of the convention concludes early in the day.

The platform declares that our flag is in the Philippines to stay; that the Republican party was "opposed to disruption in 1864 and is opposed to disruption now." The Democratic national platform of 1864 declaring the war a failure is quoted side by side with Democratic predictions today regarding the Philippine war, and the resolutions of the Indiana Grand Army encampment to the effect that the criticisms of the army in the Philippines now remind them of the criticisms of the copperheads during the Civil war are repeated. The platform condemns bitterly any atrocities that may have been committed in the Philippines, but will allude to "the barbarous and inhuman foe" and asserts that the American army in the east is doing the same work that it has for a generation been doing on the great plains of the west.

The Cuban reciprocity program may provoke some controversy. It congratulates the country upon the redemption of its pledge concerning the independence of Cuba, and says that while we desire to open our markets to her in the reciprocal trade, we recognize that our first duty is to our own people, and that any concessions to Cuba must be so guarded as not to injure any class of American producers, because reciprocity in its true place is the handmaid of protection and should not be the instrument of bringing rival industries forward. No specific plans for fostering our merchant marine is set forth; its decline is noted and the industrial and patriotic need of its restoration emphasized with the choice of means left to the discretion of congress, which is invited to give close attention to the great problem.

Denby With Republicans

Indianapolis, May 28.—When the Democratic state central committee met here last week it was decided to elect as many delegates as possible to the state convention from the gold Democrats and from former Democrats who have affiliated of late with the Republicans. Accordingly, the Democrats of Evansville selected Colonel Denby, former minister to China, as a delegate without consulting him. When Colonel Denby was notified he wrote to the chairman of the convention that he could not serve, as he will affiliate himself permanently with the Republican party.

Wants to Be Governor

Rockland, Me., May 28.—G. L. Crockett, who has been for some time prominently identified with the party in this section of the state, states that he will be a candidate before the Democratic convention for the gubernatorial nomination.

Spanish Cabinet Out

Madrid, May 28.—At the meeting of the cabinet yesterday Senor Canalejas, the minister of agriculture, insisted upon the necessity of convening the chamber immediately, to discuss the religious question. The other ministers opposed this proposal and Canalejas resigned. After this action the remainder of the cabinet placed their portfolios at the disposal of Premier Sagasta, to enable him to solve the difficulty.

Fisherman and Cat Safe

Highland Light, Mass., May 28.—John J. Ankormiller, a German fisherman of New Bedford, landed in his dory at Peaked Hill life saving station last night. While fishing off Nantucket last Saturday he got lost in the fog, was picked up by a vessel and landed at Cape Ann. From there he started to row back to New Bedford, following the shore. He took a cat as a ship mate.

Carnations and Socialists

Berlin, May 28.—Emperor William will go to Aix-le-Chapelle, Rhenish Prussia, June 19. A member of the reception committee having heard that his majesty's favorite flower was the carnation, suggested that everybody should wear a carnation in his buttonhole when the emperor visited the town. The chief of police of Aix-la-Chapelle, because red is the color of the Socialists, issued a decree against carrying out the idea.

Want Argument In Quebec

Montreal, May 28.—The Gaynor-Greene case was called again yesterday before Judge Lafontaine, when the lawyers for the defense gave notice that a writ of certiorari would issue from Quebec making a demand on Lafontaine to produce all the papers in connection with the extradition proceedings and that the case would then be argued on its merits in Quebec. An adjournment was then taken until tomorrow.

French Visitors at Gotham

New York, May 28.—Count de Rochambeau and the others of the party of French delegates, after passing most of yesterday in journeying to West Point and reviewing the cadets there, arrived in this city last evening. At the city hall the mission was welcomed to the city by Mayor Low, who made an address. The ceremony concluded with an address by Ambassador Cambon. The visitors were then driven to the reviewing stand to witness the parade of the New York National Guard and the American and French sailors from the warships.

Death of Consul Williams

Monterey, Mex., May 28.—Arthur Williams, United States consul at Saltillo, after a short illness, died of meningitis yesterday. Mr. Williams had been in the consular service only a short time. He was from Manchester, N. H.

A Belated Snowstorm

Cumberland, Md., May 28.—Snow to the depth of nearly an inch fell yesterday at many points in the Alleghenies. Garden truck and other crops were damaged to a considerable extent.

The rose is the emblem of secrecy in Greece, and accordingly this flower used to be hung over the table where guests were entertained in token that nothing heard there was to be repeated.

The solano is a hot southeast wind, loaded with fine dust, which blows across Spain. It produces great uneasiness throughout the country. The Spanish have a proverb which says, "Ask no favors during solano."

BODY AND BRAINS.

Whether the brains of men are being developed at the expense of the bodies is not a question that we can settle, but there is no question that there are many individual cases where the body is weaker than it ought to be.

To produce big healthy brains and big healthy bodies take Scott's Emulsion. Childhood is the time to commence.

The effort of Scott's Emulsion is to make nature do her best with the materials on hand. It checks all those little weaknesses and faults of nourishment which result in imperfect development.

Nothing more strengthening for weak children.

CUBA FEELS GRATEFUL

For Action of United States In Her Behalf

IMPELLED BY PURE MOTIVE

In Securing the Establishment of the Republic—Pending Crisis In Sugar Problem—President Palma's Recommendations For Prosperity

Havana, May 28.—President Palma's message was delivered to the Cuban senate today. It opens by giving thanks to the Almighty for His assistance in carrying out the work of obtaining Cuban independence, and asks divine aid in the establishment of a firm and stable government. "Never did a people fight with more perseverance," says President Palma in the message, "and sacrifice more for liberty than have the Cubans. No people, therefore, are more entitled to see their just efforts crowned with success.

"Together with our own heroism is the attitude of the great people who were impelled by their own love of liberty to put themselves on our side in our tenacious fight for the independence of the country. Their motive was one of generous sentiment, pure and disinterested in origin. Impelled by this sentiment, the power of the republic of the north recognizes the republic of Cuba. The promise has been carried out.

"In this moment, when we feel our right as an independent nation, it is impossible to suppress our gratitude to the United States. To recognize this debt of gratitude to the great nation is an act which exalts us and which makes us worthy of the consideration and respect of the other nations of the world.

"It is necessary now to dictate all the laws laid down in the constitution. We are capable of fulfilling all the obligations and compromises which have been contracted, and we should prepare the budget with the greatest care."

Continuing, President Palma recommends the encouragement of the agricultural industries of the island, the raising of cattle, the establishment of agricultural stations, to improve the culture of sugarcane and tobacco, and the introduction of varied agricultural industries.

"While the question of reciprocity is still pending," the message goes on, "it is impossible to state now what measures should be adopted to meet the pending crisis. This crisis is due to the ruinous price of sugar caused by excessive production of beet sugar in Europe. An immediate remedy would be the reduction of the American tariff on sugar.

"If security of life and property in Cuba is to be firmly guaranteed the rural guard must be organized and increased, as the present tranquility in the island is due to the people themselves and their desire to maintain the prestige of their country.

"We recognize that during the American intervention the sanitary conditions of the island were greatly improved, but it is necessary to continue this work and make these improved conditions permanent.

"The office of judge in Cuba should be permanent, and to constitute this principle of immovability should be one of the first duties of congress."

"It is very satisfactory to us," says the president, "that the republic of Cuba has been officially recognized by the United States, Great Britain, France, Mexico, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Santo Domingo, Ecuador and Paraguay, and we hope that other countries will also recognize our republic. We must take especial care that the relations between Cuba and the United States be most friendly, in order that there be no difficulty in arranging the political and commercial questions which effect both countries.

"It is also of extreme importance that there should exist uninterrupted concord between all the people of Cuba, and that they should resolve to preserve the Cuban nationality."

great credit for the educational system it established, but that there is a need for still more schools, as the future of the republic depends upon education. It will be the duty of the government to encourage the construction of railroads in the island and to protect the capital already invested in railroad enterprises.

President Palma says he realizes the obligation which the government contracted with the Cuban army, and that if means are not now taken to make good this obligation it is because of the bad economic situation of the country. President Palma says he does not yet know how the ordinary expenses of administration are to be met.

President Palma declares it is the purpose of the government to devote its attention to education. He says the government of intervention deserves

Herbert G. Squiers, the first minister of the United States to Cuba, who arrived here Monday, was formally received by the Cuban government as minister from the United States yesterday. The ceremony, which was held at the palace, partook of all the official red tape that the young republic could muster. Mr. Squiers will be dean of the diplomatic corps in Havana.

Phenomenon New In Volcanic History In the Shape of Lightning-Like Bolts, Which Partly Explains Catastrophe In Martinique

Fort de France, May 29.—A tremendous explosion of very black smoke from Mt. Pelee at 8:45 yesterday morning accentuated the fears entertained for the safety of George Kennan, the American author, who, with a land party, has been examining the northern part of the island. Two hours later Fernand Clero, a wealthy land proprietor of Martinique, arrived here and announced that Mr. Kennan and his party were safe on a plantation at the north end of the island.

Professor Robert T. Hill, United States government geologist and head of the expedition sent to Martinique by the National Geographical society, who left Fort de France Monday on horseback for the volcano, returned here yesterday. He was completely worn out by his trip.

Speaking personally of his expedition to Mt. Pelee, Professor Hill said: "My attempt to examine the crater of Mt. Pelee has been futile. I succeeded, however, in getting very close to Morne Rouge. At 7 o'clock Monday night I witnessed, from a point near the ruins of St. Pierre, a frightful explosion from Mt. Pelee, and noted the accompanying phenomena. While these eruptions continue no sane man should attempt an ascent to the crater of the volcano. Following the salvos of detonations from the mountain, gigantic mushroom-shaped columns of smoke and cinders ascended into the clear, starlit sky, and then spread, in a vast black sheet, to the south and directly over my head. Through this sheet, which extended a distance of 10 miles from the crater, vivid and awful lightning-like bolts flashed with alarming frequency. They followed distinct paths of ignition, but were different from lightning in that the bolts were horizontal and not perpendicular. This is indisputable evidence of the explosive oxidation of the gases after they left the crater. This is a most important observation and explains, in part, the awful catastrophe. This phenomenon is entirely new in volcanic history.

"I took many photographs, but do not hesitate to acknowledge that I was terrified. But I was not the only person frightened. Two newspaper correspondents who were close to Morne Rouge some hours before me became scared, ran three miles down the mountain and hastened into Fort de France.

"The people on the north end of the island are terrified and are fleeing with their cattle and effects. I spent Tuesday night in a house at Deux Cheux with a crowd of 200 frightened refugees.

"Nearly all the phenomena of these volcanic outbreaks are new to science and many of them have not yet been explained. The volcano is still intensely active and I cannot make any predictions as to what it will do."

Message Prematurely Published

Havana, May 29.—President Palma's message to congress was read yesterday. Considerable scandal has arisen from the fact that this message was published by a local paper Tuesday night, before it had been delivered to congress. Detectives have been put to work in an endeavor to learn how the message reached the newspaper that published it. A typewriter who was employed by the president has been taken into custody and the investigation will be continued.

Cheated of Inheritance by Death

Queenstown, May 29.—Steamer Rhynland, from Philadelphia, which arrived here yesterday, reports that Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bellew of Philadelphia died on board the steamer on the way over. Mr. Bellew died from syncope May 20, and Mrs. Bellew died from the same cause May 24. A young son of Mr. and Mrs. Bellew was taken in charge by the captain of the Rhynland. Mr. and Mrs. Bellew were coming to Ireland to receive an inheritance of considerable property.

Gave United States No Assurances

London, May 29.—In the house of commons yesterday the parliamentary secretary of the foreign office, Lord Cranborne, informed a questioner that he could find no trace of any assurances, verbal or written, having been given by Great Britain to the United States previous to the war between the latter country and Spain, regarding the conduct or policy of Great Britain with reference to the war.

CONFLICTING VIEWS

As to a Speedy Termination of the War In South Africa

London, May 29.—The Daily Chronicle this morning declares that the negotiations, which will be practically concluded in the course of the present week, will witness the termination of the war in South Africa. The paper says it understands that the government has declined to grant the rebels unqualified amnesty or to fix a date for the establishment of self-government, and that English will probably be the official language in the two colonies.

Against this idea of a speedy announcement of peace is the decision reached in parliament yesterday to debate the education bill next Monday and to postpone further the debate on the budget, which seems to show that affairs in South Africa may require a greater period of time for settlement.

It is now regarded as certain that the Chamberlain party will be victorious, and that the government has decided to retain the tax on grain.

Mr. Chamberlain is again indisposed and some people believe his indisposition to be diplomatic.

In Congress

Washington, May 29.—An agreement was reached in the senate yesterday by which a final vote on the pending Philippine government bill and all amendments will be taken next Tuesday at 4 p. m. Mr. Burrows explained the bill at length yesterday and urged its enactment, maintaining that it would advance the interests and promote the prosperity of the islands.

The house spent the day debating the bill to increase the subsidiary coinage by coining the silver bullion in the treasury and to recoin standard silver dollars as the public necessities may require. The limit of subsidiary coinage is now $100,000,000.

Wu's Nerves Received a Shock

Milledgeville, Ga., May 29.—Minister Wu Ting Fang delivered the commencement oration to the graduating class of the Georgia Military college yesterday. While visiting the state insane asium in the afternoon an inmate suddenly caught Minister Wu by the queue, which was hanging down his back. It was jerked and pulled with great force, causing great agony. Wu struggled wildly and when he was freed from the crazy man's grasp he fled from the building and got into his carriage, demanding that he be driven back to the city at once. He was overtaken by friends and his nerves were quieted.

Buencanino at Washington

Washington, May 29.—Filipe Buencanino, one of the founders of the Federal party in the Philippines, arrived in this city yesterday from San Francisco and had a short conference with Secretary Root at the war department. He will be presented to President Roosevelt today and it is expected that later he will appear before the senate Philippine commission. Buencanino held the office of secretary of state when he was captured in company with Aguinaldo's mother immediately after the battle of Tarlac.

Emperor Will Receive Potts

Berlin, May 29.—Emperor William will probably have Lieutenant Commander Potts presented to him next Saturday. Potts is to succeed on Oct. 1, Commander Beehler as naval attache to the American embassy here. It was recently reported that the emperor had refused to receive Potts.

Duties In Cuba Ended

Washington, May 29.—General Wood arrived here yesterday, accompanied by members of his staff. He made an oral report to Secretary Root of the complete discharge of his stewardship in Cuba. He will have a full conference with the president and Secretary Root regarding Cuban affairs later.

Crushed to Death by Elephant

New York, May 29.—"Tops," a female elephant of the Forepaugh & Sells circus, killed a man yesterday at the show ground of the circus in Brooklyn. The victim was Joseph Blunt of Fort Wayne, Ind. The great beast seized the man with her trunk, and, after hurling him violently to the ground, knelt on him and crushed him to death.

Proposition Pigeonholed

Washington, May 29.—The proposition to lease the public lands for grazing purposes, which has been investigated at some length by the house committee on public lands, yesterday went over indefinitely and will not be considered again at this session of congress.

Taft at the Vatican

Rome, May 29.—Governor Taft arrived here yesterday and was received by Bishop O'Gorman of Sioux Falls, S. D., who has been in Rome for some time past. The Taft commission will meet Cardinal Rampolla, the papal secretary of state, next Saturday.

THREATENING ATTITUDE

Assumed by Railroad Strikers Whose Wages Are In Arrears

North Vassalboro, Me., May 29.—The townspeople have joined forces with strikers who have tied up work on the Wiscasset, Waterville and Farmington narrow guage railroad, and are making a demand on the officials that the men be paid for their work. It was expected the money would be forthcoming yesterday, but the management failed to put in an appearance. The villagers are anxious for money due them for boarding the men and furnishing supplies.

The strength of the obstruction of the road was doubled last night, a pile of ties, timber and steel rails being surmounted by the American flag and lanterns shaded with red, while a dagger was fastened to the pole bearing the flag.

The strikers are guarding several miles of the road to prevent the movement of rolling stock. The state railroad commissioners were to inspect the road yesterday, but they did not make their appearance. The strikers declare that the commissioners will not be allowed to pass over the line. Many of the strikers stated that their limit of patience will expire today, and if their pay is not forthcoming they will "blow up and burn." The villagers are fearful that this will occur. Newspaper men are unable to get any statement from the railroad officials.

Bigamist Sent to Prison

Boston, May 29.—George A. Sheldon was sentenced to the house of correction for three years for bigamy by Judge Bond yesterday. Sheldon had been living at Cliftondale with a woman to whom he was to have been married this month, and it was the arrest of the couple for this offense that brought to light two former marriages and the fact that Sheldon had collected $700 from the estate of the second woman he had married and who died last year. The first wife lives in Lynn.

Robbers Tortured Their Victim

Ansonia, Conn., May 29.—In an attempt to force him to confess where he had secreted his money, robbers beat William Baldwin, a wealthy farmer of Orange, about the head, burned his feet with a torch, and then threw him on a blazing bed while they escaped. He succeeded in extinguishing the flames and then fell unconscious, in which condition he was found by neighbors. The robbers secured $18 which they found in the house.

Boston Artist Locked Up

Boston, May 29.—Henry M. Cowles, 55 years old, an artist, was arrested yesterday on a warrant charging him with concealing mortgaged property. It is alleged that about three months ago Cowles mortgaged some valuable paintings to Charles P. George and that since that time George has made an effort to find the paintings and has failed. Failing to procure bail, Cowles was committed to the city prison.

Boy Highwaymen Caught

Malden, Mass., May 29.—Percy W. Brown and Henry P. Eaton, aged 13 and 11 years respectively, are locked up on the charge of highway robbery in taking a pocket book, containing $8 and a railroad ticket, from Miss Annie C. Parker, who was walking in a dark section last night. Miss Parker has identified the boys as the parties who robbed her.

Picketing Won't Be Legalized

Boston, May 29.—Speaker Myers cast his vote in the house yesterday and killed the bill of Mr. Carey, the Socialist member from Haverhill, so ardently desired by organized labor, to legalize picketing during strikes and lockouts. The bill had been reported favorably by the committee on labor.

Poor Chance of Saving Seitz

Vineyard Haven, Mass., May 29.—Tug Storm King went to schooner Arthur Seitz yesterday, but could do nothing on account of the westerly gale and the heavy sea. The chances of saving this vessel are very unfavorable. Schooner Frank A. Palmer remains at anchor near Hawes shoal.

Portland Hotel Raided

Portland, Me., May 29.—Deputy Plummer, who had not taken part in a liquor raid since his arrest, rejoined the seizing force yesterday and raided the Dewey House. They found an ingenious hiding place in the cellar—a buried tool chest containing about 50 half-pints of whiskey.

Weather Out of Joint

Saranac Lake, N. Y., May 29.—A heavy snowstorm raged here yesterday. The thermometer registered 34 degrees.

GIRL IN DEDHAM JAIL.

Arrested at Sharon While Masquerading as a Boy---Strange Story.

Boston, May 29.—A remarkable 17-year-old girl, arrested upon a simple charge of vagrancy, because she was dressed in boy's clothing, is locked up in Dedham jail.

She tells a weird story of wholesale kidnapping, says she was one of its victims and talks of having been taught to beg on the streets, while others of her companions, she says, were taught and forced to steal.

The girl gives her name of Ernestine Hamilton. She was born either in Paris or New York, she says. But she remembers, she declares, that she first came to the age of understanding somewhere on Cape Cod.

Ernestine was arrested Tuesday night in Sharon. She was then in the garb of a boy. Three nights ago the safe in the Sharon postoffice was blown up and robbed. A tall man and a boy had been hanging around the place, according to reports made to the police. The Sharon police were on the lookout for persons who might be regarded as "unusual" in that village. Constable Curtis saw a figure loitering near a building under construction. An arrest occurred, and the prisoner proved to be the girl in boy's clothing.

At first "she" gave the name of "Jimmy O'Hare," but afterwards confessed to that of Ernestine Hamilton. There was every denial from her of connection with robberies.

She is a pretty girl, dark-complexioned, with round, browned countenance, a pair of luminous and flashing black eyes, rather abrupt nose, a merry rosy little mouth, and a thick head of short cut, black, curly hair.

She is short and plump of figure, well rounded and athletic looking. When arrested she was attired in rather well worn blue knickerbockers, a black and white striped outing shirt, black stockings and low cut dusty patent leather shoes. She wore a small red bicycle cap, perched jauntily upon the back of her curly head.

At the police station Miss Hamilton told of being kidnapped and taught to beg while other children controlled by her captors were sent out to steal.

"I lived with a Mrs. Thomas on Montgomery street, Brooklyn, until four years ago," she said in the course of her statements yesterday. "She is dead. I promised under a most solemn oath that I would never tell anything.

"Mrs. Thomas was the leader of a band that made a practice of kidnapping children. She then taught them to beg and steal. I was taught to beg. Before Mrs. Thomas died she told me her son had stolen me out of revenge when I was a mere baby. She said I was stolen somewhere down on Cape Cod.

"I have been hunting for her son and I want to find out who my parents or relatives in Cape Cod are."

Inspector Wolf of Boston and Officer Curtis of Sharon are working on the case.

Morgan's Gift to Cathedral

London, May 29.—The system of electric lights in St. Paul's cathedral, which was donated by J. P. Morgan, was formally inaugurated last night. The effect of the new lights was magnificent. It is has been decided, however, that an additional installation of electric lights, to cost from $15,000 to $20,000, is desirable. Mr. Morgan has offered also to supply this second installation.

Absconding Postmaster Arrested

Trenton, May 29.—Jonathan Osborn, who has been a fugitive from justice for the past two years, was brought to Trenton yesterday from Richmond and locked up. Osborn, while postmaster of West Summit, became short in his accounts to the extent of $1000. He absconded and has been in South America and other places.

Smallpox at Porto Rico

Washington, May 29.—Owing to the appearance of smallpox in Porto Rico, the government of the Danish West Indies has declared a quarantine of 15 days against ships arriving from the ports of Porto Rico, Viequez and Culebra.

Miss Condon Held In $1000

Brockton, Mass., May 29.—Bertha E. Condon was arraigned in court yesterday on a charge of assault with intent to kill Dr. M. W. Quinn in this city on the night of May 14. Examination was waived and she was held for the grand jury in bonds of $1000.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

WORK FOR ALL.

In the Proposed Quincy Education Association.

Co-operation Is the Key Note.

Organization Favored—Committee to Formulate Plans.

Over one hundred ladies and gentlemen prominent in Quincy affairs accepted the invitation of the Home Science Association and the Quincy Teachers' Association to attend a meeting Wednesday evening in the Unitarian chapel in the interests of an Educational Association.

Rev. E. C. Butler presided and the speakers were Miss Johnson, C. E. Finch, Jr., Dr. Gordon, Mrs. George secretary of the Brookline Education Society, Supt. Parlin of the Quincy schools, William B. Rice, Rev. George A. Strong, Rev. E. N. Hardy and John O. Hall, Jr.

Miss Johnson said her work with the Home Science Association emphasized the needs of an educational society in Quincy, to carry along practical work. It would be a general stimulus to present workers. An educational society means first cooperation. Perhaps in Quincy there are no crying evils, but all probably desire certain improvements which would make the city more attractive.

Mr. Finch, who is principal of the Massachusets Fields and Wollaston schools, said great credit was due to the Home Science Association for what it had done in kindergarten and sloyd schools. It has been said that vacation schools give large returns for the effort given. There is need in Quincy of a general association to bring teachers and parents together, that parents may have a more intelligent understanding of the schools and that teachers may know of the surroundings of the child. He regretted that Quincy was such a scattered city. As had been said cooperation was desirable. He deplored the tendency to hand over authority to some representative. There was work enough for all to do in an educational society, and it would a good thing if it led to a united intelligent public interest.

Dr. Gordon said in part: I think every city and town should have a popular organization made up from all the people whose object should be the general development of the industrial, educational, hygienic and esthetic conditions of the place. It should have no political, religious or social bias, but should have a lively interest in the political, moral and social state. It should be essentially of the people, for the people affording them a ready channel through which their wishes and desires might be brought to the attention of the legislature and administrative bodies. It should be entirely free from personal interest, advancement or aggrandisment, but should promote the general interest of all the people.

It should be broad and comprehensive in its scope and keep in touch with all that concerns the community in its relations with the legislature, the administration, the police, the educational conditions, the board of health, the parks, and play ground, and public baths, the management of public franchises such as steam cars, electric cars, electric light, gas, water and sewerage and see that a proper return is made to the people for the privileges enjoyed. It should study to improve the industrial conditions of the place and keep it in the fore front as a place of business and occupation.

It should study the sanitary and hygienic conditions of the place and by cooperation with the boards of health and sanitary agents promote the health and welfare of the people. It should labor to make the place beautiful and attractive by inducing people to plant trees on the sides of the streets and highways. It should endeavor to have the most suitable trees selected and planted at proper distances, and see that they are properly protected against vandalism. It should give advice about the placing and painting of houses and the laying out and decorating of lawns and terraces, and see to it that the natural beauties of the locality are not unnecessarily marred and disfigured.

In general it should promote all the beneficient interests of the place and make it a happier, healthier more beautiful and more desirable place to live in.

I think the time is ripe for such an organization in Quincy and I trust the movement to be considered tonight will result in the formation of one adapted to its needs. We all feel the need of it. The desires and instincts of the people only await the earnest effort and guiding hand of a determined leader. There is a vast amount of latent energy which only needs to be guided in proper channels to accomplish grand results.

Mrs. George said the Brookline association was organized about eight years ago. She acknowledged at the outset that the association had been unable to carry out some of its earlier ideas. But the people should note the increasing proportions of our people who are living in cities, and also the large increase by immigration. A multitude of agencies were acting against the public schools upon which our country depends. The home and school often fail and here the Educational association should step in for better citizenship. It was said that thirty per cent. of taxes go to corrective institutions, therefore it would seem cheaper to form character rather than reform. An Educational society can do a great deal of work for a very little money. There is generally an executive committee and various subcommittees. It can undertake mothers' meetings, cultivation of readings, decoration of schools, more general use of libraries including children's room, and concerts, physical training (including apparatus, gymnasium, bath house, playgrounds, boy's clubs, medical inspection, etc.) school garden, etc. An association will awaken public interest and public intelligence in public schools.

Supt. Parlin though the chief function of an Education Association would be to inform the people and get them interested in education of children. The School Committee would welcome such a help. We have to protect children from many hobbies but we might accomplish much more o the people would let us,

Now they don't know the reason for this or that. An Education society would help mold public opinion. He favored a society if we can develop as has Brookline, but it will need a level head without a hobby. Different sections of a city, he found, had different wants. He regretted all the schools did not have assembly halls.

W. B. Rice thought something to bring about improvement in Quincy was desirable. He queried how far it was right to use public money for education beyond that necessary for a business life. He found school graduates had a distaste for manual labor. There would be more money for kindergartens and vacation schools if there was a saving as indicated.

Rev. Mr. Strong had noticed the absence of the spirit of cooperation. The city was the great problem of the people today, and he welcomed an association of this kind, and pledged his best efforts.

Rev. Mr. Hardy would favor an association along the lines proposed by Dr. Gordon. He queried if there was not too much education in some directions, and was thankful he would not be a child for the next ten years. He agreed with some, that children would know more if "turned out to grass" as the saying is. An association however which would develop esprit de corp should be welcomed.

J. O. Hall, Jr., would favor if it was to be an association to work for the best interests of the city as a whole, but not if a society to interfere with school and people. Anything which will bring teachers and parents together will be welcomed by education. Teachers are interested in their pupils, and usually ready to cooperate.

W. B. Rice asked that the sense of the meeting relative to the organization of an Education Association be taken.

The vote was unanimous in favor.

Upon motion of ex-Mayor Hall, the chairman was instructed to appoint a committee of five to formulate the objects of the association.

George French, aged 79 years, and residing in Hingham, had quite a bad fall in City Square, Wednesday afternoon. Mr. French, who is quite feeble, had just left an electric car, when he stumbled and fell, striking the curbing. He received a bad cut on the forehead. The police ambulance was summoned and he was taken to Dr. Welch's office where his injuries were dressed. He was then put on board a car and sent home.

Hancock Street Cemetery.

A stranger entering this old Quincy cemetery at the gateway next to City Hall, and going straight across, will find not far from the corner near the railroad, a plain stone with this inscription:

"Sacred to the memory of John R. Grieve, aged 22, and Hannah Banks, his wife, aged 15, who died Nov. 1850, both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writing of A. J. Davis."

These young people come here dressed as two young men the preceding fall and took rooms on Elm street. They went out one day after they had been here several weeks and did not return.

In the spring two bodies partially covered with leaves were found in the woods; one of which proved to be a female. Thus a murder and suicide were the result to the deluded young people from false education.

Not far from the southern portion of the old cemetery is a nice stone recently put up to the memory of Abigail Mann. This young girl was born one hundred years ago, and died at the tender age of 22; beloved by a neighbor, who went to his final rest not long ago.

After the death of his wife and not long before his death he raised this monument to a life long affection, and put on for an inscription these words:

"Neglected but not forgotten."

In these "strenuous" days it is gladdening to find that loyalty and tenderness have not wholly perished.

High heels originated in Persia, here they were worn to raise the feet from the burning sands.

MILTON.

Sunday morning at the Mission of Our Saviour church Mr. Curtis of the Theological school will preach. Mr. Curtis has been elected lay reader in place of Mr. Williams who goes to the State of Washington to do mission work.

Memorial exercises were held in the public schools Thursday.

Ford & Barron are painting several houses at Houghs Neck.

Miss Katharine Woodbury has been elected supervisor of drawing in the public schools of Holbrook, Randolph and Avon.

Huntington Wolcott Post, G. A. R., hold memorial services at the Town Hall Friday evening.

The Thursday Evening club held a debate this week on the question, "Should immigration be restricted." Rev. Theodore I. Reese and C. E. Rich and Christopher Graham spoke for the affirmative, and John Graham George Ellis and Mr. Lanstrom for the negative. The audience agreed that the affirmative had the best of the argument.

Milton public spirited citizens have contributed enough to purchase the site for the new public library. The site selected is on the southwest corner of Canon avenue and Reedsdale road.

Herbert Boutin won the match bowling game with Kean of Lynn, this week by nineteen points. The game was for a purse of $100.

George Sias has exchanged his house on Squantum street for a farm at Ipswich.

Nathan T. Kidder gave a talk on trees at the the High school on Monday.

Frank Kemp is confined to his home with rheumatism.

The sale of the Unquity club property netted $300.

Old maids are appreciated at East Milton judging by the large audience which attended the "Old Maids' Convention given at Ellsworth hall, Wednesday evening, by the Christian Endeavor of the Congregational church. Mr. John Harris Gutterson at the piano played several selections and also read a laughable sketch telling of the various species of old maids. When the old maids assembled on the stage they presented a gay and laughable picture in their queer gowns and makeup. The parts were very well carried out and the local hits on the unmarried men of the town caused much merriment as did Prof. Pinkerton and his machine which tarned the oldest maid into most charming young maids. A good sum was realized from the entertainment.

On the Olympia.

The Ledger has recived a letter from Alex C. McLellan and Arthur Seaman on board the United States flagship Olympia. It was dated at Annapolis, Md., May 23. They say the North Atlantic squadron was anchored at St. Pierre about a week before the disaster the flagship right at the base of Mt. Pelee, and that then they could on a clear day see steam and smoke jetting out of the mountain. The Olympia visited St. Pierre, Fort de France, St. Thomas, San Juan, St. Vincent and other ports.

Wednesday night it was decided to lease the unoccupied rooms in the upper part of the Old Court Room building while City Hall is being remodelled, and all of the city officials will have their offices there.

Work moving the offices will be commenced immediately and in a few days the first floor of City Hall will be deserted.

ONE SIDED GAME.

Adams Not in It with the Boston College Freshmen.

Adams Academy went down to Boston College Freshmen, Wednesday, in a thoroughly one sided game 16 to 2.

The contest was uninteresting, largely, on account of the cold damp wind which penetrated the players as well as spectators. Doble started in the box for Adams but was handicapped by a sore arm and gave way to Hoxie the early part of the game. Both the Adams pitchers were found easily but Adams could only hit Scammell safely five times while the visitors made fifteen hits.

Moyle and Weston as usual played a strong game, while for the visitors O'Brien, Scammell and Cahill hit strongly, the former fielding sharply.

The score by innings:

Innings,	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Boston,	3	0	1	0	3	4	2	1	2	—16
Adams,	0	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	0	— 2

The runs by Adams were made by Weston and Moyle, and the base hits by Weston, Moyle, Thomas, O'Brien and Reardon. Adams made 14 errors to 4 for the visitors, O'Brien at first and Davenport at right were the only ones to accept all chances, the former putting out 11.

Fore River Opening Game.

The opening game of the new Fore River team will be played at Quincy Point tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. The make-up will be: — Coughlin, Catcher; Aldrich, pitcher; Dorley, 1st base; Faircloth, 2d base; Roper, short stop; Henry, 3d base; Taylor, left field, Dunnican, center field; Donaber, right field. Their opponents will be the Waverleys.

South Sea Superstitions.

Nearly all tribes of south sea islanders believe that the sky is a great blue basin inverted over the world. To them the outside of the basin is all fire. The sun, moon and stars they take to be holes cut in the basin through which a peep at the great outside fire may be had.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Quincy Representatives Against the Picketing Bill.

Mr. Carey's bill to legalize the walking delegate and strikers' pickets was defeated in the House Wednesday on a tie vote, Speaker Myers voting in the negative. Representatives Badger and McKnight both voted no.

Representative Badger and others spoke against the resolve to compensate the town of Clinton for damages occasioned by construction of Metropolitan water system, but the House refused to reject it by a vote of 62 to 79.

In the Senate Mr. Sprague endeavored to substitute a bill to prevent the manufacture and sale of water gas for an adverse report of the Committee on Public Lighting on a petition of E. F. DeNormandie and others but it was rejected and the adverse report accepted.

The preferred stock bill was passed to be engrossed.

Senator Sprague's efforts were unsuccessful to strike out from the coal weighing bill, the provision that weighers need not be residents of the city or town.

A bill to determine the position on list of candidates for committees and delegates to conventions on caucus ballots by lot was refused a third reading.

No vote was reached on the Luce bill.

Memorial Day.

Of all the holidays in our national calendar there is none that is as sacred to the general public as is the thirtieth of May, now close at hand. Memorial day is just what its name signifies, an occasion upon which the memories of those who have gone before supersede the thoughts of the living present. Formerly Decoration day was an occasion that was sacred to the Grand Army of the Republic for then it was that the graves of the nation's dead soldiers and sailors were decorated with flowers; but as the years have rolled by the day has assumed a greater and broader significance. Now Memorial day is the one day in the year when young and old of all classes and creeds, with one accord, unite in decorating the graves of their dead relatives and friends. It ia not a day for sorrowing but is rather an occasion for meditation, for rolling back the leaves of the book of life and contemplating the lessons of the past.

It offers a respite from labor to all that we may do honor to the defenders of our flag who have responded to their Master's call.

As the day approaches let us rejoice that we are spared to deck with flowers the multiplying graves of those who defended the nation in the time of peril; but let us also reflect that their comrades in brocken column and with enfeebled step are not to be with us for long and let us also do them honor while there is yet time. They still carry the flag they loved so well and march to the music to which their loyal feet were attuned and now that their autumn has arrived, our hearts should pulse with joyous pride in a realization of their deeds.

Memorial day is a sacred occasion and its many beautiful customs seem certain to survive forever. The American people do not easily forget.—Free Press.

kills, not necessarily suddenly, but SURELY. It preys upon the intellectual powers more than we realize. Whole Cabinet to Retire.

Paris, May 29.—The resignation of Premier Waldeck-Rousseau was formally communicated to the cabinet at its meeting yesterday. The entire cabinet resigns with Waldeck-Rousseau. If publicly announced now, the president would be obliged to remain in Paris and appoint a new ministry. Consequently, the public announcement of the resignation of the cabinet is deferred in order to enable Loubet to visit his home after his absence in Russia.

A CHORUS FOR HANNA

In All That Was Done In Ohio State Convention

PEACE WITH BUSHNELL

After an Estrangement of Five Years —Chairman Grosvenor Declares For Permanent Retention of the Philippines—War Against Trusts

Cleveland, May 29.—The ticket: Secretary of state, Lewis C. Laylin of Norwalk; judge of supreme court, William B. Crew of McConnellsville; food and dairy commissioner, Horace Ankeney, Xenia; member of the board of public works, William Kirtley, Jr., of Defiance.

The Republican state convention, which has been a continued ovation here all week to Senator Hanna, closed last evening with a great demonstration in his honor to which he responded in a characteristic speech. The senator at former state conventions has sounded keynotes that were taken up by Republican glee clubs. He told them yesterday to sing "Keep on letting well enough alone," in the campaign rallies this year.

The convention was distinguished for harmony in the chorus for Hanna in all that was done. One of the last reconciliations was that of Senator Hanna and former Governor Bushnell. They had not spoken since the memorable contest for the senatorship in 1897. Before going to the convention yesterday they met in the most cordial manner. The delegates who "got them together" gave glowing reports around the convention hall of the way they were calling each other "Mark" and "Asa" again.

Senator Hanna and George B. Cox of Cincinnati also had a friendly farewell after a contest during the day over nominations.

What were called the Hanna men won on all ballots, but Cox supported none of the winners. In making up the state ticket Hanna and Cox were on opposing sides, but good feeling prevailed after the convention was over.

The convention had been in continuous session from 1 a. m. until almost 4 p. m., but Senator Hanna received the closest attention and appeared at his best in the most forcible delivery. He said: "Chairman Grosvenor has sounded the keynote of this campaign. We had a motto in the last convention 'Let well enough alone.' I propose to offer an amendment to that; 'Keep on letting well enough alone.'"

General Grosvenor, after referring to the death of President McKinley, and saying "The world of mankind is better that he lived; it is poorer that he died," spoke of President Roosevelt, saying that the Republican party owes it to itself and its duty to the country to stand by his administration and to aid in carrying it to success as a vindication of the policy of McKinley; as an assurance of victory for the party in 1904.

By the terms of the surrender of Spain we acquired title to vast territory in the eastern hemisphere, and out of that fact and the ratification of the treaty, we became chargeable with the duty of governing the Philippines and Porto Rico. Porto Rico exhibits in the fullest degree the splendid results of American civilization when not interfered with by partisan opposition at home.

In the Philippines we have had blood, war and treachery, and today the policy of the Democratic party seems to be to disgrace the United States in the estimation of the civilized nations of the world by continual unceasing battlery of denunciation of our soldiers, our army, our officers and our administration. The Philippines are ours. They are ours by the conquest of Dewey and the army; they are ours by the terms of the treaty with Spain; they are ours by every principle of law, national and international; and the American people will never consent to the introduction into political power of a party that would play the old piratical game of scuttle and run away from responsibility even as great as it is.

In the fear of God and in the name of American civilization, we will control and govern and benefit those islands, and we will repeat in the Philippines, on a larger scale, what we have accomplished so brilliantly in the island of Porto Rico. The American flag has never been pulled down from any territory that it ever claimed jurisdiction of; it never will be pulled down while the Republican president is in the White House.

The Republican party stand today irrevocably committed to the doctrines of a protective tariff. The doctrine of the party, as we understand it, is simply this; it will maintain its position of establishing and maintaining such duties upon foreign imports, which come in direct competition with the products of our own labor, as will protect our own products from the competition of the cheaper labor in the other countries of the world. This is the sum total of the real doctrine of protection to American industry.

It will be time enough to discuss the necessity for tariff revision when there is pointed specifically some place where injurious results are flowing from existing legislation. Hasty and inconsiderate tinkering with tariff schedules may bring about more disaster than could be relieved by the highest accuracy of revision.

Today there is every appearance of a conflict to death between the government of the United States upon the one hand and certain recognized injurious trusts on the other hand. The writ of injunction is being issued to restrain the greed of combinations, and effective measures are being taken to dissolve certain of these injurious combinations.

The foundation of the war against trusts was laid by the act of a Republican congress known as the Sherman anti-trust law. That law was on the statute books during the entire administration of Grover Cleveland without a single effort on the part of Mr. Cleveland or his administration to enforce it, and not only so, but stood there anathematized as valueless by his distinguished attorney general. Yet under its operation a number of great combinations have been dissolved and driven out of business. Thus it will be seen that the Democratic howl about trusts is as barren of truth as any of the other battlecries which they have sent up.

Upon the tariff question the Democrats have no policy. Upon the financial question they do not know whether they are for Bryan or Cleveland or whom, but they simply stand blocking the progress of legislation, hopelessly stranded amid the wrecks of their misguided leaders. This is the Democratic party of today; this is the party that asks you here in Ohio to endorse their suggestions by electing their ticket in the coming election.

Kansas Republicans' Choice

Wichita, Kas., May 29.—The Republican state convention last night nominated former Congressman W. J. Bailey for governor and a full state ticket. The feature of the convention was the strong Roosevelt sentiment. The friends of Bailey controlled the convention from the start. The platform warmly endorses the national administration.

Stately Ceremony For Pauncefote

Washington, May 29.—The late Lord Pauncefote, British ambassador to Washington, was accorded a national funeral yesterday, in token of the high esteem set by the American people on the personal worth of the deceased and as an acknowledgment of the friendly feeling which is cherished toward Great Britain. Every department of the national government was represented. The numerous diplomatic body, of which for so many years the late Lord Pauncefote was dean, was present in the persons of ambassadors, ministers and charges. In addition to these the resident society of the capital was fully represented, and a thousand men in arms were the visible sign of military participation.

Probing St Louis Frauds

St. Louis, May 29.—Councilman Louis Schnell and Charles L. Geraghty, a member of the St. Louis house of delegates, were arrested last night on bench warrants from the grand jury charging them with malfeasance in office. Schnell is charged with having obtained contracts from the city through a supply company in which he is said to be interested. Geraghty is said to have rented horses and vehicles to the city under a fictitious name.

Chicago Teamsters Extend Strike

Chicago, May 29.—The striking packing house teamsters took further steps yesterday to extend the strike. Orders went out from the teamsters' headquarters that no coal should be delivered to concerns making ice to refrigerate meat for "unfair" butcher shops or packing houses. Butchers who use meat delivered by non-union drivers will lose their ice, and concerns that make their own ice will lose their coal.

Bartlett's Pertinent Inquiry

Washington, May 29.—Representative Bartlett (Ga.) yesterday introduced a resolution requesting information from the secretary of war as to the amount of salary or other compensation paid General Wood as governor general of Cuba and by what authority such payment was made.

Would You Think It?

Would you think it possible that you could be disappointed in the face of a woman whose shapely shoulders, and beautiful hair suggest womanly perfection and beauty? Such disappointment comes not seldom when the face turned to you shows disfiguring blotches and blemishes. In general the cause of these eruptions is impure blood.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood, and removes the corrupt accumulations which cause disease. When the blood is cleansed, pimples, tetter, salt-rheum, boils, sores, and other results of impure blood, are perfectly and permanently cured.

"For three years I suffered with that dreaded disease eczema," writes Mrs. J. Koepp, of Herman, Oregon. "I was told to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which I did, and after I had taken fourteen bottles I was permanently cured. It has been a year since I stopped taking your medicine and it has never appeared since. I think your medicine a wonderful cure and hope others suffering as I did, will take it and be relieved of their suffering."

Some of the most remarkable cures effected by "Golden Medical Discovery," have been of scrofulous diseases.

"I will forever thank you for advising me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Mrs. Jas. Murphy, of Fonda, Pocahontas Co., Iowa. "It has cured me of chronic scrofula of twelve years' standing. I had doctored for the trouble until I was completely discouraged. I also had chronic diarrhea for twelve years. I am in good health now—better than I ever was in my life, owing to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took several bottles of the 'Discovery' before I stopped."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure dizziness and sick headache.

The majority of non-sporulating microorganisms, such as the coci of suppuration and the ordinary bacteria of water are destroyed in from five to ten minutes.

Very respectfully yours.

Joseph McFarland M. D.

This test proves that Lifebuoy Soap destroys the living seeds of infection and disease germs. Perfectly harmless to the most delicate fabrics, yet at its touch dirt and stains disappear as if by magic. Disinfects—purifies while it cleanses.

The Social Realm.

Dead in the battle—dead on the field:
More than his life can a soldier yield?
Dead for his country. Muffle the drums:
Slowly the sad procession comes.
The heart may ache, but the heart must swell
With pride for the soldier who fought so well.
His blood has burnished his sabre bright:
To his memory, honor; to him, good-night.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Children Pledge Allegiance to the Flag.

Also Contribute Two Songs.

Senator Sprague the Orator of the Day.

Hardly a better day could have been desired for Memorial day than that of yesterday. There was a high northwest wind that blew the dust about in great blinding clouds in the unwatered streets, yet the day was a pleasant one. The sun was just warm enough not to make walking uncomfortable and as the wind died down somewhat as the day advanced but little fault could be found.

A detail under command of Senior Vice Commander Charles L. Orne accompanied by Rev. Merrill C. Ward the Chaplain of the day, visited the National Sailors Home cemetery and held exercises. Other details visited and decoratd the graves at the Mt. Wollaston, Hancock and English cemeteries and the grave of Paul J. Revere at Mt. Auburn.

The Letter Carries band of Boston arrived at 9.50 and a line of march was then taken to the junction of School and Franklin streets where barges were taken for West Quincy.

The command alighted at the junction of Copeland and Crescent streets and marched to the Hall cemetery, where after decorating the graves it formed about the Willard monument and held appropriate exercises.

Thre command then visited the St. Mary's cemetery where services were conducted by Rev. F. A. Roche.

On the return to Quincy the Post were met at the junction of School and Franklin streets by John A. Boyd camp Legion of Spanish War Veterans with the Braintree Drum Corps and escorted to Faxon hall, where the ladies of Paul Revere Woman's Relief Corps served a collation.

CARNIVAL OF ATHLETICS

Intercollegiate Championships

Purcell, Famous English Runner

THE greatest track and field carnival of the year takes place May 30-31 at Berkeley oval, New York, when the intercollegiate stars enter in annual championship competition. All the leading performers in American colleges are to be on hand, and spectators will flock to the carnival from all parts of the country.

The teams of the University of California appeared in the east a couple of ago in a dual meet with Yale University, together with the dual meet with Princeton. This preliminary tryout will serve to perfect the form and thus brighten the chances of the California aggregation. Chicago and Wisconsin universities are among the colleges that hope to trail in the dust the banners of Harvard, Princeton, Yale, University of Pennsylvania, Columbia and other eastern institutions.

The programme which has been prepared is very elaborate. The entries are in some instances of a class inferior to those of certain years in the past, although competition will be fierce and interesting. Jumping and weight event performances will probably be below standard, but there is no reason why the other events should not call forth highly creditable work.

The pole vault test will be particularly interesting because of the recent performances of E. H. Gray of University of Pennsylvania and Jerome Magee of Chicago university. Magee broke the indoor record in Chicago, and Gray followed by defeating Magee in outdoor work at Philadelphia. The rivalry between the two men is very warm, and their work at Berkeley oval will attract much attention. Gray now holds the intercollegiate record of 11 feet 8 inches, and he hopes to increase this mark at the coming meet.

Another performer who is sure to do noteworthy things is E. G. Clapp of Yale, the crack runner. Clapp is known to most athletic devotees as a brilliant performer. In the recent dual meet with California he won the 120 yard and the 220 yard hurdles in the fast time of sixteen and two-fifths seconds and twenty-five seconds respectively. He is looked on as a sure winner of the intercollegiate hurdles.

James E. Sullivan, secretary of the Amateur Athletic union, is to referee the championships. Mr Sullivan's intricate knowledge of and wide experience in athletics of varied description have brought about a great demand for him, and his rulings are unquestionably accepted. He has a dominating influence in A. A. U. affairs and stands for absolute honesty in all branches of sport. Mr Sullivan is confident that the coming championships will be successful and is equally optimistic with regard to other branches of athletics.

The west is threatening to produce another phenomenal broad jumper. He is F. L. Thompson of the University of Illinois, and he already holds the world's record for jumping indoors. With a very short run and a poor takeoff he cleared 21 feet 8 inches in the gymnasium of Notre Dame university last winter. For jumping out of doors he has a record of 22 feet 6 inches, made in a meet, and has already repeated this performance in practice, and Trainer Connibear of the University of Illinois track team is confident he will go considerably over twenty-two feet before the season ends.

It is not so much what he has cleared as his action that makes the [illegible] out that Thompson is a marvelous jumper. [illegible] knack of sailing through the air, his knees well forward which has enabled those wonderful jumpers, Kraenzlein and Prinstein, to clear more than twenty-four feet. In the opinion of Trainer Connibear, Thompson has even a better action than these great champions.

Like all great jumpers, Thompson is a fine all around athlete. He can run 100 yards very close to ten seconds and has made good time over the hurdles, which he clears in a very clean cut style. He has also done some very creditable work in the high jump.

John C. Purcell, one of the most famous amateur runners of England, is now in New York city and has become a member of the Knickerbocker Athletic club.

He has already begun training at Bergen Point, N. J., and if he attains anything like his customary form the American public will see a treat in the way of long distance running.

Although he passed the winter in the enervating climate of Central America and has only been training three weeks, he is already under 4m. 30s. for the mile. His best record on the other side of the pond is 4m. 19s., made from the twenty yard mark, and he has negotiated four miles in 20m. 14s., which is one and a quarter seconds better than the American record, held by the late W. D. Day.

Mr. Purcell is really a cross country crack, and it is this sport he is anxious to boom among Americans. He has induced several of the best distance men of Columbia college to join the Knickerbocker Athletic club, and they will be the nucleus of a team that he hopes to make the best in the country.

He was captain of the famous Manchester Harriers when this team won in one year the following races: Halifax Brewers' Challenge Cup, Edey Challenge Cup, Manningham Challenge Vase, four mile championship of England, three-quarter mile northern counties championship, two mile northern counties championship, northern cross country championship and the national championship. All of these were steeplechase races.

It can be seen from this remarkable record that the English crack knows how to develop a cross country team.

He is a tall, broad shouldered man, who looks the part of a great runner. He stands 5 feet 10½ inches, has a chest measurement of 40 inches, a leg measurement of 37 inches and weighs when fit 150 pounds.

He believes in the hardest kind of training. When getting ready for a contest, he thinks nothing of running at least ten miles and walking about twenty miles a day. He divides his work equally between the forenoon and afternoon.

He goes to bed early and begins work sometimes as early as 5 o'clock in the morning.

The pace following cyclists are busily at work preparing for the season with their usual complement of pacemakers, racing machines, etc. Most of the racing outfits consist of two tandems and one single machine. The new single motor pacing machine is considered a great improvement over the old style and just as efficient as the tandem.

The tandem will be seen as frequently as last season, but the single will enable the riders to receive regular pace at all times, as it may be carried along with the team, thus saving the delay while awaiting the express delivery.

Several strong teams have been formed, the best of which is that of James C. Kennedy, which comprises the two great pace followers, Floyd MacFarland and Albert Champion, and Tommy Hall, the English midget, who will see what he can do in the way of pace following this summer.

OUR FRENCH VISITORS

Will Spend Today In Visiting Points of Interest Around Boston

Boston, May 31.—The Count de Rochambeau and the other members of the French mission arrived in this city at 5 o'clock p. m., yesterday from Newport. The guests were met at the Back Bay station by M. J. Curran, private secretary to Mayor Collins, and welcomed to Boston. They were driven to Hotel Somerset. After a rest, the guests had a private dinner. Afterwards some of them went to theatres, where sections had been reserved. Others retired early, to be in readiness for the various features of today's program in Boston and Cambridge. A call will be made at the state house, a visit paid to Harvard university, and in the evening the party will be the guests of the city of Boston at dinner at Hotel Somerset.

Entertained at Newport

Newport, R. I., May 31.—In the exercises here yesterday, participated in by the Count de Rochambeau and the other members of the special French mission, the affair was very noticeably military in all its aspects, from the parade, held in honor of the occasion, to the luncheon given by the special commission appointed by President Roosevelt. The state of Rhode Island, the city of Newport and the Rhode Island society of the Order of the Cincinnati were represented.

The French mission came to Newport to offer a simple but highly impressive tribute to Chevalier de Ternay, the commander of the fleet of war vessels which conveyed the Rochambeau soldiers to the shores of Newport. The tribute of France to its naval hero was paid by placing upon the tomb of De Ternay in the modest and secluded Trinity churchyard a wreath of laurel sent by President Loubet of the French republic.

College Men's Aid Needed

Cambridge, Mass., May 31.—District Attorney Jerome of New York made a speech last night before Harvard students on the conditions in New York city. He spoke of alleged corruption in municipal affairs and the complete dominance of politics by bosses, and then he attacked the apathy of the educated classes. He urged that more college men should come out and attack the evils of the cities with boldness and vigor.

One Man Attacked by Six

Providence, May 31.—Donald Stuart, a non-union driver for T. W. Waterman, a teamster whose men are on strike, was assaulted yesterday at a lonely place in Scituate by six men who were union sympathizers. Four held the horses' heads while two attacked the driver from behind and the man was left bleeding and insensible on the road. This is the third time Stuart has been attacked since the strike started.

Yachtsmen Get a Wetting

Highland Light, Mass., May 31.—Two yachtsman who are taking the 20-foot knockabout Firefly from Manchester, Mass., to Bristol, Conn., got caught outside the cape by a stiff southwester. The two men anchored the Firefly and attempted to land on the beach with their yawl. As the boat came through the surf it was capsized. The Highland lifesavers picked up the yachtsmen.

Won't Employ Union Help

Franklin, N. H., May 31.—Because two union men were discharged from the Franklin Needle works, 150 needle makers have stopped work. The workmen recently organized against the expressed wish of the manager of the company. The manager declares positively that he will not employ union help. The plant is running with a reduced force.

Lodger Not In Fighting Trim

Boston, May 31.—Two flat workers were detected at work in a Back Bay apartment yesterday, but the lodger who undertook to secure them was under such disadvantages that the men escaped. The lodger was in a bathtub when he heard strangers rummaging about. He tried to fight them both, but was laid out by a blow.

Cupid and a Revolver

Waltham, Mass., May 31.—Orwell S. Preston was shot in the wrist by Ernest Hobbs yesterday. Both have been paying attention to Florence Stark, aged 18, and she had expressed her preference for Preston. The shooting, which is not serious, occurred in the presence of the girl, a revolver being used.

Quake In Nutmeg State

Easthampton, Conn., May 31.—Many residents of the southern part of this town felt what they believe were earthquake shocks Thursday night. The disturbance occurred at 9:50 o'clock, awakening sleeping residents, jarring buildings and rattling dishes. It lasted about 30 seconds.

Probably Over-Exerted Himself

HEROES OF THE NATION

Warmly Praised In an Address by President Roosevelt

CRUELTIES IN PHILIPPINES

By American Troops Have Been Wholly Exceptional and Shamelessly Exaggerated—Filipinos Must Show Capacity For Real Freedom Before It Is Decided Whether They Are to Exist Independent of Us—Might of Our People Looms Ever Larger as the Years Go By

Washington, May 30.—President Roosevelt delivered the address at the Memorial day exercises at the National cemetery at Arlington today, paying tribute to heroes who have gone before, to those now in the field, and stating the position of the administration in regard to the Philippines. He said:

It is a good custom for our country to have certain solemn holidays in commemoration of our greatest men and of the greatest crises in our history. There should be but few such holidays. To increase their number is to cheapen them. Washington and Lincoln—the man who did most to found the union, and the man who did most to preserve it—stand head and shoulders above all our other public men, and have by common consent won the right to this pre-eminence. Among the holidays which commemorate the turning points in American history, Thanksgiving has a significance peculiarly its own. On July 4 we celebrate the birth of the nation; on this day, the 30th of May, we call to mind the deaths of those who died that the nation might live, who wagered all that life holds dear for the great prize of death in battle, who poured out their blood like water in order that the mighty national structure raised by the far-seeing patriotism of Washington, Franklin, Marshall, Hamilton, and the other great leaders of the revolution, great framers of the constitution, should not crumble into meaningless ruins.

You whom I address today and your comrades who wore the blue beside you in the perilous years during which strong, sad, patient Lincoln bore the crushing load of national leadership, performed the one feat the failure to perform which would have meant destruction to everything which makes the name America a symbol of hope among the nations of mankind. You did the greatest and most necessary task which has ever fallen to the lot of any men on this western hemisphere. Nearly three centuries have passed since the waters of our coasts were first furrowed by the keels of the men whose children's children were to inherit this fair land. Over a century and a half of colonial growth followed the settlement; and now for over a century and a quarter we have been a nation.

Preservers of the Union

During our four generations of national life we have had to do many tasks, and some of them of far-reaching importance; but the only really vital task was the one you did, the task of saving the union. There were other crises in which to have gone wrong would have meant disaster; but this was the one crisis in which to have gone wrong would have meant not merely disaster but annihilation. For failure at any other point atonement could have been made; but had you failed in the iron days the loss would have been irreparable, the defeat irretrievable. Upon your success depended all the future of the people of this continent, and much of the future of mankind as a whole.

You left us a reunited country. You left us the right of brotherhood with the men in gray, who with such courage, and such devotion for what they deemed the right, fought against you. But you left us much more even than your achievement, for you left us the memory of how it was achieved. You, who made good by valor and patriotism the statesmanship of Lincoln and the soldiership of Grant, have set as the standards for our efforts in the future both the way you did your work in war and the way in which when the war was over you turned again to the work of peace. In war and in peace alike your example will stand as the wisest of lessons to us and our children and our children's children.

Heroes of the Present

Just at this moment the army of the United States, led by men who served among you in the great war, is carrying to completion a small but peculiarly trying and difficult war in which is involved not only the honor of the flag but the triumph of civilization over forces which stand for the black chaos of savagery and barbarism. The task has not been as difficult or as important as yours, but the men in the uniform of the United States, who have for the last three years patiently and uncomplainingly championed the American cause in the Philippine islands, are your younger brothers, your sons. They have shown themselves not unworthy of you, and they are entitled to the support of all men who are proud of what you did.

These younger comrades of yours have fought under terrible difficulties and have received terrible provocation from a very cruel and very treacherous enemy. Under the strain of these provocations I deeply deplore to say that some among them have so far forgotten themselves as to counsel and commit, in retaliation, acts of cruelty. The fact that for every guilty act committed by one of our troops a hundred acts of far greater atrocity have been committed by the hostile natives upon our troops, or upon the peaceable and law-abiding natives who are friendly to us, can not be held to excuse any wrongdoer on our side. Determined and unswerving effort must be made, and is being made, to find out every instance of barbarity on the part of our troops, to punish those guilty of it, and to take, if possible, even stronger measures than have already been taken to minimize or prevent the occurrence of all such instances in the future.

From time to time there occur in our country, to the deep and lasting shame of our people, lynchings carried on under circumstances of inhuman cruelty and barbarity—a cruelty infinitely worse than any that has ever been committed by our troops in the Philippines: worse to the victims, and far more brutalizing to those guilty of it. The men who fail to condemn these lynchings, and yet clamor about what has been done in the Philippines, are indeed guilty of neglecting the beam in their own eye while taunting their brother about the mote in his. Understand me. These lynchings afford us no excuse for failure to stop cruelty in the Philippines. Every effort is being made, and will be made, to minimize the chances of cruelty occurring.

Army Unjustly Condemned

But keep in mind that these cruelties in the Philippines have been wholly exceptional, and have been shamelessly exaggerated. We deeply and litterly regret that any such cruelties should have been committed, no matter how rarely, no matter under what provocation, by American troops. But they afford far less justification for a general condemnation of our army than these lynchings afford for the condemnation of the communities in which they have taken place. In each case it is well to condemn the deed, and it is well also to refrain from including both guilty and innocent in the same sweeping condemnation.

The rules of warfare which have been promulgated by the war department and accepted as the basis of conduct by our troops in the field are the rules laid down by Abraham Lincoln when you, my hearers, were fighting for the union. These rules provide, of course, for the just severity necessary in war. The most destructive of all forms of cruelty would be to show weakness where sternness is demanded by iron need. But all cruelty is forbidden, and all harshness beyond what is called for by need. Our enemies in the Philippines have not merely violated every rule of war, but have made of these violations their only method of carrying on the war. We would have been justified by Abraham Lincoln's rules of war in infinitely greater severity than has been shown. The fact really is that our warfare in the Philippines has been carried on with singular humanity. For every act of cruelty by our men there have been innumerable acts of forbearance, magnanimity, and generous kindness. These are the qualities which have characterized the war as a whole. The cruelties have been wholly exeptional, on our part.

The guilty are to be punished; but in punishing them, let those who sit at ease at home, who walk delicately and live in the soft places of the earth, remember also to do them common justice. Let not the effortless and the untempted rail overmuch at strong men who with blood and sweat face years of toil and days and nights of agony, and at need lay down their lives in remote tropic jungles to bring the light of civilization into the world's dark places.

No Backward Step

It behooves us to keep a vigilant watch to prevent abuses and to punish those who commit them; but if because of them we flinch from finishing the task on which we have entered, we show ourselves cravens and weaklings, unworthy of the sires from whose loins we sprang. There were abuses and to spare in the Civil war. Your false friends then called Grant a "butcher" and spoke of you who are listening to me as mercenaries, as "Lincoln's hirelings." Your open foes—as in the resolution passed by the Confederate congress in October, 1862—accused you, at great length, and with much particularity, of "contemptuous disregard of the usuages of civilized war;" of subjecting women and children to "banishment, imprisonment, and death;" of "murder," of "rapine," of "outrages on women," of "lawless cruelty," of "perpertating atrocities which would be disgraceful to savages;" and Abraham Lincoln was singled out for especial attack because of his "spirit of barbarous ferocity." Verily, these men who thus foully slandered you have their heirs today in those who traduce our armies in the Philippines, who fix their eyes on individual deeds of wrong so keenly that at last they become blind to the great work of peace and freedom that has already been accomplished.

Peace and freedom—are there two better objects for which a soldier can fight? Well, these are precisely the objects for which our soldiers are fighting in the Philippines.

For Civil Government

Our soldiers conquer; and what is the object for which they conquer? To establish a military government? No. The laws we are now endeavoring to enact for the government of the Philippines are to increase the power and domain of the civil at the expense of the military authorities, and to render even more difficult than in the past the chance of oppression. The military power is used to secure peace, in order that it may itself be supplanted by the civil government. The progress of the Americans means the abolition of cruelty, the bringing of peace, and the rule of law and order under the civil government. Other nations have conquered to create irresponsive military rule. We conquer to bring just and responsible civil government to the conquered.

But our armies do more than bring peace, do more than bring order. They bring freedom. Remember always that the independence of a tribe or a community may, and often does, have nothing whatever to do with the freedom of the individual in that tribe or community. There are now in Asia and Africa scores of despotic monarchies, each of which is independent, and in no one of which is there the slightest vestige of freedom for the individual man. Scant indeed is the gain to mankind from the "independence" of a blood-stained tyrant who rules over abject and brutalized slaves. But great is the gain to humanity which follows the steady though slow introduction of the orderly liberty, the law-abiding freedom of the individual, which is the only sure foundation upon which national independence can be built. Wherever in the Philippines the insurrection has been definitely and finally put down, there the individual Filipino already enjoys such freedom, such personal liberty, under our rule, as he could never even dream of under the rule of an "independent" Aguinaldian oligarchy.

Self-Government In Time

The slowly-learned and difficult art of self-government, an art which our people have taught themselves by the labor of a thousand years, can not be grasped in a day by a people only just emerging from conditions of life which our ancestors left behind them in the dim years before history dawned. We believe that we can rapidly teach the people of the Philippine islands not only how to enjoy but how to make good use of their freedom; and with their growing knowledge their growth in self-government shall keep steady pace.

When they have thus shown their capacity for real freedom by their power of self-government, then, and not till then, will it be possible to decide whether they are to exist independently of us or be knit to us by ties of common friendship and interest.

When that day will come it is not in human wisdom now to foretell. All that we can say with certainty is that it would be put back an immeasurable distance if we should yield to the counsels of unmanly weakness and turn loose the islands, to see our victorious foes butcher with revolting cruelty our betrayed friends, and shed the blood of the most humane, the most enlightened, the most peaceful, the wisest and the best of their own number—for these are the classes who have already learned to welcome our rule.

America's Interests

Nor, while fully acknowledging our duties to others, need we forget our duty to our own country. The Pacific seaboard is as much to us as the Atlantic; as we grow in power and prosperity so our interest will grow in that farthest west which is the immemorial east. The shadow of our destiny has already reached to the shores of Asia. The might of our people already looms large against the world-horizon; and it will loom ever larger as the years go by. No statesman has a right to neglect the interests of our people in the Pacific; interests which are important to all our people, but which are of most importance to those of our people who have built populous and thriving states on the western slope of our continent.

This should no more be a party question than the war for the union should have been a party question. At this moment the man in highest office in the Philippine islands is the vice governor, General Luke Wright of Tennessee, who gallantly wore the gray in the Civil war and who is now working hand in hand with the head of our army in the Philippines, Adna Chaffee, who in the Civil war gallantly wore the blue. These two, and the men under them, from the north and from the south, in civil life and in military life, as teachers, as administrators, as soldiers, are laboring mightily for us who live at home. Here and there black sheep are to be found among them; but taken as a whole they represent as high a standard of public service as this country has ever seen. They are doing a great work for civilization, a great work for the honor and the interest of this nation, and above all for the welfare of the inhabitants of the Philippine Islands. All honor to them; and shame, thrice shame, to us if we fail to uphold their hands!

Indian Badly Battered

Boston, May 30.—A survey has been held on the steamer Indian in dry-dock and it was found that 170 plates are broken and indented, and frames and floors for practically the entire length of the ship broken and damaged, the stern frame bent, propeller gone, houses and decorations more or less damaged, and the machinery in need of overhauling.

Great Britain's Thanks

Washington, May 30.—Mr. Raikes, charge of the British embassy, called upon Secretary Hay at the state department yesterday and formally expressed the high sense of appreciation of the British government at the unusual honors done the memory of the late Lord Pauncefote in Thursday's funeral services.

Chicago Strike Grows

Chicago, May 30.—Prospects of a precipitate rise in the price of meat and a fight to a finish between the packers and Teamsters' union No. 10 have developed at the union stock yards. The distribution of meat to local houses is attended by great difficulty. No work is attempted without the presence of the police.

Fortune Telling

does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness—womanly health. There is many a woman whose future seems absolutely unclouded who is marked by her own condition for future disappointment and distress.

The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross.

Womanly health may be retained or regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, dries the drains which weaken women, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I have taken six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Miss M. Fyfe, of Orilla, Simcoe Co., Ontario, "and two bottles of the 'Pleasant Pellets' as you advised for congestion of uterus, ovaries, and weakness, and can safely say that your medicine has been the means of restoring me to good health again, which I had not had for over three years, until taking your medicine. I thank you very much for your kind and prompt attention to my letter asking advice."

"Favorite Prescription" has the testimony of thousands of women to its complete cure of womanly diseases. Do not accept an unknown and unproved substitute in its place.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the complexion and sweeten the breath.

Good Afternoon.

To publish two eight-page newspapers on a day following a holiday has proved almost too much for the Daily Ledger force today. The Braintree Observer and Reporter was put to press shortly before noon and it will not be surprising if the Ledger is a little late. It has also been necessary to curtail news.

Drift of Opinion.

John Kendrick Bangs, humorist, has proved himself able, like Mark Twain, to be serious under the right inspiration. In his new book, "Uncle Sam, Guardian" he tells of the occupancy of Cuba. "Uncle Sam found Cuba unhealthy and leaves her healthy;—found her without charities and hospitals and leaves with a well-established system;—found her without schools and leaves her with good school, laws and principles;—found beggars and an empty treasury;- leaves the island without beggars and with a reserve of $1,500,000 The carpet-bagger, for the first time in history, has been held in subjection and every penny of the trust administered for the benefit of the ward."

☞The Brockton Enterprise asks, "How many genuinely poor men do we find looking for the berth of congressmen in Washington?" Making use of the Yankee's right we ask in return, How many Massachusetts congressmen at the present time would be reckoned as wealthy by the measure of the day? There is a lot of twaddle mixed in with sense in the discussion of the relation of wealth and politics. It is only natural that a man who has by his ability attained a prominence that results in his selection as a congressional representative should also by that same ability, have succeeded in profession or business in earning such an income that he has something laid by and that is the class of men who make up the majority of congress. Whatever may be said about money clearing the pathway of political honor, it must be admitted that it is the exception rather than the rule the latter being that the ability to make money is the real influence that makes way for the man.—Haverhill Gazette.

Trot at Weymouth.

The trotting at South Weymouth yesterday was witnessed by many from this city.

The interest of the Quincy contingent was centered on the race between Donna owned by W. F. Steadman and Colchester owned by Capt. Doane.

The race was run in mile heats, best two in three and was won by Donna Colchester won the first heat but lost the next two.

Capt. Doane drove a sulky for the first time, and when his age is considered he deserves great credit for his courage in driving such a spirited horse. Charlie Hall had a number of his horses entered but they did not do anything.

HOLIDAY GAMES.

The New Fore River Nine Win Twice.

South Quincy Tie One, Lose One.

The West Quincys Defeated---- Other Games.

Sports on the holiday were numerous. There were several interesting base call games and the ledger has received full scores, but space and time make it impossible to report them at length.

The new Fore River team opened the season today by winning both games. The morning game was played at Quincy Point with the Waverleys of South Boston. Those who witnessed the game are high in their praise for Capt. Faircloth of the home club. He handled the team and played his own position brilliantly. Welch had the Waverleys at his mercy, and to shorten the game the management decided to call the game at the end of the six innings. The features of the game were the perfect playing of the Fore Rivers and the base running of Faircloth, Taylor and Tate. The score by innings:

Innings,	1	2	3	4	5	6
Fore River,	7	2	2	0	0		—11
Waverley,	0	0	0	0	0	5	—5

AFTERNOON GAME.

Fresh from their victory over the Waverleys, the Fore River boys journeyed to New Downer Landing and defeated the St. Augustines C. T. A. S. of South Boston. The batting of the Fore Rivers Won the admiration of the thousands of spectators. Welch, the Fore River pitcher, puzzled the visitors. His pitching and all round playing was a brilliant feature. Faircloth was again in evidence in fielding and batting and all round generalship of his team. Henry won applause time and again by his batting. To much praise cannot be given the home team. In the two games but one error was made and that was excusable. Eleven of the St. Augustines fell before the curves of Welch, and only two received free passes to first. Soare 13 to 3.

At West Quincy.

The West Quincys met with a defeat at the hands of the St. Alphonse nine of Rockland. The score was St. Alphonse 14, West Quincy 7.

At South Quincy.

At the Ward Three playground, the South Quincys played two games That in the morning with the Hartford A. A. was not commenced until eleven, because the visitors arrived late, and it was so closely contested that it was a tie in every innings after the seventh, and at the end of the twelfth at 1.30 P. M. was called a draw game, with score 9 to 9.

It was a game characterized with heavy hitting and few errors. Birnie knocked a home run and Dunn a three baser, both in the third innings. Duffy had two doubles, and every member of the team except Austin hit safely.

For the visitors Minton had a home run and a double, and Glynn a two baser, and there were five other safe hits.

Only 2 of tee South Quincys struck out, while 17 flied out. Twelve of the visitors struck out and 9 flied out.

The score by inuings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12
South Quincy	0	0	5	1	0	1	0	1	0	0	0	1	9
Hartford	2	0	1	0	2	1	0	2	0	0	0	1	9

Mr. Daveron umpired to the satisfaction of both clubs.

In the afternoon the South Quincys played good ball after their hard morning game and short rest. They lost 12 to 8 to the Assumption Catholic Association, but should have won as they excelled at the bat and in the field. Duffy had a home run but this was offset by a timely home run by Fernekees and doubles by Donahue and Willis of the visitors.

The South Quincys made three double plays, one on a great catch by Flynn. Fernekees of the visitors also made a good catch at center, and Burke of last years Augustus put out 15 at first without an error.

The score by innings;

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Assumption	0	0	1	4	3	3	0	1	0	—12

The American Thread Agency athletic association easily pulled out winner over the North Quincys 18 to 11.

Neponset A. A. defeated Tubular Rivet & Stud Co. in a closely contested game by score of 11-6. For the T. R. & S. Magnuson and Fred Moir excelled, the latter making three or more grand stand plays, while the former put up a strong game at short and also in batting and base running.

The Wollaston Park Juniors defeated the Atlantics at the Park grounds 7 to 5.

Holiday Golf.

The largest tournament of the season of the Merrymount golf was held Memorial day at the links in Wollaston. There were about forty entries but only 20 turned in scores. G. H. Noyes of Merrymount and Merrill Richards of Harvard with 80 had the best gross scores, and G. L. Cole of Merrymount with 74 the best net score.

F. J. Robbins of the Wollaston golf club led in the preliminary round of the Myopia tournament on Memorial day with 90. In the first 16 were also F. F. Smith, G. E. Atherton, W. U. Swan, and E. C. MEMORIAL DAY.

lie schools who greeted the veterans by singing "The Star Spangled Banner." When the chorus was reached each child brought forth a small flag which had been in hiding and they were waved aloft.

The Grand Army and Spanish War Vetererans then presented colors and saluted, and the children in concert repeated the pledge to the flag:

> "I pledge allegiance to our flag, and the Republic for which it stands; one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice to all."

She children then sang "America," the small flag being waved again during the final verse.

The line of march was then continued via Temple, Coddington and Sea streets to Mt. Wollaston cemetery, where there was also a large concourse of people.

The exercises at the Soldiers' monument were much the same as usual, the program being:

Remarks,	Commander Hersey.
Divine Blessing,	Chaplain Ward.
Prayer for Meda,	Band.
Address,	Senator Sprague.
Choral by Von Webber.	Band.
Address,	Com. Adams, L. S. W. V.
Lincoln's address at Gettysburg,	Adjt. Holt.
Nearer My God to Thee,	Band.
Festival of the Dead,	Officers of Paul Revere Post.
Salute and taps,
"America,"	Band.

Senator Sprague was listened to with pleasure and could be plainly heard quite a distance. He said he considered an invitation to speak before the Grand Army a call to duty which he could not decline. It is not for me, born in the last years of the war to tell veterans of the triumphs, the heroism, and the sacrifices. Your campfires are the place for that. Quoting from Longfellow the stanza beginning "Let the dead past bury its dead,' he said it was well for all to live down the sorrows of the past, and remember that it was a fight for principles, for home and for country. Who is there who does not go back in memory to a father or a mother, and recall their kindly efforts. It was proper that all should leave their regular avocations to decorate at least once a year the graves of soldiers and friends. Our soldier dead because of the perpetuation of this union of liberty a liberty which has recently been extended to Cuba and Porto Rico, and which if the spirit of McKinley prevails, as I believe it will also become a blessing to the isles of the Philippines. Today we decorate the graves of the unknown dead as well as the known; rest and sleep. The memory shall be ours.

Commander Adams of Camp Boyd of the Legion of Spanish War Veterans, said the young men who recently engaged in the Spanish war feel young and inexperienced in the presence of these Grand Army veterans, with their great achievements. It was fitting that the two organizations who took up arms at the request of their country should cooperate in these Memorial day exercises and he hoped pleasant relations would always prevail.

At the "Unknown lot" the exercises were conducted by the Woman's Relief Corps and included:

"Nearer My God to Thee,"	Sung by W. R. C Accompanied by Band
Reading,—"True and Brave,"	Mrs. Kate Hayden
W. R. C. service, including the decoration with wreaths,	W. R. C. Officers
Hymn by W. R. C.,	Accompanied by Band
Flowers deposited.
Prayer,	Rev. M. C. Ward

The command then marched to the Bumpus lot where a newly erected memorial to Lieut. Edward A. Bumpus was decorated. A salute was fired and taps sounded.

The monument is a large granite boulder standing about seven feet high. On a panel in front is the following inscription:

His but to do and die.
First Lieutenant
Edward A. Bumpus,
9th U. S. Infantry.
Born June 24, 1875.
Brevited Captain for gallantry
at the Battle of Tientsin, China.
Killed at Samar, Sept. 28, 1901.
Harvard '98.

A sword and belt in relief hang upon the panel. On the reverse of the memorial is an inscription in memory of his brother Everett Chauncy Bumpus.

The return to headquarters was via Sea, Coddington, Washington and Hancock streets and the command disbanded about 5 o'clock.

Memorial Day at Braintree.

Early in the morning yesterday it looked as if the Memorial day observances would be hindered by rain. At six o'clock the clouds were thick and black, and a few drops of rain fell but gradually it became lighter, occasionally the sun shone and the temperature became fairly warm.

The first morning duty of a detail of comrades was to decorate the graves of soldiers buried in Lakeside and Blue Hill cemeteries. At 8.15 A. M., under Commander Henry A. Monk, Post 87 proceeded by special electrics to the North cemetery, accompanied by the Quincy City band and escorted by Autietam Camp S. of V.

The march was then made to Storrs square where the Quincy band gave a concert for nearly a half hour, and again by special electrics the move was made back to South Braintree.

After a few minutes to perfect arrangements a line of march was formed headed by the band and at the Commander's order proceeded to Plain street cemetery.

The exercise at the Soldiers' monument and the monument to the unknown dead were a feature of the day. Next on the program came the annual banquet in the lower Town hall. This was attended by the Post, W. R. C., S. of V., Ladies' Aid and guests. The menu was given by the ladies and it could not have been improved upon.

Commander H. A. Monk made a few remarks at the close of dinner and introduced for a speech Dr. T. H. Dearing.

The stage was decorated with potted plants and flags, and in front of the pulpit was the motto "We Remember the Fallen."

The banquet hall was beautifully decorated by Comrade Thomas B. Stoddard with streamers, flags of various kinds, corps emblems, shields, potted plants and the following mottoes:

"We Remember the Fallen," "Our Flag," "Not a Star Erased, not a Stripe Polluted," "They Died That we Might Live," "By the Valor of Brave Men has our Union been Preserved," "We Miss Our Comrades Today."

The guests' table was place across the head of the hall and mounted upon a platform nearly a foot high, while the tables for the comrades and their associate orders were arranged up and down the hall.

The tables were arranged under the direction of Mr. Stoddard and all the decorations he put up without assistance. He is now in his 78th year and inclined, on account of ill health to think that this is his last Memorial day decoration.

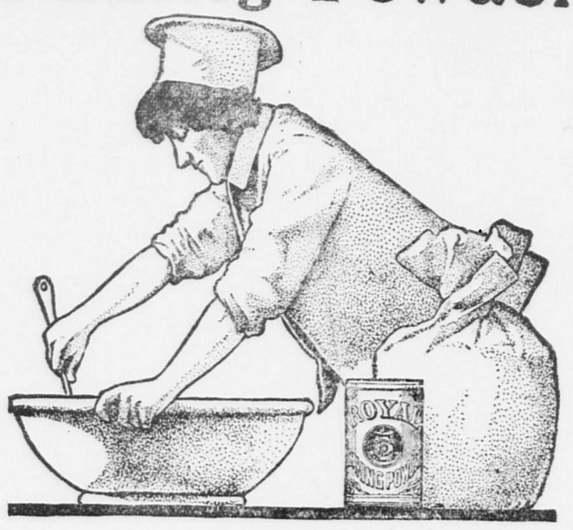

The guests of the Post were: Dr. William Gallagher, Rev. G. E. Whitehouse, Rev. F. W. Burrows, Rev. A. E. Legg, Supt. I. W. Horne, Mr. C. C. Mellen, Mr. C. S. Hannaford, Mr. A. S. Morrison, Rev. Mr. Kyte, Rev. Mr. Foster, Mr. John Kelley, Mr. Eben Prescott, Mr. Warren Keith, Dr. T. H. Dearing, Mr. Gomez, Mr. Daniel Potter and Mr. Horace Faxon.

Post 87 mourns the loss of three members; Charles Baldwin, June 7, 1901, Loring N. Hayden, June 30, 1901, and Christopher T Bailey Sept. 16, 1901.

Meat Supply Cut Off

Chicago, May 31.—The four big packing concerns of the stock yards, at conferences held yesterday with union leaders representing the striking teamsters, refused absolutely to grant the concessions asked, or any part, and went openly on record as being unalterably opposed to the recognition of union labor in the yards. Aeronaut's Fatal Fall

Kingston, N. Y., May 31.—Harry Hicks, an aeronaut, had been engaged to make daily balloon ascensions here and was booked for his first exhibition yesterday. He struck head first on a sand bar in the river and was killed.

A Lincoln War Story

A TALL man of slender build with deep blue eyes and hair slightly tinged with gray stood within the top of the Washington monument, with a strong fieldglass in his hand, looking intently over the Virginia and Maryland hills. "It has been more than thirty years ago," he said, "since I viewed those historic fields and mountains on both sides of the Potomac. It recalls to my mind sad recollections and bitter experiences of the past."

"Why does it cause you sadness?" said one of his companions, who was several years his junior and did not know or care much about the war.

"In the last part of the summer of 1862," he said, "I was with General Lee's army on its march into Maryland. We had been through the seven days' fight around Richmond and then the second Manassas, Cedar Mountain and several skirmishes before we reached the Potomac. After we crossed on the Maryland side we had a rough time. We were then in the enemy's country and liable to have a battle at any time.

"Sure enough, we did have a battle, and a very severe one, Sept. 16. We fought the battle of Sharpsburg. My regiment, the Tenth Alabama, suffered heavily in killed and wounded. Among the wounded was myself. I was left on the field supposed to be dead and consequently fell into the hands of the Union forces. As I lay suffering from pain and faint from the loss of blood and wishing that death would come to my relief I heard a voice say:

"'My lad, you are very young to be in the army. What is your age?'

"'I was just sixteen yesterday,' I replied, 'and I am dying. Will you be kind enough to send this Bible to mother at Sylacauga, Talladega county, Ala.?'

"I drew the Bible from my pocket and gave it to him. He stooped over me and in a gentle, sweet voice said:

"'Your mother shall have this holy book of God, and you shall take it to her. You are too young to die.' On the fly leaf I had written my mother's name and address, with the following lines underneath: 'Will some generous foe return this book to my mother and give this body Christian burial?' This kindly stranger asked my name and command. I told him my name was Darby, Company K, Tenth Alabama regiment, Wilcox's brigade, Mahone's division.

"'You will not die, my boy. Take courage. You will be cared for,' were his last words as he pressed my hand with a farewell.

"I asked him to give me his name, as I did not wish to die and never know

"YOU WILL NOT DIE, MY BOY. TAKE COURAGE."

whom to thank for such kindness. The stranger again bent over me and said in a low, kind tone, 'My name is Abraham Lincoln.'

"I will never forget the impression his name made upon my young mind. There was another young man in my company by the name of Calhoun who lay by my side on the bloody field, who was supposed to be also mortally wounded. President Lincoln went to him next and spoke kind words of cheer to him also and told him the same as he did me. Calhoun handed Mr. Lincoln a Bible, which his young wife had placed in his pocket when he left home for the front, with the request that he should send it to her, the address being written on the fly leaf, and under it these words he had put in pencil on the field after he was wounded:

"Dear Wife—I am dying on the battlefield. Meet me in heaven.

"Calhoun and myself were soon afterward taken to the hospital at Frederick, Md., where we received every attention that medical skill and careful nursing could bestow to relieve our sufferings. After many months we became convalescent. One bright morning we were called to headquarters and notified that we would be sent to Fort Monroe the next day. My heart leaped into my throat at the thought of seeing the dear ones at home again.

"I knew that the trip to Fort Monroe meant exchange or parole. The night was long and weary, but the thought of 'home, sweet home,' cheered my lonely heart. Day at last dawned, and we were soon astir, making ready to start for Baltimore. As we were in line ready to leave an officer handed Calhoun and myself each a package. After the train had started and we were on our journey we opened the packages, and, much to our astonishment, but delight, we had our Bibles, Calhoun's for his wife and mine for mother. In turning the pages over we found cards in the Bibles with the following written, on mine this:

"Take this book of God to your mother and receive her blessing.

"A. LINCOLN.

"On Calhoun's this:

"Take this book of God to the wife you loved and remembered on the battlefield.

"A. LINCOLN.

"In each one we found the cards between the leaves in the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes and the first, thirteenth and fourteenth verses marked in pencil with the letter 'L' on the margin. First verse read thus: 'Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say I have no pleasure in them;' the thirteenth, 'Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter—fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man,' and the fourteenth, 'For God shall bring every work into judgment with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil.'

"Calhoun and myself devoted our time on the trip to Baltimore and Fort Monroe committing to memory the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes. It made such an impression on my memory that I have never forgotten it. When I arrived home and told the story of my wound and captivity and how kindly I had been treated by the enemy, they were disposed not to believe my statement. I produced the Bible which mother had placed in my pocket when I started to the army nearly two years previous. I turned the book over to her, as President Lincoln told me I should, and received her blessing. Her sharp eye soon caught the card and marked verses. 'Ah,' she said, 'my son, ever let these verses be your guide through life, in war and peace.' I have ever since tried to live up to the verses marked by the kind hand of the great Lincoln and the teachings of the book that saved my life. Calhoun returned to his wife and took the Bible she gave him when he left her for the war.

"He never recovered from his wound and has long since passed away to the unknown world. I remained home several months before I was able to perform military duty of the lightest kind. When the Confederacy became so pressed for recruits, the maimed, the old and young had to go. I returned to the front and remained until the close of the war."—Washington Post.

Mementos From the Front.

To say that men are void of sentiment is to state an untruth. They are full of it and, given the occasion to call it forth, can display more sentiment to the square inch than any woman who ever lived. A couple of old soldiers, for instance, with only a pair of feet or hands between them will reel off sentiment by the yard for hours at a stretch. These old veterans have packages of letters tied with the yellow ribbons that came around "Uncle Sam's" cigars—letters penned by hands they never so much as saw, let alone pressed, written to a "soldier lad" and filled with girlish exuberance. And they have old sabers and faded sashes, brass buttons and dilapidated shoulder straps. Among those old traps will often be found a "housewife," its tiny pockets filled with needles, thread, pins, buttons and an old thimble. How the sight of that little bag sets that old fellow's tongue to flying! If you just have time to listen to him, he will give you the whole history of the war, and it will all center around that little "comfort bag."

A Soldier's Fortunes.

A short time before the war a stranger giving his name as Frey asked assistance and lodging at the house of a farmer, John Gratwold, who lived near Middletown, O. Frey said he had been exiled from Germany for some political offense and claimed to have been a student in that country. He was taken into the family of Gratwold, where he engaged as a farm hand and stayed two years. In 1861 he enlisted in an Illinois regiment, had quite a brilliant military career and was promoted to the rank of major. He was taken to Libby prison and was paroled in 1865. His health was broken, and he went back to his native country, where he recovered, and in 1882 he was sent to America as Switzerland's representative. Later he became highly successful in politics, holding the position of secretary of war and other offices in Switzerland. One day Gratwold received a letter from his former woodchopper, who was then M. Frey, the president of the Swiss republic.

The Wartime Uniform.

All enlisted men wore the blouse for fatigue dress. It is described in the regulations as "a sack coat of dark blue flannel, extending half way down the thigh and made loose, four buttons down the front." The trousers were of sky blue cloth, those for mounted men being "re-enforced," and the overcoat was sky blue, the color of the trousers, the capes of the cavalry coming down to the coat cuff. The capes of the infantry greatcoat only came down to the elbow.

General George H. Thomas.

He drew his sword at freedom's call,
Nor weightier sword was ever cast,
With giant force, in doubtful scale.
Serene, he took his humble post
Ere long to lead a mighty host.
In trial's hour his lips were still;
His deeds proclaimed his patriot will.
"Act well thy part though heavens fall."
What were the fortunes of a state
To freedom and his nation's fate?
On every field where Thomas came Confusion smote our country's foes,
And winged victory arose
Through lurid cloud or battle flame
To crown him with immortal fame.
—Henry Clinton Parkhurst.

THE KING'S APPROVAL

All That Is Needed to Make Herbert an Ambassador

TO SUCCEED PAUNCEFOTE

Has Acted as Minister Plenipotentiary to France at Important Periods—Related by Marriage to the Vanderbilts, Ogden Goelets and the Astors

London, May 31.—Michael H. Herbert, who is nominally secretary to the British embassy at Paris, will probably be the next British ambassador to the United States in succession to the late Lord Pauncefote.

The only question in regard to Herbert's selection for the Washington post is the approval of King Edward. The Associated Press understands that his majesty is taking a keen personal interest in the matter of Lord Pauncefote's successor, but the king will not be asked officially to confirm or disapprove the candidate of the foreign office until the period of time during which the government pays respect to the late Lord Pauncefote has elapsed.

While there is no reason to believe that King Edward will object to Herbert, who has the official backing of both English and American diplomats, there must always remain an element of doubt in the matter until the suggested appointment receives the royal sanction, and especially in view of the acute attention which his majesty has given to this important promotion.

The matter of Herbert's going to Washington has been still further complicated by the unexpected delay in sending over Lord Pauncefote's remains. The British government, officially, fully expected Lord Pauncefote's body would arrive in England prior to the coronation of King Edward, and it is not a little disconcerted by the receipt of dispatches announcing that the obsequies in England will not occur until July.

While nominally secretary to the British embassy at Paris, Herbert was really minister plenipotentiary to France, and as such he frequently acted in most important crises in the absence of Mr. Monson, Great Britain's ambassador there.

Mr. Herbert's marriage with Lelia, daughter of Richard T. Wilson of New York, as a result of which he became closely related to the Vanderbilts, the Ogden Goelets and the Astors, will not in any way interfere, according to opinion here, with his usefulness as Great Britain's ambassador at Washington. Mr. Herbert's record at Washington as charge d'affaires in 1888 and 1889 and as secretary to the British legation there in 1892 and 1893 and his work as British agent on the Venezuelan commission eminently fit him, so official belief inclines, for his proposed new and important duties.

At Paris Herbert's present position is somewhat curious, for, while holding the rank of a full-fledged minister, he had to take second place when Ambassador Monson is resident in France.

A curious feature connected with all the British diplomats who were considered by the British foreign office as possible candidates to fill the vacancy at Washington is that they all have American wives. Sir Henry Howard, who is now Great Britain's minister at The Hague, married Miss Riggs of Washington; Sir Francis R. Plunkett, the British ambassador at Vienna, married Miss Morgan of Philadelphia; Lord Curzon of Kedleston, viceroy of India, married Miss Leiter of Washington; Austin Lee, Great Britain's commercial attache to France, Belgium and Switzerland, married Miss DeWolf Smith of New York; and Alan Johnstone, the British charge of affairs at Darmstadt, married Miss Pinchot of New York.

Before the new ambassador at Washington takes up his duties the salary of the ambassador there will probably be put upon a par with the highest paid in Great Britain's diplomatic service, namely, that which is paid her ambassador at Paris, $45,000 a year.

Acceptable to Washington

Washington, May 31.—While no official information can be had as to whether this government has been sounded as to Mr. Herbert's acceptability as ambassador, it is believed by people familiar with his standing here, while secretary of the legaton and charge of affairs, that his selection would be entirely agreeable to the United States. He had charge of the legation for considerable intervals in the absence of the head of the British legation and considerable regret was expressed when it was learned he had been promoted and ordered abroad.

Double Birthday Celebrations

London, May 31.—The birthday of King Edward (who was born Nov. 9, 1841) was officially celebrated yesterday, it having been decided that his majesty's natal day was to be celebrated in London and on the home stations May 30, as being the most suitable time for a military display. On the other hand, foreign stations will celebrate it Nov. 9.

Attorney General Very Sick

Washington, May 31.—There was a short session of the cabinet yesterday, preceding the ceremonies at Arlington, but it was stated that no business was done. It was reported to the cabinet by Secretary Hitchcock, who had visited Mr. Knox's bedside in the morning, that the attorney general had passed a bad night.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For Week Beginning June 1. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—The purpose of His coming.—Matt. xviii, 11; John x, 10.

The mission of Jesus Christ on the earth was to seek and to save the lost. He Himself thus describes His mission when he says, "The Son of Man is come to save that which was lost." The mission of Christ on the earth is also the mission of the church. The church exists to carry out His mission and to do the work that He came to do. After His ascension He sent the Holy Ghost as His representative to guide the church in its important work. And under the direction of the Spirit the purpose of the church's existence is to seek and save the lost. Like the mission of Christ, it is not to kill and to destroy, but to give life, eternal life, and it more abundantly.

The mission of Christ being still the mission of His church and His people, we may well study His motives and methods in fulfilling His mission as our model and inspiration in continuing His work.

Christ was actuated in His mission by at least two great facts: (1) He realized the value of the soul. Had He not known that the soul was of infinite value, more valuable than all the world, He would not have left heaven to come to earth to die for it. But He realized the soul's value and hence was willing to do so. We also must have a realization of the value of the soul if we are to fulfill Christ's mission to our utmost ability. (2) Christ realized that the soul away from God in sin is lost. He sought it because He knew it was lost. The lostness of the soul must impress us before we will seek it that we may save it. The shepherd did not seek the lost sheep until he knew it was lost. How little today we realize the lost condition of the soul! We do not see sin as God sees it in its awful character and consequences or we would be on fire to seek and save the souls of men from eternal death and to eternal life.

The methods of Christ in fulfilling His mission should be ours in continuing it. (1) Christ was prayerful in His work. He prayed to God for the safety of Peter and of others. So we must pray if we would be soul winners. (2) Christ was tactful in His mission work. He used judgment and intelligence in His times and ways of presenting the truth, and so we must be wise as serpents if we become successful fishers of men. (3) Christ was unconventional in His methods. (4) Christ ignored all class distinctions in seeking to save men. (5) Christ practiced self denial in fulfilling His mission. He died on the cross that He might give life, and give it more abundantly. Let us be willing to spend and be spent in continuing His mission on earth.

Our Naval Chaplains.

At the recent meeting of the New York Methodist preachers the Rev. E. G. Strobridge of Stamford, Conn., made the following statements concerning the treatment of the United States navy chaplains: "There are some who are of the opinion that the time has long since arrived when the people of this country and their lawmakers should know that the chaplains of the United States navy are the victims of an invidious discrimination as compared with the other officers of the service. This abuse relates to their support, their uniform and their general treatment. The pay of a chaplain is $2,800, with $109 ration money. This is his salary, however, only when he is at sea. When detailed for shore duty, his support is reduced to $2,300 and "waiting orders" is $1,900. Out of this insignificant and jealously curtailed salary the chaplain must pay an average of $30 per month mess bill, support the establishment of his family on shore and meet the expensive outlay necessary to his station on shipboard. This latter item is no fiction. The officers, as a rule, live high, and, although the chaplain may be quiet in his tastes and moderate in his habits, he is constantly taxed to contribute his share to meet the demands of his extravagant environment.

"Now, it is true that we treat our chaplains better than any other nation does, but, then, we treat all our officers better than other nations do, but of all our officers we treat the chaplains the worst. The mistakes, frailties and shortcomings of the chaplains simply prove that they are human. Besides, these aberrations are more severely criticised in them than in any of their associates. Although an occasional chaplain in the history of the navy may have dishonored his office, the same is true, only in a greater degree, in every other corps, and, at the same time, the chaplains have less encouragement in well doing than any other class of officers. The large majority of the chaplains, considering their opportunities, have been as faithful and efficient in their work as the representative ministers anywhere to be found, and the record of many of them is such as no Christian minister need be ashamed of. Such of them as have proved unworthy did not become so by reason of their connection with the navy, but had shown themselves undeserving of confidence beforehand."

No Sin Shall Remain Unforgiven.

God will never forgive any sin—it remains unpardonable—as long as we continue untoward, refractory; as long as we close up our minds and hearts to the powers which operate for good, the influence which spreads abroad in benignity and love. But no sin shall remain unforgiven when we in contrition humble ourselves before our Father and God.—Universalist.

Attended With Incidents Out of the Ordinary at Boston

FLOWERS STREWN ON SEA

In Honor of Men Who Fell In the Naval Service—Colored Orator Expresses Dissatisfaction With Actions of Nation, State and City

Boston, May 31.—From every cemetery in and around Boston yesterday came the sound of the roll of muffled drums and the bugle "taps," as Grand Army veterans performed their memorial services at the graves of former comrades. As a rule the services followed the usual program, but there were two incidents of more than usual interest, the strewing of flowers on the sea, near the Fraargut statue at City Point, and the oration to the colored veterans at the Shaw tablet on Boston Common.

At this latter place Edward Everett Brown, a colored lawyer, took occasion to say harsh things of the city, state and national governments. He said that for the first time since the war the city had been too niggardly to grant the colored veterans money with which to observe the day. He extolled General Butler as the greatest of generals, and wished for a thousand General Butlers that they might stand up for the rights of the negro and keep the Anglo-Saxon in his place.

He said that no colored man had raised the flag of anarchy, and that it was a shame for this country to stretch out its arm and destroy peaceful homes in the Philippines when it cannot protect the negro here. He said that if the government has not enough power to protect human life in the south the constitution is not worth the paper it is written upon.

At the Farragut statue Dahlgren post was assisted by members of the Womans Relief Corps and hundreds of school children, and the latter, while the flags were waved over the water, threw flowers upon the waves.

In Memory of McKinley

Muskegon, Mich., May 31.—One of the most impressive Memorial day ceremonies ever carried out in this city was the one leading up to and including the unveiling of the bronze statue of the late President McKinley. The massive granite monument, together with the large bronze figure of the martyred president, is a gift to the public schools of Muskegon by Charles H. Hackley, millionaire lumberman of this city. It was erected at a cost of $30,000. A parade which preceded the unveiling of the statue was over a mile long.

In Canton's Graveyard

Canton, O., May 31.—Many beautiful floral offerings to be placed on the tomb of the late President McKinley were received here, including a large crate of choice flowers from the White House. Mrs. McKinley took the flowers to Westlawn and had them arranged about the tomb. The G. A. R. placed at his tomb a cluster of flowers taken at random from the supply provided for all their dead comrades, making no distinction in favor of the late president.

Palma's Graceful Tribute

Havana, May 31.—When the people of Havana awoke yesterday morning they saw the wreck of the Maine, which stands as a monument for more than 200 brave Americans, appropriately decorated to commemorate the day. American and Cuban flags, garlands of roses and wreaths, constituted the decorations, which were ordered by President Palma. Memorial services were held in several of the American churches.

Bangor People Hear Schley

Bangor, Me., May 31.—Rear Admiral Schley delivered the Memorial day address in Bangor city hall last night. His address was a graceful tribute to the defenders of the nation in the Civil and Spanish-American wars. Admiral Schley rode with Mayor Engel in a carriage in a procession yesterday and was afterward tendered a reception at the residence of General Smith.

At Andersonville

Macon, Ga., May 31.—Decoration day was celebrated at the Andersonville National cemetery. For the first time in years no fights occurred. W. H. Schatzman, who was present from Macon, wired to Governor Nash of Ohio: "I have covered Ohio's new monument with southland flowers."

Needham's New Monument

Needham, Mass., May 31.—The monument erected by the Galen Orr Post G. A. R., on the soldiers' lot in Needham cemetery was unveiled yesterday. Congressman Powers delivered the oration and the usual memorial exercises of the G. A. R. were conducted. The monument is about 28 feet high.

Steeplechase Jockey Killed

Toronto, May 31.—Pat Meagher, the steeplechase jockey, was riding St. Sulphice in a steeplechase at the track here yesterday and while taking the jump opposite the grand stand his mount fell, Meagher being underneath. The horse rolled over him and Meagher's back was broken.

AS FATHERS OF LIBERTY

Rizal's Name Is Coupled With That of Washington

BUENCAMINO HAS FAITH

That Americans Will Effect a Regeneration of the Philippines of a Beneficial Nature—Natives Should Give Loyal and Sincere Assistance

Washington, May 31.—Felipe Buencamino, the head of the Federal party in the Philippines, accompanied by the Filipinos now in Washington, paid a pilgrimage to Mount Vernon yesterday. While there Mr. Buencamino made an address at the tomb of Washington, in which he said:

"It has been written in the history of this great republic that Washington is first in peace, first in war and first in the hearts of his countrymen. We must insist that hereafter the following words be added hereto: 'Washington also occupies the first place next to the immortal Dr. Rizal in the hearts of the Filipinos.'

"Both devoted their precious lives to secure the liberty of their respective peoples. In the union of these two noble sentiments is based the firm faith of the Philippine Federal party in the American government, whether the Republican or the Democratic party is in power.

"Both parties love Washington and they will never betray their great father. Either party will give a just, stable and liberal government to our country, because the people of our country are at the present time under the protection of Washington's people.

"The practical, useful and beneficial action on our part is to give our loyal, noble and sincere assistance to the government of the United States in the difficult work of the regeneration of our country. When I stopped at Honolulu I was greatly impressed by the fact that American civilization has in a period of less than three years already manifested the most magnificent results. Why is this? Because the wise and civilized measures taken by the American government in Honolulu find no obstacles of whatsoever kind. The fertile American civilization is accepted in Honolulu just as well as it was accepted in Louisiana and in California, and because it was so accepted in these last named states is due the complete happiness and welfare of the people, exactly as was the case with the people of the 13 original states.

"If the Filipinos place obstacles in the way of the execution of the steps taken by the American government, instead of loyally and frankly assisting it, it will be our own fault it we continue living so far behind the times as well as so miserably.

"Brothers, glory to Washington, glory to America, glory to the Philippines; and let us have faith that the American government will effect a regeneration of a beneficial character of our nation, because I was thus assured yesterday morning by President Roosevelt, and President Roosevelt spoke in the name of the great people of the United States."

Assessors' Notice.

The inhabitants of the City of Quincy, and other persons liable to pay taxes therein, you are hereby required to bring in to the Assessors of said City

On or Before June 15, 1902,

True and Perfect Lists of all the Polls, and Schedules and Estimates of all the Personal Estates and Real Estate for which you are liable to pay taxes.

Persons Holding Estates in Trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the Assessors with Statements in relation to such estates.

When the estates of persons deceased have been divided, or have changed hands from other causes during the past year, the Executors, Administrators, or other persons interested, are required to give notice of such changes, and in default of such notice will be held to pay the taxes assessed.

Blank forms for "Return of Property for Taxation" can be procured of the Assessors.

The following may serve as a guide to assist in making up Schedules and Statements:

Number of Polls 20 years and upwards; Money at interest; Amount of Money on hand, including deposits in Banks, etc., other than Savings Banks incorporated under the laws of this Commonwealth; Railroad, Town, City, State and other Bonds (except those of the United States); Shares and Stocks of Insurance, Manufacturing and other incorporated companies chartered or organized under the laws of any State other than Massachusetts; Goods, Wares, Merchandise and other stock in trade, within or without the State; Household Furniture, exceeding $1,000 in value; Horses, Mules, Carriages, Oxen, Cows, other neat Cattle not less than one year old, and Swine and Sheep not less than six months old; Income from Profession, Trade or Employment exceeding $2,000; Personal Property held in trust or by wife or minor children.

Attention is hereby called to Section 32 of Chapter 12 of the Revised Laws.

"Whoever, with intent to defeat or evade the provisions of law in relation to assessment or payment of taxes, delivers or discloses to an assessor or an assistant assessor a false or fraudulent list, return, or schedule of property as and for a true list of his estates, not exempted from taxation shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or by imprisonment in jail not exceeding one year."

MORTGAGED PROPERTY—A mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the city or town in which it lies, within the time prescribed by the notice under Sect. 41, a statement under oath of the amount secured thereon or on each separate parcel thereof, with the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as mortgagor or mortgagee. If such property is situated in two or more places, or if a recorded mortgage includes two or more estates or parts of an estate as security for one sum, such statement shall include an estimate of the interest of the mortgagee in each estate or part of an estate. The assessors shall, from such statement or otherwise, ascertain the proportionate interests of the mortgagor or mortgagee respectively in said estates, and shall assess the same accordingly. If, in any year, such statement is not brought in, the tax for that year on such real estate shall not be invalid merely for the reason that the interest of the mortgagee therein has not been assessed to him.—Sect. 45, Chap. 12, Revised Laws.

When a statement in conformity to the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under Sects. 16, 17 and 18 of Chap. 12 of the Revised Laws. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, no statement or return is required from either the mortgagee or mortgagor unless requested by the assessors in writing.

The Assessors will be in session at their office every Thursday morning from 9 to 11 o'clock. Blanks will be furnished to all applicants.

A pretty dancing party was given by Div. 12 A. O. H., Thursday evening in the Town hall. The attendance was not large but the dancing by music from Cuff's orchestra was very much enjoyed.

Merrill T. Call of Holbrook avenue has completed a third of a century as an employe of the O. C. R. R. Co. and the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. Co. He commenced railroading May 28, 1879 and now is engineering between Boston and Fall River.

Thursday evening the "Juniors" of the High school held a reception in Monatiquot hall from 8 to 11 o'clock. The hall was prettily decorated with palms, ferns and evergreen. The matrons were Miss Catherine Cummings, Miss Bessie Roberts, Miss Ryan, Mrs. C. B. Cummings and Miss Eva Briggs. During the evening dancing was enjoyed. Dainty refreshments of lemonade and crackers were served. The affair was in charge of a committee of which Miss Katherine Cummings was chairman. A large number were present and one and all pronounced it a decided success.

The Jonas Perkins School Association held the last meeting of the season with Mrs. W. M. Allen Wednesday evening when following officers were elected for the ensuing season: president, W. H. Yesterday afternoon in the presence of 500 people on French's common the Boston Dry Goods Co. defeated the Braintree Club at base ball eight to five. Time does not permit a lengthy report. The Braintree team appeared in new uniforms of light gray and blue stockings. They will play many games this summer. This afternoon they will cross bats with the United Shoe Machine Co team.

Last May, while a member of Miss Arnold's class in Pond school, Eugene Sweeney found a speedwell called "rare" by the staff of botanists at Gray Herbarium. In only one other town in Massachusetts has this striking plant been found. It has been reported from one town in Maine, one in Vermont and one in Connecticut. The scientific name is Veronica chamaedrys. Chamaedrys is formed of two Greek words meaning little and oak. The common name of the plant is therefore dwarf oak speedwell.

About 2 o'clock Wednesday morning, Mr. William Nickson of Union street was aroused by the smell of smoke and after awaking the family proceeded to investigate. The house was rapidly filling with smoke created by a fire in the cellar, caused from spontaneous combustion. The blaze had already destroyed two barrels and eaten its way almost through the under floor of the dwelling. However, the timely discovery prevented serious results and by the use of the garden hose was extinguished without sounding the alarm.

TAKE RIGHT STEP.

Every ordinary cold is deserving of serious attention.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Existing Depressing Influences Believed to Be Only Temporary

New York, May 31.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Business in the money market, favorable crop prospects and confidence abroad are the encouraging factors which outweigh the disturbing elements of labor conflicts and unseasonable weather for retail trade at many points. Effects of the depressing influences are less keenly felt because they are believed to be only temporary. Despite the short corn crop last year, the large yield of wheat and high prices for both resulted in the greatest value for the two crops ever recorded. Returns as to transportation show that losses in grain movement are being more than made up elsewhere.

There is no cessation of activity at the mills. No improvement is reported at New England boot and shoe centres, where the shops are still running only about half-time.

Stocks of textile fabrics are not accumulating, although the markets are extremely quiet. Domestic jobbing trade is fairly satisfactory, but exports of cotton goods are small. Print cloths are dull and unchanged, with the situation unsettled as to new prints for the fall. Clothing manufacturers are purchasing woolen goods in moderation only, and larger deliveries by the leading company increases the disposition towards conservatism.

Grain quotations made a decided advance early in the week, which was not easily explained, except on the basis of light supplies in sight. Subsequently the gain was lost in option trading, although cash corn was firmly held. Reports of the wheat yield by the agricultural department show the greatest production on record.

Rare Sight In Hawaii

Honolulu, May 24, via San Francisco, May 31.—The effects of the volcanic eruption at St. Pierre are supposed to have been felt here. Last night there was a lurid sunset and the sunrise following was equally startling. Without clouds to make such a color, there was a red glare on the horizon as the sun went down and rose, and it was attributed here to volcanic dust from St. Pierre. Professor Lyons, government meteorologist here for many years, says the phenomenon is similar to that observed here after the tremendous volcanic explosion at Krakatoa in 1883.

Kruger Will Sign Peace Edict

Brussels, May 31.—It is said here that the Boer delegates in Europe now admit that peace in South Africa has been secured and that the settlement between the Boers and Great Britain will be signed in the names of the former citizens of the two South African republics who are now in Europe, including Mr. Kruger, thus preventing the irreconciliables from continuing a guerilla warfare on the pretext that they are obeying the orders of the Boer delegates in Europe.

Light on a Swindle

Paris, May 31.—M. Courtol, chief clerk of Mme. Humber's solicitor, has made a declaration before a migistrate that the responsible author of the Humbert-Crawford swindle was Mme. Humbert's father-in-law, who was at one time the French minister of justice. According to Courtol Humbert dictated the contracts of 1884 between the Crawfords and the Humberts, which has served as a basis for all the subsequent legal proceedings.

Strikers' Ire Aroused

Wilkesbarre, Pa., May 31.—An agent for a West Virginia coal company, who has been in the city the past week hiring men to go south, was assaulted by striking miners and their sympathizers at a Slavish settlement here yesterday. The agent tried to escape by jumping on a passing electric car, but was pulled from the car and severely beaten. Cooler heads in the crowd saved him from probably fatal injuries.

Army Officers Out of Work

San Francisco, May 31.—Captain Martens, master of the army transport Buford, was found guilty of cruelty, profanity and neglect of his "log" by a board of army officers, and was suspended from duty. Besides suspending Captain Martens, the army board ordered Third Officer Grauman dismissed from the service and First Engineer Morhoff transferred from the Buford to the transport Grant.

Floods In the West

Oklahoma City, O. T., May 31.—The floods in western Oklahoma and the western portion of Indian Territory continue unabated, with several streams still rising. At Vinita, I. T., a town of 2000, half of the resident portion is under from four to five feet of water and there is no sign of the flood receding.

To Investigate Mine Horror

Clinton, Tenn., May 31.—Judge Hicks has instructed the circuit court grand jury of Anderson county to investigate the cause of the Fraterville mine explosion of May 19 at Coal Creek, in which 216 men and boys lost their lives.

Town Hall Burned

Burlington, Mass., May 31.—The town hall was burned yesterday, the fire having started, it is thought, from a lighted cigar left in the coat room Thursday night by some person who attended a dance held in the hall. The loss is $4000.

Castle Square Theatre.

A revival of the great emotional drama "The Two Orphans," will make the coming week's attraction at the Castle Square theatre, and the intense interest created in this play when it was given at this theatre last January seems to be an assurance of the success of this revival. The changes in the company, by reorganization for the summer season, will bring a number of new people into the cast and afford opportunities for interesting comparisons. The elaborate stage settings used in last January's production of this play will again be shown and and every care will be taken to repeat the triumph gained by the Castle Square company in the earlier performances of the play at this house. The cast announced for the coming week's production is as follows: Chevalier Maurice De Vaudrey, Hallett Thompson; Marquis De Presles, Edward Wade; Count De Linieres, James L. Seeley; Jacques Frochard, Robert Elliott; Pierre Frochard, Charles Mackay; Picard, James A. Keane; Doctor, Lindsay Morison; Henriette, Lavinia Shannon; Louise, Mary Sanders; La Frochard, Fannie Addison Pitt; Countess De Linieres, Katherine Clinton; Florette, Alexia Durant. Following "The Two Orphans" on Monday, June 9th, comes a production of "The Iron Master." The usual distribution of chocolate bonbons will be made at the Monday matinee.

This series begins next Sunday. Every one should begin with the beginning.
